The third Paramount - Arbuckle Comedy is the biggest success in "laugh makers" that has ever been made.

"The Rough House"

The name is descriptive, the story is there but you forget it in the rush of action. A twentieth century howitzer or 14 centimeter siege gun isn't in the same class with "Fatty" Arbuckle, Al. St. John and Buster Keaton. Laughs are growing scarce nowadays so the demand for them has increased.

Better to read fifty advertisements than to miss the one YOU need.
Paramount’s greatest boosters are the several million men, women and children who declare—by their attendance in more than five thousand theatres in America—that Paramount Pictures are the most consistently entertaining type of amusement offered on the screen.

The Paramount stars are not only the best known—but, collectively, they represent the greatest aggregation of artists appearing under one management in the world’s history.

Generally speaking, exhibitors in America may be divided into two classes—those who always have played Paramount Pictures, and those who are going to.

Paramount’s greatest boast is that 92 per cent of the first one thousand exhibitors in America to play Paramount pictures are on the Paramount Books today.

Think what this means!

It means that Paramount distribution is as great as Paramount Pictures and Paramount Stars and the great Paramount organization.
Distribution

The secret of Paramount's successful distribution lies in this short business principle—insistence that the man (exhibitor) who sells your product makes as much money as you do from each individual transaction!

With the inauguration on August 5th, 1917

of the "Selective Star Series System" of distribution, Paramount puts into effect a plan whereby exhibitors will make more money—Greater Profit—than ever before.

The "Selective Star Series System" offers him this guarantee—since he can choose for himself the pictures and the stars he knows—by past profits—are the ones his patrons want to see.

The exhibitors of America, having had the opportunity to study the "Selective Star Series System" are endorsing it with hundreds of contracts daily.

Are you among them?

If not, apply to yourself another short business principle—DO IT NOW!

Write, wire or call at any branch office for particulars. The nearest Paramount exchange will send a representative.

Better to read fifty advertisements than to miss the one YOU need.
If you saw two old maids coming and had a trained wishbone, what would you do?

Can you imagine two tramps turned loose with a wishbone that works—you've got a good idea of what happens, but only an idea—you couldn't possibly foresee such stunts as a trick camera can produce.

Any exhibitor, everywhere, should have them—NOW.

"Give us food—lest we perish."

Our nation is at war. Our Allies look to us for FOOD. The struggle of the Ages will be won or lost on the American Farms.

Meanwhile the American people bend to the soil. The earth God bequeathed gives forth its fruit. But still the cry—"Food, give us Food."

These Are The Things That Goldwyn Knew

From the beginning, Goldwyn had little or no trouble shaping and agreeing on the basic policy of this organization. We had certain definite knowledge on which we could work.

1. We knew that the Goldwyn policy must embody those things of which exhibitors approved.

2. We knew that exhibitors desired a staple, sane policy of open bookings.

3. We knew that exhibitors demanded improved productions—an increase in the quality of pictures.

4. We knew exhibitors preferred to conduct business with us through our own branches, instead of through regional franchise middlemen.

5. And we also knew that exhibitors desired new refinements, new ideas, new skill, new stories—in fact, an entirely new type of productions.

Knowing all of these things to be desired, Goldwyn has done them. And that is all there was to the shaping of the Goldwyn policy. . . . Our twenty-five branches are now open in the United States and Canada and our managers are ready to discuss contracts with exhibitors.
A Year’s Time, A Million Dollars—and Faith

All of these elements have been put into the twelve Goldwyn productions that will be completed in advance of our first release in September.

A year’s time in which to do our work well; time in which to make pictures slowly and carefully; time in which to organize our distribution and build up in your minds the confidence and trust that our methods deserve to inspire.

$1,000,000 in completed pictures to prove to all exhibitors in advance of booking that Goldwyn Pictures, each and everyone, will be splendidly made and tremendously powerful productions.

And the FAITH that can be found only in the hearts and minds of men and women who know what they are doing; who know HOW to do big things well; who have the foresight and imagination to see that the motion pictures of the present and the future must be bigger and better and finer than any other pictures have ever been before.

We feel that few exhibitors will care to sign contracts for any other pictures until they have first seen the Goldwyn productions. . . . Trade showings in 25 branch offices throughout North America in July.

SERIAL "FANTOMAS"
IN BIG NEWSPAPERS
AID TO BOX-OFFICE

SUNDAY newspapers all over the country are now beginning the publication of the fiction version of the Gaumont series of motion picture stories entitled "Fantomas," the film version of which was made by Gaumont and is now available at Mutual Exchanges everywhere.

Wide Spread Publicity.
The story, "Fantomas," is appearing now in such papers as the New York Sunday World, the Cleveland Plain Dealer, the New Orleans States, the Ft. Wayne Journal-Gazette, the Minneapolis Journal, the Salt Lake City Telegram, the St. Louis Post-Dispatch, the Tacoma Ledger, the Seattle Post Intelligencer, the Los Angeles Tribune and the Columbus State Journal. It is a story that abounds in mystery and excitement, built around a sensational series of crimes, together with the capture of the master criminals. Statistics prove that mystery stories are the favorite form of fiction. Hundreds of thousands of people are reading the story. Exhibitors can appeal to this vast army of readers by playing the "Fantomas" series now. On the screen the exciting incidents related in the story are even more thrilling.

Mutual Exchanges Will Co-Operate.
Every Mutual Exchange stands ready to co-operate in the heartiest fashion with any exhibitor who wishes to present "Fantomas." The majority of exhibitors will prefer to run "Fantomas" right now while the newspapers are printing the fiction version. Any Mutual Exchange can quote exhibitors prices, open dates, and supply the needed accessories in the way of paper, announcement slides, etc.

Mutual Press Sheets—Are You Using Them?
With each Mutual Star Production the publicity department of the Mutual Film Corporation is issuing a special press sheet in colors as an aid to the exhibitors running that particular subject. These press sheets contain music cues, press stories, advertising and banner catch lines, specimen advertising set-ups, synopsis of the stories for use in theatre programs, and countless other exhibitor aids. To get full value from each attraction booked the exhibitor should make use of all the help offered. The press sheet costs the exhibitor nothing. It is his for the asking. Press sheets on any subject can be secured from your nearest Mutual Exchange.

William Russell
"THE MASKED HEART"—A ROMANTIC STORY

"THE MASKED HEART" is the next William Russell picture. It is five acts in length and is a romantic drama of a type wholly different from anything that Mr. Russell has done to date. It will be released through all Mutual Exchanges the week of July 2nd. Like other Russell pictures, it was made at the studios of the American Film Company, Inc.

The Mysterious Unknown.
A beautiful masked woman—a veritable mysterious unknown—plays a prominent part in the story and is the cause of many of Mr. Russell's tribulations in the role of Philip Greycourt. As the story runs, Philip meets the mysterious masked stranger at a masquerade ball. He rescues her from the embrace of a drunken dancer, and is granted permission to see her the next day. When the taxi stops at its destination—the Hotel Eghert—Philip is made to promise he will not seek to follow her from the taxi and reluctantly consents. After a romantic farewell the mysterious lady disappears within the portals of the hotel without having lifted her mask and without revealing her identity. Philip is so enamoured of her that he ignores the promise not to follow her farther and returns to the hotel only to learn with dismay that she has passed directly through the lobby and entered another taxi on the opposite side. Philip vows then and there to find her again and learn her real identity. Ere he does so events of the most surprising sort occur—events that make "The Masked Heart" an exceptionally interesting story.

Directed by Edward Sjoman.
Edward Sjoman, who produced previous Russell-American subjects, staged "The Masked Heart," and to those who have witnessed his masterly productions on the screen this fact alone is an assurance of quality. Bookings on the entire series of William Russell pictures may be made at Mutual Exchanges everywhere. Other subjects in this series are "My Fighting Gentleman," "High Play," "The Frame-Up," and "Shackles of Truth."

Newest Chaplin Film
Is Packing Theatres

Capacity houses are the rule at every theatre showing Charlie Chaplin's latest offering—"The Immigrant." One and all are agreed that it is the biggest laugh-getter on the screen today. "The Immigrant" and ten other Mutual-Chaplin Specials can be booked now at any Mutual Exchange.

WE ABOLISH ADVANCE DEPOSIT SYSTEM

NOTICE TO EXHIBITORS

When the system of advance deposits was introduced into our business to guarantee contracts, I announced:

1. That these sums would be held in a separate Trust fund, apart from our business bank accounts, and that they would be withdrawn from time to time when earned by film rentals.

2. That a cash discount of six per cent upon the amount deposited would be allowed.

These agreements have been kept. The unearned advance deposits of the K.E.S.E. Service are deposited separate from our business funds in the Harriman National Bank of New York, the Merchants Loan & Trust Company and the Continental Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

Recognizing the justice of the Exhibitors' attitude that the advance deposit works a great hardship upon many whose funds are tied up—one exhibitor tells me that he has on deposit, scattered among various exchanges, without security, the sum of $14,000—and after consultation with the manufacturers associated with me, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Mr. Selig of the Selig Polyscope Company, and Mr. Spoor of the Essanay Company, I take pleasure in announcing that

K. E. S. E. WILL ABOLISH THE SYSTEM OF ADVANCE DEPOSITS

No further collections will be exacted to guarantee rental contracts by Keys Service.

Funds now in our hands will be returned to their owners as soon as adjustments can be made, and current business protected. These adjustments and refunds will be made from the home office through our branches, and will require some time for the labor of accounting, but all will probably be closed out before August 1st.

It is necessary that our rental charges be protected, and I confidently look for the cooperation of exhibitors in asking payment of each rental charge before shipment of the film.

Figures talk!

When every mail brings in repeat bookings on Pathe Gold Rooster Plays

When exhibitors, newspapers, theatre patrons, all are enthusiastic over the Baby Osborne, and Gladys Hulette pictures and say they are the best produced and of the most wholesome type, when Frederick Warde's characterizations are said to be "master creations," when "Kick In" and "The Hunting of the Hawk" run for two and three weeks in the best theatres, when exhibitors say that Gold Rooster Plays get the business, it is easily seen that the Pathe policy of Box Office Stars in Box Office Stories is paying big dividends to the exhibitor:

American Amusement and Producing Co., Incorporated

Dear Sirs:

Enclosed please find our check for four days run of the "Vicar of Wakefield." We might incidentally state that we are calling this check with more than our usual amount of confidence, as the picture has been well received in this house, and we are one calling arrangements with your representative, Mr. R. Junet, for another four day run. In fact, we have not screened any picture on which the preference and approval of the public was so unanimous. The picture is indeed a masterpiece and a classic, and while bigger productions may have been made and screened, we are willing to stake our reputation that no production will show any finer, if we fine a characterization of any character, as Frederick Warde does, in the impersonation of the Vicar. If Mr. Warde ever appears in any other picture, this bit of character acting and impersonation of the old Vicar will go down in the history of the motion picture industry as a master creation of the age.

We opened our house with your picture, and we practically have the largest house in the South, and your pictures have given us and our patrons universal satisfaction. (End register.)

Yours truly,
American Amusement & Producing Co. Inc.

1333 Argyle St., Chicago
Production and the Market

A PICTURE was brought to our attention last week the cost of production of which was so high that its profitable sale is a matter of considerable speculation.

It is customary in such an instance to curse the buying market, to shout overproduction, to demand higher prices of admission and to tell the exhibitor he is no showman. This might be partly true; but a picture, costing four times as much as it should, is in no position to prove it.

We should like to know what chance a pair of shoes costing $20 to make would stand in a market calling for $7 shoes.

The answer is apparent. The maker would probably kick himself or his superintendent into oblivion. He would be compelled to swallow his own bitter pill; and where the transaction would end—with the making of the shoes.

The wonder of the picture business is that it may even absorb such a picture. The picture is a remarkable one, no doubt—heaven knows it ought to be. So also would be a pair of shoes set with jewels.

* * * *

BUT the moral of the above is not to go on making such pictures. The moral is that such a business as motion pictures permits a very fine profit to the man who knows that jewels do not increase the selling price of shoes, to the man who starts right, which, we state emphatically, begins with the economic making of pictures to meet a known demand at a known selling price.

The above case is of course an extreme one—though, unfortunately, there are plenty such. But it illustrates the point.

To put it more plainly: every dollar wasted in production will have to come right out of the pockets of the individual who wasted it. It won't be levied upon the other fellow. Competition will attend to its proper collection—meaning that some other firm or firms doing business properly will regulate the matter.

If the waste is due to a director's or to a star's salary or temperament, then sooner or later the star and the director will be set in their proper place. If it is due to criminally weak organization, then such an organization will go the way of all criminals.

* * * *

COMPETITION abhors all waste—just as surely as nature abhors a vacuum. Not so quickly—eras of waste in business flourish for a while, but not for long. Their end, at last, is certain.

By economic production we do not mean cheap production. A $100,000 picture may be produced just as economically as a $1,000 picture. We need staples and luxuries in this business, to meet the needs and taste of the different classes of the picture public. A waste in either kind of picture will show up just as clearly.

The point is that each kind of picture must be made to fill a known demand and theatre admission price.

The proper way to hitch a horse to a wagon is so he can pull forward; not to have him butt the wagon with his head.

In production we butt the market too much—and blindly; the proper process is reversed.

* * * *

THERE are so many theatres in the country of so many kinds and classes. Each has a present and a possible patronage, varying according to the exhibitor's ability as a showman. They will pay so much; they can pay so much. These figures can be had.

The middleman does so much and deserves so much profit. These figures can be had.

Production cost must be based upon these market demands and limitations. It must be; otherwise competition will see that it is, and mighty quickly.

This is important and there is much room for improvement. Losses will be had and market disorganization will follow until strict economy sets in.

We might remark in closing that we also heard recently of some pictures, the cost of which was reduced by good management from $9 to $2.50 per foot of negative. They made some money all around on this basis; otherwise well, the answer is apparent.

Speaking Editorially:

Business Optimism

A RECENT issue of a prominent national weekly carried more advertising than any other previous issue.

New York advertising agents tell us that the national advertisers right now are using and planning ahead bigger advertising campaigns than were ever contemplated in the history of advertising.

Millions of dollars are involved; and a good deal of sagacity always accompanies million dollar expenditures. Whether these big business men are counting on peace, or whether they are not afraid of war, is not the question. The point is that they are optimistic.

We can well apply some of this business optimism to the business of the motion picture.

Pictorial Speech

THE Chicago Examiner recently published an editorial and a cartoon, both strong and convincing, against censorship as proposed by the Guernsey and Jackson bills in the Illinois Legislature.

"Legislators should remember," says the Examiner editorial, "that this nation has recently gone on record in the Federal Houses of Congress as unalterably against the abridgment of free speech."

"It is the same thing whether speech is oral, written or pictorial."

Our thanks to the Examiner, and, in addition, for the courage of a true and significant term: "pictorial speech."

Poker and Pictures

THE attention of State Rights picture owners and producers is called to the advertising plan of Frank J. Seng, as announced by him in this issue.

Mr. Seng, being an exhibitor himself and a successful one, knows the necessity of advertising the picture to the exhibitor and to the public after the territorial rights have been sold. According to his statement, Mr. Seng intends to do this.

A good many things are wrong with the State Rights market. Summing up the situation briefly, it is largely a poker game rather than a business. It is in sad need of commercialization.

Prices and territories must be standardized. In particular, prices must be regulated so that producer, buyer and exhibitors may each be put in the way of a fair and reasonable profit and an assurance of getting it. As matters have stood, with the frequent and utterly ridiculous inflation of values, someone along the line has stood the best possible chance of pocketing a loss.

Not the least essential factor in commercializing this field is the matter of advertising.

The rule in poker is to make a heavy bluff and conclude the transaction by taking in the pot.

This is good gambling, but it is not good business. Nor has it ever been looked upon as good advertising.

Good pictures well and continually advertised to the buyer, through the buyer to the exhibitor, through the exhibitor to the public, and add to this a scale of prices which permit of a profit all around, based upon the possible box office receipts—this sounds like a reasonable and wholesome recipe.

Work Ahead

M. CRANDALL, Washington exhibitor, warns that the war tax cloud is not permanently gone. The industry will be foolish to take such an optimistic view.

"This is our own opinion—emphatically."

A wind may blow the cloud back; and we are facing, in this country, a season of winds.

To put it literally, vast sums of money will have to be raised right along by this country. There will be new and increased burdens. Motion pictures will not be overlooked. Nor does the industry expect to be or want to be overlooked. We simply want fair taxation.

We need the formation at Chicago of an exhibitor organization, able to act as a unit and to have its action carry weight.

We need support for the National Association—from everyone—so that when the next crisis comes it won't be necessary for a handful of men to dig down, as usual, in their own pockets and pay the other fellow's due share.

There are still a number of slackers so far as the National Association is concerned. It is about time, it would seem, for them either to enlist or else put forth their claims of exemption.

There is work ahead.

A Research Bureau

W E should like to see one considerable item in the yearly budget of the National Association of the Industry—and that is: research.

When we next appear at Washington or before a State Legislative Committee to argue our rights—we must go backed up with facts; facts about the industry, about the whole industry and analyses drawn from these facts.

You cannot, for instance, convincingly tell a legislator with one breath that you are losing money and with another that you compete in the payment of million dollar salaries.

But you can, with facts and figures, present a very reasonable analysis of the present star situation, its whys and wherefores, and its relation to the motion picture industry.

We need these facts and figures very badly. We need them: for briefs. We need them in a continuous campaign of education, so that we may tell the public just what motion pictures are.

Actions Speak Louder Than—

G EORGE KLEINE is a film pioneer—a man of few words and fewer interviews. But every now and then George Kleine does say something—and when he does we usually find that his action and his words speak with equal voice.

One of these occasions was that of Mr. Kleine's declaration that he would return to exhibitors full bank interest on all deposits. It was done.

Now George Kleine announces that, with his fellows in the K.-E.-S-E organization he has decided to abolish the advance deposits. There are no strings to the decision. And it will be carried out.

We congratulate the Keys Service on its courage and its wisdom. Likewise we doff our hat to George Kleine, film pioneer, man of few words—but loudly speaking action.
Ince to Produce for Paramount?—Sennett Out of Triangle

FINAL papers in the deal whereby Mack Sennett leaves Triangle are ready to be signed. Negotiations have been held up for several weeks, in fact since Thomas H. Ince and Triangle severed their connection, on account of the fact that the comedy director was entangled in a number of contracts with his star players which he desired the producing organization to take over. It was announced Monday that a satisfactory agreement had been reached in this regard. Mr. Sennett has made no statement regarding his future plans, but it is assured that rumors to the affect that he and Ince would combine are unfounded.

Strongly found reports current Monday afternoon were that Thomas Ince would supervise the productions of three or four companies organized by himself, and that Paramount-Arcterra would be the distributor for his pictures. This deal had been hanging fire for some time, the reason it is said being uncertainty on the part of Artcraft and Paramount officials as to the status of William Hart, former leading player for Triangle, whose resignation was announced immediately after Ince's, and who is desired by Paramount.

There still remains considerable doubt as to Hart's future connections, for though Ince claims to have already signed him through his Western agents to a long term contract, and though the player is said to have previously claimed his Triangle contract was invalided by the resignation of his supervising director, yet Triangle late last week received a telegram stating that the star was ready to again commence work on Monday.

Ince, in addition to claiming the services of Hart, states he has the services of Enid Bennett and Charles Ray. He is at present negotiating, through Eugene B. Allen, who resigned as business manager for the Triangle Western Studios when Ince left, for a site upon which to build a big studio. Reports that Sylvia Bremer, Thelma Salter and Dorothy Dalton had clauses in their contracts similar to those of Hart and Ray were denied both by Triangle officials and Ince.

Definite action on Ince's part, is expected early this week. The current rumors have it that he intends forming such an organization and erecting such a studio that if necessary twenty companies can work as well as three or four. He will leave within the next few days for California to hasten the work of organization.

In the meantime H. O. Davis, general manager of Triangle, is fast shaping plans for a concern, which he believes will outstrip any other both in production excellence and in service rendered to exhibitors.

The future Triangle pictures will not be based or advertised in the Peninsula of the state but on general high-class making and an interesting story. The plans of Mr. Davis as outlined in last week's issue of Motion Picture News will shortly be put into effect by a most efficient organization. No stone is to be left unturned to make Triangle pictures a synonym for excellence throughout the world.

It is reported that last week that Ince obtained a settlement of $1,135,000 on leaving Triangle. The figures for Sennett's interest were not given out.

Opposition League Is Formed in Chicago

TWENTY-SEVEN theatre owners, representing 160 theatres, organize League to Oppose Chicago Branch at National League—Schoenstadt President

PHILADELPHIA'S Convention of Exhibitors opened on Monday, June 25, to the accompaniment of brass bands and a great display of enthusiasm.

Throughout the day the best known exhibitors of the Quaker City swarmed through the convention hall at the Parkway Auditorium.

The doors were officially opened at 10.30 A.M. and closed on the first day's festivities at midnight.

Many important events are to be packed into these three days.

At 10.45 Mayor Smith made a speech of welcome. A response came from the Donnell, president of the Philadelphia local. Sightseeing tours, banquets, dancing, setting of important league issues, and election of new officers are the important matters on hand. Elections are scheduled for Wednesday.

Baltimore will be largely represented at the Pennsylvania State Convention. Arrangements have been made for six or eight automobiles which will leave Baltimore Sunday afternoon, and carry the delegation to the convention city. About thirty-five members of the Maryland League will spend the early part of the week in the Quaker City. Mr. Peter Olesky, manager of the Universal Film Exchange of Baltimore, and Mr. M. C. Seigel, Maryland representative for the Bluebird Pictures, both make their home in Philadelphia, and will entertain the Baltimore delegation. The latter contingent will also be entertained by the Salesmen's Club of Philadelphia. They will return to Baltimore early Thursday morning.

The convention is an assured success.
Anti-Picture Bills Die in Penna. in Race Against Time

Among Measures Which Legislators Will Not Consider Is "Regulation" Rather Than Censorship—Tax and Color Bills Have Chance—Final Rush Will Kill Rest

EVEN the legislators who are the sponsors for many of the bills hostile to the motion picture industry that are pending before the Pennsylvania legislature now concede that about the only ones that still have a chance to be enacted into law are the Beyer law, placing a tax of ten cent per foot on all films passed by the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, and possibly one of the numerous bills giving negroes equal rights with white persons in motion picture theatres.

Even these two bills are not now regarded as certain of passage. Their life depends on a race against time, for the week of June 25 is to be the last of the 1917 biennial session of the Legislature, and there is going to be such a jam of bills in the last few days before sine die adjournment that day there will be no time to give the legislature a chance to act on all of the bills pending.

Another bill that will die through lack of time to get action on it, if for no other reason, is the Jefferson W. Smith bill that would prevent children under ten years old from attending motion picture shows. This measure has been consistently opposed by Philadelphia motion picture producers, who have employed Maurice J. Speiser, a Philadelphia lawyer, as their representative here during the entire session of the Legislature. The measure is now reposing in a pigeon hole in the House Judiciary Special Committee and it will not come out.

The bill that would prohibit the showing of motion pictures in places licensed to sell liquor is another that will not be heard of again in the 1917 session of the Pennsylvania Legislature.

Walter W. Irwin Wins $3,000 Verdict from Kalem

WALTER W. IRWIN, general manager of V-L-S-E, in his private capacity as attorney, on Thursday, June 21, obtained a verdict for $3,000 with interest, his total claim against the Kalem Company, representing the Kalem Company's share of a charge of $30,000 against ten companies for professional services in bringing about a settlement of the case of William Fox's Greater New York Film Rental Company against the Patents Company, the General Film Company, the licensed manufacturers, and of several other cases instituted by Mr. Fox.

The Kalem Company, as one of the component parts of the General Film Company, was one of the defendants in the Fox suit. Frank J. Marion, as president of the Kalem Company, had refused to recognize Mr. Irwin's claim for legal services. Other defendants in the suit had accepted Mr. Irwin's claim as moderate and just, but the Kalem Company took the position that Mr. Irwin, as general counsel for the Vitagraph Company of America, which also was one of the defendants, was not entitled to a professional fee from the Kalem Company.

The victory of Mr. Irwin which assures him of his belated professional charge of $3,000, with interest and cost of the action, is a direct aftermath of the vigorous fight conducted by William Fox, as owner of the Greater New York Film Rental Company against the Patents Company, the General Film Company and the companies comprising the General Film Company.

Film circles will recall vividly the fight. Mr. Fox brought several suits under the Sherman AntiTrust act and demanded damages totaling a tremendous sum.

G. S. Rogers, of the legal firm of Rogers and Rogers, represented Mr. Fox. Mr. Rogers declared that he would not seriously enter into negotiations unless conducted by one representing all of the defendants, and a man in whom Mr. Rogers had absolute confidence.

It was at this point that Mr. Irwin came into the negotiations. At the time he was general counsel for the Vitagraph Company of America, as well as general manager of V-L-S-E, and was one of the few lawyers with an intimate knowledge of the motion picture business.

Negotiations were begun and broken off several times, and each time Mr. Irwin and Mr. Smith would succeed in reopening them. Eventually satisfactory terms of settlement were reached.

Mr. Irwin fixed his charge at $30,000 for legal services, being $3,000 pro rata on ten defendants. Meeting a refusal from Kalem, he was forced to sue June 19 last. His witnesses were Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph Company, and G. A. Rogers, attorney for Mr. Fox.

Paramount Presents Ambulance to Russia Red Cross

George M. Cohan, now established as an Artcraft film star, last week presented to the American Organization Ambulance in Russia a fully equipped ambulance, donated by Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation. Mr. Abrams had the machine built especially for the Red Cross, in Russia, and in his absence asked the famous author-playwright to present the car to Miss Elsa Maxwell, chairman of this body.

Promptly upon being completed the ambulance was shipped to the Fifty-sixth street studio, where George M. Cohan is now appearing in his second Artcraft picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate." Miss Maxwell was notified and visited the studio where the machine was turned over to her with due ceremonies by the Yankee Doodle Boy. The ambulance was immediately prepared for shipment and is now on route to Russia where it will soon see service.

Drops Dead in Midst of Work

While in his dressing-room at Universal City, making up for his part in "The Gray Ghost" serial, Daniel Leighton, son of the noted Irish actor, Horace Leighton, dropped dead from heart failure on June 21.

Mr. Leighton did not have one of the leading roles in the serial, and his part was practically finished in the production.

Leaves Mutual Publicity Dep't

John Fiske, formerly employed in the Publicity Department of the Mutual Film Corporation at its Chicago offices, left the service of the Mutual May 16.
Southern Exhibitors Digging Graves by Selfish Distrust

"Dog Eat Dog" Attitude Engenders Mutual Fear and Prevents Organization—Imminent Dangers Serve But to Awaken Theatre Men from Torpidity for Short Time

The following article, a survey of conditions among exhibitors in New Orleans and throughout the South, which is in a position to closely observe the trend of affairs in that section of the South, never has the advisability, in fact, the necessity of a strong organization of the motion picture exhibitors of the South been so forcibly demonstrated in the past few months. And yet it is a lamentable commentary upon the indifference of these same exhibitors that they have made but desultory efforts to build up such an organization. Despite some very costly lessons presented to their fitful attention recently, they quickly settled back into their habitual attitude of personal case, with the one exception of calling a few meetings, the result of which was the signing of about a score of the New Orleans suburban exhibitors, and the election of officers. That was four months ago.

It was the direct result of the discovery that the New Orleans exhibitors would be compelled to pay a "theatrical" tax, which, in a burst of confidence was officially admitted to be unjust and excessive but not the less inexcusable, from the fact that the exhibitors had been asleep when the state legislature perfunctorily passed the revenue measures. What had been everybody's business, proved to be nobody's business and the poor exhibitor was soaked to the amount of from $150 to $5000 a year for taxes which he might have escaped or at least reduced, had he taken the trouble to dignify his business with an organization and selected representatives of a calibre to command respect.

One of the serious drawbacks to the formation of an effective organization here-tofore has been the attitude of suspicion which one exhibitor has assumed against another. If one of the their number became active in the attempt to awaken his brethren from their apathy, he was immediately charged with having ulterior motives in the matter and his efforts were met with negation on every hand. This is not such a surprising situation when it is remembered that any undue display of energy in the South is regarded with astonishment, if not with downright suspicion. Nevertheless, this apathy and the defense of it, is the most dangerous thing with which the exhibitors of Louisiana and the other southern states have to contend. It is spelling ruin for one small picture theater after another. It is the cause; the assessment of numerous and excessive taxes is but the effect—the tangible effect. Therefore, the taxes are cussed but unfortunately seldom discussed in a business-like manner.

By hook or crook most of the exhibitors in New Orleans were enabled to pay heavy state taxes and keep their theatres in operation. They therefore settled back into the false position of fancied security. Then came the water, the rain, the man in the middle, the erosion of receipts and there was another scramble to find some means by which the threatened burden might be escaped or lessened. Doubtless the same experiences were being felt in other sections of the country where the exhibitors are as careless—the word is used advisedly—as they are in this section of the country. But here, in view of the experiences through which the small exhibitors had just passed, the situation became pathetically humorous. Not one of them has even attempted to post the plan of wiring up state exhibitors—charge—that their only salvation lay in wiring a vehe-ment protest to their congressmen—and about half of the messages were refused because the recipient objected to paying 40 cents charges on them. The incident is cited, not for the discussion of the merit of such a move, but to illustrate the utter contempt which the average exhibitor holds for any proposal that involve an effort or the expenditure of even the smallest sums by time. This is true.

One of the progressive exhibitors in Mississippi was asked why the exhibitors of his state did not get together and form a practical league for their mutual benefit. "I don't believe it can ever be done," he replied, "not in Mississippi any more than in Louisiana. These fellows won't stick together and if they pretend to be in favor of mutual assistance, they let their petty jealousies get the better of their good sense and the thing 'blows up.' They keep on getting up the worst of it until they wake up, but I doubt if they will change. We have tried to organize two or three times, but it seems to be an impossible thing to do."

The condition appears to be a little better in Louisiana on the surface, but in the face of any important happening, as has been demonstrated in the case of the effort to protest against the proposed federal tax on theatres, the organization is too weak to be effective or even to get 40 cents worth of co-operation from the very men who just that time should have been staying up nights to keep their shoulders to the wheel for the general good and for their own salvation in particular.

Spoor Says Pull, Not Rental Price, Is Real Test

Essanay's President Urges Exhibitors to Pick Subjects on Power to Bring Business, Not on the Cost of Their Use

Not the rental cost, but the business pull of a picture should be considered by the exhibitor who is choosing subjects, says Mr. Spoor.

This is the point strongly supported by George K. Spoor, president of the Essanay Company, in a recent announcement. Mr. Spoor says:

"A great many instances of exhibitors basing their advertising campaigns on the proportionate rental price of a picture or series of pictures rather than on the drawing power have recently come to our notice. It would certainly seem that this is a mistake, as it always puts the exhibitor on the defensive."

"The exhibitor books a picture at an exorbitant price and then feels that he is forced to advertise heavily in order to break even. Now wouldn't it be much better for him if he would book according to advertising possibilities and put the same amount of effort behind a medium-priced picture having comparatively the same drawing power?"

"Do not misunderstand this question. Naturally, there are many big features, worthy of higher admission prices and up- on which a great deal of money is spent in advertising is a real economy. On the other hand, we are repeatedly receiving information through our investigation department which shows that a large per cent of theatre managers have more than justified their high rentals in the last two years without increasing their admission price a penny."

"Take as an example our new series, 'Do Children Count?' With the advertising suggestions we have issued on these twelve subjects it will be possible for any exhibitor to make a larger percentage of profit several times over if he will conscientiously exploit them than he could if he were to book twelve disproportionately high-priced features and offer them at the same admission price."

"Essanay's policy in producing this series was to supply pictures which could be made the feature of short-subject programs on a co-feature on a bill where a five-reel subject is being shown. The rental prices will be unusually low when compared to the pulling power of the title and the quality of the productions. Certainly it would seem that such a proposition, with a very low first cost and an opportunity for a correspondingly large profit, would appeal to every one."

"Make this point clear, I might sight three of our recent five-reel subjects, 'Skinner's Dress Suit,' 'Skinner's Bubble' and 'Burning the Candle,' which though released in the regular service, we know are daily bringing bigger returns at the box-office than many of the so-called specials or super features."

"Therefore the best suggestion I can make to the exhibitor is to select his subjects on the strength of the business he can secure with them and on that basis alone."

Fairbanks' Project to Assist Red Cross

A "Douglas Fairbanks Chapter" of the Red Cross Fund, has been organized by the Aircraft star, to operate throughout the entire country with the assistance of Aircraft exhibitors showing his new picture, "Wild and Woolly."

These theatre men will present an attractive lobby display with placards urging patrons of the house to contribute to the Red Cross Fund. The entire receipts taken in this manner will be turned over to the local Red Cross organization.
NERASKA delegates to the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America will go to Chicago un instructed. This was the outcome of the convention of the Nebraska branch, held in Omaha. One hundred of the foremost exhibitors in the state were present. Mr. Ballinger, who was in the chair when a motion was made to send the delegates without instructions. It carried unanimously. The delegates are: H. M. Thomas, R. D. Shirley, A. R. Pramer, Wilfred Ladoux, Oscar Roliff, of Omaha; F. D. Eager, of Omaha; A. W. Ballinger, of York; R. B. Thomas, Fremont, and L. M. Gorman, of Lincoln.

"Isn't Mr. Ochs going to run again for the presidency?" asked an exhibitor. "Hasn't there been some section to him since he entered business?" asked another.

President Thomas gave ear to these questions and after a moment answered: "There has been a lot printed about this in the trade papers. I am merely putting it up to you to find what you want to do."

"Then I make a motion that our delegates be sent to Chicago uninstructed," moved A. W. Ballinger of the Opera and Sun theatres of York, Neb. "All we want them to do at Chicago is to work for a permanent, active, all-the-year-around organization, for and of the exhibitors of the country, as has been said. You never can tell what will happen and they should have a free hand to do what is best."

It was then that the motion was put to the house by Mr. Thomas and carried without a dissenting vote.

In an interview after the convention Mr. Ballinger again expressed his view that the exhibitors should retain friendly relations with the exchanges. He said:

"We are working for each other. When I get home I have a lot to take up with my lawyer the matter of this deposit system, whether it is restraint of trade and a violation of the anti-trust law."

The Nebraska branch is newly organized and the convention was its first. It was held in the exclusive Fontainelle Hotel, Omaha, June 19.

Nebraska's branch league, it became plain at the convention, was organized as a permanent affair, not brought into existence for just one purpose.

Another meeting of every exhibitor in the state, to discuss the ideas brought back by the delegates from Chicago, was called for Grand Island on August 7. To show the league is for every exhibitor in the state, Grand Island was selected after Lincoln, the capital city, had been discussed.

"We are a fine bunch down at Lincoln, and we are going to show you a good time the first time you come to our city," said L. Hillman of the Hill-Sun Amusement Co. "But we do not want you to come as soon as you can. But we do not want in the exhibitor in the little town to get the idea this is an Omaha-Lincoln affair and that he has no part in it. For that reason I am in favor of holding our meetings here and there about the state."

What action the Nebraska league should take regarding the deposit system was discussed. "Let us not do like one state did—pass a resolution against the system and then have our secretary, before the ink is dry, sign a contract with a film company. Let us not make asses of ourselves," said President Thomas. "We are opposed to the system, but what action shall we take?"

"I don't believe it will get us anywhere to fight with the exchanges," said Mr. Ballinger. "I believe the exchanges are among our good friends and should be treated that way. The ideal arrangement, I think, would be for this league to stand for its members. Let the exchanges know that none of our members are to put up deposits, but that when one of them fails to pay we will stand for the loss and will put him out of the league."

After the deposit system had been presented in all its various sides, one of the exhibitors remarked:

"Not that I care, only my money has lain so long in the hands of the film company it must be rusted by this time, but I think it is one duty of our organization to look out for its weaker members."

The convention passed a resolution against the deposit system. No further action was taken. Action of the national convention. The delegates were instructed to fight the deposit system if it comes up at the Chicago meeting.

How to get every exhibitor of the state into the league was a question settled in this manner: Every exhibitor now a member is expected to get one more. Road men from the various exchanges will be enlisted to help, being paid for each new member they enroll. The importance of getting new members, how the state league will benefit each member, and similar phases of the subject were discussed.

The convention adopted a constitution similar to that of the Minnesota league. It was announced the constitution is practically the same as that outlined by the national league for its state branches.

Hoover Decides Upon Pictures as Mouthpiece

National Food Dictator Appoints National Association and Association Advertisers as Official Propagandists in Effort to Muster Food Resources of the Land—Express Deep Appreciation at Association's Offer

HERBERT HOOVER, food dictator of the United States, has appointed the motion picture to be his official mouthpiece.

This announcement takes the form of a letter to William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

This official recognition by the Government of the film industry as a power to direct national ends is said to come as a result of the splendid results achieved by the screen in securing subscriptions to the Liberty Loan.

Coming at a time when great events are happening so rapidly that their importance is difficult to grasp, the recognition of the power of the film can only be glossed over in this space.

The food problem is the greatest confronting, not only the nation, but the world, and film men have been quick to feel the great weight of responsibility which has been placed on their shoulders.

Mr. Hoover's letter to William A. Brady, president of the National Association, is as follows:

"Mr. William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., 805 Times Building, New York City.

"Dear Mr. Brady:"

"The offer of motion picture co-operation made on behalf of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Inc., and of its affiliated organization, the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., is accepted with thanks, and in order to avoid confusion and conflict of patriotic effort, these organizations are designated as the official motion picture avenues of publicity and patriotic propaganda in behalf of the food administration during the war."

The promptness with which the National Association has responded to aid its country's needs, makes its action doubly valuable. No medium is better able than the screen to undertake the work of informing the public of the country's needs, and I assure you of my very great appreciation of your loyal service.

"Yours very truly,"

HERBERT HOOVER.

Commonwealth Active

The Commonwealth Pictures Corporation of Chicago, after quite a spell of inactivity, during which plans were being made for the future, and some little reorganization and strengthening was going on, have announced that they will again begin production in Chicago about the middle of July. H. A. Spanuth, president of the organization, left for New York on Saturday, June 23, where he will engage a director, technical man and camera man, and fill in part of his cast for the first picture.

The Commonwealth Corporation were in negotiations some months ago to secure the services of Mrs. Vernon Castle for a special series of pictures, but this was dropped, and Miss Elsie Mackay, well known on the legitimate stage, was put under contract. Miss Mackay will star in the first picture produced.

Rothacker Films Ad Men

The Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company was appointed as the official photographers of the Ad Men's Convention and parade at St. Louis the week of June 4. Watterson Rothacker, the head of the concern, brought with him a crew of cameramen from the studio.
Varner Campaign to Head League Starts with a Bang

Energetic Campaign Committee Appointed and Wires Hum to All Sections of Country—Review of Southerner's Career in Motion Picture Field

Friends of H. B. Varner, who two weeks ago nominated him for the presidency of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association of America were in receipt throughout the week of assurances of support that assure a bitterly contested election for Chicago in July. The North Carolina aggregation has started like a whirlwind, with the formation of a well-organized Campaign Committee volunteering in word and plans of sending a Southern delegation to Chicago that will rival any State's representation at a national political party convention.

One of Mr. Varner's prominent New York supporters declared his support for advocating the Southerner's election to Motion Picture News last week. "The defeat of the proposal to tax theatres on ten per cent. of gross receipts," he declared, "a proposition that meant ruin in many cases, was due more largely to Varner's supporters than to any other man or set of men. Those who were on the inside of this fight will most willingly concede this. No secret gushumoe work for Varner, but an open, fair fight against powerful influences convinced the Senate Finance Committee, after the House had already passed the Revenue Bill with the iniquitous provision, that such a tax was unfair and ruinous. Every exhibitor who realizes the extent of the industry he is engaged in—the third largest in America—can compute what this victory means to them.

"This is not the first fight he has made for the exhibitors. In 1914 he was instrumental in having the Federal tax graduated on seating capacity and size of towns from which patronage could be drawn, instead of a flat head tax that would touch some lightly and deliver a knockout blow to others. In 1916, after the House had passed a tax of one-half of one per cent. on gross receipts, he appeared before the Senate Finance Committee and defeated the proposal, effecting a saving of some four and one-half million dollars a year to exhibitors. In North Carolina, with the most compact exhibitors' league of any State in the Union behind him, he succeeded in eliminating the county special tax on theatres, which amounts to from $30 to $150 on each theatre in the State."

"All these things he has accomplished in the two and a half years, he has been an exhibitor, and at the same time has done the detail of organizing his State league into a unit of power and mutual benefit."

H. B. Varner was a welcome visitor to New York last week, making his first stop at Motion Picture News office.

When interviewed as to what would be his aims, should he be elevated to the presidency of the National League, he stated briefly: "I would cement the organization into a compact, capable and effective body and seek to create a demand in the community. A force of good to their communities, capable of protecting fully their own interests should be the aim of the exhibitors, and I should work along those lines. The motion picture theatres should become firmly entrenched in the affections of the masses through rendering the best possible service at all times. The exhibitors have this in their hands, and I believe I can help the industry to attain these worthy aims. I have heretofore fought the battles of the exhibitor, not to hurt any other branch of the industry, but because I realized his welfare was paramount to the welfare of any other branch of the motion pictures. I trust there will never be a conflict of interests, but rather a community of interests, but come what may I shall stand with my fellows to the end."

Colonel Varner, as he is more familiarly known in every county of the South, is one of the leading good roads exponents of the Southern States, founded and still publishes Southern Good Roads Magazine; has for eight years been president of the North Carolina Good Roads Association; publishes the leading weekly paper of his State and was twice president of the North Carolina Press Association, and served one term as president of the National Editorial Association. He was Commissioner of Labor and Printing for eight years; has for four years been chairman of the State Prison Board, and the present Governor recognized his worth by again naming him chairman, and the only member of the old board renamed. He is a member of the Prison Parole Board and interested in various public capacities.

It is claimed by Mr. Varner's friends that he has rendered more service of public character for less money than any man in North Carolina, and they urge in his behalf that no honors the exhibitors of the nation might bestow would rest unworthy.

Maryland May Not Send Delegates to Chicago

Baltimore.—There is a diversity of opinion among the members of the Maryland State Exhibitors' Organization regarding the sending of delegates to the coming convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League at Chicago. At a recent meeting tentative delegates were selected, but no authority has yet been given to duly credit a Maryland delegation.

There is a fear among many members of the organization that the money now in the hands of the body, which is very young, should be used for fighting adverse legislation and other matters of direct interest to Maryland show men.

It would be impossible for Maryland to be represented on the floor of the convention as yet, for no charter has been granted the organization. This latter is simply a matter of form, however, as money has been appropriated for the purpose of joining the National body.

It is expected that a meeting held early this week will settle the question of sending delegates to Chicago.

"Series and Serial" in One New Kalem Plan

Phil Lang, general manager of production at the Kalem Studio, Glendale, California, is in town to confer with William Wright, treasurer, regarding a new group of short-length pictures to be produced by the Kalem Company.

The Kalem officials determined upon a new policy of production. They will make the new group of pictures a combination of a series and a serial. The production will be a serial inasmuch as there will be a continued thread of interest, and a series inasmuch as each episode will be a complete story in itself.

Kalem has never favored making the final fade-out at the height of the climax, with a notice to come back next week. This policy will not be changed.

Robert Welles Ritchie, who will write the stories, is enthusiastic over the new plan. He has talked it over with Lang.

Industry Subscribed Five Millions to Liberty Bond Issue

Reports received by the National Association up till Saturday indicated that the motion picture industry subscribed approximately five million to the Liberty Bond issue. This takes into account only the direct subscriptions from the industry and does not include the influence of the vigorous screen campaign.

Included in the last minute tallies were the following subscriptions: Doris Kenyon, $50,000; Mrs. Margaret Talmadge, mother of Norma and Constance, $10,000.

When the books of the bond sale were closed office records of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation showed that a total of $580,000 had been subscribed by the organization and its employees. The Lasky Home Guard and a step to insure any member of the Lasky organization who enlists are other evidences of practical patriotism by this organization. The exceptional showing made by the Lasky organization caused Secretary William G. McAdoo to wire a warm telegram of congratulation to Cecil B. De Mille.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation "Doing Its Bit"

By way of "doing its bit," the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation is to furnish a positive print of all its pictures to the United States troops in the European army. Two standard projection machines will be given to whatever unit of service takes the matter in charge.
Ovation Accorded Hart on Return to Los Angeles

TRENDY THROBBING crowds at Station and Big Auditorium and Typical Scenes of the Old West Are Seen—Entire Trip Is a Triumph

The return of William S. Hart was made as spectacular in Los Angeles as any of the demonstrations and portrayals of the Western good-humour experienced by him throughout the thirty-five days to the principal cities of the country. Mr. Hart arrives in Los Angeles, Monday, June 11, and more than 500 of the film colony were at the station to greet him. Members of his horse-opera troupe carried him on their shoulders from the train to his pony, "Fritz," which waited in front of the station. The Inceville cowboy band was at the train steps, and lead the way. A procession was formed with Mr. Hart on "Fritz," who wore a blanket of red roses, and a bodyguard of cowboys and Indians in front. The procession moved to the Auditorium where an audience taxying the seating capacity waited to honor the actor. The doormen were unable to stop the crowd, and every bit of standing room was taken regardless of fire ordinances.

Valuable Co-operation Secured for Fashion Films

Florence Rose has sent to about five hundred buyers and advertising managers, in various cities, beginning with those in which Pathe Exchanges are located, a new prospectus which should greatly stimulate interest in the fashion of the Florence Rose Fashion Service both for theatres and newspapers, as well as retailers. Miss Rose sends what she calls a "Retailers Service" showing photographs and descriptions of the costumes in each release of the Fashion Films. While the most important stores in the United States. Recently she signed the advertising manager of B. Altman & Company, New York, for this service.

It stands to reason that when a big store has on hand certain garments which are to be seen in the Florence Rose Fashion Films, the store will do everything in its power to cooperate with the exhibitor in presenting the pictures. Window displays and newspaper advertising worth large sums are thus employed for the exhibitors' benefit, and live exhibitors will see the possibilities of such cooperation.

Vault Makers Sound Praises of "Movies"

"Motion pictures are a wonderful boon to the honest manufacturer whose proposition will stand for pictorial proof."

This is one sentence from a booklet just issued by the General Fireproofing Company of Youngstown, Ohio. Two pages are devoted to a detailed description of the plant of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company of Chicago. One statement:

"Mr. Rothacker believes that no building is more fireproof than its contents, so all the office equipment in the plant—desks, tables, filing cabinets, safes, letter trays, waste baskets—are GF Allsteel while the master films are stored on Allsteel shelving in fireproof vaults."

Mr. Hart's trip back to the west coast was fully as strenuous as any of the whirlwind campaigns of Bryan in his baldest days of candidacy.

The eventful week at Minneapolis on Thursday, speaking at two theatres in the afternoon, and two in the evening besides visiting six other theatres not on his schedule. The crowds being unable to gain admission to the theatres, Mr. Hart spoke from his soap box in front.

Upon urgent request of the mayor of Butte, Montana, Mr. Hart stopped there on Sunday morning to speak to forty thousand miners. The following morning he reached Spokane, and the mayor there asked him to read a proclamation from the governor of Washington, in connection with the public unfurling of a silk flag presented to the city by the governor, and to wave until peace is declared.

The stops in other cities were but repetitions of the above.

Letters from Public Praise "Persuasive Peggy"

M. A. Schlesinger, president of Mayfair Film, basing his opinion upon the results of an expensive and exhaustive investigation, says of the human interest appeal of "Persuasive Peggy": "It is an assured success from the exhibitor's point of view if we are to accept the opinion of the numerous responsible publishers throughout the country who have printed the story."

Two sample letters are from the editor of Farm and Home and a reader of that paper. The editor says: "Since I finished running 'Persuasive Peggy' in Farm and Home, I have received several thousand enthusiastic letters from readers of Farm and Home expressing their appreciation of the story."

To this the reader's letter adds: "I certainly was charmed with the beautiful story of 'Persuasive Peggy,' and I do hope Maravene Thompson will give us another account of this same Peggy and Big Ed, in case, by some unexpected accident, they are left penniless with her at the age of forty."

Lavish Presentation Draws Crowd to Hitchens' Film

A ten-part film version of Robert Hitchens' romance of the Sahara, "The Garden of Allah," has broken all records in the Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh. Originally scheduled for two weeks only, the engagement for the picture was extended to the third week, and capacity houses have been the rule ever since the opening.

The two most popular features of the production of "The Garden of Allah," which have been made under the personal supervision of William Moore Patch, managing director of the Pitt theatre, are, first, the musical score, which is most atmospheric and appropriate; and secondly a massive stage setting revealing a vast stretch of desert, with a herd of live camels imported from the New York Hippodrome.

Miss Young on Western Trip for Her Own Company

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, who has finally realized her ambition to become the active head of her own producing company, left New York last week for a hurried business trip through the West and Middle Western States. Temporary office of the Clara Kimball Young Company, as the new organization is to be known, have been established in Fort Lee, N. J.

The productions that are to be produced by this company will be distributed throughout the medium of the foremost exchanges throughout the country, and it was for the purpose of closing contracts with a number of these exchanges that Miss Young is making the trip.

Even before it was announced officially that the Clara Kimball Young productions would be available, she was in receipt of offers for the territorial rights to every district in the country, it is said, as well as an offer from probably the most important distributing organization in the country.

This company, which now distributes the pictures of several of the foremost film stars, made, it is said, a most flattering offer to Miss Young for the exclusive distribution privileges on all of her forthcoming productions. The new actress-manager, however, is a firm believer in the open market system of film distribution, and adhered to her original intention to dispose of her pictures only through those exchanges that would follow out her own views on films.

The first release of the Clara Kimball Young (Her Own) Company will be about August 15. The name of the production has not yet been made public, nor have the names of the directors and the supporting players been announced. It is expected, however, that this information will be given out at an early date.
American Film Men Are Ignorant of Foreign Market

WITH the purchase last week by the Export and Import Film Company of the complete foreign rights excepting England to the entire Metro output, Ben Blumenthal, head of the Export concern, disclosed what he designated as the ridiculous business methods of some American manufacturers.

"In bidding for film here, I find that American manufacturers ask prices with absolutely no knowledge of their figures," said Blumenthal. "They have no idea of how many prints it might be possible to sell in the different countries, but ask outright sums that are ridiculous. In state rights trading here, an exchange man figures the booking possibilities in his territory and buys accordingly. In buying foreign rights we also have calculations, but the film makers here do not consider this. They name an amount that suits their fancy and wait to be bargained with. I attribute their attitude to their lack of authentic information on the market.

"Of course, criticism without corrective suggestion accomplishes nothing. If I were asked what to do about selling foreign rights I should say that the main requisite is to see that the European concern is really a concern, not an unattached individual speculating with a sample print. A reputable concern, financially responsible, can demonstrate its reliability and value in one transaction, and thereafter the manufacturer always feels that his European returns are all that efficiency can make them."

The Metro Company officials announce that they are highly pleased with the move they have made, paying a high tribute to the integrity and aggressiveness of Mr. Blumenthal and his associates. It is stated that in the course of the negotiations exhaustive inquiry was made throughout Europe regarding the Export & Import Film Company and all reports gathered proved the eminent standing.

Francis J. Tietzort and Stewart I. De Kraft of the Porto Rican-American Film Corporation with headquarters at Ponce, 7 Pujals Street, Porto Rico, are in New York, purchasing film for the Porto Rican Cine Circuit, with which their company is affiliated.

The Porto Rican Cine Circuit controls forty out of the sixty-three picture theatres in Porto Rico.

The Porto Rican-American Film Corporation operates the Cine Ideal at San Juan and the Cine Delicias at Ponce. The company is also the lessee of the New Broadway theatre which is now being built at Ponce, and has practically concluded negotiations for the lease of the Municipal theatre at San Juan, which has 1,200 seats.

The officers of the Porto Rican-American Film Corporation are as follows: President and Treasurer, Antonio S. Arrias, a Porto Rican banker; First Vice-President and Managing Director, Francis J. Tietzort; Second Vice-President, Clarence E. Ferguson, of San Juan; Secretary and Porto Rican Manager, Rafael Sacarello, of Ponce; Manager of the New York office, Stewart I. De Kraft.

The company will shortly open offices in New York City.

The Porto Rican-American Film Corporation was formed to secure good pictures for the Cine Circuit and also to correct the present poor service which exists. According to Mr. Tietzort, there are few competent film men on the island. Social dramas, says Mr. Tietzort, stories of social life, featuring fashionable drawing rooms, restaurants, etc., are of the greatest appeal to the Porto Rican public. They do not care for Western dramas. The eternal triangle is always acceptable, but the situations must not be crudely presented. Some of the better theatres are equipped with the latest American machines and electrical appliances. For export, the Cine Ideal distributes free ice water, and has a large and attractive candy booth at the entrance. The prevailing price is fifteen cents. High class pictures will frequently draw to twenty-five cents admission, and special attractions will be regularly drawn as high as fifty cents. It is the intention of Mr. Tietzort and De Kraft to ship films eventually to Santo Domingo and Hayti.

Superpictures to Buy and Produce Features

Sells Its Holdings in Triangle Distributing Corporation to S. A. Lynch—Will Now Distribute Twelve More Pictures a Year as Triangle Releases

SUPERPICTURES, Inc., will buy, produce and distribute to foreign lands beginning this week. The aim will be to establish itself as the dominating figure in the motion picture industry. It will produce for the state rights market, and also release through Triangle.

Until last week Superpictures, Inc., the holding company for McClure Pictures, producers of "Seven Deadly Sins," was, it is said, the controlling factor in the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

Superpictures, Inc., has withdrawn, selling itself to L. Frelinghuysen. It is stated, at a substantial profit. Frederick L. Collins, president of Superpictures, Inc., has such confidence in the Triangle organization that he has arranged for Triangle to produce six pictures to be sold by the state rights method and for the distribution of twelve additional pictures a year through the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

Superpictures, Inc., is prepared to buy any feature of unusual quality. A campaign of nation-wide publicity in newspapers and magazines will be launched behind every photoplay released by this company. McClure publicity, as was demonstrated in the advertising that, it is said, made "Seven Deadly Sins" a sure-fire box-office attraction, is offered as a stout and sturdy worker for every exhibitor that shows a McClure production. McClure publicity, it is promised, will be right on the heels of Superpictures throughout its run.

State rights buyers will not merely purchase from Superpictures, Inc., prints and permission to use them. They will also share the good will demonstrated in the McClure publicity campaigns, that will work to crowd patrons into every theatre showing a Superpicture.

President's Proclamation Cited by Schindler

Declares "Business as Usual" to Hysterical Ones Desiring National Convention Called Off

CONFIDENT of the success of the coming national convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League at Chicago, beginning July 14, the members of the committee in charge of the plans at Chicago are scoffing at the idea that the war should affect its successful outcome. "We are following the governmental plea for 'business as usual,'" said Ludwig Schindler, manager of the convention, last week. To further bury the protests of what he calls the hysterical ones, Mr. Schindler is quoting and referring to President Wilson's message contained in a letter sent out to the New York Merchants' and Manufacturers' Exchange on June 17.

"Embedded in the letter was the following statement by the President: 'In reply alike to all whom it concerns, I can only say why commercial conventions should be omitted during the war, and should regret to see any instrumentality neglected which has proven serviceable in stimulating business and facilitating its processes. This note only is not a time to allow any slowing up of business, but it is a time when every sensible process of stimulation should be used.'"
"Departmental Co-operation Road to Good Pictures"—Parke

By PETER MILNE

"The conservation of time and more extensive co-operation between author, continuity writer, director and editor," are the slogans of William Parke, now directing Gladys Hulette in "Pathe Vitagraph's" new $10,000 production, "The Mystery of the Double Cross." Mr. Parke, interviewed last week by a representative of Motion Picture News, announced his intention to keep plugging until he was completely satisfied with the advancement of production, and to adhere to these lines. "If the director, the man who is a combination of artist and business man," said M. Parke, "were given free rein in his studio, I am certain that he would be able to reduce the cost of production to a material extent. As it is under the systems maintained in the majority of the studios at present, hours of valuable time are often wasted owing to the exertion of temperament by the star who in so doing is liable to cause the loss of a half-day's work. The worst of it is though, it is not always the star who is to blame. The property man, unless proded, doesn't always have his sets ready at the specified time.

The fact that it is the aim of the Pathé officials to build separate organizations round each director, is one with which Mr. Parke is heartily in accord. But not until this aim has been achieved will he be satisfied. "With the case of myself," said the director, "I am quite certain, that given a free rein, I could reduce the cost of producing a five-reel feature by two or three thousand dollars, and still maintain a high state of efficiency.

"The present lack of complete co-operation between all concerned with the production of a pictorial story," said M. Parke, "will, I hope, be remedied in due time. It appears to me that there is not a lack of good stories furnished producing companies. The lack is an insufficient amount of skillful continuity writers. A staff man will often go to work with an original script, and because of workshop methods kill the redeeming features of the script. He turns out a technically good product, but an artistically unfinished piece of work. Such at least has been my observation in particular instances already encountered in my short experience in the film business.

"The same fault applies to the system of things existing between director and editor. Editors often kill those points which the director believes are the finest in his work. Co-operation here would work to further improvement."

Mr. Parke is not, however, a pessimist. He appreciates pictures for the simple reason that so many people appreciate them. But, despite the conventionality of the statement, he believes the directors' work is still in its infancy. "We must always progress," he concluded, "the picture of to-day won't amount to much when compared to the picture of two, three or five years hence. There will be more art in them, better cutting, better stories, and the director will correspondingly have a better opportunity in his end of the business."

Vitagraph Refuses to Join in Cutting Out Private Views

"We notice that some of the distributors give an excuse for discontinuing courtesies to the trade press," said Mr. Stronge, "that the value of the review is greater if the reviewers are where they can be read, and by the audience. Such an excuse for stopping trade reviews is all wrong from our standpoint.

"We take the attitude that reviewers should be allowed to see pictures in surroundings where their minds will be on the pictures and upon nothing else. This is only possible in the projection room, where there is nothing to distract the attention of the reviewers. In these surroundings the reviewers see every weak point in the picture. Beautiful music will not cover the weak points in the picture. If the week spot is there the reviewers will see it."

July to Mark Entry of Woods' Organization in Field

Frank E. Woods, who has been in New York for the past six weeks, is expected on the coast about July 1, and announcement will then be made of his plans which it is understood will concern a new producing organization for the West. During his absence Mr. Woods has maintained an office in Los Angeles, and his aides have been carrying out his plans for his future project, definite information concerning which is not given.

Pierre Key, Bach's Successor, Well-known Newspaper Man

Pierre V. Key, who succeeds W. A. Bach as sales and advertising manager of M. H. Hoffman, Inc, is not as well-known in picture circles as some others, but as a thorough business man and manager he ranks with some of the best. As a newspaper man, special writer, critic and advertising man he has had many years experience.

Mr. Key comes to M. H. Hoffman, Inc., with a thorough knowledge of the detailed principles of the exploitation of subjects in general. For the past two years he was general manager of the Boston National Grand Opera Company and for the past six years has been musical critic and special writer for the New York World. He has also written special articles for the leading monthly magazines.

"For the next few months during the summer," said Mr. Key, "I shall devote much of the time to a study of the distinctive phases of the industry as applied to production and distribution of motion pictures. The biggest moments in the motion picture industry, both in distribution and in photoplay, are ahead of us," concluded Mr. Key, "and with many others it will be my purpose to work with this thought before me."

Public Rights Play Has Food Trust Villain

"The Public Be Damned," a new production of the Public Rights Film Corporation, with Charles Richman and Mary Fuller in the star parts, has been exhibited privately to Herbert Hoover, Food Admin-istrator, who highly commends it. Mr. Hoover said:

"It is especially timely and will arouse the public to a realization that something must and can be done to stop the depredations of the food sharks who are robbing the public of millions of dollars every month."

The new picture shows the insidious methods of the Food Trust in squeezing both the consumer and producer, and also presents a solution to the problem of defeating these vultures.

The story tells of the efforts of the head of the Food Trust to prevent a generous woman from aiding a city mission by furnishing the products of her farm at a reasonable price to the poor. Her husband is bribed to sell the farm's produce to the Trust for three years for $10,000. She denounces her husband. The passage of a true bill through the Legislature rights the wrong, and they are reconciled in the last scene.

Trade-Mark Still Undecided

Although over two weeks have elapsed since the closing of Art Dramas Trade-Mark Contest, in which fourteen thousand answers were received, no final decision has yet been arrived at by the committee of judges.

This committee has succeeded in eliminating all but ten of the designs submitted, and these are now in the hands of the board of directors, so it is improbable that the decision will be delayed longer.
Little Interest at Michigan Convention

Michigan exhibitors did not turn out in very large numbers for the annual convention held at Grand Rapids, June 12 and 13. The number in attendance, including exchange representatives, probably did not total over forty for the two days.

Little was accomplished at the convention because it is impossible for, say, twenty-five exhibitors to transact business for 700 other exhibitors. The first session took place Tuesday afternoon.

The convention went into executive session taking up the various things which directly concern the exhibiting end of the industry. Tuesday night many of the delegates attended the Empress theatre to see "Within the Law" as the guests of Lew Barnes.

Wednesday morning and afternoon business executive meetings were held. It was decided to make an active campaign for new members during six months and to start by organizing units in each county.

Election of officers resulted as follows: President, S. A. Moran, Ann Arbor; First Vice-President, W. S. McLaren, Jackson; Second Vice-President, Frank Ongie, Hancock; Third Vice-President, Frederick Jacobi, Ionia; Secretary, Claud E. Cady, Lansing; Treasurer, Paul J. Schlossman.

The semi-annual convention will be held in December in Detroit.

Film Man Active for Patriotic League

Royale V. Rothermel, president of the Filmcraft Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, who, it was announced in an earlier issue, is actively engaged in the service of the Patriotic Service League, announces that a great service is being done and that the league is now hard at work raising $25,000 in the Nineteenth Congressional District, as its contribution to the Red Cross $100,000,000 fund.

Mr. Rothermel also announces that the league is in need of several men familiar with the exchange and exhibitors' field, in New York City, to serve on the publicity committee of the league, extending from Seventy-second to One hundred and twenty-fifth street, New York. Any one volunteering to serve on the committee will have to be a resident of this district.

English Opposition to American Films in Australia

An English concern—the British Ideal Film Company—has instituted a branch in Australia to give battle to American concerns, who have a strong hold on the film business in the Antipodes.

Starting some years ago in London, the Ideal Company went after the leaders of the English film market and got them. Amongst their players are George Alexander, Henry Ainley, Albert Chevalier, James Welch, Ellen Terry, George Robey and John Hare.

The opening pictures to be reeled off in Australia are "The Vicar of Wakefield," "The Second Mrs. Tanqueray," "Lady Windermere's Fan" and "Her Greatest Performance."

K-E-S-E Abolishes Advance Deposit System

No Further Collections to Be Exact as Rental Guarantees—Funds Now Held to Be Returned—Campaign on Conquest Films

The advance deposit system has been abolished by George Kleine in connection with the K-E-S-E service. On issuing a business bank account in which he said:

"When the system of advance deposits was introduced into our business to guarantee contracts, I announced:

1. That these sums would be held in a separate trust fund, apart from our business bank account in which the exhibitor would be withdrawn from time to time when earned by film rentals.

2. That a cash discount of six per cent. upon the amount deposited would be allowed.

These agreements have been kept. The unearned advance deposits of the K-E-S-E Service are deposited separate from our business funds in the Harriman National Bank of New York, the Merchants' Loan & Trust Company and the Continental Commercial National Bank of Chicago.

"Recognizing the justness of the exhibitors' attitude that the advance deposit works a great hardship upon many whose funds are tied up—one exhibitor tells me that he has on deposit, scattered among various exchanges, without security, the sum of $14,000—and after consultation with the manufacturers associated with me, Thomas A. Edison, Inc., Mr. Selig of the Selig Polyscope Company, and Mr. Spoor of the Essanay Company, I take pleasure in announcing that K-E-S-E will abolish the system of advanced business deposits."

"No further collections will be exacted to guarantee rental contracts by Keys Service.

"Funds now in our hands will be returned to their owners as soon as adjustments can be made in the business protected. These adjustments and refunds will be made from the home office through our branches, and will require some time for the labor of accounting, but all will probably be closed out before August 1."

"It is necessary that our rental charges be protected, and I confidently look for the co-operation of exhibitors in asking payment of each rental charge before shipment of the film."

Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay are now releasing fifteen reels each week. From their publicity department comes the announcement that they have already inaugurated a vigorous campaign in behalf of Conquest Pictures, of which, beginning July 14, they will release a program of seven reels each week, made up of a four-reel feature and three shorter subjects of one reel each.

Chaplin Scramble Continues, with No Definite Move Yet

With Syd Chaplin safe in an out-of-town retreat, not to return till Tuesday, the scramble for the services of the one and only Charles Chaplin spent a quiet week-end. The dopes had to content themselves with their own conclusions as to whether Mutual, Paramount or Triangle—the last a late entry in the Rumber Handicap—would succeed in offering the most millions to the comedian.

Well-informed film men quoted the story that Triangle was seeking to sign Chaplin, though it saw publication in a New York daily on Sunday. The race is understood to lie between Paramount and Mutual and the most organized film factors, with Mutual ever present in the background.

The Motion Picture News, succeeded in getting in touch with Syd Chaplin late Monday. "No definite step has been taken," he declared. "I will not return to the city until late on Tuesday and until then matters will stand as they did last week."

"Garden of Allah," Opens in Chicago July 22

"The Garden of Allah," Selig's spectacular motion picture production will have its Chicago première beginning July 22, at the Colonial theatre in the Loop. It will run for two weeks there. The EDMund Allen Film Corporation, one of the newest and most promising state rights organizations in this section, purchased the Illinois and Michigan rights for this picture as one of their first moves. They have since announced the acquisition of wider territorial rights by which they acquire Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and Texas.

Sectional Grievances in Ohio Smoothed Over

Cincinnati Exhibitor Talks to Cleveland Group—Further Action
After National Convention—Officers Elected for Sixth City Body

THE Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League meeting last Tuesday resulted in favorable reports of outstanding committees and in the nomination of officers for the latter half of the year.

The committee on organization, of which Henry H. Lustig is chairman, brought in the report that it had personally handled and had not been displaying an active interest in the League with the result that many of them were present at the last meeting.

The case of J. J. Mellert of the Fulton theatre, 3812 Lorain avenue, against the blanket, drawn up by J. J. and the charges of scattering and injurious liquors in and about the premises of the theatre, was warmly championed by the League. The League attorneys, Schwarz, Lustig and Sawyer, are handling the case, which is scheduled for June 27. In the meantime, the League authorized the printing of 5,000 circulars, stating in full Mr. Mellert’s just grievances, as well as the unjust claims demanded from him by the operators’ union. These handbills are to be disseminated throughout the neighborhood of the Fulton theatre for the better understanding of all. All expenses entailed from the issuing of these bills are to be defrayed by the League.

A special meeting of the League was called for July 9 in response to a letter from Lee Ochs saying that he would be in Cleveland on that date.

The outcome of a letter which Secretary Sam Bullock sent to the Cincinnati branch of the Ohio League, urging a meeting of joint committees for the purpose of adjusting the present strained relations that exist between the two bodies, resulted in a visit last Monday from H. Serekowich of Cincinnati. Mr. Serekowich thought it best to do nothing until after the conventions in Chicago. Then the committees can get together and adjust all difficulties. That plan met with the approval of the Cleveland League members.

The nomination for officers resulted as follows: For president, Henry H. Lustig, W. J. Simms; vice-president, J. H. Simpson; recording secretary, Sam Bullock; financial secretary, Walter Horsey, Sam Deutch; treasurer, Sam Bark, George Heinlach. Sam Bullock, B. J. Sawyer, Dave Schnaumann and Sam Aubert are nominated for delegates to attend the Chicago convention. Election of officers will take place next Tuesday.

How One Exhibitor Put Over a Red Cross Benefit

THE U. S. theatre in the Bronx, New York, recently gave a “Red Cross Day,” using the Thanhouser-Pathe production, “The Vicar of Wakefield,” as the very appropriate feature picture. So pleased was the committee of ladies with the handling of the affair that they wrote Mr. Thanhouser a letter, from which the following are some excerpts:

Dear Mr. Thanhouser:

Regarding your request for more information on our very successful “Red Cross Day” at the U. S. theatre here in the Bronx, beg to say it was handled by a committee of the Park branch, Bronx Chapter, American Red Cross, and Manager M. Z. Fleischman of the U. S. theatre, which is the newest and largest motion picture house in our neighborhood. A number of films were viewed, and the committee chose “The Vicar of Wakefield,” with Mr. Frederick Warde in the title role, as being a classic, a clean, beautiful story, and suitable for both young and old. Mr. North of Pathe was consulted, and promised that Mr. Warde would appear personally at the performance and speak during the showing of the film.

Placards were placed in shop windows, notices were read by the principals of the various schools and from the pulpits of our churches, and on the Saturday before the benefit we collected all the available automobiles and had an automobile parade.

Flowers were sold in the lobby of the theatre by young ladies dressed in the Red Cross uniforms, who also acted as ushers. A good effort was thus realized with comparatively little effort, two shows being packed to capacity.

Progress in Organization of New Iowa League

The new organization known as the Iowa Motion Picture Industry League, composed of a number of exhibitors who seceded from the Iowa Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League, and of exchange men, has been formally launched. Committees in charge of different branches of legislation have been appointed and by-laws drawn up.

The radical change in organization was due to a factional fight between several exhibitors and exchange men. The exhibitor group, according to reports, came out with a demand that the league should be open to exhibitors only, rather than as in the past to both theatre men and exchange men.

ON THE FIRING LINE

“The Shine Girl,” “Daredevil Kate,” and “Peggy” were the big drawing cards recently at the Gem Theatre, Chatfield, Minn., writes Manager L. R. Champin, who advises he would like four-reelers instead of five, to go with news and comedy reels which he thinks made an ideal balanced program. Like all the small-town exhibitors he wants the “family picture.” Fox, Pathe and Triangle is his choice of service, with popularity among his patrons pretty evenly divided between them as will be noted from the hits named above.

Russell S. Wehre, of the Colonial, Bluefield, W. Va., joins the “kickers’ brigade” against a certain brand of high prices—the kind that are set by inefficiency men representing certain concerns that know about as much about your town, its exact population, and drawing power as some picture censor boards about what is a good picture. No question brother Russell is in the majority. His kick doesn’t only apply to his town, either.

“Two and four-day runs,” caught our eye in a communication from the Alhambra Theatre, Utica, N. Y., and we requested an explanation. Here it is in the exact language of Miss Ruby H. Lux of the Alhambra Amusement Co.: “We are handling two and four-day runs at our Alhambra theatre in order to accommodate bookings along the following lines:

We have booked in the Metro program for Monday and Tuesday, same to be set forward or back to accommodate week runs, when we book a picture that we feel will stand up that long. It is our endeavor for the last four days of the week to schedule pictures of sufficient strength to go over that length of time, as we feel a good picture should be thoroughly advertised and when backed up with plenty of publicity should do business on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday without any trouble. Saturday being a transient day takes care of itself.

“We figure that a four-day rental and a four-day advertising campaign does not entail the expense incurred through a double booking and a second advertising campaign.”

“Sick of the daily change, bother and worry,” writes H. S. Robbins, Rookwood Theatre, Grand Haven, Mich., who runs Paramount, Artcraft, Selznick and Triangle pictures. “As long as the program keeps up its end the exhibitor can run a picture two days, as I am doing it in a town of 6,000. If producers would only send paper and advertising that is attractive it would surely aid the exhibitor. The trash they send is certainly terrible at present.”

CALIFORNIA.—San Francisco: Myron Blum, manager of publicity for the Rialto theatre here, left last week for Los Angeles. A week or so was getting away with questionable stuff under the guise that they are an educational influence. The motion picture impresses people and they remember it better and longer than they do a newspaper article.

The newspapers have done nothing as compared with the motion picture in impressing on the people of today the worldwide education even the most prominent stay-at-home may have. The motion picture impresses people, and they remember ten to one out of what they read by reading a newspaper. The motion picture is a news agency, bringing big stories home with more emphasis than a newspaper.

"The picture men, if they emphasized the educational feature of their profession, would do away with a lot of adverse legislation and criticism and win more concessions and appreciation."

Franklin: L. E. Baker has leased the Opera House for a number of years and will devote same to the silent drama.

La Crosse: P. A. Johnson of the Cort Theatre here, has been engaged by the Palace for a few days to act as a pewter in the US.

Philadelphia Work That of Outsider

A slip of the typewriter keys in last week's Motion Picture News credited Mrs. Irene Page Solomon with being an exhibitor in the story regarding her successful efforts with children's performances in Philadelphia. That is true, but she is the News correspondent for Philadelphia, interested herself in the subject as an outsider, and managed the performances for Mr. Stamper of the Frankford.
Bombs Bring the Business

Taking advantage of the announcement of a newspaper in Seattle which stated that fifteen aerial bombs would be exploded from the top of his publishing building in case war was declared, Manager James Clemmer, of the Clemmer Theater of Seattle, caused every one to wonder a few days after the bombs were exploded by having a repetition of the same. The newspaper conducted an information department to which any one can phone at any time and get the desired information.

Clemmer had the bombs exploded, and the girls at the information desk were advised of it, so that when friends of the paper phoned in to hear the cause of the unusual phenomena they could say, "It's the opening of 'Womanhood,' the big motion picture feature at the Clemmer theater."

Figures compiled by the information bureau of the Seattle Times, show that more than eleven hundred people called to see the cause of the bombs within eight minutes after they had exploded.

In connection with the same patriotic subject, Manager Clemmer induced the management of the navy yards at Bremerton, a short distance from Seattle, to send the U. S. Marine Band to his theatre, and the navy boys gave a noon and evening concert.

Passes the Hat

Something brand new in open air community moving picture shows is being worked out successfully by Manager A. L. Rousseau of the East Weymouth theatre of that town. Manager Rousseau is giving the public a moving picture show and band concert in the municipal squares, two evenings a week, and making money by simply passing the hat.

Proving O. Henry's Vouge

For the purpose of testing the interest in O. Henry, the Review of Reviews chose five playhouses in as many different communities and through General Film, distributors of the O. Henry's pictures, offered each of these theatres a supply of souvenirs equal to the seating capacity, the souvenirs being in the form of O. Henry calendars, each page lithographed in colors with some character of the short story artist's creation, and excerpts from his books.

The five houses booked—and which rendered proof of the popularity of O. Henry—were: Strand theatre, Syracuse, N. Y.; Royal theatre, Lowell, Mass.; Majestic theatre, Hartford, Conn.; Montclair theatre, Montclair, N. J.; Picturaland, Reading, Pa.

Be Nice—and Wax Wealthy!

Mrs. T. H. Svenson, Grand theatre, Hastings, Minn., has written an article in the current issue of "Paramount Progress," in which she sets forth the indisputable fact that being polite is not its only reward in managing a picture theatre.

Says Mrs. Svenson:

"Statistics show that people trade at certain stores more because of a general impression than because of any special merit of goods, and this trade or patronage should go even further in a theatre because the impression makes the sale—there is nothing to draw business with except impressions—sometimes a smile or a look that may be interpreted as 'Isn't life just great? This theatre sure does make you feel happy' will bring in crowds of people who are wondering what theatre to go to."

"It is up to an exhibitor to maintain his theatre in such a fashion as to make people want to come."

"My idea of courtesy consists of being sincerely considerate of the rights and feelings of others and the success of any business depends largely on that. Define and practice this to the smallest detail and your reward in dimes which will immediately follow will astonish you."

Greater Vitagraph Grows

The press sheet for Greater Vitagraph exhibitors has doubled in size, and it has quadrupled as far as handsomeness is concerned. It is printed on a heavy grade of coated paper, contains numerous attractive cuts, and it continues to provide real service to any exhibitor who cares to examine its columns. We are taking the liberty of reprinting one of the short articles, many of which appear in the new Vitagraph service book, intended to give helpful pointers to exhibitors.

"After nine o'clock your to-day's announcements have served their purpose," said an exhibitor in Ohio. "Why waste the advertising value of your display frames by showing the same paper to the people when they come out. I believe in changing my paper between nine and ten o'clock every evening, thereby getting double advertising value from the same space."

"'Coming' announcements should not be seen from the front."

"Where posters of coming plays are to be announced, it is always preferable to have these in a position where they will be seen only by those passing out of the theatre. Make it easy for the passer-by to see what you have to-day—he is not looking for, nor caring about to-morrow's show. The secret to selling your coming attractions is after you have sold them and received their money for to-day's."

The next time you have a happy thought and put it into practice to draw patrons—let us know about it for the other fellow.

Street Car Advertising as an Aid to the Exhibitor

Statistics Indicate Car Cards Stimulate Attendance at Picture Houses and Reach People Theatre Manager Wants—Cost Is Comparatively Reasonable

WHAT opportunities offer themselves in street car advertising for up-and-coming motion picture exhibitors? That in substance is a question almost every exhibitor has pondered over. A great many theatre owners have found the answer and are now running car cards that stimulate the flow of cash into the box-office.

Although some of these exhibitors only change their car advertisements once a month, the majority obviously favor the system of installing new cards every week. This latter privilege is obtained by the payment of an additional sum over the regular monthly rate—an amount not significant enough to be a deterrent.

The average exhibitor who leaves his cards stay in the cars for a month at a time merely strives to drive home the dominant features of his theatre and to make it stand out prominently with the very thought of moving pictures.

Frequent changes are necessary, of course, when the advertiser wants his car cards to tell about present specific productions. Strong layouts can be worked up in simple attractive ways, and the program printed in big eye-pleasing type. Every card should be similar in design and general appearance, so that the public will instantly recognize it as being the ad of this or that theatre.

The Adelphi theatre in New York has been running a series of excellent program cards. The house name and address appear at the top of each card in bold graceful hand-lettering. Underneath are three panels divided by light lines. Each panel announces the pictures scheduled for a couple of days, the three together giving the entire program for a week. At the very bottom is another display line carrying the Adelphi slogan—"The Best and Most Exclusive Picture-Play House on Upper Broadway.

Everybody knows the keen rivalry between New York theatres and photoplays houses. The Adelphi, however, figuratively laughs at competition. It doesn't worry at all. It points you to its street car advertising and tells you frankly that it gets the business.

Big circulation is, perhaps, the most outstanding advantage of the street car medium. Statistics show that the number of daily passengers in the average community just about equals, and in some instances exceeds, the population. The compilers of these statistics have also figured that the average car carries daily about 300 people, and that the average time a person spends on a street car at one time is between fifteen and twenty minutes.

In the face of things one would think that street car advertising was expensive. The fact is, however, that it is surprisingly economical. Before an advertiser can lose a dollar in this medium, 33,000 people must fail to see his ad. In other words, the exhibitors using street car advertising are putting their messages before 33,000 possible steady patrons for the insignificant cost of $1.00.

With but few exceptions, the people that ride in the street cars are the very people every exhibitor is trying to get to come to his theatre. Most people use the street cars to get to their favorite photoplay house. Thus it will be seen that the street car card reaches the people at the psychological moment.

The reiterative value is another feature which has attracted many exhibitors to the street car medium. An advertisement in the street cars keeps repeating its message from morning until night every day—Sundays and holidays included. So long as the people are awake and moving about the city, the card card stays on the job and persists in telling its story.

The fact that every street car card is of standard size—11x21 inches—and the fact that one advertiser cannot buy up enough space to overwhelm those about him with less money to spend, give added advantages to the street car advertiser. The average number of cards in a car is 30 as against hundreds with which the advertiser in other mediums has to compete.

An interesting thing to know is that the street car people maintain elaborate service bureaus and get up the best kind of car card illustrations and copy. They sell finished cards in several colors at prices just about equal to those an advertiser would have to pay for having the plainest kind of cards made up by his local printer. This is possible for the simple reason that the street car people sell so many of these cards. They make it a rule not to allow the use of these card series by more than one advertiser in any one town.

Therefore, it is easy to deduce that street car advertising should be as productive of results to the theatre manager as to any of other constant advertisers.

"Stock" cards which can be secured by street car advertisers. They are supplied in various colors, with attractive blue-gray and white spaces on which the theatre's ad can be printed.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

his latest picture Mr. Russell has the part of Philip Greycoor, a wealthy young clamoan who has grown tired of his easy conquests among women. It is characteristic of Mr. Russell to find the clue to a character who measures up to his standard as applied to women. Mr. Russell enacts the part of Philip Frederick who meets one but she refuses to unmask and leaves him, taking her identity. He is invited to the country to the home of the Villiers and finds that one of his hosts is the girl of the masked ball. The events which follow lead to a surprising climax and a strong interest is maintained throughout. It is one of the best pictures in which William Russell has ever appeared. Francesca Billington plays the leading feminine role opposite Mr. Russell and with him forms a charming couple. The story of Mr. Russell’s latest picture is “The Masked Heart.” In the supporting cast are: Arthur Court, Kathleen Kirkham, and many of the studio’s best known and best loved artists, who have added to the interest of the story. The interest which only a Collins could inject into the story is shown in the way Mr. Russell has accomplished stars has the featured dual role of Laura Graham and her daughter, the latter being played by the “woman in white.” In the supporting cast are seen Richard R. Noll, Gertrude Dallas, Arthur Bowerman, and several of the studio’s best known artists. Laura’s father had requested that she should marry if she would make him happy. He loved her but respecting her father’s wishes, she married him only to live a life of unhappiness. The complications which arise as the result of her husband’s attempt to obtain her money and the situation which he creates. In which he is accused of momentary and tense situations. The picture is a study of human life and of the interest which it is one of the few that combines intense human interest with a story which is in league with episodic portrayals of the characters, as they were meant to be and as the lives of the characters who are depicted in this story are shown. Florence La Badie, in an adaptation from Willie Collins’ novel, “The Woman in White,” will be seen in her last of week theatre on week of.

Valesa Suratt in Typical “Suratt” Picture, “The Siren”-Story of the Transcotor (Fox Five Reel Production)

“The way of the transctor is hard” — a biblical character which is applicable to many phases of life but especially applicable to a young girl or woman who allows her baser instincts to predominate her noble ones. The picture starring Valesa Suratt, this lesson is brought to us in a manner which is not alone interesting, but a screen lesson in the convincing and one that is enacted in the lives of many young women whose transctor, especially terminated in a condition which is not only undesirable but is a disgrace to the picture in which Miss Suratt will be seen at the theatre on week of week. The week is one that should be seen by all, both young and old. It has none of the suggestion it has in the lesson contained which may be the means of preventing an existence such as the one Miss Suratt portrays in this picture. She has the part of Vivian Courtney, a woman who becomes very less than an animal when an unexpected end through her own indiscretion. In support of Miss Suratt in “The Siren” is the star of New York city, Mr. Suratt who is a consummate actor. His excellent work in “A Fool There Was,” in which he played the part of a character of the picture in which Miss Suratt will be seen, has made him the favourite of the critics and audiences.

Others in the supporting cast are Robert Craft, Margaret Powell, Armand Kailas, Celeste Gravina and Rica Scott.

The Siren with Valesa Suratt in the featured role will be seen at the theatre on week of week.

Identity of the “Other Woman” Revealed to Wife in Late Chapter of “Neglected Wife”

The silent drama is a convincing medium through which both the good and bad points in our lives can be spotlighted. Invariably a screen showing teaches a lesson—somehow it is more convincing. Miss Russell has selected a lesson which is taken from the “Neglected Wife” series and this is the last chapter of that series. The series deals with the problem of the neglected wife and how she can make her husband appreciate her. The story begins in the home of a fired man who returns to try and win his wife back because of his infatuation with another woman. She is engrossed in the little home which she has established. The woman who she is infatuated with is the target of a plot which she is caught in and through this the husband comes to her rescue. The story is continued in the last chapter, which is the penultimate chapter of the series. The series has been a great success and this chapter shows why. There is a lot of interest and suspense in this chapter and it will be seen at the theatre on week of week.

“Power of Pride,” a Mabel Trunnell production

The series of pictures of which “Power of Pride” is the latest, is a story of a woman who is forced to live a life of dishonor because of her father’s actions. She starts for the West and while en route the train in which she is riding is held up by the half brother of the man whom she loves. The hero, who is a-convincing character, who manages a gambling house in the West, is after the train robbery and the judge before whom he is to stand has been hoodwinked. He has left his wife and child because of his infatuation with the women who are in the West. The story is an interesting one and has a great deal of interest. Miss Trunnell is the leading role and she is at her best, as she usually is. Russell is in the supporting cast and he is as good as usual. It is a story of romance and adventure and will be seen at the theatre on week of week.

Spain is the seat of romance and adventure. Its sunny lands have formed the settings for innumerable tales of fiction and adventure—adventures which have been related either between the covers of a novel or especially in the pages of the theatre. Classic tales of fiction on the screen in such a novel manner as to catch the imagination and make you live the picture. The “Ghost of Old Morro” is given a plot which is a fine one in that it interprets faithfully and with a thought always for realism. Not Better Than Preceding Chapters, but Just as Good—A Compliment to Helen Holmes

“Debacle of Pride, The”-Universal Serial, Two Reels

“Debacle of Pride, The” is the twenty-first chapter of the “Railroad Raiders” series. From the opening of the series until now it has been a story of death by drowning, imprisoned in a car which careens over a bridge, and the like. In the plot of the new chapter of the series, there is no mention of the most familiar and thrilling adventures. Helen Holmes is in no danger of being left behind in the story, as she is the only one of the characters who have not been overused. Holmes is one of the few actresses who can portray a character with such a fine air of better than the one that has gone before, but no character which you have seen is better.

First Installment of “The Gray Ghost” Serial Marks New Epoch for Serials (Universal Serial, Two Reels)

The Saturday Evening Post thought so well of the first part of “The Ghost,” by Arthur A. Rock, that it was run in installments in the columns of that well-known paper. It seems that the company thought so much of this sparkling and thrilling serial that it has decided to expand its plot and chief character transferred to the screen. The short story which has been running for four weeks, has been such a success that the company has decided to make it a complete series. “The Grey Ghost” is a story of terror and mystery, and from the structural iron work boards the freight cars in the series is to be seen at the theatre on week of week. It is better than any of the others that have gone before, but no chapter which you have seen is better.

MARY MACLAREN is the star in the Butterfly Picture, "The Plow Woman," which heads the Universal program for the week of July 2. Two July Bluebirds Change Places on Schedule

Because of factory delays the Violet Mersereau Bluebird, set for July 23 has been switched with the Dorothy Phillips release, originally scheduled for circulation July 30. This change brings Miss Phillips, in "The Rescue," to exhibitors throughout the country three weeks after she has appeared, on July 2, in "Fires of Rebellion." "The Little Terror" is the Violet Mersereau feature now set for July 30. It is a Rex Ingram feature.

Otherwise the previous announcements of Bluebirds, until August 15, remain the same. Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon will present "The Clean-Up," a comedy-drama, August 6, and Lynn F. Reynolds' "nature study" entitled "The Show Down," will be distributed August 13. Five features completed and ready for circulation, remain unscheduled.

They are: "The Fourth Glove," produced by Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon's new director, Elmer Clifton; "The Triumph," a Joseph De Grasse production, starring Dorothy Phillips; "Mr. Opp," made by Lynn F. Reynolds from Alice Hegan Rice's story, and starring Neva Gerber and George Hernandez; "Little Miss Fix-It," directed by Jack Conway, with Ella Hall, the star, and "My Mother," a Rupert Julian structure, in which Mr. Julian will jointly star with Ruth Clifford.
Magazine Story by Terhune to Be Filmed by Art Dramas

Ludwig G. Erb, president of the Erbograph Company, has purchased the motion picture rights to Albert Payson Terhune's story, "The Millstone," which appears in the June number of the Red Book, and will shortly start producing it as a five-reel feature for Art Dramas.

It is said a star of wide reputation will be signed to handle the leading feminine part, the role of which requires much emotional ability.

"The Millstone" in the story is the wife, who has helped her husband to struggle to success and wealth, and then has allowed herself to become lazy and contented, so that she is a social drawback for him. He has, through struggle and hard work, become a man of culture and refinement, as well as of wealth, and he begins to see the ignorance and vulgarity of his wife.

To divorce her and go his own way, marrying some woman of the class to which he aspires, seems to him the only solution. He puts it up to her one evening, and nearly breaks her heart.

She asks another chance, solves the problem, and wins anew her husband's respect and love.

Exciting Prologue to Triangle's "Paws of the Bear"

In what might be called the prologue to the latest Triangle drama, "Paws of the Bear," by J. G. Hawks, in which William Desmond is starred, a glimpse of the Belgian frontier is given, where the Uhlan are brought sharply into conflict with the Allies. There are scenes of actuality, with the explosion of big guns and the circling of aeroplanes. And yet this is not a war story.

The opening scene, or prologue, is pure episodic, and in a flash the audience is started on a detective story of the Sherlock Holmes type, a story that picks up stray clues in Belgium, Russia, France and on the ocean. It is finally unraveled in the peaceful surroundings of an American country house.

Selznick Offers Three Dramas and One Comedy Picture

Herbert Brenon created "The Lone Wolf" from a novel by Louis Joseph Vance. It is described as very much a melodrama, with enough "big punch" to supply several modern serials. Its premiere is set for Sunday evening, July 1, at the Broadway.

Harry Rapf, president of the Warwick Corporation, considers "The Lash of Jealousy" the "best production Robert Warwick has yet given the public." Leonce Perret, the author, also directed. "The Moth," as the title might suggest, is high society drama predicting the perils of the young wife. Edward Jose directed the production. It was completed even before "Poppy." Norma Talmadge is the star.

"The Lesson" is the first of the Constance Talmadge pictures. The story is by Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

This will be a prolific season for Selznick pictures, and other releases will follow rapidly. However, the "Lone Wolf" will be the only Brenon offering until fall as Brenon will be busy on an epic with Lewis J. Selznick—"The Fall of the Romanoffs."
Westerns and Comedy on Essanay Summer Program

"Man Who Was Afraid" and "Golden Idiot," for Bryant Washburn, Jack Gardner and Taylor Holmes, to Be Starred in Releases

BRYANT WASHBURN and Jack Gardner are scheduled to average a feature a month, and sometimes two, for Essanay during the summer and fall. In addition, Taylor Holmes is to be filmed in the initial picture of a series.

"The Man Who Was Afraid," a Washburn picture, was released July 2. It is from the story of Mary Brecht Pulver and based on the timely theme of the President's call to arms. In the opinion of the Kleine - Edison - Selig - Essanay staff, booking all Essanay features, this assures its success.

Mr. Washburn's second July release, "The Golden Idiot," has been through the filming process. Trade showings are promised shortly. As a courtly "knight of the road," accompanied by a three-legged dog, Washburn has adventures in high society. It is adapted from H. Tipton Steck's magazine story. Arthur Berthelet is director.

It is stated that Mr. Washburn is to appear also in "Skinner's Babies," third of the Skinner pictures, his support being Hazel Daly, originator of "Honey." In "The Range Boss," Mr. Gardner as hero will frustrate a conspiracy to accomplish his own death and to wrest a ranch from the rightful heiress, a young Eastern girl. This is the second of a series of Westerns, the first being "Land of the Long Shadow," released June 18. Trade showings on this second one begin July 10 and release is July 16. The third will be "Open Places."

"Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" is the Taylor Holmes picture. It ran as a story by Clarence Buddington Chelland in Saturday Evening Post. On the speaking stage Holmes has been seen in "His Majesty, Bunker Beans," "The Third Party," and "The Million." Essanay fall and winter releases will be announced shortly to give exhibitors ample opportunity to pick their subjects.

Mutual's "Grey Seal" Serial Ends Week of July 2

"The Masked Heart," with William Russell, Heads Program—Okey in New Comedy—Usual Varied Assortment of Features Also WILLIAM RUSSELL is the featured star on the Mutual schedule for July 2. Mr. Russell will appear in "The Masked Heart," renamed from "The Weakness of the Strong," a story of love and intrigue in which he is a blase society man who is bored by his easy victories over women and goes in quest of an elusive woman. The other principals in the cast are Frances Billington, Kathleen Kirkham, William Conklin and Ashton Deartholt.

"The Road Wreckers" is the title of the thirteenth chapter of "The Railroad Raiders," featuring Helen Holmes, which is also scheduled for July 2. A smashup between a passenger train and a freight makes the big thrill of the chapter.

"Mutual Tours Around the World," ready July 3, show Bizerta, Tunis; a French naval port; and Sydney, the capital of New South Wales, Australia. On this date also comes the La Salle comedy, "The Girl in the Frame," in which Jean Otto is the principal funmaker.

Mutual Weekly with its many news topics and patriotic features will go to the public on July 4.

The Cub Comedy of the week, with George Ovey in the lead, is "Jerry's Gentle Nursing," released July 5, in which Jerry takes care of a gouty invalid and what he does not do to the invalid and his wheeled chair is not worth reporting.

The sixteenth and last chapter of the "Jimmie Dale Alias the Grey Seal" series comes to the screen on July 6. This is entitled "Victory," and E. K. Lincoln is the lead.

Newest Mutual, with Mary Miles Minter, Nearly Ready

Mary Miles Minter, under the direction of James Kirkwood, is finishing her next Mutual-American production, "Melissa of the Hills," an adaptation of Maibelle Heike's Justice's story. The story is laid in the hills of Tennessee and deals with mountaineer feuds. Mary Miles Minter, as Melissa, is the daughter of the circuit rider, and there are few of the comforts of life for Melissa whose one ambition is to have a new calico dress each year for the revival.

Spottiswood Aiken plays the lead opposite Miss Minter in this production. He is Melissa's father, the circuit rider of the country around, whose business is that of healing sick souls, comforting the dying and instilling the fear of God into the hearts of the feudists. But he is sadly unappreciated by the community, which accepts his services with no thought of renumeration.

Others in the cast are Alan Forrest, George Periolat, Perry Banks, Harvey Clark, Frank Thompson, George Ahearn, C. E. Rogers, John Gough, Gertrude Lebrant, Emma Kluge and Ann Schaefer.

Most Human of Beasts This Week's Ditmars Offering

"The Orang Apprentice" is this week's Ditmars release from Educational. The orang-outang, most human of beasts, in this picture does everything but talk. You will surely conclude he has reasoning powers in one or two incidents of his serio-comic attempts to imitate the plumber, whose tools he has discovered unguarded.

The climax comes when he tries to smoke the plumber's very savoy old pipe. That he draws on the pipe in real earnest is evidenced by the quick emission of essence of strong nicotine from his pursed lips.

New Comedy Team Finishing Up First Production

The Gertrude Selby-Neal Burns Comedy Company are nearing the completion of their first picture, "An Interrupted Vacation," made at the David Horsley Studios under the new combination between Mr. Horsley and W. A. S. Douglas. The picture deals with the new military situation.
World-Brady Release Schedule Is Changed

A rearrangement has been made in the release sheet of World-Pictures Brady-Made.

The new photo play, "Jerry-for-Short," in which little Madge Evans makes her first appearance as a star has been moved up from its position at the far end of the line and will be published August 13.

This keeps the schedule of practically ready plays up to the minimum of three months ahead in an increasing flock of pictures in the immediate offering. Six directors are always working in the World's studio, and it is a fixed rule of the Brady direction that the actual making of any World play shall not take up more than three weeks' time.

Beban Flips Flapjacks in Latest Role

Those who are accustomed to think of George Beban in terms of spaghetti will have the pleasure of seeing the celebrated Morisco-Paramount character actor in a new role in his next picture, "The Cook of Canyon Camp." He is of course the cook who gives the picture its title and it is said that no white-gloved luminary of the Café des Enfants ever flipped a flapjack with more dexterous cunning than that which Mr. Beban displays in this picture.

The story was written by Mr. Beban, Julia Crawford Ivers and Donald Crisp in collaboration, and was directed by Mr. Crisp, who has produced all of Mr. Beban's most recent pictures. Helen Jerome Eddy, who has been identified with Mr. Beban in some of his previous pictures, plays opposite the star. Monroe Salbsury makes his return to Paramount Pictures after a long absence, having been a member of the cast of Lasky's "The Rose of the Rancho," and having appeared as leading man for Margaret Clark in "The Goose Girl." John Burton and Florence Vidor are others of note in the supporting cast.

Fleming with Feature Film Co.

Carroll Fleming, general stage director of the Hippodrome, New York, has resigned as director-general of the Feature Film Company, to devote his time to the direction of a serial. Four stars have been selected for the leading roles, and work is already begun on the serial. It will be released through one of the prominent companies this fall.

Mr. Fleming directed "The Iron Claw," the Pathe serial, starring Pearl White, which was released last summer.

Two Triangle Stars in Strong Releases July 1

DOROTHY DALTON and Bessie Barriscale are the stars of the Triangle plays to be released July 1.

"The Flame of the Yukon" is the title of the drama in which Dorothy Dalton will make her ninth stellar appearance. It was written by Monte M. Katterjohn, directed by Charles Miller and photographed by Clyde De Vinna.

Bessie Barriscale will be seen in a comedy of the eternal feminine from the pen of Claude Sullivan, known as "Hater of Men." Charles Miller also directed this production.

The scene of Dorothy Dalton's vehicle is Alaska during the early days of the gold rush. "The Flame" was a well-known character in the country between Nome and Dawson. She was the ruling spirit of "The Midas Cafe," where she lured the nuggets from her victims one day only to stake the unlucky to a new start when her merceriual sympathies were touched. Melbourne MacDowell takes the part of the proprietor of the cafe in which "The Flame" dances, while Kenneth Harlan has the strongest role of his career as the hero opposite Miss Dalton.

A tribe of twenty Equimaux were brought from Alaska to lend realism to the production, together with several malamute dog-teams and other equipment.

As the leading figure of "Hater of Men," Bessie Barriscale takes the part of Janice Salsbury, a special writer on one of the big city newspapers. She is engaged to a reporter, Billy Williams, but becomes convinced that marriage is only another name for slavery. She breaks off relations with Williams forthwith. Philip Hartley, known as the drawing-room philosopher, is also a member of the group in which Janice moves. He loves Janice, but silently waits for the time when she will forget her rebellious instincts and turn to him for comfort. Miss Barriscale is said to make the most of the role that Sullivan has provided her with. She is supported by Charles K. French and Jack Gilbert.

Release of New Pearl White Serial is Advanced to July 8

The demand of exhibitors throughout the country for a Pearl White serial this summer, has caused J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., to change his plans and instead of releasing "The Fatal Ring" the serial in which Pearl White is starred, some time in September as originally planned, the release date will be July 8.

"The Fatal Ring," says Pathé, will be a money maker for the exhibitors in the months that they are glad to break even when they have the greatest stars and the greatest features on their programs.

In "The Fatal Ring," Pearl White, who plays the lead part of Pearl Standish, is supported by a strong cast. Warner Oland, who played the part of Baron Huroki in "Patria," is the villain of this serial. Ruby Hoffman is a woman of mystery, a priestess whose followers do her bidding. Ton 'O'Selle and Earl Fox are supporting members of the cast.

The serial is directed by George B. Seitz, author of the "Exploits of Elaine," "Perils of Pauline," "The Iron Claw," and the "Shrinking Shadow." In "The Fatal Ring" Mr. Seitz has had the cooperation of Fred Jackson, popular magazine writer. The serial is based on a series of stories which appeared under the title of "Nocturnal Adventures of Nicholas Knox," in the Popular Magazine.

Pearl White, the heroine of "The Fatal Ring" is a blase society girl, who has so much money and so many things at her disposal that she finds life a bore. When she is involved in the recovery of a certain violet diamond sought by a strange religious sect, who have no compunction in killing those who oppose their efforts to recover the diamond, she finds life so thrilling and of so much interest, that she is kept busy night and day avoiding the perils and pitfalls prepared for her.

Randolph Lewis Story for George Walsh

"The Kid Is Clever" is the title just chosen for George Walsh's new subject written for him by Randolph Lewis. Lewis has had long experience in the newspaper and magazine game in New York. He recently was in charge of publicity work for the Fox-Kellermann spectacle, "A Daughter of the Gods."

Paul Powell is directing the play, the first he has had in the William Fox studios. Doris Pawn plays opposite. The work is well under way.
Fox Films Make Extensive Program Changes

"Two Little Imps" and "To Honor and Obey," a Brockwell Feature, Moved Up a Week from Original Schedule—One Walsh Subject Added to List

T o balance the program and to meet the demand from exhibitors for the quick release of "Smiling George" Walsh's popular subjects, William Fox has made several changes in his schedule of July films as announced last week.

The revised list of photograph plays is: July 1, June Caprice in "Patsy"; July 8, Jane and Katherine Lee in "Two Little Imps"; July 15, Gladys Brockwell in "To Honor and Obey"; July 22, George Walsh in "The Kid Is Clever."

Under the new order, "Two Little Imps" and the Brockwell feature are advanced one week from the positions they held on the original schedule. In their initial starring vehicle the Lee children are described as more attractive than ever.

"To Honor and Obey?" presents Miss Brockwell, the beautiful emotional star, in a dramatic role.

The George Walsh subject which has been added to the program is said to have a clever scenario and a strong supporting cast to interpret it. The chief roles are taken by Mr. Walsh, Doris Pawn, Ralph Lewis, A. Burt Wensner, Clyde Hopkins and Don Likes.

Mr. Walsh has the part of Kirk White, on the trail of adventure. To satisfy his appetite for it his father arranges for him to take a sea trip with a motion picture company which guarantees a thrill a minute to the village.

The film makers miss the steamer, but Kirk doesn't know it. He thinks a band of South American revolutionists are the players, and considers all their doings on shipboard as mere fun. When attempts are made on his life and that of Jane Ogden, a fellow passenger with whom he is in love, he still thinks the whole affair a huge joke.

Kirk finally realizes the truth when he is knocked unconscious by Ramon Cortez, leader of the band. He regains consciousness in a dungeon in Mexico. Finally Kirk and Jane are rescued by a troop of United States cavalry and restored to their anxious friends.

General Film Promotes 'Variety Day' for Short Subjects

W arm response has been made to the suggestion by General Film Company in a circular to exhibitors, urging them to devote one or two days a week to what is termed a Variety Day.

In its circular letter General Film urges the variety day, which in other words is a day given to a complete program of good, snappy one-reel, two-reel and three-reel pictures. This leaves out entirely the traditional five-reel feature.

Says General Film in its communication: "Exhibitors all over the country, men who have made a success of the show business and who are continually and watchfully keeping their fingers upon the public pulse, are beginning to vary their plan of showing five-reel and six-reel pictures throughout the week. They replace one or two such programs with something different, a day of short length pictures all selected for their special work. And the public likes the change. It is high time that you become aware of the popularity of such a program and give it a good trial."

The exhibitors, judging from the replies received, are in favor of this proposition.

General Film has consistently held that length is not the thing that makes a "feature" nowadays. It contends that the acclaim given such two-reel subjects as the O. Henry stories and the Black Cat films goes far toward bearing out the point made in the circular.

Child Player to Appear in Series of Comedies

Baby Blanche Schetz of "The Alien" fame, who supported George Beban, under the direction of Thomas Ince, will shortly be featured under the Junior Players' banner in a one act comedy drama, "A Bit of Life." This is to be followed with two one-reel subjects every month.

New Pathé Serial Begins the Week of July 8

Astra produced "The Cigarette Girl" under direction of William Parke. Philip Bartholomae wrote the story. "The Violet Diamond" is the title of the first episode of "The Fatal Ring," in which Pearl White is seen in a serial which is expected by Pathé to break records. "The Fatal Ring" is described as a serial of love, mystery, suspense, trials and perils, written by Fred Jackson and George B. Seitz, and produced by the Astra Film Corporation under the direction of Mr. Seitz.

The ninth chapter of "The Neglected Wife," in which Ruth Roland stars, is entitled "Deepening Degradation." In this episode fate brings the drama of two women and a man to still another climax.

The twelfth release of the "Know America," Combitone scenes is entitled "Through Central Texas," and it shows scenes taken in the largest State in the Union. A comedy, an International cartoon and scenic split-reel, and Hearst-Pathé News, Nos. 50 and 57, complete the program.

Anti-Capital Punishment Society Sees Propaganda Picture

The Selig Company on Friday evening, June 15, gave a private presentation of their feature, "Who Shall Take My Life?" to the members of the Chicago branch of the Anti-Capital Punishment Society of America. Maurice Bennett Kovnat, the national secretary of the Society, was in charge. Mabel Hikes Justice, the author of the drama, was also present at the showing.

Before it was screened Mr. Kovnat delivered a short address to the assemblage in which he thanked Mr. Selig for the courtesy of being allowed to see a pre- showing of the film. The picture is said to present a strong argument against capital punishment and is shortly to be released. Thomas Santschi and others are featured in it.

Bray-Picto Number 74, "Wild West Show," Supreme

When a cowboy is at play the things he does ordinarily are not to be classed with the stunts he pulls in his leisure hours. The picture secured for the Bray Studios, Inc., this week (Pictograph No. 74) shows some of the most daring horsemanship that cowboys ever attempt and few, if any, of the things they do in this picture have ever been done before the camera before. One hair-raising stunt is the roping of four steers with one lasso, performed while the cowboy is going at breakneck speed. Another is an exhibition of accurate roping by a number of contestants, and the skill with which they encircle an objective point is almost beyond belief. A number of unspoken broncheros were reserved to be ridden for this picture and the marvel of it is that they ever were broken, for they succeed in performing antics that would no doubt horrify the sedate horses seen in our metropolis.

As a record of the fast disappearing cowboy and his profession this picture must appeal to everyone who enjoys seeing the wild West as all of us have always considered it to be.

The meek operation of the British tanks (drawn by J. F. Leventhal) is another feature worth a whole reel in itself, but here a part of this issue. "Dehydration" is a process of food economy which everyone has been asking about—the papers have been full of this subject. These subjects, with a Lloyd "Picture Puzzle," make the biggest single number yet of the popular Paramount "Magazine on the Screen," which shows that the pioneer of the screen magazines is out to hold its own with all comers.

Cocchi's Shop and Mrs. Humiston Feature of U Weekly

The current Universal Animated Weekly claims a "scoop" in securing a picture of Mrs. Grace Humiston, the indefatigable woman lawyer, who untraveled the mystery surrounding the disappearance of Ruth Cruger, in New York, since last February. Cameramen had made any number of futile attempts to picture her without success, and finally Jack Cohn, the editor, went out himself and after half-an-hour of persuasive talk succeeded in inducing Mrs. Humiston to pose for him.

In the same number are scenes showing the graduating ceremonies at Princeton and the conferring of diplomas upon the English, French, Japanese, Italian and Belgian Ambassadors. Highlights of the annual regatta of the South End Rowing Club, San Francisco, California; scenes of the Yankees and St. Louis Browns playing the first big league Sunday game ever played on the Island of Manhattan, the welcome of the Belgian Commission, the Marine Drive for recruits and a dozen other intensely interesting and timely topics.

Harry Palmer's Cartoons to Supplement Ditmar's

Combination of Animal Pictures with Timely Subjects from Famous Cartoonist Big Announcement from Educational Films Corporation

Starting with the week of June 25, Educational Films Corporation will release a "double header" attraction composed of the exclusive feature, Harry Palmer's well-known cartoons, combined with the already very popular Ditmar's "Book of Nature" animal pictures.

Harry Palmer has started the production of cartoons under his own name, Harry Palmer, Inc. He will release his cartoons every week through the Educational Film Corporation of America. Mr. Palmer was the creator of such well-known comic cartoons as "Babbling Bess," "Twas Ever Thus," and "That Elusive Next Egg." His own cartoons grace the pages of the largest daily and Sunday papers in the country for many years. As a pioneer of animated cartoons his slogan is draw pictures that move—not jump.

America's First Submarine Is Shown by Gaumont This Week

SO much appears in newspapers and magazines from time to time about Havana, Cuba, that patrons of motion pictures will welcome the views of that city which Gaumont will present through Mutual in "Tours Around the World" No. 36, released July 10. It will visualize for them this lovely city of the tropics, the metropolis of the West Indies. Harry Palmer, Inc. has been thoroughly in photographing the beautiful and historic places, and Havana is rich in both. On the same reel are pictures of a number of cities along the Nile. These give an excellent idea of life in Egypt as it has been for several thousand years.

The second Gaumont release of the week in The Mutual Weekly, which appears July 11. This is No. 132. It will contain latest news caught by the motion picture camera all over the world. Gaumont's "Reel Life" reaches the

Pathé "Specialties" This Week

From Pathé this week come the usual News issues, in which the latest activities on the war front and world news are pictured up-to-the-minute, including the visit of the Belgian War Commission, together with other important short subjects.

"Through Central Texas" is a "Combitone" that shows a most vital industry just now, the onion-fields of this important part of the country, and views of several of the important cities of Texas, including Waco and Austin.

The International split-reel, on the same reel with an unusually funny "Krazy Kat Cartoon," has the most timely subject of the month. It shows the beginning of our new wooden merchant marine—building wooden ships at Puget Sound, where the big redwood timber forests are being felled to give us an adequate showing on the seas.

Motoy Woods Tale Surprises

The current Motoy release from the Peter Pan Film Company is entitled "Mary and Gretel." It shows the Motoy doll characters meeting Rip Van Winkle, some funny dwarfs and a still funnier "bunny" in a trip through the woods. The clever manipulation of the toy figures and animals will keep the audience in continual wonderment and entertainment. Buntý's ears have a comical way of expressing all kinds of emotion.

U Magazine Covers All Ground

Duck-shooting with decoys, a substantial engineering structure—Hell Gate Bridge; a new mechanical prodigy, the "payroll machine"; a little insight into candy-making on a wholesale scale (the manufacture of macaroons), and another Will Hopkins "study in clay" are the subjects covered in Universal Magazine No. 28.
IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

“News” Plans Aid for State Rights Men

Correct Data Is Necessary from Independent Exchanges for Proposed Realignment of Territories—Call Is Made to Experts for Opinions

In this issue of Motion Picture News is published a map of the United States marked off according to certain state rights divisions. The territories, in black lines, have been indicated only tentatively. They are meant to serve merely as a starting point for a close study of the independent field. Each territorial section is numbered and on this page is a list of states constituting the various districts.

The News, in order to obtain data for a proper realignment of the state rights field, for the benefit of state rights operators and exhibitors booking pictures marketed on this plan, seeks the aid of all engaged in this branch of the industry.

They urge, Mr. Exchangeinan, help by marking new divisions, if necessary in your judgment and expert knowledge of buying and selling conditions, and mail the map to us at once.

The object of this request is, we think you will agree, important. All the maps are to be used for recharting the whole country by the means of a complete map, which will appear in the News, Trade Annual and Convention Number, scheduled for issue on July 21.

A discussion on the segregation of certain states to form certain state rights sections has impelled Motion Picture News to ask the aid of exchange men for a solution of this vital problem.

Today there is considerable disagreement and a feeling of unrest over these unsettled conditions.

In many cases, it is stated on the authority of men who have made a special study of the matter, that certain divisions need an immediate revision. They are fundamentally wrong, and have been from the first, because of handicaps in express charges to distant points, inadequate transportation facilities, population inequalities, or peculiar local conditions.

How these misfit districts became known as state rights divisions, nobody can tell. Like Topsy, “they just grewed.” Often when a man buys a picture for a particular territory he would prefer to have the district include part of a state in another division, but because of these traditional and arbitrary distinctions that have fastened themselves on the business, he is obliged to keep “within his own territory.”

It would have been better all around, and for him, to have had the concession, but precedent said no. Consequently, in calculating his profits, he had to figure on a small amount, and possibly a loss, for a part of the territory in which he operated. And this might be due to the fact that on account of poor transportation he was unable to make prompt deliveries, or because of the immense distances between towns it was impossible, from the expense involved, to canvas the section thoroughly by the kind of roadmen necessary to get the best results.

Whole states now included in a district should, in some instances, be split up, and the subdivisions apportioned to different state rights territories.

Look the map over carefully and see if this incongruity exists in your part of the country. If it does, let us know today. You will enable us to help alleviate conditions affecting you, by the presentation of your expert views. It will help your neighbor, in the more correct realignment of his territory. By this cooperation among every exchange man in the country something definite, concrete and satisfactory will be achieved for the mutual benefit of exhibitors and exchanges.

Don’t put off marking the map, but do it now, and mail at once to Motion Picture News. This will mean a larger, better state rights service for everybody, with the knowledge that you have given aid in fulfilling the ideal of accurate, bedrock business information that will be the means of bringing order out of the chaos that exists in the marketing of state rights pictures today.

* The pioneer work of the News in the state rights field has called forth praise from exchange men and exhibitors alike, but instead of resting on the laurels of the past, it is constantly planning to render additional service.

Selznick Will Father “Parentage” in His Territory

Lewis J. Selznick has secured the rights to “Parentage” for the territory covered by his New York and Chicago exchanges.

“This is the latest evidence that Mr. Selznick meant business when he said, a few weeks ago, that he had decided to establish the open door at both ends of his business—open booking for the exhibitor and open distribution for the producer,” says an officer of the company.

Last week it was ‘On Trial,’ the first of the National Exhibitors’ circuit production, which he took on for his distributing system; this week it is the Hobart Henley ‘Parentage.’

Last week a private showing of this picture was held for the trade and reviewers at the Rialto, S. L. Rothafel, of the Rialto, immediately booked the picture for the first public showing, which will be at the Rialto July 15.

Aaron Jones, of Jones, Link and Schafer, the Chicago associates of Lewis J. Selznick, booked the film for the Colonial, Chicago, for the week of the national convention.

Frank J. Song, who controls the picture, has chosen another offer from state rights buyers. He says no territory will be apportioned until exhibitors have an opportunity to see the subject under normal exhibiting conditions.

Australian Rights to “China” Sold

Brodsky’s “Trip Through China” was sold for Australia, during its recent run at B. F. Keith’s Alhambra theatre, New York. California, Arizona, Oregon, Washington and other territories in this country have been sold by D. S. Markowitz of the Supreme Feature Films, Inc., to people who saw the picture at the Eltinge theatre, New York, where it ran for three successful weeks.

The value of the picture has been greatly increased by the controversy over China in diplomatic circles in this country, Great Britain and Japan.

Super Film Attractions Reports Lively Season

Reports from the newly organized Super Film Attractions Company, of Syracuse, N. Y., are that the market is in a very satisfactory state. This new independent exchange is occupying the offices at 445 South Warren street recently vacated by the General Film Company.

Thomas Dooley, formerly manager of the Greater New York Film Rental Company and of the General, said no. Consequently, in calculating his profits, he had to figure on a small amount, and possibly a loss, for a part of the territory in which he operated. And this might be due to the fact that on account of poor transportation he was unable to make prompt deliveries, or because of the immense distances between towns it was impossible, from the

“Joan” for Crest in South America

The Crest Pictures Corporation has purchased all rights from Carle E. Carlton for “Joan the Woman,” featuring Geraldine Farrar, for the principal countries in South America, and in addition to this production such pictures as Mac Murray in the “Mormon Maid,” Jane Grey in “The Fighting Chance” and the Jackie Saunders features have been secured. Aragon and Company, of Buenos Aires, known to the exhibitors as the “house of big successes,” will represent the Crest Pictures Corporation in Argentina, Uruguay and Paraguay, and branches will be established in Brazil and Chile shortly. Several valuable plays have been secured which will be produced as soon as a suitable star can be obtained.

“Barrier” and “Stingaree” for Orient

Robinson and Walker, Seattle, who have one of the two exclusive agencies granted by Nicholas Power, for the Orient, and in their general export and import business maintain a special department for motion pictures and accessories, will shortly market “The Barrier” and the “Stingaree” series in Asia and other Far East territory.

House Organ from Seng for “Parentage”

In addition to the twenty-page advertising book for the use of exhibitors in their publicity campaigns for “Parentage,” Frank J. Seng has in preparation a house organ, which will be issued every two weeks.

“It will constitute a medium for presenting all the profit-pulling stunts available for the picture,” says Mr. Seng. “The publication should be the means of stimulating interest among exhibitors and state rights buyers.”

“It will be of benefit to the exhibitor in bringing to his attention the ideas of other exhibitors who have found successful means of presenting the picture in the most effective way.”

“Sin Woman” in Illinois and Wisconsin for Owl

The Owl Features Company, through Philip Lewis, of Chicago, has purchased from M. H. Hoffman, Inc., the rights for northern Illinois and southern Wisconsin to “The Sin Woman,” the seven-part feature produced by the George Backer Film Corporation.

The picture, which is said to contain snow scenes of excellent quality, has been the subject of active bidding.

Lesser Organizes State Rights Firms

The recent announcement made from the offices of the All Star Features Distributors, Inc., San Francisco, to the effect that they were organizing the state rights buyers, has now reached a concrete basis. The following buyers have pledged themselves:

- M. Rosenberg of the De Luxe Feature Film Company of Seattle; L. Goldstein of the Supreme Photoplay Corporation of Denver; Harry Rathner of the Supreme Feature Film Company of Minneapolis; L. D. Netter of the Masterpiece Film Attractions of Cleveland; Harry Grele of the Supreme Feature Film Company of Pittsburgh, and a prominent exchange for the control of Canada.

Stahl Ready for Matrimony

Wedding invitations have been sent out during the past week announcing the wedding of Walter R. Stahl, well known director, and Miss Pauline Lorraine, well known concert singer, on Thursday night, June 28, at the home of the bride, 533 West 142nd street, New York. Mr. Stahl is a well known director, and has recently come into considerable prominence through his work in “Hate.”
State Rights Market Reflects Prosperity, Says Hall

THAT the state rights market is reflecting the beginning of a tremendous business boom is the opinion of Frank Hall, who is rapidly closing contracts with buyers of territorial rights for the special Edgar Lewis production "The Bar Sinister" and the A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., Jane Grey feature "Her Fighting Chance."

"When the country decided upon subscription," said Mr. Hall in talking over the conditions of the market, "a sudden check was noticed in the closing of contracts for territory. A spirit of indecision seemed to be prevalent for a few days, but it was really remarkable how quickly business settled back into its usual channels and buyers became even more active than before the slump.

"Judging from the live interest now being shown in the disposition of territory for 'The Bar Sinister' and 'Her Fighting Chance,' the independent exchanges of the country are equipped to take care of a large number of new state right pictures and are preparing for a strenuous midsummer drive for business while pictures with a special advertising angle seem to appeal to buyers most strongly, producers making all high class features should have little trouble selling them at a fair profit.

"This country is entering upon an era of unprecedented prosperity, and since the show business is one of the first to profit by good times it is natural that motion picture men should be preparing for a rich harvest about to be reaped.

"With everybody working and tremendous sums of money in circulation it is a foregone conclusion that the capacity of our theatres will be inadequate to hold the crowds seeking relaxation and amusement. Exchanges will quickly profit by the prosperity of the theatres and the large demand for good pictures will keep the state rights buyers continually on the alert for new ones.

"With this condition in mind many successful exchange men are preparing for a marked increase in business and are therefore showing an interest in state rights offerings, which is exceptional for this season of the year."

Extensive Newspaper Advertising for "Parentage"

IN conjunction with the showing of "Parentage" at the Rialto theatre on July 8, Frank J. Seng will conduct an extensive newspaper campaign, which will work out as part of the advertising plan, which is supplemented by a big New York showing of billboards as its basis.

This campaign will embrace big space in every New York daily, so that the message of the advertisement will reach into every home and be a means of stimulating business not only for the Rialto theatre, but for exhibitors who run after the initial showing.

The campaign will continue for some time after the Rialto showing, and keep the mind of the public concentrated on "Parentage."

This big display of advertising will also be of great benefit to exhibitors and state rights' buyers all over the country, inasmuch as the New York and Chicago showing will create word of mouth publicity that will be a powerful lever for increased patronage to those exhibitors whose patrons are influenced by the big city showings, especially if it is properly exploited and advertised to the fullest.

The value of this campaign is already being felt as evidenced by the number of inquiries which are being received daily not only by state rights' buyers, but by exhibitors who are following the course of the "Parentage" campaign.

Young Ingenue with Lois Meredith's Company

Mildred Bayly, formerly with Metro, with which company she played important parts with Burton L. King, has been engaged by Lois Meredith Pictures, Inc., to play the part of Isabelle in the first production by that company for release through Superlative Pictures Corporation.

 Buyers Show Interest in "Ivan"

State rights buyers are asking the Export and Import Film Company for more information about its production, "Ivan the Terrible," announcement of which was made in our advertising columns by means of pictorial display only. Mr. Blumenthal, head of the company, made it his special object to thus arouse the interest of the market, but did not intend to give the impression that the picture was not ready for inspection.

"Ivan the Terrible" is a survey of the conditions that have contributed to the eventual overthrow of czardom. It is a story of such an event was not dreamed of until it happened, and then hardly believed. The absolutism of autocratic government and its reactionary effect on progress come in for scathing arraignment and the difference between despotism and democracy forms another theme.

"Ivan the Terrible" is offered in six reels, and the Export and Import Film Company has inserted titles and reading matter that make the production timely.

West at Work in Two Films at Once

Billy West King Bee Comedies are in such demand among exhibitors and the public that Louis Burstein, president and general manager of the King Bee Films Corporation, is considering the feasibility of having the young star working in two pictures simultaneously.

Exhibitors who complain of too much footage and enough action in pictures exempt the King Bee comedies, according to Louis Burstein.

"The reason for this is simple," says Mr. Burstein. "Our two reels are cut down from several thousand feet of developed negative. We are not needlessly extravagant; but we don't stint raw stock.

And then you will notice that King Bee Comedies have very few sub-titles, and those that are employed are short and to the point. It is my aim in supervising these pictures to assure that every foot of the action will be understood in every part of the world, no matter where the pictures are shown."
Express Charges Are a Problem in Minnesota

The State Should Be Separate Territory, Say—Montana and North and South Dakota Should Be Grouped as One

[This is the third article on the state rights situation by Jesse J. Goldburg, written exclusively for Motion Picture News. Mr. Goldburg analyzes conditions in Minnesota and the Northwest territory and throws light on facts of interest to everybody, handling pictures on a state rights basis. The next article from Mr. Goldburg, who is making a countrywide trip as exploitation manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation for the purpose of studying state rights conditions, will deal with the situation in the Kansas territory.—Ed. Note.]

As an indication of the serious thought given by state rights buyers to the ever-changing conditions in the state rights field in the territory controlled from Minneapolis, there is the encouraging fact that every one of the independent buyers has pre-conceived and logical ideas on territorial allotment and what they believe is necessary for the advancement of the motion picture industry.

In this territory the cry of the exhibitor is against express charges, particularly where the shipment of a feature is made from Minneapolis to any point in Idaho or Montana.

The consensus of opinion among state rights buyers is that Minnesota should be an independent and separate state rights territory; that Montana and North and South Dakota should be a separate entity with an exchange in either Butte or Helena, and that Idaho, perhaps the best state out of the six Northwestern states, should also be a separate exchange center; that another territorial division might logically be Minnesota and Northern Wisconsin and the two states of Iowa and Nebraska; but that it is illogical to bunch Minnesota, the Dakotas with Montana or with Iowa and Nebraska, as has been done on some extraneous grounds.

The territorial divisions suggested as the proper ones are borne out by distances, express rates, train service, population, temperament of the inhabitants with respect to pictures, and last, but not least, the dry laws and other so-called blue laws in existence here.

So you see that there are situations in this territory, apart from theatrical and motion picture facts, that should control the regulation of the state rights market.

In the exploitation of productions large or small, no consideration is to be given to the use of heralds, or wide assortment of lithographs. The motion picture houses do little or no advertising in the daily papers, nor to individual exploitation apart from the clerks in the front office of the house. In other words, they depend upon a regular or transient patronage.

A peculiar situation in the city of Minneapolis exists. There is not a program, large or small, that has a contract with any single house. The regular runs downtown of its productions. In other words, it is all open booking and what has gone big in other territories die here. In fact, four of the largest independent box-office attractions that have played big everywhere from New York to this point, have not even had a first run here.

The conditions here exist, which tend somewhat to a harum-scarum way of doing business is no logical method of booking, no newspaper publicity, the papers refusing to insert "movie" news articles; no projection room attached to any exchange, no co-operation either among the exchanges or between exchange and the exhibitors.

Come burdensome express charges. I have also suggested the following radical changes in the method of doing business, which in all probability will be adopted: the use of twenty sheet posters instead of twenty-four sheets. This will permit of a four sheet date poster being used, newspaper advertising and trade paper advertising. In connection with this latter suggestion, I advised the exchanges to solicit subscriptions from the theatre for the trade papers in order that the theatres might then be acquainted with the subjects offered for booking.

In making the announcement of plans for a new production, which will be started within at least three weeks, Robert Bolling, vice-president of the Fairmont Film Corporation, producers of "Hate," a recent release, stated that the notion was setting for the purchase or lease of one of the largest studios in Philadelphia, for producing all the interiors of a new seven reel feature written by James W. Meade, and which will be directed by Walter R. Stahl. Sidney Vaughn, manager of the studio and art director of the corporation, accompanied by Mr. Stahl and Mr. Meade, went to Philadelphia last week ostensibly for the purpose of closing the deal for a studio.

Fairmount Plans Studio in Quaker City

In making the announcement of plans for a new production, which will be started within at least three weeks, Robert Bolling, vice-president of the Fairmont Film Corporation, producers of "Hate," a recent release, stated that the notion was setting for the purchase or lease of one of the largest studios in Philadelphia, for producing all the interiors of a new seven reel feature written by James W. "Sinister" and "Sin Woman" in Big Demand

Hy. Gainsborg, manager of the Four-square Exchange, which recently began its operations at 729 Seventh Avenue, New York, reports that hundreds of requests for bookings are being received from throughout the state. These demands are for "The Bar Sinister," and "The Sin Woman," each being now ready for release.

According to Mr. Gainsborg, his salesmen state that the warm weather is having no appreciable effects upon the bookings of big pictures.

West Comedies for Masterpiece

The Masterpiece Film Attractions of Philadelphia, B. Amsterdam, proprietor, has acquired the rights for Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey to the King Bee comedies, starring Billy West. The first release in that territory will be on July 1.
"Personal Endorsement" Is New Wrinkle for Show Paper

BElIEVING that the personal touch in advertising is one of the most potent factors in attracting patrons to a theatre, especially if it be a local endorsement, Frank J. Seng, who is presenting "Parentage," has just originated an idea for a personal endorsement on a twenty-four sheet stand, which is so flexible that it can be adopted by an exhibitor running "Parentage."

This twenty-four sheet has been gotten out in addition to the regular colored lithograph twenty-four sheet which is a modernized version of the Madorna and Child. This new twenty-four sheet in striking red and black, is a personal endorsement of the film, and for the New York showing will have the signature of Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto.

In reality this new twenty-four sheet is a twenty-three sheet, the extra one sheet being so located on the stand, and in such plain colors that the exhibitor can have this single sheet printed up with his own signature to exactly match the stand and fit the entire scheme.

As it is now, the stand reads: "To you and all of your friends. I want you to see Hoagy Carmichael's Thought Film of Real Life, "Parentage," A Message. It is a remarkable film. You will like it. It makes you laugh. It makes you think." And on the last sheet the signature of Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto theatre.

While this plan has been worked out on one and two-column advertisements, slides and other accessories, Mr. Seng believes that on the twenty-four sheet results should be big. This is the first time this idea has been put into concrete operation, and Director Rothapfel of the Rialto is very enthusiastic about the returns. He also is a firm believer in the personal touch in all advertising. This endorsement advertising has added value because it brings the picture and the theatre closer to the patrons, and those who trust their theatre managers will have added confidence in the picture, because they have so much faith in his judgment. This is the first time Manager Rothapfel has ever issued a personal endorsement on a film in advertising it to his patrons.

FOLLOWING the example of the Ivan Film Productions, who had given to the fund for the American Ambulance Society in Russia part of the receipts for the final week's run of "One Law for Both," at the Lyric theatre, New York; a number of theatres in New York, Brooklyn and New Jersey, following the picture made similar donations.

These houses were: The Strand theatre, Newark; North Star theatre, Harlem; Empire theatre, Bronx; Lee Avenue theatre, Brooklyn; Fourteenth Street theatre, Manhattan; Webster and Regun theatres, Manhattan. With the exception of two houses all have rebooked the picture.

Excellent reports from state right buyers who are exploiting "One Law for Both" are reaching the office of the Ivan Film Productions.

The U. B. O., the Exhibitors' Board of Trade Circuits, Poli's, and others who have run the picture on a week or two weeks' run, are enthusiastic over the surprising interest that "One Law for Both" has created and still is creating.

Lydia Borelli to Become as Popular Here as in Europe

Ben Blumenthal, president of the Export and Import Film Company, has plans under way for placing Lydia Borelli, the star of "Robespierre," on the same footing with motion picture patrons here that she has already attained in Europe. An announcement of the plan will be made following the launching of "Robespierre."

The company states that it intended at first to give the subject with no special stress on the work of the members of the cast, but as a result of the favorable reception of the picture by trade paper reviewers, it was decided to make known to the public the acting ability of the players.

"Come Through" on State Rights

Following the success attained by the special service feature "Come Through" at the Broadway theatre, the officials of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company have decided to offer this picture on the state rights plan.

The story is by the distinguished playwright, novelist and author, George Bronson-Howard, and the cast is headed by Herbert Rawlinson.

"Redemption" Sold for Five States

"Redemption," featuring Evelyn Nesbit and her son Russell Thaw, and produced by Julius Steger and Joseph A. Golden, of the Triumph Film Corporation, has been sold to the Pioneer Film Corporation for New York, and to Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, for the New England States.

Stanley Mastbaum has secured "Redemption" for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey, and will exhibit it at the Forest theatre in Philadelphia for a run beginning September 3. Jones, Linick and Schaefer have bought the "Redemption" exhibition rights for the State of Illinois. It will be seen in Chicago at the Colonial theatre. The exhibition rights for Canada have also been disposed of, and the remainder of the territories are now being contracted for through the agency of David Bernstein, Putnam Building, 1493 Broadway, New York.

"Redemption" has been engaged for the Alhambra, New York, following its four-week run at the George M. Cohan theatre, New York.

West Films for Standard

The Standard Film Company, Cleveland, has bought the Ohio and Kentucky rights for the Billy West comedies, which, beginning about July 1, are to be released regularly in the southern states. A week after "Back Stage," "The Hero" and "Doughnuts," "Beware of Strangers" Packs Baltimore House

Exhibitors Film Exchange of Washington, D. C., A. Dresser, general manager, presented for the first time in the Southern territory W. N. Selig's "Beware of Strangers," at Ford's theatre, Monday, June 18, at 25c. to $1.50.

The opening night this theatre, with a seating capacity of 2,000, was entirely filled. Even the warm weather did not hinder the opening, and from the looks of the advance sale for the balance of the week it would seem that "Beware of Strangers" might establish a new box office record for feature films at that playhouse. Many prominent exhibitors were present at the premier, also many prominent city officials and business men of the city of Baltimore. In fact, it appeared that the industrial, financial and professional element was represented.

The state rights department of MOTION PICTURE NEWS has become recognized as the leader in the field, and scores of letters from exchanges flowing into the office every day attest this fact.

The Popular Film Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y., Says:

"We are very glad to see the interest that MOTION PICTURE NEWS is taking in the state rights angle of the business. I am sure that not only the state rights men but the exhibitors are interested to see this."

Buyers and Regular Audience See Frieder Film at Same Time

The Frieder Film Corporation of Chicago has found a novel and altogether unique method of showing its feature, "A Bit o' Heaven," founded on Kate Douglas Wiggin's "The Birds' Christmas Carol," to state rights buyers. Instead of adhering to the customary method of a morning showing to an invited audience, General Manager Oner F. Dowd decided to give it the acid test before a regular audience. Accordingly, the subject was added to the regular program at the Olympia theatre and prospective buyers invited to see just how it "goes over" with an everyday crowd of unbiased fans. The results more than justified the experiment, says Mr. Dowd.

"A Bit o' Heaven" is a comedy," said Mr. Dowd in discussing the innovation. "We had sufficient confidence in 'A Bit o' Heaven' to be willing to stake the verdict on results obtained before an average audience."
Fielding Company Films Hesser Story in Canada

Progress is being made in the production of "For Liberty," Capt. Edwin Bower Hesser's story of the "American Legion" of the Canadian army, which is being directed by Romaine Fielding for the S-M Films Corporation of Philadelphia. Mr. Fielding has been in Canada for two weeks with the company, and has been accorded every aid by the Canadian military authorities in making the war scenes.

First going to Montreal, then to Camp Valcartier, taking some scenes in Quebec City, and then proceeding to Toronto, the company is now working at Camp Borden, Ontario, the finest of Canadian training camps. The training of soldiers in modern trench warfare, as it will be practised in the United States Army, is shown and actual frontline conditions are being duplicated in the battle scenes, which are being made with the assistance of officers returned from the front.

E. K. Lincoln plays the stellar role, that of a young American who enlisted in the Canadian Army. Romaine Fielding himself interprets the heavy, and Barbara Castleton is the heroine. The studio scenes are to be taken in Philadelphia, where Ira M. Lowry, general manager of S-M, is arranging the sets at the Lubin Studios. Casting for the studio scenes is now being done by Frank J. Carroll, New York representative of the company, at 220 West Forty-second street.

Klotz and Streimer Buy "Secret Trap"

Klotz and Streimer, Inc., announce the acquisition of the selling rights of the five-reel feature "The Secret Trap," starring Baby Em Gorman, the child artist, who has been trained under the direction of the industry's distinguished producers.

Little Miss Gorman will not celebrate her eighth birthday until next September, yet she has played leading roles in many successes, among which will be remembered "The Little Orphan," "The Soul of a Child" and "The Little Mother."

In "The Secret Trap" Baby Em plays a dual role.

Klotz and Streimer, who will offer the feature to the state rights buyers some time early in July, plan a "secret stunt" at the convention in Chicago. They say it has nothing to do with the film.

Color Work of "White Trail" Ranks With Its Story

Since the trade showing of "The Great White Trail" in New York, a short time ago, reports have come to the Warners, the makers of the picture depicting life in the Klondyke, on the admiration by the public of the unusual color work in the subject.

At the time of the preshowing members of the trade present complimented the producers on the laboratory work evident in the finish of the picture. The unusual excellence of the print ranks with the acknowledged dramatic qualities of the story, featuring Doris Kenyon, which the Warner brothers made into a photodrama of continued box-office drawing power.

"The Deemster" to Be Exploited Like a Circus

Warren and Clark Will Take Through Three States with "Big Top" Attractions

Warren and Clarke, outdoor showmen, who bought the state rights to Hall Caine's photoplay, "The Deemster," with Derwent Hall Caine in the stellar role, for Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, purpose sending out the film under a black-top tent and exploiting it just as if it were a circus. It is their intention to feature "The Deemster" as the principal attraction, but to surround it with side-shows, and the regulation concessions that accompany a circus.

Decorated circus wagons, floats and flags, together with equestrians, clowns and all the other peoples and paraphernalia that go to make up a circus outfit will be part and parcel of the equipment. Horses will be hired locally to draw the wagons and floats, and to exhibit the equestrians.

A special car for projecting machines and motion picture equipment will be a distinct part of the caravan. Half a dozen expert operators and several first-class electricians will be engaged to look after the projection department. A film printing outfit will be carried, and newspaper criticisms and other complimentary notices of the attraction will be flashed upon metallic screens in the open so that he who is skeptical may read what his neighbor thought of the attraction in the adjoining town or village.

The novelty of the enterprise is depended upon to attract the natives from far and near just as they are lured out when the old-fashioned circus comes to town.

Circus billposting will be resorted to. Fred Clarke, president of the Riverside Show Printing Company, Chicago, senior member of the firm of Warren and Clarke, will print up a special line of posters which if posted on one billboard or "dead wall" would approximate 480 sheets of paper 28 x 42 inches each, without once duplicating. All of this assortment will be posted in each and every stand played by the attraction.

Contracting agents, billposters, press agents and business managers will go in advance to prepare the way for the coming of the Hall Caine photoplay.

The United Fairs Booking Association of Chicago is controlled by Warren and Clarke and their associates, and by reason of that fact they understand the need of spectacular methods to attract people to entertainments in the good old summer time.

"The Deemster" is now running at the La Salle theatre, Chicago, under the management of Warren and Clarke, and under the direction of W. J. Dunn.

Marcus Loew, the "indoor showman," is exhibiting "The Deemster" in all his New York theatres simultaneously with the presentation of it in the Mid-West by the outdoor showman.

Visitors See "Fall of Romanoffs," by Brenon, in Making

A COMMISSION of Russian officials visited the Herbert Brenon studio on Hudson Heights, N. J., recently, to see the players at work in scenes for "The Fall of the Romanoffs," with Ilidor, "The Mad Monk of Russia" as the star.

Others who have been recent visitors at the studio are Austin Strong, Marie Dressier, Carolina White, R. E. Johnston and John Dye. The picture is now nearing completion and will soon be seen on Broadway.

"Nance O'Neil as the Czarina, and Alfred Hickman, as the Czar, have scored a hit with all who have seen them, while the Kaiser, who is being impersonated by a Frenchman, is a true replica of Kaiser Bill's true self," says an official of the company. Mr. Brenon has the constant advice of expert Russian authorities and no pains or expense are being spared to make the production correct in every detail.

"Edward Connelly, who plays Rasputin, the famous Monk, who upset the Russian Dynasty and was finally exposed by Ilidor himself, is declared by Mr. Brenon to be creating one of the finest screen characterizations in the history of motion photography."

Mlle Galanta, Mlle Marcelle, Conway Tearle and William E. Shay are other players who will be seen in the picture.

Consolidated Adds Two Films to List

The Consolidated Feature Film Company, Denver, which handles "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and other prominent features, has added to its list for the Colorado territory Rex Beach's "Ne'er-Do-Well" and "On Trial," Essay.
Edith Storey Signs for Long Term with Metro

Six Plays, Differing in Type, Each with Strong Role, Are Now Ready—To Sell Productions at a Price Exhibitors Can Afford to Pay

METRO has made a long-term contract with Edith Storey. The producing company has been trying to get her for two years and feels much elated over the capture.

Miss Storey was prevented from going to Metro before this because of contracts that interfered. As the Metro organization had been satisfied that they would eventually secure her, production plans preceded the signing of the contract that she has finally been able to make.

Six important vehicles have been secured and these are rapidly being prepared for production. They differ in type, but each is said to have a strong role which gives Miss Storey full opportunity for display of her talents.

It is promised that each of the productions will be of the highest Metro standard, and each will be an attraction production. The average length will be seven reels.

Under a special marketing arrangement, according to the Metro announcement, these productions are to be sold to the exhibitor at a price which he can afford to pay. Providing of big productions at a price which is not exorbitant is regarded by the Metro management as one of the important features of the announcement.

Miss Storey last week had an extended conference with Director George D. Baker regarding her first production, at the conclusion of which it was announced that the first production will be begun in a very short time. She said:

"It has long been my ambition to star in Metro plays. Words cannot express my pleasure at having the greatest opportunity to launch my life come to me at a time when I feel that the best part of my work is ahead of me. The vehicles chosen for me are the highest in character, and I think my work for Metro will be the best in my career."

Richard A. Rowland, Metro's president, after the final conference, said:

Stars in Greater Vitagraph Are Shifted

Greater Vitagraph has shifted its stars into new combinations. Harry Morey will have as his leading woman Miss Miriam Fouché, described as a Shreveport, La., girl, a Southern beauty.

Alice Joyce, in her next picture, will have Marc MacDermott playing opposite her. They are in marked contrast, as she is of blonde type, and he of brunette hue, thus leading 'chantment to the view.

A recent addition to the Vitagraph Company, Agnes Eyre, formerly was with Essanay at Chicago. According to the announcements she has had gratifying success in "The White Sister" and "The Sting of Victory." She made her start in an O. Henry Picture, when Miss Patsy De Forest suffered with eye trouble.

Earle Williams has just finished a picture with Corinne Griffith. The play is "The Stolen Treaty," to be released in July.

Pass Production Mile-Stone

With the release of "The Peddler," a U. S. Amusement production, the Art Dramas Program, will have put out twenty-six productions, which, at the one a week rate, means that it has passed through half a year of activity.

First F. P.—Lasky Film by Open Booking a Pretentious One

Previous announcement that Marguerite Clark would be starred in the first production under the Famous Players-Lasky open-booking policy going into effect, was overshadowed by the later revelation of plans. Word last week indicated, however, that this production, an adaptation of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero’s "The Amazon" would be one of the biggest achievements of the F. P.-Lasky concern.

Though the spirit of the stage version of Pinero’s play has been scrupulously adhered to in the adaptation, certain minor changes have been introduced which were considered essential to the conversion of the story into a superphotoplay of the quality which exhibitors and the public alike have been taught to expect from the Famous Players.

It will be remembered that gymnasium scenes are numerous in the story, so in this production Miss Clark and the members of her cast have been hard at work in the comic and near-serious episodes staged in a gym. Dumb bells, flying rings, rowing machines and chest weights—all are used by the little star during the action.

"Sudden Jim," Triangle Feature, Nears Completion

In the Triangle film version of "Sudden Jim," Charles Ray has the title role. He gets a first chance to display his personality, as heretofore he has appeared only as a weakling or a country yokel.

The Saturday Evening Post story by Clarence Buddington Kelland, which has been adapted, represents "Sudden Jim" as a square-jawed young fellow. He starts a clothspain factory in the wilds of Michigan and has a hard fight against a combine. The pictures have been taken in the North Woods, but the final scenes are waiting for the recovery of Sylvia Bremer from a slight accident received while posing.

It is stated that Ray’s earlier pictures, "The Pinch Hitter," "The Clodhopper" and "The Millionaire Vagrant" have been strong box office attractions.

American Humorists Go Before the Camera

Don Marquis, of the New York Evening Sun, and Roy K. Moulton, of the New York Evening Mail, planned to provide a scenario which leading humorists were to act before the film camera at the Goldwyn, Fort Lee, Studios Jun 15. Mrs. Mamie Welsh, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Goldwyn stars; Mrs. Elizabeth Sears, of Film Fun, and Miss Miriam Teichner, of the New York Globe, were named a committee to receive the delegates from the American Press Humorists.
No Offensive Scenes in This Triangle Production

In "Her Excellency the Governor," Triangle claims to have a five-reel drama without a single sordid scene. The opening is in a ballroom, the love-making in a beautifully furnished reception room, and the story reaches its climax in a luxurious boudoir.

Perfectly appointed tea-tables, Chinese lamps, artistic hangings and artistically carved furniture make fitting background for the groups of fashionably gowned women, dignified men, who move in the play.

Miss Elda Millar is dressed in a manner that becomes her part, as is Sylvia Marlowe, who acts as the young woman lieutenant governor.

Howard Hickman in Character at Paralta Studios

Norman Kaiser will play the part of Theodore King with Bessie Barriscale in her Paralta play, "Rose o' Paradise." This is his first appearance in Los Angeles. The natives are reported as surprised and interested by his extensive and up-to-date wardrobe.

The character role, "Lafe Grandoken the Cobbler," has been given to Howard Hickman.

Paralta Battle Nearing on San Diego Hills

A stucco president’s palace has been erected on the hills between Los Angeles and San Diego, and John Meehan, of Paralta, is there drilling 600 men to battle as loyal Sobranites and revolutionists.

This is the big scene in "A Man’s Man," in which J. Warren Kerrigan will make his first appearance as an independent star under the auspices of Paralta.

Ogden Picture Co. Increases Capitalization

Directors of the Ogden Picture Corporation, a producing company of Ogden, Utah, have agreed to increase the capitalization from $100,000 to $200,000, in order that the company may engage in the producing game on a larger scale.

Biggest Literary Men Contribute to Paramount

Works of Mark Twain, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, W. Somerset Maugham, Broadhurst, Mary R. Rinehart and Others for "Star Productions"

With the departure for California of Jesse L. Lasky, in charge of production at Famous Players-Lasky pictures, announcement is made this week of the photo-plays in course of making or completed to be released through Paramount during the late summer and early autumn months under its new "star series" selective booking plan.

Thirteen of the foremost and most popular stars on the screen comprise the stellar list, namely Madame Petrova, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Billie Burke, Julian Eltinge, Fannie Ward, Jack Pickford, Louise Huff, Vivian Martin, Sessue Hayakawa, George Beban, Wallace Reid and Ann Pennington. In addition the Famous Players-Lasky Company has enlisted the services of, or obtained the rights to the writings of, many of the greatest authors and playwrights of the past and present.

Among the authors represented are Mark Twain, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, W. Somerset Maugham, George Broadhurst, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Owen Johnson, Wallace Irwin, Carolyn Wells, George Middleton, Gelett Burgess, Charles Kenyon, Beulah Marie Dix, Hector Turnbull and others whose names are notable in the field of letters.

The plays of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero are recognized as being among the highest contributions to the drama made by any Englishman of the present century. They won their author knighthood and the popular acclaim of the theatre-going public. The Pinero play which has been selected by Famous Players-Lasky is his great comedy, "The Amazon," in which Marguerite Clark is to start in the role of Lady Thomasine.

Though Famous Players-Lasky have rights to Mark Twain’s writings the company has so far produced only "The Prince and the Pauper" and "Puddin'head Wilson." The third Mark Twain production will be from the popular story, "Tom Sawyer," with a cast headed by Jack Pickford and Louise Huff.

The first of W. Somerset Maugham’s photo-dramatic contributions will be an adaptation of his own play, "The Land of Promise," in which Billie Burke will star. Miss Burke had appeared in the stage version of this piece.

George Broadhurst will contribute "The Law of the Land" in which Madame Petrova will have the lead. This piece was a big stage success.

One of the most versatile and popular American fiction writers of the present day, Mary Roberts Rinehart, will be well represented in Paramount plans. Her "Sub-Deb" stories, which have been running in the Saturday Evening Post are being adapted by Famous Players-Lasky, with Marguerite Clark in the role of Bab. There will be several of these stories, the first of which will be known as "Bab’s Burglar.”

Wallace Irwin has been induced to convert his famous Japanese schoolboy, "Hashimura Togo," to the screen especially for F. P. Lasky and Sessue Hayakawa, the well-known Japanese actor, has been assigned to the stellar role.

Then there is Owen Johnson, with his stories of Lawrenceville, his "Tennessee Shad" and "The Varmint." The latter of these is now being adapted for the screen at the Lasky Studio, with Jack Pickford and Louise Huff as stars.

The prolific pen of Gelett Burgess will supply a vehicle for Billie Burke in the shape of the story, "The Mysterious Miss Terry," a tale of romantic adventure which will mark this star's first appearance in Paramount pictures. This is to be followed by "The Land of Promise," already mentioned, and a third production, the name of which has not yet been decided upon. Mr. Burgess, in collaboration with Carolyn Wells, has also written a story in which Julian Eltinge, the female impersonator, will make his photoplay debut. This is titled "Mrs. Raffles’ Career," and is the story of the adventures of a near-society woman and a near-burglaress.

It was announced some time ago that Beulah Marie Dix, whose stage achievements have been many, has been engaged (Continued on page 96)
World Signs June Elvidge to Long Contract

A long term contract, by the stipulations of which June Elvidge will acquire her own niche in the line of World-Brady stars was signed last week between the player and World.

Under this agreement the name of the actress not only goes into big type in all advertisements of World-Pictures, but is set opposite a much larger sum than formerly upon the weekly salary sheet.

Miss Elvidge's rise has been rapid and steady. It was but a few months ago that she was in the Winter Garden, understudying Joe Collins. Her early picture appearances made it appear that she would take permanently to the vampire character, but it was soon found she was well fitted for sympathetic and emotional personations.

Another item of interest from the camp of World Pictures is the fact that Lew Fields is again working under the Brady direction, this time in a photoplay, the identity of which is not to be disclosed just now. The success of "The Man Who Stood Still," produced by World, is given as the cause for this renewal of relations.

Just at present Mr. Brady is again demonstrating his firm belief in the proposition that a photoplay well named has more than half won the battle of popularity.

This demonstration has taken the form of changing the titles of four of the completed Brady-Mades awaiting publication.

The picture drama formerly called "Partnership" has had its title shifted to "The Iron Ring." Arthur Ashley, Gerda Holmes and Edward Langford are the featured players. The play originally named "The Waster," starring Carlyle Blackwell and June Elvidge, with Muriel Ostriche a prominent member of the company, is now titled "Youth."

"Dandy Dick," directed in person by Mr. Brady, will reach the public under the final name "The Marriage Market," with a cast composed of Carlyle Blackwell, June Elvidge, Arthur Ashley and others. Ethel Clayton's picture play produced under the working title "Chasms," is now known as "Souls Adrift," and the leading male part is played by Milton Sills.

Joseph Schenck Gives Director Edward Jose Warm Boost

Edward Jose, who created "Poppy," for Joseph Schenck, has just finished a second picture with Norma Talmadge—"The Moth." The production is to be released late in the summer.

It is announced too that Mr. Jose and Miss Talmadge are even now hard at work upon a third picture to have all the dramatic possibilities of "Poppy." The title is to be chosen later.

Marcus Loew, speaking of "Poppy" the other day, said:

"On its first production in a New York theatre 'Poppy' broke the record of the house. Jose is to be congratulated."

Mr. Schenck, speaking of Jose recently, said when he was casting about for a director for his star and wife he took no chances and left nothing to that fatal "luck" that has been the graveyard of theatrical hopes. He declared that Jose has never had a failure and that the secret is in the man's ability and hard work.

Jose works after the manner that brought distinction to David Belasco. His art is showing how the thing should be done, and accomplishing this easily and quietly.

Jose is described as actor, director, writer and executive. His acting will be remembered in "A Fool There Was." He played a part in "Resurrection," then adapted it for the screen and directed the making of the photodrama. He was with Pathé for two years, his first picture being "The Beloved Vagabond." This play was hand-colored abroad, and was the only production of the company to reach Broadway. Jose it was who filmed Kipling in "The Light That Was."

Representatives of Nations in Metro's "The Slacker"

In the new Metro production, "The Slacker," a representative of each of the nations shown on the screen, and then the heads of all, in a group, dissolve into an American flag. It is symbolic of the "melting pot" of the nations.

Another transformation shows the "dove of peace" flying away from the branch on which it has been perched. The dove disappears and all the tree branches merge into a fortress of steel with enormous guns projecting.

The historic figures in American history are said to be shown in realistic characterizations. Emily Stevens is the star. The play is written and directed by William Christy Cabanne.

Snow Mountains in Paramount's "The Long Trail"

Again, the picturesque Canadian North-west is "The Long Trail," released by Paramount July 23. The mountains and the forests have a deep snow cover, the picture having been taken outdoors in winter. The scenic effects are reproduced with vividness.

It is in this drama by Eve Unsell that Lou-Tellegen makes what is stated to be his last appearance as a motion picture star. He is now directing George Broadhurst's "What Money Can't Buy" at the Lasky studio.

As a rube but naturally chivalrous Canadian trapper, Andre, Lou-Tellegen makes a loveless marriage with Louise, a penniless girl recently brought out to the woods by her guardian.

Louise has a worthless brother, Paul, whose escapes are the cause of the death of Andre's sister, Michette. Paul kills a man in a gambler's fight and seeks safety in Andre's cabin. His kinship with Louise is discovered as Andre is about to shoot him.

The play ends in a scene when Andre aids Paul to escape. Trooper Joyce of the Northwest Mounted Police, in wait, shoots Paul at the door, and to his horror finds his whole equipment the property of his friend, Andre. Then comes the confession of Louise that Paul was her own brother and that she gave him Andre's gun and clothing. This saves Andre from arrest. Louise and Andre find themselves.

"The Masked Heart" Based on Injudicious Flirtation

A mysterious woman with a grey mask entirely concealing her features and a wealthy young man who, becoming bored by his easy victories over women, starts out to find an elusive woman whom he can pursue, are the principal characters in "The Masked Heart," the American-Mutual production, starring William Russell, which will be released on July 2. The masked woman proves to be a married woman with a delight in flirtations and many complications result which arouse even the blase society man.

Russell, of course, appears as the society man and Kathleen Kirkham has the part of the mysterious woman. William Conklin and Ashton Dearholt have important roles.

Prison Reform Praise for "Her Life and His"

F. Emory Lyon, superintendent of the Central Howard Association, Chicago, after a private screening of the Pathe Gold Rooster play, "Her Life and His," wrote as follows:

"I feel the film ought to accomplish much good in calling attention to some of the abuses of the present prison system."

The warden of the Illinois state prison also saw the picture and equally appreciates its moral purpose.

Florence LaBadie, the star in the photoplay, will be remembered in the "Million Dollar Mystery." She is supported by H. E. Herbert, once Billie Burke's leading man.
Warde Says Press Made Motion Picture Giant

Frederick Warde, Thanhouster star, as guest of honor at the annual meeting of the Brooklyn Press Club, talked of the work of the newspaper as a motion picture artist sees it. He said:

"The pigmy has become a giant almost overnight—thanks to the power of the press.

"In espousing the motion picture and the motion picture exhibitor, the press has simply made good on its reputation as the chief champion of anything or body that spells progress. There is hardly an important paper in the country to-day that does not devote space to the picture exhibitor and the films he shows.

"I have a letter in my possession from an exhibitor in a town that boasts six newspapers and six motion picture pages! There the press is with us exactly 100 per cent."

"Human Interest" Series—Two a Month from "A-Kay"

The "human interest reel" is the latest in "specialties." And already the demand from such theatres as the Strand in New York has caused the A-Kay Company to announce "two-a-month" of these unusual studies of human characteristics. "Character as revealed in the nose," the first in the series tells graphically in pictures the results of a life study by Jessie Allen Fowler. Both humor and instruction is aimed at; in other words, the reels are to be as full of wit and seriousness as life itself, which they delineate. We predict for the "human interest series" a worldwide circulation.

Six Years Old and Army Sergeant

Mary McAllister, six-year-old Essanay star, has been made an honorary sergeant in the U.S. Army. The warrant and chevrons were delivered by Captain F. B. Kenney, in charge of recruiting at Chicago. This is an army appreciation of the child's services in collecting $1,000 for the Red Cross in an afternoon.

Nat S. Stronge Publicity Head for Vitagraph

Paul N. Lazarus to Be Advertising Director—Two Departments to Dovetail in All Details of Work with Supervision Divided

NAT S. STRONGE, who has been manager of the news service for Greater Vitagraph V-L-S-E for several months, has been made publicity director and is in direct charge of all publicity of the organization.

Paul N. Lazarus, who for more than a year has been assistant advertising manager, has been made advertising director of the organization and is in charge of all advertising, including trade paper, newspaper, fan publications, billboard and exhibitors' helps.

The changes in the publicity and advertising departments were made necessary by the departure of E. Lanning Masters, whose connection with Greater Vitagraph-V-L-S-E ended on Saturday, June 16. As the two departments are now arranged they dovetail even to the slightest detail and the work is so laid out that in case of the absence of the head of either department the combined work will be supervised by the other.

Mr. Lazarus graduated from the publishing business to the motion picture field. For ten years he was connected with the advertising and promotion departments of several of the leading book and magazine houses, notably Grosset & Dunlap, Cas-sel & Co., Ltd., Cupples & Leon Co., the International Magazine Co. and the Vogue Company.

Mr. Stronge is widely known in the motion picture industry through his connection with Mokography, the motion picture trade journal published at Chicago, and with Sherman-Elliott Company, the Western state rights buyers, for whom he opened their Chicago office.

U Current Events Up-to-Minute

Henry Ford's latest gift to humanity—a farm tractor which the British government is turning out in quantities of 100 per day—heads off the timely news in Universal Current Events this week. Other Ford cars equipped for riot and war service; "sea sleds," the latest naval aid—fast boats which, at 45 miles an hour, "work all around" the submarine, and other late war and world news, including pictures of the little children in France being taught the use of gas masks—such is the horror of this war—make up an unusually snappy issue.

Desmond as Arch Crook in Ince-Triangle Play

In "Time Locks and Diamonds" William Desmond is presented as star by Thomas H. Ince. The Ince-Triangle drama is described as a cunningly contrived 1917 gentleman crook story, with bold and striking situations and well-sustained mystery.

Desmond, as "Silver Jim," is said to present a characterization quite equal to Kyrle Bellew in "Raffles."

"Silver Jim," Farrel is supposed to be the master criminal of the world. The story opens in "Silver Jim's" elegant home near New York, where he has his old "pal," Crabbe, as his servant. With the arrival of "Silver Jim's" sister—his sole tie to respectability—adventures begin, and continue, each more exciting than the last.

Gloria Hope, new to Ince-Triangle, is Margery Farrel; Robert McKim takes the part of Crabbe, and in the support are Roland Lee, Mildred Harris, George Beranger, Thomas Guise and Milton Ross. John Lynch and J. G. Hawks wrote the story. Walter Edwards directs the production.
Paralta Studios Build Big Stage at Hollywood

Barriscle and Kerrigan Producing Companies Have Fine Quarters—Stars and Managers Have Own Suites and May “Live on the Lot”

Two producing companies will use the new Paralta Studios at Hollywood, near Los Angeles. The studios have been reconstructed under the direct supervision of Robert T. Kane, vice-president of Paralta Plays.

It was the intention when Mr. Kane went to the Pacific Coast to acquire separate studio, staff and company for the Bessie Barriscle Feature Corporation, and the J. Warren Kerrigan Producing Company. Tremendous increases in labor and material costs made it advisable to change this plan.

Fortunately the Clune Studios, Hollywood, were obtained. There are several buildings on a tract of eighteen acres. Paralta has taken the studio and let it jointly to the two producing firms.

Extensive improvements with a view to production on a large scale have been begun. One betterment is a great indoor stage, 50 by 200 feet and 24 in the clear. This will permit photography of unusually large interiors.

Another improvement is the building of a restaurant on the studio grounds, which will eliminate the necessity of any one leaving the premises for meals. This restaurant will accommodate, if necessary, 200 people at a table at one time.

The dressing-room facilities afforded each star in this combination of interests are said to be remarkable. Each has a suite of three rooms and bath covering a floor space of about 1,200 square feet. These apartments are well furnished. Mr. Kerrigan and Miss Barriscle could literally “live on the lot” for weeks.

This studio arrangement has made possible many economies. There is, for example, a joint studio manager and art and technical director—Robert Brunton. Mr. Brunton’s first assistant is Richard Paul Holmes. Leon Spinak is employed in decorative wood carving, and Carl Ruhnaus as a painter, exclusively for the Barriscle.

Kerrigan productions, and all are experts. The general staff includes H. Sheridan-Bickers and Thomas Geraghty, writers; Rex Stovel, advisory author; David M. Hartford, casting director; Oscar Apfel for Mr. Kerrigan and James Young for Miss Barriscle, directors, with Thomas Meehan and William Horowitz as assistants. The work of Messrs. Kane, Brunton and Holmes will be wholly advisory.

To-day the buildings and appurtenances are all so allotted and arranged that each company has practically the accommodations of a separate studio. The work of both in the production of “A Man’s Man” and “Rose o’ Paradise” is being carried on separately and systematically without either one in any way inconveniencing the other.

Returns from Front to Act as Co-Directors

Marcel Morhange will be technical director of the first seven-reel picture released by the Superlative Pictures Corporation. He will also act as co-director of Lois Meredith, along with William Robert Coleman.

Mr. Morhange has just recovered from wounds received at the battle of Nouve Chapelle, where he had the rank of officer interpreter with the British expeditionary force.

Bryant Washburn on Shores of Lake Geneva

Bryant Washburn and his company, under direction of Arthur Berthelet, are first to occupy the camp of Eissay at Lake Geneva, Wis.

Mr. Washburn is being screened in “The Golden Idiot,” screen version of the story by Robert Rudd Whiting, adapted by H. Tipon Stock. Release is set for the latter part of the month.

Selig Releases New Hoyt Films Through K-E-S-E

William N. Selig has announced the latest of the Hoyt comedies to be released in K-E-S-E, as follows:

The primary releases have achieved instantaneous hits according to the Selig Company. Those released are: “A Hole in the Ground,” “A Brass Monkey,” “A Day and a Night,” “A Rag Baby.”

It is pointed out that the reviews on the first Hoyt comedies have been universally flattering. It is asserted the comedies get better as they go along if that were possible. “A Day and a Night,” a June 25 release, is cast in a motion picture studio. A rural gymnman comes to the big town in search of a cheer. He wanders into a movie studio and they think he is “props.” Then things happen.

Scenes connected with the making of motion pictures and rarely seen by the public are presented in “A Day and a Night.”

One scene shows the big studio floor in the Chicago studio of the Selig Company showing movie sets, etc. Methods of motion picture production are presented, including the work of the director on the “side lines.” And with it all the Selig Company promises a succession of laugh-provoking situations and climaxes.

Thanhouser’s High Opinion of “The Woman in White”

Edwin Thanhouser says he has never seen a Thanhouser production that surpasses in “steady, photographic effectiveness” the six-reel Pathe Gold Rooster play, “The Woman in White.”

It is represented to be a good story and well acted, Florence La Badie being the star. The director is Warde, and the cameraman, Zollinger.

In Miss La Badie’s support are Richard N. Neill, Arthur Bower, J. H. Gilmore, Gertrude Dallas, Wayne Arey and Claude Cooper.

Look for Record-Breaker in Latest Fairbanks

Advance views of the new Douglas Fairbanks-Artcraft picture, “Wild and Wooly,” are said to indicate that this picture will be the best comedy yet presented by the athletic star.

Scores of exhibitors have written to Artcraft headquarters announcing their preparations in anticipation of showing the picture.

Tom Moore Opposite Constance Talmadge in “The Lesson”

Tom Moore, to appear as leading man for the new Lewis J. Selznick star, Constance Talmadge, is called upon in “The Lesson” to operate a soda fountain and serve her and others with drinks.

This was done before the camera, under the direction of Charles Gilby, who, it is said, insisted on fidelity to detail even to loading the fountain with soft stuff.
Billie Burke Finishes Work in "Mysterious Miss Terry"

"The Mysterious Miss Terry," an adaptation of Gelett Burgess's story, starring Billie Burke, has been completed at the Famous Players Studio under the direction of J. Searle Dawley, and is to be the first of Billie Burke's productions to be released by Paramount under the new "Star Series" of selective releases.

As the title indicates, "The Mysterious Miss Terry" is an adventure story dealing with the experiences of a young society girl, who is bored with the circumstances that have surrounded her all her life, and decides to take matters into her own hands by dropping out of society and living in a boarding-house. She is known merely as Miss Terry, and is the subject of much mystery to the other boarders because of her gentle insistence upon keeping her personal affairs to herself despite her keen interest in their several fortunes. Mystery as to her identity is said to be sustained until the very close of the picture.

In the supporting cast are: Thomas Meighan, Walter Hiers, Gerald O. Smith, George A. Wright and Bessie Lear.

Alma Hanlon in Strong Drama

Described as a feature of unusual charm and appeal, the next Apollo production on Art Drama program, "When You and I Were Young," is primarily a story of youth--a romantic tale of adventure and strife.

Alma Hanlon plays the leading role, that of a girl whose literary ambitions are thwarted by her commonplace parents. John Sainpolis appears as the hero, a young painter. The struggle of both of these young folks is said to be vividly depicted, and many complications are surmounted before money, fame and love come to both.

The atmosphere of the Bohemian quarter is true to life, the scenes having been taken in Greenwich Village, New York. Florence Short has one of the strongest supporting roles.

Plenty of Thrills in Pathe's New Serial

Green Lizard, Carved Dagger and Pot of Boiling Oil All Help to Make Situations for Pearl White's Many Rescues and Escapes

A PATHE exhibitor who saw the first three reels of "The Fatal Ring," the new serial, is quoted as saying:

"It is a gripping story of dramatic intensity replete with logical thrills and stunts."

According to the announcement the thrills in "The Fatal Ring" are logical.

For instance, it is represented as perfectly natural that the sacred lizard should choose the man who is to forfeit his life or recover the violet diamond in six days. Likewise it may be logical that Pearl White should, after a stage fight, see a warning go whizzing past her ear on the haft of a curiously carved dagger. The warning gives her fifteen days to return the violet diamond or die.

Later when Pearl White and Tom Carlton, the cub reporter of The American, the part played by Henry Gsell, in the serial, are ensnared in the coils of Richard Carslake, the villain, played by Warner Oland, it may seem the natural thing that their fight should take place in the underground passageway beneath New York's Chinatown, and that, when Pearl is hastening to escape she should fall into an underground channel and be swept out into the water of the river by the reeding tide.

The race at the ferry slip is not altogether a stunt. It is a reality and said to be a gripping one. Pearl and Tom Carlton narrowly escape as the monster ferry boat with a crowd of commuters steams into the slip, bumping into the spikes and churning up the waters in a vain attempt to reverse, while the hero and the heroine are drawn up by the quick work on the part of ferry slip attendants.

When Pearl White, in a fit of jealousy, takes the violet diamond from the hands of the High Priestess of the Sacred Order of the Violet God and throws it out the window, she is suspended over a cauldron of boiling oil. This may be a logical and natural thing for the followers of such a strange god to do. They would not punish a person in the ordinary way. They would and they do suspend Pearl White over the boiling cauldron of oil and gloat with glee while ferrets gnaw at the rope, holding her from death, parting it strand by strand until it is severed.

A large advertising campaign is planned. "The Fatal Ring" is to be made known to every motion picture fan in America. The nation-wide string of Hearst papers with their immense circulation will carry large display ads, interesting personality stories of the actors and actresses, the novelization of the serial story and photographs of the principals. In addition to this, scores of other papers throughout the country will carry display ads and will run the novelization.

Melbourne Macdowell's Screen Bow in "Flame of the Yukon"

The news that Melbourne Macdowell has become a member of the Triangle stock company at Culver City should prove of unusual interest to those screen fans who also recall the impersonations that this actor contributed to the legitimate stage in years past.

With his wife, the late Fanny Davenport, one of the most celebrated American tragediennes of the past generation, Macdowell appeared in many classic productions. His best-known roles were Marc Antony in "Julius Caesar," Scarplia in "La Tosca," Loris Ipanoff in "Fedora," Almerio in "Gismonda" and Andreas in "Theodora Virginius."

As the heavy lead in "The Flame of the Yukon," opposite Dorothy Dalton, Macdowell will make his debut in the silent drama. Without previous experience in screen acting, he is said to have created an unusually telling characterization in the role of "Black Jack" Hovey, proprietor of the Mids Cafe where the big scenes in this Alaskan drama take place.
Antonio Moreno as Leading Man for Mrs. Castle

Former Vitagraph Star Will Play Opposite Pathe Star in Newest Picture—Subject Said to Be Exceptional in Thrill Construction

A NTONIO MORENO, former Vitagraph star, and recently signed by Pathe, is to be leading man for Mrs. Vernon Castle, according to an announcement issued last week.

Work on this picture has just been begun at the special studio in Fort Lee, engaged for the exclusive use of the organization built for the production of the Castle Pathe pictures, under the direction of George Fitzmaurice. The scenario is by Philip Baroelmae, the playwright, and it is made from one of Carolyn Wells's books.

In addition to Mrs. Castle and Antonio Moreno, the cast selected by George Fitzmaurice, supervising director of all the Castle pictures, includes John Slessor as the "heavy" and W. H. Gilmour in an important role.

The play off in which this company of players will support Mrs. Castle is described as a thrilling one with a compelling murder mystery. Announced features will be unusually beautiful exteriors taken on a famous estate, whose owner heretofore had withheld permission to use; the beautiful interior settings which have played such an important part in George Fitzmaurice's pictures; a series of double exposure and fade-out scenes in which the evidence as to the murder of a millionaire (Mrs. Castle's father), is revealed; a thrilling and unusual cotume's inquest and a big thrill is lent by Antonio Moreno as the hero who has a number of athletic feats to his credit, and a leap from the roof of a building. The picture is said to give the hero and heroine exceptional parts, with Moreno accused of killing the father of the girl he loves and Mrs. Castle bending every effort to prove his innocence which, in the end he does, but after encountering many setbacks.

Arabian Village for Elsie Ferguson's Artcrt Ctture

In preparation for the production of Elsie Ferguson's first Artcrt picture an Arabian village has sprung up "somewhere in Jersey." Transplanted palms, camels and fleet-footed horses are to be used. The feature is titled "Barbary Sheep."

It is said the sets already erected at Famous Players-Lasky studios in Fort Lee are the largest ever built there.

Preparations were completed Sunday night and filming of the first scenes began Monday morning. Miss Ferguson was not present, as she does not appear in these scenes. She will not commence work until next week.

Maurice Tournier, director, expresses himself as enthusiastic over this picture. He said:

"The screen possibilities of Robert Hichens' book are appreciated by every one who has read it. I spent many months in the northern part of Africa and am familiar with the unique atmosphere of the place. During my stay in that country I had opportunity to study the power and fascination of the natives."

"Mr. Hichens blends with the setting the lives of a young English nobleman, his wife and a handsome Arab army officer, who plys his arts upon the heroine while her husband is absent. The story is charged with the heat, passion and swift action that befit a daring romance of Algeria."

"We hope to show the patrons of the screen something new in the way of a swift-moving subject, staged with every facility of modern film technique and closing the talent of one of the artists of the high-class drama. I am glad that such a motion picture subject has been secured for Miss Ferguson under my direction. I feel confident that she will score a triumph."

Roosevelt of Vitagraph Makes War on Fake "Schools"

A NDRE ROOSEVELT, production manager for Greater Vitagraph, has declared war on the motion picture "schools" which guarantee positions in film drama to their students—for a cash price.

It is announced that Greater Vitagraph will positively not employ any man or woman, boy or girl, who has received such a "guarantee." Mr. Roosevelt says:

"There may be some good material and available types among these misguided men and women who come from the fake schools, but we intend to turn them all away, regardless, because if we engaged any of them it would not be because of their schooling. Such engagements only serve to aid the men who swindle these trusting aspirants.

"If it were possible to do so, I should like to have the District Attorney investigate these schools. I am convinced most, if not all, of them are outright swindlers.

"Of course, this school evil is not new—in fact, it appeared for a time that they had been practically wiped out, but from the number of applicants who have been to Vitagraph studio in the last week or two I am convinced that they have taken a new hold. I believe the producing companies should co-operate to suppress these so-called schools and also to save many trusting young men and women from being swindled."

Mr. Roosevelt was moved to take this action when he discovered that a woman fifty years old had been promised character parts and swindled by one school, and others had been similarly duped.

In another case he discovered that an instructor, pretending that he had been called to the war, had proposed that Vitagraph should employ four pupils for one day, the "school" to reimburse the company.

"Who Goes There?" with Earle Williams, Started

Earle Williams, directed by William Earle, has begun work on "Who Goes There?", a play from the novel by Robert W. Chambers. This is one of six Chambers stories recently chosen for screen adaptation by Greater Vitagraph, following a jury poll among its exhibitors. Another which will get under way at once is "A Soldier of Chance," featuring Harry Morey. Paul Scardon will direct this feature.

"Who Goes There?" will be a special Blue Ribbon feature, in seven or eight parts, and will be ready for release in the early fall. Corinne Griffith appears opposite Mr. Williams in the picture.

Lockwood Has Way to Offset Fake School Evil

Harold Lockwood is being swamped with letters from young girls in the country who desire to act in moving picture plays as his co-star, May Allison recently left the Yorke-Metro Company. Lockwood said:

"I believe these letters come as the result of the false lure held out by fake schools of moving picture acting. Exhibitors could help to do away with this evil by telling girls who apply to them that an inexperienced person a long ways from a producing center has only one chance in a million of getting a job on the screen."

Nell Shipman Returns from West Indies

Nell Shipman, who was with Greater Vitagraph, Fox and Lasky productions, has just returned from the West Indies and will for a time remain in California. She has been at work on a manuscript and hopes it will provide a screen sensation for 1918.

Actual work upon the production will not begin until fall, so Miss Shipman is considering engagements.
Two Deaths and Rescue in "The Love That Lives"

In "The Love That Lives," completed by the Famous Players Studio, Pauline Frederick takes the role of a scrub-woman. To give her son an education she suffers the attentions of a broker, though she is at the time the neglected wife of a drunkard.

The theme is relieved by the good sense of the woman who conceals her identity from her son for years. He believes himself an orphan and works hard at his studies, graduates and becomes a fireman. But the mother cannot resist passing the engine-house, discovering that the boy is in love with a pretty young girl.

Again she becomes a scrub-woman and witnesses the efforts of the same broker to gain control of the girl the son fancies, and interferes in her behalf. The broker locks the door and the play ends with a dramatic situation. The place is discovered to be in flames, and the heroine falls back into the fire, while the son climbs a ladder, and rescues his love, witnessing the death of the villain. Scudder Middleton is author.

It was while this last scene was being taken at Fort Lee that Miss Frederick, Pat O'Mally and Violet Farmer were half-suffocated with smoke.

Victor Moore in Hot Battle with Cream Puffs

Victor Moore's next release — "Oh, Pop!" on the Paramount Program for the week of July 2—he considers a worthy successor to "Bungalowing." Both of these comedies were written especially for Moore by Thomas J. Gray.

In this slit he stays with the children while his wife goes home to mother, who is ill. What the children do to Vic is aplenty. For a change they play war with meat balls and cream puffs. Other children join in.

"Where are the children?" the neighbors cry, as they rush in: "Pick them out yourself—I don't know which are my own," answers the head of the house.

Moore is supported by the same youngster who made a hit with him in "Commuting" and "Bungalowing."

Variety in Paramount Dramas for Early July

Week of July 2 Brings "At First Sight," Comedy Drama with Mae Murray Starring, and Reid and Williams in Heart Drama

Two feature releases of Paramount for the week of July 2 star Mae Murray and Kathlyn Williams, the latter having Wallace Reid opposite.

"At First Sight" gives Miss Murray the opportunity for her talents that she enjoyed in "The Big Sister" and "The Primrose Ring." As Justine Gage, she satisfies the heart of a young writer, who is absorbed in a story. She sees a way to win by supplying him with material to complete his plot. Her breezy courtship and coy retreat are quite charming. The hero (but not the audience) is left under the impression that he did it himself.

In the "Big Timber," Kathlyn Williams plays the part of Stella Benton, who enters into a loveless marriage and tires of her husband, a lumberman. She decides to leave him, and makes a substantial success as a concert singer. Her new admirer becomes indifferent and sets fire to the timber holdings of the abandoned husband.

Mutual Weekly Catches the First American Boys to Go to Front

Patriotic outbursts will certainly greet Mutual Weekly No. 130, with views of the first Americans to leave Paris for the front under the Stars and Stripes. Thanks to the activity of the Gaumont parent house in Paris, these historic pictures were secured. It is said to be a thrilling sight, these first brave Americans marching to the trenches under their beloved flag to help "make the world safe for democracy."

Two Directors May Handle Fairbanks Pictures

Artcraft is considering the use of two directors, one to cut and title while the other is getting a second production under way. This is hit upon as a means of increasing the releases of Douglas Fairbanks pictures.

As yet Fairbanks and John Emerson have not selected a second director, but have several in view.

Far Eastern Production

A production solely Australian, and which is heralded as being on a par with the best made American films, has been put out by Franklyn Barrett, and is titled "Australia's Peril."

The production was made entirely in the Antipodes, and the players are Australians. Barrett has the distinction of being the first Australian producer to have his work screened at the Theatre Royal, Sydney.

Subsidiary Selznick Co. on "Open Door" Policy

Film Advertising Service Offers Its Facilities in Purchasing and Other Matters to Any Companies Desirous of Using Them

A NOther phase of the open-door policy of the Selznick organizations developed this week, with the announcement that the Film Advertising Service, a Selznick subsidiary corporation, had decided to carry out the general principle established by the Enterprises as a whole, and offer its facilities in purchasing and other matters to any companies desirous of using them.

The Film Advertising Service was organized several months ago, with Myron Selznick as general manager, to take over the entire purchasing and supply department of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises. The aim was not merely to relieve the parent corporation of that most bothersome of all departments, but to take off its hands also the preparation of designs and material, the search for novelties, and all other related matters.

The growth of the company was materially aided by the fact that practically all theatres playing the Selznick-Pictures are of the grade which spend considerable sums in advertising, and need a large supply of material with each picture. This enabled the new concern to organize a staff of experts in every line.

The Film Advertising Service, among others, controls a patent securing a special kind of cut-out which enfolds in casel form. The patent idea is the manufacture of the cut-out in a flat form which enables the exhibitor using it to run it through the press for his own impress. Another novelty of the company's is a book-shaped, die-cut herald of a convenient size.

Much attention has also been devoted to lantern slides, cut, mats, lobby displays and other exhibitors' aids.

"It is a curious thing," says Myron Selznick, speaking of the activities of his company, "that with the vast amount of money spent in the film business in the purchase of supplies, there has been no organization of buying. Of course the big firms are able to protect themselves, but independent producers are paying ridiculous prices for advertising material.

"I decided that the same open door which applies to Selznick booking and to distribution, could apply to our business, hence my decision: "We are now in a position to take charge of all details of the preparation of material. For instance, an independent producer does not need to go to the expense of organizing a purchasing department. His output of pictures is limited and it would increase his 'overhead' out of all proportion. We take all this 'overhead' off his budget, and give him better prices than he could get for himself, on account of the volume of business we handle."

In addition to the supply service, the Film Advertising Service is also in a position to handle entire publicity campaigns, this branch of the work being under the direction of Randolph Bartlett, publicity manager for the Selznick Enterprises.

Each of the two commodious rooms now has two of the latest type Simplex projectors, and after exhaustive tests, it is felt by Binkoff, the projection is as perfect as mechanical ingenuity can make it.

Neal Burns in Parlor Comedy Skit in Two Reels

Neal Burns and Gertrude Selby are at work on "An Interrupted Vacation" at the David Horsley Studios, Los Angeles. It is described as two-reel featurette that "will set the pages abuzz.

Burns was in musical comedy in the East, "Just Out of College," "The Sporting Deacon" and "A Stubborn Cinderella" being in his list.

Executive offices of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation now occupy an entire wing of a building almost a city block in length—seventh floor, Forty-second street side, in the Rogers-Peet structure.

Samuel Goldfish, president and chairman of the Executive Board, has been in the new office since June 18.

Charles Kenyon is the author of "Mex- ical Mac," a story of the Mexican border, in which Fannie Ward will star. Miss Ward will also star in "The Sunset Trail," by Alice McIver and in "The Lure of Crooming Waters," by Marion Hill.

Wallace Reid is to star in "The Thing We Love," which was especially written for him by H. B. and M. G. Daniel. George Beban, the character actor, has completed "Lost in Transit," a unique conception, which presents him in an entirely new light. Vivian Martin is to star in "Little Miss Optimist" and in "The Dogie," which was written by Tom Forman, the popular Laskey juvenile and author of numerous successful photoplays. Miss Martin will also star in "Molly Shawn," a delightful Irish characteriza-

George Middleton will be represented by an adaptation of "A Wife's Strategy," which will star Pauline Frederick in an unusually powerful role. Miss Frederick will also star in "The Show Down," which was written for her by Hector Turnbull, former head of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department and author of a number of sensationally successful photoplays.

Madame Petrova will make an appearance in a story written by herself, "The Lady," which will be another Petrova picture, and her fifth Paramount has not yet been named.

Ann Pennington will make her second appearance during this season.

The four studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are all being utilized to their fullest capacity in preparing these productions for release. Many are in complete or near-complete form.
General Film Adds Two Bright New Features

Program Will Be Enlarged with Four-Reel "Sunset Features," Dramas, and with One-Reel "Sparkle Comedies" Completes Big Program

FOUR-REEL subjects, each a drama, with well-known stars, are announced by General Film under the trade name of "Sunset Features."

With this addition to the house program, General Film is now able to assure exhibitors that their shows may be booked at one time. This has been desired for months, but the trade was not notified until a highly desirable list of longer features could be assured.

In the "Sunset Features," Ruth Roland, Margaret Landis, Ethel Ritchie, Vola Vale, Katherine Kirkham, Henry King, Neil Hardin, Philo McCullough and R. Henry Grey may be seen. Titles will be given later.

In the one-reel offerings of General Film the "Sparkle Comedies" will begin at once. This group name and the first titles will tell the story as the pictures already announced are "In My Nightie," "Fresh Air," "The Spy," "The Trunk Route," "The Water-Cure" and "The Night of Enchantment."

"A Corner in Smiths" is the Black Cat Comedy release. One Smith, wealthy, hates his name, and to make sure of obliterating it offers a $2,000 living to all bachelor Smiths, who agree not to marry. Needing kale, Eddie Jones poses as a bachelor Smith and finds himself to the bargain. Isobel Smith, daughter of the disguised Smith with the riches, nearly defeats the whole plan by falling in love with Eddie. The situation is cleared when the bogus Smith confesses his real name.

In this "twenty-eight-minute feature," Hazel Day, who was "Honey" in "Skinner's Bubble," appears as the heroine.

Neva Gerber New Leading Lady in "Nature Study" Films

The Lynn F. Reynolds Company of Bluebird photoplays undergoes a change in the important position of leading lady, Myrtle Gonzales having completed her part of the work in "The Show Down," a feature lately produced on the West Coast. In Alice Heged Rice's Story, "Mr. Opp," planned as Mr. Reynolds' next production, Neva Gerber will be the leading lady, with Arthur Hoyt leading man and George Hernandez continuing as a featured member of the company.

Mr. Hernandez has been an important principal in all of the Reynolds Bluebirds and was star in "God's Crucible," a recent release. Fred Church and Jack Curtis have also appeared in the Reynolds productions from the time they began figuring among Bluebird releases. These players will be seen in "Mr. Opp," when that feature is released in September.

Commonwealth Star Has Earned Critics' Plaudits

Elsie Mackay, leading lady for Commonwealth Picture productions has closed a successful season on the legitimate stage with Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree. She was the English actor's leading lady on his tour through the country.

Miss Mackay is rapidly becoming known as one of the foremost of the stage stars, and it is anticipated she will be a picture favorite. In a review, Dick Little, dramatic editor of the Chicago Herald, last winter had this to say of her:

"Miss Elsie Mackay is so lovely as Anne Boleyn, that when she makes her first appearance in the scene in Wolsey's palace everybody in the audience gasps with delight. (Mary Pickford has not been mentioned.) Since Elsie Mackay burst upon the delighted gaze of the audience last Monday evening, nor any movie queen for that matter.) An actress upon the legitimate stage is again a public idol. Managers raced wildly after her the day following her first appearance at the Illinois theatre, Chicago."

Five Refreshing Christie Comedies in July

July having five Mondays, offers as many Christie Comedies to detract from the discomforts of the heated term. For the week of July 2, "Almost a Scandal," featuring Betty Compson with Harry Ham, is the story of the mishaps that follow the wearing of a "strip-suit" to a ball by one of two rivals for Betty's hand.

"The Fourteenth Man" is the title of the comedy offering Margaret Gibson and featured by a spirited prizefight. "Down by the Sea" will star the first of the summer crop of beach-comedies, featuring Betty Compson and Harry Ham—and the Christie mermaids.

"Skirts," is the laconic but expressive title of the fun-referee for week of July 23. This features Margaret Gibson, with Harry Ham, Ethel Lynne and James Harrison, who has to masquerade as a very charming young girl. "Won in a Cabaret," features Betty Compson, and has a large cafe set in which a band of hula-dancers disport themselves and which is characterized as a true delineation of its title.

Vincent Colby made a ten-strike with his funny pups long before they were presented in moving picture form as "Seven Cutey Pups" by the ever progressive Universal. Wherever post cards are sold Colby's pups have made friends and millions upon millions of these cards have been sold throughout the country. This one reel feature will prove as popular in your house, Mr. Exhibitor Reader, as they have in hundreds of others. While in reality this is a comic animated cartoon, the treatment of the drawing and the titles and in fact the entire story is so different from anything you have ever seen that you cannot judge "Seven Cutey Pups" by anything you have ever seen. Get a look at this at your nearest Universal Exchange and you will be sure to book it.

Widely Known Official of American Standard Co. Resigns

An announcement that caused considerable surprise within Chicago film circles last week was to the effect that M. G. Watkins, for several years connected with the American Standard Motion Picture Corporation here, has resigned. He was at the time of his resignation secretary and general manager of the concern, and is widely known among film men in the central West.

He added nothing to the announcement as to what his future activities in the field might be but left immediately for Milwaukee.

Funkhouser in Wrong Again

Another defeat has been charged up against Major "Czar" Funkhouser, the chief of the local censor board. "New York," a Pathé production, after a year’s fight with the major and his cohorts, has finally been granted a permit for a Chicago showing. It opened at the Star theatre here last week.

"S. O. S." Not Rothacker's

To dispel certain rumors that have gained credence, Wattrson Rothacker, of the Rothacker Company, informs us by letter that the sex film, "S. O. S." put out by the Sunshine Company, was in no way sponsored by his firm. The Rothacker studios were merely rented to Sunshine for the filming of portions of the play.

CHICAGO NEWS AND COMMENT

By WILLIAM J. McGrath

LEAKS IN THE LOOP

Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, who maintains his home in Chicago, left last week for a trip East. He is being accompanied by his wife and the trip will be made by auto. They will visit New York City and go from there to the White Mountains for a short holiday.

"On Trial" is experiencing as much popularity in its film form at the Colonial as the stage play did in the Loop last summer.

E. H. Duffy, formerly assistant manager to R. C. Seery, head of the Triangle offices here, has gone over to Mutual, where he has been given berth of manager of the Mutual Exchange.

Triangle is making ready to take over the northwest corner of the fourth floor of the Maller's Building as an addition to their offices now situated on that floor.

The girl employees of the American Film Company's laboratories on the North Side have subscribed $1,000 to the Liberty Loan.

E. Van Ronkel, manager of the Bluebird Photoplays that are now being shown at the Playhouse, comes out with another new "soldier stunt" for that theatre. All citizens, liable under the draft law, who present their registration card and are accompanied by one paid admission are admitted free. In other words a registration "stiff ticket" admits two for one fare.

Jesse J. Goldburg, who has been State-righting "God's Man" here has sold the Illinois rights to Sam Van Ronkel. We also hear that Jesse is passing the good word for the M. P. News.

John Fiske has left the Mutual offices where for the past two months he was connected with the publicity department.

Bob McKnight, formerly associated with Jones, Linick and Schafer enterprises here, is the newly appointed publicity director for the American Film Company. Bob does all of his work from the Chicago office of the firm.

The Selick Company announces the completion of a new music score for "The Garden of Allah." It carries fourteen instrumental parts and is offered at a very reasonable price. It was written by the composer of the music for "The Birth of a Nation." Copies of the orchestration are now ready for distribution.

Alice Moore, auditioning auditor for Fox, left last week for Bagdad on the Subway after four weeks of giving the books a looking over in the local Fox office. Izzy J. Schmerz, salesman for the Variety Film Company, is selling "The Price of Her Soul" through this section.

Minnie Spickerman, secretary to President Freuler of Mutual, is back in the office again after an enforced lay-off due to a broken arm.

Women Film Inspectors Strike—Demand Minimum Salary

An attempt to unionize the film inspectors in the Chicago exchanges has resulted in a partial strike of the three hundred and fifty girls employed in that capacity in the Loop district. The movement is being directed by Joseph P. Armstrong, president of the Motion Picture Operators’ Union No. 110, who plans to organize them into an auxiliary to the Chicago local.

In all but three of the exchanges everyone or a good portion of the girls thus employed went out on a strike on Friday, June 15. While their principal demand is for recognition as a union, they are asking for a minimum salary of $12 per week. The three exchanges whose girls did not answer the strike called were Triangle, Mutual and Paramount, each employing more than a score at this class of labor. The World, Art Dramas and other exchanges were hard hit, all or most of their inspection forces joining the strikers.

During last week a number of the girls applied for reinstatement. The others remained out demanding recognition and backed by the operators’ union. The plans for organizing all of the inspectors in the city is now going on and President Armstrong predicts that all will be unionized before long. The main reason for the attempt at unionizing the girls, according to Armstrong, is that the operators are accused of damaging film and asked to pay costs when not responsible.

Quietus Finally Put on the Guernsey Bill

The Guernsey bill, proposing State censorship for Illinois, is at last dead beyond resurrection. It came to an automatic demise in the early hours of Sunday morning, June 17, in the lower house at Springfield after an almost successful attempt to shove it through Senate following the first death blow it was supposed to have received more than a week before. It was already up before the Senate on Saturday, June 16, but was found to be suffering with numerous and illogical amendments. It was sent back to the lower house for concurrence, and there it lay untouched and met its end when that body adjourned sine die after an all night session.

Making Comedy Series

Rex Weber, well known as a director of comedies, is in charge of the making of a series of comedies for the Follies of the Week Company in Chicago. His first picture already filmed, has Ernest Truex of the "Very Good Eddie" company, featured in a satire entitled "The Garden of Allie." The second is entitled "Haunidiot" and features Charles Grapewin. Both were made at the Rothacker studio.
Coast Exchange Men Report Boom in Business

HARRY LUSTIG, formerly manager of the Los Angeles Metro Exchanges, and for the past year manager of the Denver branch, has been promoted to the position of district manager, and is now supervising the mountain and West Coast territory, which includes the exchanges of Los Angeles, San Francisco, Seattle, Denver and Salt Lake. Mr. Lustig was manager of the Mutual at Denver for a number of years preceding his affiliation with the Metro. He has a very wide acquaintance among exhibitors, and is considered one of the most successful exchange managers of the western territory.

Manager E. H. Emmick of the Peerless Film Exchange, with offices at San Francisco and Los Angeles, is making a complete tour of the state by auto, visiting all the exhibitors of a license. Mr. Emmick is now booking the late Selig release, "Be ware of Strangers," and a number of other late subjects as well as four different brands of comedies.

E. B. Tilton, who has been managing the "Dweller of the Gods" Company in Arizona, has returned to Los Angeles, having shown the picture in the seventeen principal towns of the state. Mr. Tilton and company will go to San Francisco shortly and work out of that territory.

Field Carmichael, Fox Exchange manager, is home from a tour through Arizona and reports good business at all theatres regardless of the exceeding hot weather in that territory. The warmest spot he encountered was Needles, Cal., where the mercury climbed to 108 in the shade and shaved every inclination of remaining.

West Coast branch managers of Fox Exchanges, Field Carmichael, of Los Angeles; William Citron, San Francisco; Albert Eden, Seattle; J. Roden, Salt Lake, and A. Burgen will meet at Denver and go East together to attend the Fox convention. In Chicago they will join the Central Western branch managers and go to New York in a special Lake Shore car.

Charles J. Marley has been selected as manager of the Los Angeles Triangle Exchange to succeed Mr. Parsons, who goes to the Goldwyn branch as manager. Mar ley was formerly secretary of the Los Angeles Film Exchanges' Board of Trade, and has been identified with the industry for four years.

Marriages and Club Events in Philadelphia

In exchange circles in Philadelphia things are moving rapidly. A matrimonial epidemic rages in the Philadelphia Pathe office. In the three weeks James M. Pierce, assistant manager; L. L. Berman, of the sales department, and Benjamin Stolian, who had just been transferred from the Charlotte, N. C., branch, have succumbed.

The Motion Picture Salesmen Association of Philadelphia has already forty-five members. There are about fifty salesmen in the eligible class, so the boys are naturally much pleased. Through the courtesy of Local 307 of Philadelphia the meetings of the salesmen are held in the local headquarters.

L. H. Bell has been appointed publicity manager of the Philadelphia Famous Players' Exchange, succeeding A. S. Glenn, who was called to the colors as a boatswain's mate in the Naval Reserve Corps.

Consolidation in Denver

Milton Cohen, who has been manager of the Nota Film Exchange of Denver, Colo., is now in Salt Lake, Utah, to take charge of the Salt Lake office of that concern. T. H. Henry, who has been manager of the Art Crafts Picture Corporation in Denver, will succeed Mr. Cohen, and his former duties and those of Mr. Cohen in Denver in the future will be consolidated.

PARAMOUNT CLEVELAND OFFICE

In the future, Paramount patrons, in Cleveland, will be able to do business directly with the Paramount people, instead of buying through the Pittsburgh office, which has been a source of great inconvenience to the exhibitor. Beginning July 1, E. T. Gerrish, until lately manager of the Pittsburgh branch, will open an elaborate suite of offices occupying the entire third floor of the Standard theatre building, Cleveland, where Paramount service will be strictly maintained.

G. W. Erdman, who sometime since resigned his position as manager of the Cleveland branch of the Universal Film Company, is now the special representative for the Fox Film Company, with offices in the Columbia building.

K-E-S-E SHIFT

Bert M. Moran has been made manager of K-E-S-E. Dallas branch, succeeding Charles H. Wuertz.

EARL HALL, formerly with the Mutual Film Exchange in Dallas, is now booking clerk at the K-E-S-E. branch.

BOOKING EXECUTIVE TRANSFERRED

Monroe Isen, formerly in charge of the booking department at the Universal Meca branch, New York, has been transferred to the Detroit branch where he will act in a similar capacity.
Billy West claims he is paralleling the career of Lord Byron, who retired one night all obscure and "woke up in the morning to find himself famous." True enough and then there is the case of that other great English bard, Bacon, and his nefarious imitator by the name of William Shakespeare.

It becomes our painful duty to chronicle the fact that Herbert Brenon paid $2,100 for the autographed program auctioned off at the recent Lamb's Gambo. Consequently the Lamb's are about $1,500 ahead of themselves, the answer being that William Fox was the other bidder. Mr. Brenon seems to stand for "War at Any Price."

H. Van Loan has reassured his great lyrical masterpiece, "It's Great to Be Rich," hoping to lighten the crew of "Compliments of Shepherd and Van Loan" with business and address, evidently expects to secure additional clients. But latest reports have it that 97 per cent of his employers cancelled all contracts on receipt of same.

Arthur Leslie over in the Universal publicity office has already made himself felt as witness the following excerpts from the press sheet on "The Grey Ghost." For instance, this: "Of The Universal Serial, That Snaps And Sparkles With Stir and Color, A Rising Crescendo Of Crushing Power, Supreme In Its Appeal To Human Imagination, Emerging In Splendid Isolation From The Murk Of Contemporary Screen Mediocrity."

And this: "The Grey Ghost Issues Death Edict—The scarlet thread of murder runs through the colorless skein of life."

And yet this: "Study this face. It is the 'Grey Ghost.' Intellect is discernible in every lineament, but can you discover the Nero-pitilessness, the Machiavellian-like evil genius that lurks beneath? It upsets Lombroso's theory that the features are signs of a man's propensities and sentiments. He is a veritable Olympian Jove of the Parnassus of Crime, etc."

Vitagraph has much to say regarding Harry Morey's jade collection. He will have nothing but jades. "He has not a diamond to his name," reads a line. We were going to give out the secret that we, in this respect, are in Mr. Morey's class, but as long as he thinks he has the field all to himself, we won't go so far as to spoil his illusion.

The following announcement has been received in this office, various styles of type being used instead of punctuation: "Special Announcement; Cohn Film Co's New Release, entitled, "It's a Boy." Come and See at the Cohn Theatre, 600 West 178th street, New York City. Produced by Mrs. Jack Cohn; Directed by Mr. Jack Cohn."

The announcement fails to include that all incidental music is furnished by the Junior Cohn person, but Jack says that this should have been mentioned in larger type than any of the rest of it.

May he be as Universally Animated as his father, is our wish.

Dear, how distressing the situation is. Just after Arctraft has settled the mystery of its anonymously submitted scenario along comes World Film with the news that Norman MacDonald mailed in a script forgetting to include his address. So now we must write to receive William A. Brady's check, just let him know your whereabouts.

We are glad that Vitagraph does not intend to direct true press showings even though the press department sent out three pages on the subject.

Baseball Extra!! Salt Lake, Utah, film exchange men and theater managers have hit upon a unique scheme of advertising and have organized two baseball clubs and hold contests every week. To secure the full benefit of the advertising the film men's line-up appears something like this:

On Friday June 15, the theater managers and the exchange men played a nine inning game for the benefit of the Red Cross Fund. All the theaters in Salt Lake closed their doors during matinee hours and the orchestras furnished pieces which made up a fifty-piece band. Vaudeville theaters contributed acts. The affair was a huge success and put the theaters in solid with the public.

The box-office girl at the Broadway theatre reports that 72.68 per cent of those inquiring for tickets last week came up smiling, saying, "Come through with a couple, etc."

CAUSE FOR GREAT AGITATION Scene: Lobby of the Claridge. Time: Tuesday, June 19, 12:30.

Syd Chaplin (to another film man): Yes, Charlie can make that many pictures easily.
Airdomes Prove Failures in Three Middle West States

With a feeble exception here and there, no airdomes are operating in Iowa, Nebraska or South Dakota this season. A constant dwindling in the number of airdomes because of the uncertainty of outdoor shows, coupled with unfavorable weather are the causes. Airdome business in these three states never did amount to much.

Two years ago this Summer a number did open in the territory. Many of them were new. But that season was a disastrous one for outdoor exhibitors. The constant rains and cool weather prevented regular shows and after a few attempts most of the places closed. Last season the weather was ideal, but few airdomes opened. This year not one is known to be operating in the Omaha territory.

Censor Indorses Nude but Not Suggestive

Mrs. Maude Murray Miller, member of the Ohio Board of Censorship, indorses the nude in movie art. Mrs. Miller gave approval to "Purity." On the subject of the nude in motion pictures Mrs. Miller at Cincinnati expresses this view: "If nude figures are dragged into any film in a way that overburdens the plot, or in a way we feel has been done for suggestiveness, we invariably turn down the picture or order the parts eliminated. However, there is no more vulgarity in the art of motion pictures than there is in sculpture or painting."

Urge Sunday Exhibition

In a resolution passed by Motion Picture Machine Operators' Union, Local No. 259, Sunday motion pictures for Chattanooga, Tenn., as a wholesome means of amusement for thousands of soldiers, are recommended. The khaki clad men come here from Fort Oglethorpe for the week end. The union has agreed to stand sponsor for the quality of films shown, should their request be granted.

Minimum Wage for Theatre Employees Fixed in Australia

The new Theatrical Employees Award, which in short is a decision by the Arbitration Court at Melbourne, Australia, fixing a minimum wage to employees, has created a big stir among the motion picture house owners in the Antipodes.

Among the minimum wage awards is a figure of three pounds, or approximately fifteen dollars, to ticket sellers, and one pound fifteen shillings to female ushers. Other wages are in proportion.

Many firms contemplate reducing their staff; in fact, one firm has dismissed every employee with the exception of the master. So far the consensus of opinion is that the award, rather than proving a benefit to the employee, has struck him a disastrous blow.

Only Picture Magazine in Antipodes Starts Up

The Australian Photoplay Magazine, organized some time last year, and which was discontinued owing to the lack of securing suitable paper, has been reorganized, and the first issue published under the editorial guidance of John M. Giles, at Banking House, Sydney, Australia.

New Firm in Toronto to Make Industrials

A new film concern has been incorporated in Toronto, with a capital of $7,500, under the title of Atlas Films of Canada. It will devote attention to industrial films and the making of comedies, the first of which has been completed. It is a two-reel subject.

Theatre Building Boom Reported in Washington

Ground has been broken for three of the big down-town picture houses that promise fall openings. Each is controlled by a prominent film man. They are Moore's New Strand, Crandall's Metropolitan, and Loew's Palace. Crandall's Knickerbocker house, located in the diplomatic residential section of the city, is under roof, and stands as the most imposing amusement structure of the Capital City, owing to the fact that it occupies a commanding corner of several intersecting streets.

Tom Moore will shortly break ground for another theatre to be located on F street. As soon as Loew's Palace is completed it will house the screen productions now occupying the Columbia, while that structure undergoes improvements and enlargements. When the Columbia is completed it will again assume pictures, while the Palace will become the home of high class vaudeville, under the Loew circuit. Motion picture theatre building is having a boom in Washington.

M. P. Editor to Manage String of Publications

C. L. Oliver, long the motion picture editor of the Omaha Bee, Omaha, Neb., recently accepted a position as manager of a string of publications in Colorado. Exhibitors and exchange men of Omaha, members of the Nebraska Reel Fellows' Club, gave him a farewell dinner at the Empress Garden, Thursday evening, June 14.

Oliver was always a consistent booster of the film business, and is given credit for getting every daily paper in Omaha to start a motion picture section.

Higher Prices in Halifax Are of Benefit

Business in Halifax keeps good as usual. The raise in prices does not seem to affect exhibitors, other than to prove beneficial.

In some cases the theatres have noticed a tendency for the matinees to increase and the evening shows to drop off in attendance, owing to the fact that the extra price of admission is not charged in the afternoon.

Cut Price Performances in Australia Draw

By the institution of what are designated as "Paramount Picture Pops," concerts the Sydney, Australia, Town Hall is filling its 3,000 seats nightly.

Admission prices are reduced every Saturday nights, while at the same time a full performance, consisting of two Paramount features and a number of renditions by a full orchestra is given.
THE EASTERN STUDIOS

HENRY GSELL
Leading Man with Pearl White in Pathe's New Serial, "The Fatal Ring."

AFTER four weeks spent in a sanitarium in Connecticut, Anita Stewart, the Vitagraph star, has returned to her summer home at Bay Shore, L. I., but is still unable to resume her work at the studio. Her physicians have ordered that she rest indefinitely.

Miss Stewart, who had worked incessantly for almost a year, suffered a breakdown after the close of the Actors' Fund Fair at Grand Central Palace, and was ordered by her physician to take a long rest. She had been doing double duty during the tenure of the fair, working by daylight in "The Message of the Mouse," a George Randolph Chester Picture scheduled for release early in July, and at night giving her time to her booth at the fair.

WITH Pilot LeGrand, of the Staten Island Aviation School, Hazel Dawn and Bert Lydell, featured principals in Brenon's latest Selznick Picture, "The Lone Wolf," essayed an air trip for the "punch" scene of the picture last week.

Bert Hunt, photographer, is said to have caught some remarkable pictures, he having ascended in another machine and photographed the star players, while both aeroplanes were speeding over Staten Island at fifty miles an hour. Several hours were required for the completion of the scenes.

MANY details of the coming Apollo-Art Drama, "When You and I Were Young," were suggested to the author, Frederick Rath, by the magazine artist Clarence Underwood.

Several years ago, when Mr. Rath was writing a vaudeville sketch in which a magazine artist figured as one of the leading characters, Mr. Underwood was kind enough to allow him to go through his studio and gain some intimate glimpses of the magazine artist's profession, and these are used in many scenes of the picture.

Alma Hanlon is starred in this production which will be released on Art Dramas Program following the Van Dyke production, "Miss Deception."

LEON BARY, hero of the Pathe serial, "Mystery of the Double Cross," was married on May 28, his bride being Mlle. Marie F. Crouzaz, of Paris. Their romance began at the time when Mr. Bary was playing as Mme. Bernhardt's leading man.

Mr. Bary saw active service in the first year of the war, was wounded and nursed back to health by Mlle. Crouzaz. On recovery he was honorably discharged and entered picture work. The couple are now settled in their new home at Grantwood, N. J.

PATSY DE FOREST, the little Vitagraph star, who was forced to quit work a few weeks ago on account of an eye affliction, returned to the studio in Brooklyn the latter part of last week and has resumed her part in "A Meddler with Destiny," a forthcoming Vitagraph release in which Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith are to be featured.

At the time she was stricken, Miss De Forest was working in two pictures, the Williams-Griffith feature and "Richard the Brazen," an Alice Joyce-Harry Money feature. Owing to the proximity of the release date on the latter, it was necessary to find another young woman for Miss De Forest's part and Agnes Eyre was chosen. The change caused a retake on several scenes in which Miss De Forest had appeared.

THE Carlyle Blackwell-June Eldridge picture play, "The Waster," will go to the public the first week in August as "Youth." The hero of this World-Picture Brady-Made is a rah-rah boy who tries to sop up all the champagne in New York, and is sent away by his father to work on a dam in Tennessee. Here he falls in love with a girl doctor, perceives the error of his ways and bids a long farewell to the red-eyed monster alcohol.

WORK on "Miss Deception," the Van Dyke-Art Drama, written by Joseph Franklin Poland, in which Jean Sothern is starred, is rapidly taking shape at the studio in Nineteenth street, under the direction of Eugene Nowland. It is due for release following "The Peddler."

FREDERIC RATH, who wrote the story and scenario for "When You and I Were Young," the coming Apollo-Art Drama, is now engaged in writing the continuity for the recently purchased story by Charles E. Dazez, author of "Manhattan Madness." Alma Hanlon is to be starred in this, which has for a working title, "Behind the Mask."

MAXINE ELLIOTT, Goldwyn star, was recently responsible not only for swelling the Liberty Loan total, but also for winning a fat wager for Raymond Hitchcock.

The lank comedian made a bet at the Lambs Club that he could sell $30,000 worth of Liberty Bonds at a single performance of "Hitchy-Koo" to the audience. On the specified night Hitchcock made his appeal to the audience, and Miss Elliott from a stage box was first subscriber with an offer of $40,000. Needless to say the remaining $10,000 was quickly collected—and then Raymond collected.

MEMBERS of the Prizmacolor Company are talking of the work done by Master Carl Rich, the six year old "heavy" in a picture just completed in which he played a leading part.

In the taking of scenes for the new process of natural color pictures, the actions of the players are gone through at a speed about twice as slow as before the regular film cameras. Master Rich was called on to express emotions from childish glee to babibsh despair, a difficult piece of acting. The results are said to bear out the feelings of his directors that his understandings of situations is remarkable.

WUXTRY! AUTHOR WELCOMES CUTS IN FILM

HE has been found. An author who didn't care—who calmly saw his filmed effort sliced into and said:

"Good boy! Go to it!"

Lloyd Lonergan is his name and the Thanhouser studio his habitat. His adaptation of Willkie Collins' "Woman in White" was the filmed effort in mention. Lonergan wrote it for eight reels. This week the first print was projected at the studio.

Then did happen that Author Lonergan broke all precedents.

"I like it," he told Edwin Thanhouser, "but I'd like it better in just a reel or two less. So chop and tear no one. A good eight-reeler, no doubt, but a perfect six-reeler—so I will turn my back, and you may hew away. Strange for an author to talk so, I know—but then it is a day of combination and revolution."

The picture, which stars Florence La Badie, is released as a Pathe Gold Rooster Play on July 1.

ALL four Art Dramas studios are working night and day at present, making features for summer releases. Several of the companies are engaged on two features, under different directors, as they are desirous of being well ahead of program requirements.
P L A N S announced in New York with respect to the Triangle producing organization on the West Coast, became effective last week with respect to the New York Motion Picture Corporation's studio of the Triangle at Culver City, formerly managed by Thomas H. Ince. E. G. Patterson took charge on Wednesday, and it was officially announced on the bulletin board at the studio on that day.

With but one or two exceptions, every member of the producing force continued under the new management. At the time the change was made all directors were working with producing units, and production continued without a moment's loss. But a brief statement could be secured from the new business manager, Mr. Patterson. He advised that production would continue without change so far as he knew, at least for the present. Later Mr. Patterson stated it is the intention to add one or two more directors and thus increase the output at this studio.

J. B. Woodside, who has served as western manager for the Triangle publicity department has taken charge of the publicity office at the studio. Woodside is a former Los Angeles newspaper man who has been affiliated with the Triangle publicity department for the past year.

G A R D N E R S U L L I V A N and the staff of writers who have served under Mr. Ince, it was stated by Mr. Patterson, are to continue. He does not anticipate any change in the technical or photographic departments, and advises that all players who are contracted with the New York Motion will continue. In this connection it was stated the contract of Marjory Wilson has been extended to a three-year period, and during the last two years of the contract she is to be starred alone in subjects.

The producing companies now at work include Reginald Barker, directing Louise Glaum in a detective story; Walter Edwards has William Desmond, Alma Rubens and Robert McKim working at the Inceville plant; Charles Miller is directing Bessie Love in a modern story of Ireland, which deals with the tax and landlord situation there; Victor Schertzinger is filming a Charles Ray subject in which Sylvia Bremer plays the opposite role; Roy Nell has Enid Bennett and Melburne McDowell as leads; Lambert Hillyer is making the second Olive Thomas release with Charles Gum as leading man, and Irvin Willatt is making a Triangle kiddie subject, starring Thelma Salter and George Stone. Raymond B. West is shortly to take up the making of a film with Dorothy Dalton as star.

During the coming week productions will be started at the Fine Arts Studio where one company will go to work with Jack Conway, who has been directing Ella Hall in Bluebirds for the Universal, has been engaged as director, and Belle Bennett will play the featured lead in "Because of the Woman." George Webb, who will appear as heavy, is the only other player engaged up to this time.

T H E last scenes taken for Harold Lockwood's coming release, "Peerless Handicap," were made aboard signs of the Signal Film Corporation at the Signal yards. Many were interiors, and the players report the experience during the past few hot days as being the most unpleasant of their picture careers. On another day the company worked at the top of Mt. Wilson, where thrilling scenes showing the supposed death of William Clifford by a fall from the cliff were taken. Supporting Harold Lockwood in this picture are Anna Little, William Clifford, Lester Cuneo, and others.

L O I S WEBER and company are now at work filming the exteriors for the first Lois Weber Production which will be titled "The Spy." This will be a vibraphone drama adapted by Miss Weber from a short story of the same title which appeared in a national magazine. Mildred Harris, who was featured in a number of Fine Arts subjects, and later played at the Ince Culver City studio is playing the feminine lead in this, and opposite her is Kenneth Harlan, who was leading man for Gertrude Hoffman, and has been in films released under the Fine Art and Ince Kay-Bee brand. Alfred Allen, who appeared as Hell Morgan in "Hell Morgan's Girl"; Gertrude Astor, late leading woman of Universal films; Ethel Weber, a sister of the directoress, and Adele Farrington, who in private life is Mrs. Hobart, play the principal parts in the subject. Teresa Young is ingenue who is to make her screen debut in this subject. Miss Weber first saw Miss Young at a local cafe where she was a cabaret singer. Noting the dramatic ability of the young lady and her grace as a dancer, Miss Weber induced her to visit the studio where a number of tests were made. The result of these was so satisfactory that Miss Young was engaged for a permanent position.

W O R K on the construction of the Lois Weber Studio is progressing very rapidly, and the first interior scene will be made on the stage within the next few days. The grounds which are ideal for a producing plant consist of almost three acres with beautiful English hedges and drives. The stage foundation is now laid and a week will see the entire structure completed. This will be vibrationless, having 12 x 14 beams of concrete pillars to support it. The stage will contain a pit 20 x 12 feet and twelve feet deep with devices for heating and cooling the water. The diffusing system will permit a scene twenty-four feet long and having a long run, and aplane cable will be used to support the diffusing cloth. The woodworking factories will be located away from the stage with a sound break consisting of a pine grove between.

A part of the equipment here is a sixty foot frame which will extend sixteen feet below the ground level, making possible the finishing of exceptionally large settings. This will be under the supervision of Orrin Denny, is now being built. Plans provide for labor saving devices throughout and Bell and Howell equipment. Dressing rooms with attractive court dividing the men and women, are now being built. A private office for Lois Weber of Japanese architecture is to be constructed. The offices of the company are located in the old residence on the property and are ideally situated.

Everything about the studio is being built along the line of Miss Weber's plans, and will provide comfort and convenience for every one. Every department will be so situated as to not interfere in any respect with another.

T H E Franklin's will shortly complete the editing of their Fox kiddie picture, titled "Treasure Island," and with this finished they will take up the filming of "Alladin's Lamp" and another oriental tale. Scripts for both new productions are being prepared now by Bernard McGonville.

The Dustin Farnum Picture known at the Fox Studio under the working title of "The Spy," will be finished within a few days, and the Otis Turner Company is nearing the completion of the coming Gladys Brockwell subject. In the latter Jewel Carmen, Bertram Grassby, Charles Clary, Joseph Swickard and Willard Louis are the principals of the cast. Upon the completion of this story, Miss Carmen will leave for New York where she will play opposite William Farnum under the direction of Frank Lloyd. Miss Carmen was formerly leading woman for Mr. Farnum.

L. Selig, who was sent to the coast to look after personal publicity for the Theda Bara productions, will probably give a portion of his time to the general studio publicity.

A nursery and greenhouse have been added to the Fox Studio department in the last few weeks. This will furnish all trees and flowers necessary for sets, and will be under the care of expert gardeners and landscape artists.

SUNSHINE Comedies, under the general direction of Henry Lehrman, has three organizations at work, and the fourth will be started within a few days. Three SUNSHINE Comedies have now been completed, and at the producing plant the claim is made that they are far superior to the first Lehrman Fox release, “The House of Terrible Scandals.”

Material increase in the producing staff has been made by Mr. Lehrman. Recently a scenario department was organized, and this is composed of George Chapman, late of Keystone; Fred Bennett, who has free lanced on the coast for the past six months; Vincent Bryan, until recently with Chaplin, and Robert Eddy, formerly associated with Tom Mix.

Many new faces are also seen at the SUNSHINE Studio. Henry Lehrman is again playing before the camera, and recent additions to his staff include Stanley Bylstone, until recently with the L-Ko; W. E. Lawrence and Max Davison, late of Fine Arts; Hugh Fay from Keystone; Matty Conant, who came to the coast with Max Linder; Mildred Lee from Nypm; Winifred Westover from Fine Arts; Dot Farley, who played in the first Lehrman release, the scandal picture, and has been popular on the screen for the past five years; Kathrine Griffith and her daughter Gertrude, and a large number of others.

Dr. Lloyd R. Mace, who has been attending physician for the Universal for the past three years, has been engaged by Mr. Lehrman, and is opening a receiving hospital to care for the Sunshine players who are taken ill or injured at the studio.

A fitting farewell to President Carl Laemmle, a goodfellowship dance was given at Universal City ten days ago, which was attended by several thousand people representing all studios on the coast, film exchanges, and many of the business houses of Los Angeles and Hollywood. The dance was given on the north stage, which is 125 x 400 feet. This was gayly decorated with flags, patriotic lighting system, and the music was furnished by a Universal City orchestra of twelve pieces. The grand march was led by Mr. and Mrs. Laemmle, Franklin Farnum and Dorothy Phillips. It was one of the most pleasant events of the kind given by any one of the film colony.

A number of child stories have been purchased by the Universal from Judge Willis Brown, an authority on matters pertaining to children and their education, who has made a life study of the uplift of children, and was instrumental in inducing the state of Utah to inaugurate juvenile courts. The first of these stories, which are now in preparation by Judge Brown and Colonel J. E. Brady, manager of the Universal manuscript department, is titled “Nancy’s Baby,” and will be a five-reel subject with Violet MacMillian as star.

UNIVERSAL CITY has a new director in the person of Jack Wells, former assistant of William Worthington. Mr. Wells will make a number of additional releases to the series, “The Perils of the Secret Service,” and the players who were featured in previous releases, Mignon Anderson and Kingsley Benedict, will take the principal parts.

The Universal railroad company is at work on “The Dynamite Special,” with Helen Gibson and M. K. Wilson as leads. This story, like ones previously made by this organization, consists of two reels. The scenario is by Schelly Sutton.

Another two-reel picture put in production is “The Woman with the Parakeets,” which has Claire McDowell, Violet Schramm and George Pearce as leads.

The Lyons and Moran Comedy now in production by Roy Clements is titled “The Bright Lights.” Allen Curtis is directing the making of “Sarah of the Circus,” which was written by Tom Gibson. Gale Henry and Milton Sims are the principals.

Beatrice Van has been engaged by the Universal to play opposite Max Asher in a one-reel comedy directed by Craig Hutchinson.

Four secluded cameras caught scenes in the busy downtown district of Los Angeles this week, showing a street blockade caused by a big truck. The truck was deliberately stalled by Director Stuart Paton for scenes in “The Gray Ghost” serial, and the director fined the maximum amount at the city police court.

“The Quest of Virginia” serial company is now on the fourth episode, having made two reels per week since work began.

William Worthington has secured release from his contract with the Universal to accept a position as director of comedy dramas at the William Fox Studio. Mr. Worthington has been with the Universal for almost four years, that being his first and only engagement since leaving the operatic stage where his last engagement was in “Everywoman.”

THE prizes for the annual bathing girls parade, participated in by Los Angeles and beach girls, were in most instances won by motion picture actresses. The first prizes were awarded Mary Thurman, of Keystone, who wore a light blue one-piece suit, Friscilla Dean, in black and white, from Universal; and Jessie Hallett of the New York studio in a Red Cross nurse’s costume. Second prizes were awarded Sylvia Himmer and Thelma Salter, Ince; Margaret Gibson, Christie; Juanita Hansen and Marie Prevost, of Keystone.

G. C. DRISCOLL has departed for the East after spending two weeks in Los Angeles making necessary arrangements for production of the Mena Film Company of New Jersey. While here Mr. Driscoll negotiated the purchase of the recently constructed studio, located on a four acre plot near the corner of Fountain and Berendo street in Hollywood. It is the intention of the company to produce biblical, historical and educational subjects of various lengths. A regular release of one reel will be made which will be suitable for use by ministers in connection with their sermons. Mr. Driscoll is president of the Pyramid Company of Dayton, Ohio, which has been making comic cartoon subjects for advertising purposes. Associated with him in the new organization is E. W. Keuhn, of Toledo. Mr. Driscoll will return to the coast within the next three weeks accompanied by a portion of the staff who work with him in the making of pictures.

JULIAN ELTINGE is shortly to arrive in Hollywood for his first Lasky production, but no announcement has been made as to who will direct the impersonator of the feminine.

A recent arrival from the East is Frances Marion, who prepared the screen version of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," now being produced by Marshall Neilan, and starring Mary Pickford. Miss Marion is to remain on the coast for several months, and will be affliliated with the Lasky-Artcraft Studio department.

Japanese and slum characters invaded the Lasky Studio this week, the former to work with Sessue Hayakawa in a picture being made by Wm. C. de Mille, and the latter to appear in scenes for the coming Fannie Ward subject which George Melford is directing.

Hayakawa found it necessary to act as interpreter for the director, and the atmosphere of the studio was demoralized by the gangsters who started a series of crap games that for a time stopped all activities at the plant.

THE Helen Holmes-McGowan Signal Company is at work on a new railroad serial, the title of which will not be definitely disclosed for several weeks. The new subject will have for its players practically the same people who appeared in the "Railroad Raiders" finished last week.

The new story will be of the nature of a mystery, dealing with a war time subject, and in which government secrets and inventions are stolen. The company has been taking a few days vacation awaiting the completion of sets and the necessary props for the new story.

The last scene to be made for "The Railroad Raiders," was one that required a horse, buggy and the driver to fall off a fifty foot cliff. The scene was staged without accident, and F. L. Hemphill successfully performed the hazardous feat. The buggy lost its top, but the driver and horse escaped without injury.

As a fitting way to celebrate the completion of the serial, the members of the Helen Holmes Company and studio staff, together with their friends, enjoyed a barbecue given at Eagle Rock, technical director, served as chef, and prepared each one present with tender juicy steaks, the cooking of which aroused the envy of a French chef. These, together with other barbecued delicacies, made up a feast for the sixty odd present. A pavilion adjoining was secured, and dancing continued until a late hour.

JACK PICKFORD, Louise Huff and Vivian Martin are working at the Morosco Studio, the former two under the direction of William D. Tynan and the latter is being directed by Frank Reicher.

The Pickford-Artcraft Company has gone to a small village near San Francisco, which has an atmosphere created by the many quaint buildings of the town. Here many of the exteriors for "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" are being filmed.

Douglas Fairbanks and company are home from spending a few days at Yosemite Valley, where Alpine scenes were taken for the coming subject which is known at the studio as "The Optimist." Announcement was made June 1 at the Lasky Studio that all employees receiving less than twenty-five dollars weekly will have an increase in salary to meet the requirements of the high cost of living. If prices continue to soar, it is announced by the studio management, another increase will be given at the end of six months. The increase of payment of June 1, amounts to approximately $6,000.

THE Kalem Producing staff will be reduced to one company with the completion of the fifteenth and final episode of the "Spy" serial, now in the making by Paul C. Hurst as director. This episode has a big cast which includes Marin Sais, Edith Sterling, Ed. Hear, Frank Jonasson, R. E. Bradbury, Edward Cline, Barney Furey, Hart Hoxie and others. Many of the scenes for this episode will be shot on new shipboard, which is to represent the Australian bush country. One of the thrills injected is a daring ride made by Hart Hoxie on horseback through a plateglass window. The climax of the series is a pardon being granted to Stingaree, the bush ranger, which makes possible his return to England. True Boardman takes the name role, and Director Hurst produces the production.

Phil Lang came forward this week as a scenario writer having completed a story now being produced by the Ham Comedy organization, titled "The Onion Magnate's Revenge." Al Santell has introduced in this number of trick effects which make possible the hop skipping and jumping of barrels of onions. John Stepping takes the role of the onion baron who corner's the market, but is relieved of his wealth by Ham and Bud, the icemen. The continuity was prepared by Frank Howard Clark.

THE Christie organization is at work on "The Honeycombers" from a story by Robert F. McGowan, which will show the difficulties of two couples who secretly wed against the wishes of their respective parents. The cast has Betty Compson and Harry Ham, James Harrison, Eddie Lyons, and Ed. Gribban. Al Christie is personally directing the production.

With "The Pretender," the Reno divorce colony picture, which has Mary Anderson and Alfred Vosburg as leads, being near completion at the Vitagraph under the direction of William Wolbert, property and settings are being prepared for the story to be filmed. This is titled, "Captain Sunlight," and is of the western type, having Alfred Vosburg in the name part, a bandit bold. Mary Anderson will play the opposite featured role.

Aero-acting has scheduled this week to inject thrills in the Vitagraph serial, "Hearts of Flame." Two machines were used by Director Wm. Duncan at the Vitagraph Studio. The producing organization is now working on the twelfth episode.

“Come Through”
(Universal Special—Seven Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MELODRAMA at its best is represented in the vitals of “Come Through,” a Universal feature written by George Bronson-Howard and directed by Jack Conway. After getting away to a promising start, caused mainly by between two and three thousand feet of introductory scenes which are bordered with entirely too much detail and which can easily be reduced to a more compact form by use of the pruning shears, the picture takes some surprisingly original turns and maintains a high pace for the rest of its length.

Mr. Howard is at his best when dealing with fiction, in whatever form, alone and unseasoned by philosophy. The thrills that he has supplied for “Come Through” are many and of divers forms. The unexpected is introduced time and again, complications pile up thick and fast until a denouement of real force and power is attained. That Mr. Howard has not allowed his various lines of action to become knotted and so confusing, speaks well for his ability as a writer of melodramas, which fact, however, has been proved long before this. “Come Through” is really quite apart from other pictures in that its many abrupt turnings revealing as they do total surprises, ever keep the spectator, to speak conventionally, on the edge of his seat, even though the night be hot.

Herbert Rawlinson and Alice Lake make an ideal team to interpret the principal roles of the picture. The former, his every move and gesture stamping him as a matinee idol of the most attractive type, fares excellently with the role of the reformed crankman, whose peculiar marriage marks the turning point in his career. Miss Lake, making her first appearance in a subject of a serious nature, blossoms forth in a gorgeous array of gowns which merely serve to enhance her prettiness. In the dancing scenes both of the leads glide and glide like the professionals they are supposed to be. The supporting cast is of a high order, the underworld and political types being excellent.

The picture has been well directed. Too much stress cannot be laid on the technical excellence of the night scenes, introduced several times and always to good effect.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Buck Linsay (Roy Stewart), engaged to Velma Gay (Alice Lake) through the efforts of her conniving guardian (Jean Hathaway), forces her to marry a crankman, James Harrington Court (Herbert Rawlinson), believing him to be the man she really loves. Forced to accept the honorable protection of Court the journeys to the city with him. Shortly afterward Linsay discovers his mistake.

After a time the James Harrington Courts blossom forth as professional dancers, the ex-crackman having been aided in going straight by Alderman Lysaght (Charles H. Mailes). Linsay, determined to win back Velma, attempts to frame up Court with the murder of a bank teller. McGinnis (William C. Dyer), promises to save him if he will secure incriminating papers in the possession of Lysaght. This Court refuses to do.

He tells Lysaght of the contemplated robbery. McGinnis, realizing that the Alderman is more powerful than himself, contents himself with having Court to a pulp in his office. He is rescued by Lysaght and Velma who at last comes to the realization that she loves her husband.

George Webb and Margaret Whistler also appear.

“The Clodhopper”
(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

IT is Charles Ray and a wonderful supporting cast that make up “The Clodhopper,” an excellent comedy-drama. Mr. Ray has another of his “boob” parts, in which he reigns supreme. There are various episodes of the picture that might be singled out as particularly striking examples of the star’s ability. When he receives his new suit, when he goes to the Fourth of July picnic with his best girl, and when he makes a hit with his clodhopper dance on a cabaret stage, these are truly wonderful pieces of humor tempered with pathos. One can go into paroxysms of laughter at the picture time and again and at the same time there are so many human touches that a laugh is never forced.

Monte Katterjohn has treated his rather slight story with much colorful incident and one never tires of it as a result. Every one of the stock characters is drawn wretchedly and each one has a part in the development of the story. In the person of Mrs. Nelson much of the pathos of the story is centered and Lydia Knott in this role contributes a mighty fine character. Charles K. French further adds to his many laurels in his interpretation of Isaac Nelson, the mercenary president of the village bank. Margery Wilson is the girl and does an admirable bit of work.

Victor Schertzinger has scored another success in the direction of “The Clodhopper.” He has already made a name for himself in the “upper few” of directors. There is many a touch of his that hugely benefits the picture and never a one of them is artificial. The setting collectively and the scenes individually are excellent.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Everett Nelson (Charles Ray) refuses to countenance the abuse of his father (Charles French) and leaves the farm for New York. He arrives in the city clad in a typical country bumpkin outfit and unwittingly falls into a job as a rube dancer in a cabaret show. He makes a great hit and a great bit of money; not as much, however, as his press agent claims. The townsfolk back home speculate on his success. Then comes a run on old Nelson’s bank. Mary Martin (Margery Wilson), Everett’s sweetheart, at the suggestion of Mrs. Nelson (Lydia Knott), journeys to the city for his boy’s assistance. For his mother’s sake he returns to help his father, his bags full of one dollar bills. Using diplomacy he stops the run on the bank and later is reconciled with his father and married to Mary.

“I Believe”
(Cosmopolitan—Seven Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

NO one will question the power of this picture to evoke emotional applause in the vital force of conscience and “soul” is the big theme which is developed here by the use of a variation of the Frankenstein idea. George Lionel Tucker wrote the scenario and directed the production.

If one objects to the uncomfortable exaggeration, the overwroughtness, the heaviness of a story in which absolutely no relief is offered to the worn-out tenses of the situations, one must remember that of such character is all evangelical religious fervor. And this play is frankly evangelical. Its purpose is to convert unbelievers to belief in God. Its method of doing this will be noted from the accompanying synopsis.

None of the scenes are “religious” in the customary sense. There is no suggestion of the church except at the beginning and the end. The scenes in the Tuilleries restaurant are even questionable as a bit too realistic of the earthly. Censors can be expected to delete a little here. The story could have been told in much shorter footage.

On the whole this should be reported as a well handled production, well cast and clearly entitled to recognition as having a genuine box-office appeal. The critical audience at the Rialto theatre premises applauded heartily at its close.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Rev. John Ferrier and his son, Stephen (Milton Rosmer and Charles Rock) conduct a city mission next door to which comes Professor Gedge, later Gore (Edward Nolan). With the aid of his satellite (Kenelm Foss), the atheist establishes a rival attraction, and here for a time the Ferriers’ charges are drawn. The first realization the superficial followers of Gedge receive of the wisdom of not forgetting the after life and its meaning comes with the sudden death of a fellow workman, who is comforted by Rev. Ferrier in his dying terror of the unknown.

Shortly afterward the Ferriers visit Gedge and an explosion occurs in his laboratory. The Doctor pronounces Stephen dead and Gedge resuscitates him. But alas! it is a different man—a man without a soul, who glows in brutality and crime. After he has pursued his wonted way until society as one man rejects him, he calls on heaven for help and his soul is restored—then Gedge and Stephen awake. Both have been dreaming. But the dream is so terrible it has convinced Gedge of his error, and he accepts God.

“The Woman in White”

Thanbouser-Pathé—Five Reels

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

“THE Woman in White," adapted from Wilkie Collins’ novel by Lloyd Lonergan, is a highly intense melodrama with a strong note of mystery. It has been exceedingly well presented by Ernest C. Warde, who in the directing has striven for and attained some light effects that enhance the power of the action to a remarkable degree. In fact, after careful considerations of the contents of “The Woman in White," one must of a necessity come to the conclusion that it is a remarkable melodramatic mystery; one that will as assuredly entertain the readers of the original novel as it will the one who care little about the source from which a picture is derived.

The story strikes off at a rapid gait at the very outset when the plotting confederates, Glyde and Fosco, are introduced. From the opening reel until a point very near the finale they have things so much their own way that one actually fears for the intimate safety of Laura and her sister. When at last the almost forgotten Hartridge again appears on the horizon the situation brightens, and it is through his investigations and activities that the villains are put to rout. But it is a long and exciting road to the denouement, along which the spectator travels in a high state of tension.

Florence LaBadie, in the dual role of Laura and Ann, creates two widely different characters, and gives a thorough performance in her every scene on the screen. The supporting cast is well selected. The slight comedy element that enters is practically all in the hands of J. H. Gilmore, who does a good piece of character work.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Laura Fairlie (Florence LaBadie), because of her father's dying request, marries Sir Percival Glyde (Richard R. Neil), despite her better judgment, her love for Hartridge (Wayne Arey) and the constant warnings of Ann (Florence LaBadie), a half-witted girl. After the marriage it develops that Glyde and his confederate, Fosco (Arthur Bower), scheme to put Laura out of the way in order to obtain possession of her fortune. The body of Ann, whose death is caused by Fosco, is substituted for Laura during one night, while she is carried off to an insane asylum. It is only through the redoubled efforts of Marian (Gertrude Dallas), Laura's sister, Hartridge, and a man who is able to prove that Glyde and Fosco are criminals that virtue finally triumphs.

“A Bit o’ Heaven”

(Frieder Film Corp.—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM J. MCGRATH

A FEAST awaits the picture-going public, man, woman and child, in this production by the Frieder Film Corporation adapted from Kate Douglas Wiggins' perennially popular Christmas tale, "The Bird's Christmas Carol." Renamed in its film version, but one even more suitable and applicable than the original popular title, its picturization reveals something above the ordinary, a refreshing human story brought to life and bound to become as much of a classic of the screen as the printed story has become in literature.

Well accomplished, after long and tedious effort by the producers, it becomes on the screen a story that is all that Kate Douglas Wiggins designed it to be, a simple, plain little tale of two stratas of life that vigorously twangs the extremes of human emotions—paths and humor. It is a justly cast, the like of it never gathered together before, interpret the high lights, leaving nothing to be desired; the strength of the direction back of it all is manifested by the result of the whole and not one iota of detail, so necessary in a picture of its sort, has been overlooked.

Of plot there is hardly any. It merely mirrors the joy, pride, honor and reward that comes from the charity and unselfishness of a criminal little child of worthy parentage. She is Carol Bird, a part surprisingly well taken by Mary Louise, a charming little six-year-old lass who takes her place in the rank of child stars as the result of this picture. The “eight raggledy Ruggleses," a tattered, mischievous, romping brood who thrive in the alley back of Carol's home, are her problem. Cared for by a poor, distracted but withal proud widowed mother, the big event of their lives comes with the invitation to Christmas dinner and presents at the Bird's mansion.

Here is where the artistry of the picture asserts itself, where detail looms up as big as a mountain. The greater portion of the picture shows the preparation for the big event in the lowly, bawdy old home of the Ruggleses; the poor overwhelmed but proud mother making ready an obstreperous animal spirited bunch of boys and girls.

Then there is a score and more details and delineations from life that there is not space enough to enumerate, but all of them are bound to be caught and appreciated by those to whom they are akin.

“A Bit o’ Heaven" is something new and refreshing, a new defense of motion pictures and, as a looking proposition, worth fighting for.

“The Price of Pride”

(White Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE phrase, “Quantity not Quality," seems to have been coined specially for “The Price of Pride," a melodrama of superlative action and rather impossible characters and situations. There is a twenty-year gap in the action, coming just about in the middle of the third reel, so dividing the picture into two parts and imposing the long, outdoor style. This lets the audience take their melodrama in heaping spoonfuls and care little regarding proper seasoning or less about supersaturating themselves with the fare will probably derive some entertainment from the picture, but a connoisseur or a picture fan which are more or less one or the same thing will likely find many artificialities in it.

Milton Holmes, the author, has dealt with a number of fantastic situations, some of which rob one's sensibilities the wrong way. It is rather a repelling sight to see William leer at his mother, not knowing her real identity. It is rather hard to work up any sympathy for that mother when she does such foolish and altogether unsympathetic things. The five reels are full of minor inconsistencies, too formidable when taken collectively to enumerate, but which seem to stand out in an uncommonly prominent light.

There is a large cast in which is featured Carlyle Blackwell in a dual role, but he doesn't make either one of his appearances until the third reel after the action has passed over the twenty years. The rest of the players perform well, but that set which appears in the first half of the picture has aged not enough to denote such an extensive passage of time when again it enters the action.

Harley Knowles directed, but has been given little opportunity to show his worth owing to the character of the story.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Nan (June Elvidge), her love for Black (Frank Mills) getting the better of her judgment causes a break between him and his wife, Madge (Pinna Nesbit). Black leaves for the West, and Nan follows him. Wanting to accept what seems to be the inevitable, Black allows Nan to make a home for him. A child, William, is born to them, bearing a remarkable resemblance to David, Black's son by Madge.

Twenty years later, David (Carlyle Blackwell) goes West on a job. In the same town is William (Carlyle Blackwell), a worthless young fellow, who wastes his time in the gambling hall run by Nan and her husband (George MacQuarrie), for whom she deserted Black. David's fiancée (Evelyn Grealley) comes West to join him, and, nearing the town, the train is held up by William, whom she believes to be David. David is arrested for the deed. William coming to bid Nan good-bye is shot and mortally wounded by her husband. Before dying he confesses to the crime and exonerates David.

“The Neglected Wife” (Balboa-Pathé—Ninth Episode) REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

DEEPENING DEGRADATION,” the ninth episode of the serial, unfolds further complications that are bound to make the succeeding numbers even better than those which have gone before. Mrs. Kennedy discovers for a certainty that her husband has an affair with Marga Waring and although possessing this knowledge she resolves to remain with him and fight her own battle. Kennedy and Norwood become even more antagonistic toward one another, although the latter still holds his tongue as to betray his enemy would be to betray Margaret whom he loves.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Doyle (Neil Hardin), angered at the failure of his many attempts to work serious harm on Kennedy (Roland Bottomley) and Margaret (Ruth Roland) lures the latter away from her rooms by delivering a note to the effect that Kennedy is in great danger. Margaret hastens to comply with the directions and stopping out of the house is told to enter a taxi where sits the veiled woman.

“A Son of the Hills” (Vitagraph—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

THIS picture will not pass the test of creating warm-blooded heart interest. The characters are stone cold. Mr. Moreno appears as the most thoughtless person we have ever seen pictured as a hero. The director seems to forget his hero has to be human all the way through and not just in spots when the big sympathy is due.

So we see the hero abused, to the point that he leaves home—last reluctantly. He leaves a sweetheart, an equally abused and unfortunate father, a woman friend who told him to go and make a man of himself, and a faithful dog. He is gone five years. Five years of happiness and prosperity. And then he returns to the home town to build a factory to uplift all the home folk. And the factory is already partly built, and none of the loved ones know he is back. His own father, who never comes to the job seeking work, discovers his son to be the boss. And we do not wonder his sweetheart marries another, even after the hero's return.

This picture is clearly below Vitagraph standard. Even the star does not save it.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Sandy Morley (Antonio Moreno), seventeen, with his father, Martin Morley (Robert Gaillard), finds home life unbearable, besides feeling a sympathy for the poor people in his Southern home town—mill folk who toil from dawn till dark. He saves and dreams of a college education, and when his step-mother leaves on them more than the usual abuse, Sandy leaves for the North. Cynthia Starr (Irene Bruce) kisses him good-bye.

He does not get far along the road, before he is stricken with typhoid fever, and is cared for by John Markham, a Northern capitalist, who takes a liking to Sandy and puts him through college. Meanwhile Markham's own nephew, Lancing Harford, refuses Markham's offer to train him for a year in the mill and then send him through college. Lancing, however, goes to college and he and Sandy graduate together. Sandy goes to the home town and starts the erection of a mill. Lancing, accidentally, in the neighborhood, takes Cynthia for a drive, and caught over night in a storm, he persuades her to marry him. Sandy learns of the marriage and shows his deep love in his demeanor. Cynthia then sees her mistake. Lancing has lived illegally with another woman, meantime, who brings the baby to Cynthia. Cynthia persuades Lancing to acknowledge the baby and goes back to Sandy. By what moral or legal right is not divulged.

“A Kentucky Cinderella” (Bluebird—Five Reels) REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

F. HOPKINSON SMITH'S story has been very satisfactorily "translated" into picture language by Rupert Julian, who also stars as "Tuolumne John" in the cast. We cannot imagine a "Southern" play that would not have some exaggerations of the spirit of the land of hospitality, and we believe it will be hard for a Southern audience to reconcile some of the harsh treatment of Nannie with that which excellent authorship. But, on the whole, this play is pleasing and the kind almost any class of audience will enjoy.

Harry Carter as Windfield Gordon (Kentuck), and later his brother Henry does his "bit" thoroughly and well. Rupert Julian as Tuolumne presents that odd Western character to us with fidelity. Lucretia Harris is as "Aunt Chlorindy" has a leading role, with little Zoe Rae as "Zoe" added in for good measure as part of the Southern atmosphere. The other roles are very satisfactorily played.

The mounting of this picture is unusually fine, the old mansion and outdoor scenes all speaking a beauty which places it in the first rank in this respect.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

John Silverwood, known as "Tuolumne John" (Rupert Julian), and "Kentuck" Windfield Gordon (Harry Carter), with Gordon's daughter, Nannie (Ruth Clifford), are partners in a placer mine in California. The long brothers (Eddie Polo and Frank Lanning) try to jump the claim, and Kentuck is murdered by one of them. Nannie is sent back home to her "folks" by Tuolumne. Back in Kentucky Uncle Henry Gordon (Mr. Carter) is a member of the Legislature, and when it is discovered that he is shamedfly treated by Mrs. Gordon (Aurora Pratt), who is Gordon's wife by second marriage, and has her own daughter, Rachel (Myrtle Reeves), to give preference to. Aunt Chlorindy (Lucretia Harris), the old colored mammy, who helped bring up Nannie, protects her, and finally when she is driven out of the house by Mrs. Gordon, Aunty finds her a refuge with Mrs. Morgan (Gretchen Lederer), a rich widow living nearby.

Mrs. Gordon's indignation had known no bounds when Nannie's charm stole from her own daughter the love of Tom Boling (Emory Johnson).

The conclusion is, of course, the marriage of Nannie and Tom, and a counter love affair between Tuolumne and the widow—for Tuolumne returns just in time to give Nannie an elaborate trousseau for the big event. Incidentally Tuolumne has stuck "pay dirt."
eccentric character of Howie, while True Boardman in his now thoroughly familiar role of Stingaree continues as the center of action.

“Arrayed with the Enemy” is quite the better of the episodes shown last week. In this picture Stingaree and Howie unite forces with the New South Wales Mounted Police and go in search of a homesteader, captured by bandits and held for ransom. It is through the nerve and daring of the bushranger that the lives of the sergeant of the police and the captive man are saved. There is a fine vein of suspense in this number, owing to the fact that the police, though in pursuit of the mountain bandits, are ever in readiness to turn about and capture their bushranger allies. Plenty of good riding, which approaches the stunt stuff, and a perilous climb undertaken by Stingaree, supply the film with a goodly number of thrills.

While “The Tracking of Stingaree” boasts of a sensational stunt when Stingaree, standing on the back of his galloping horse, swings off into a branch of a tree, the picture itself does not possess a tempo rapid enough to make it all-satisfying. In the first reel there is a good bit of story-telling by the principal characters which, though it is necessary to lay a solid foundation for the subsequent action breaks up the interest considerably. However, Howie has a part containing an abundance of comedy business which the player puts over to fairly good effect. He might have done even better had the director played him up to greater prominence. The story, in brief, concerns the manner in which Stingaree saves a girl from eloping with a worthless man, whom he had met back in England.

“Whither Thou Goest”

Klotz and Streiner—Five Reels

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

ATTACHING names to stories that don’t match is not unusual nowadays, so we will content ourselves with saying this is a good picture in spite of the need of a “key” to explain its title.

It is just an everyday film story of true love and a still firmer cementing of this love after a happy marriage because the “family” thought it a misalliance and tried to interfere.

Orrin Johnson as Don Van Wye and Tom Chatterton as his brother Tom are both good leads. Rhea Mitchell is the girl, a dancer who made of her profession a means to an honest livelihood. Her work is splendid.

The story and the explanation of the title will be gathered from the synopsis below. This is a better than average picture, well produced, and acceptable to any audience anywhere.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Donald Van Wye (Orrin Johnson) is seized with a fainting spell during a polo game and is given six months to live—he must go at once to Arizona. His brother Tom (Tom Chatterton), a wild-oats-sowing college youth is wired to come home to take Donald’s place at home. Donald does not like Tom’s attitude and when their mother (Ida Lewis) discovers a bill of $1,200 for a trunklet on Tom’s dresser, Donald follows the clue and Tom takes him to see Maizie (Rhea Mitchell). Donald tries to bribe Maizie to give up Tom, and finds her true blue. Then he marries her himself and goes west. Love ripens and he regains his health. Then Don’s mother comes west and tells Maizie she is keeping Don from bigger things at home. Maizie starts across the desert alone, and when Don returns he learns of his mother’s dreadful deed. However, a faithful Indian scout shows him Maizie’s trail, and lifting her tenderly from the sand, he says: “Whither Thou Goest, I will go, thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God—the Lord do so as to me and more also if aught but death part thee and me.”

“At First Sight”

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

GEORGE MIDDLETON has given us a screen story of intelligent humor, which Miss Murray fits ideally, in this newest Famous Players production. It is full of “pep,” with a generous sprinkling of heart interest, and is one of those themes that carries you along, wondering what is going to happen next, to the very last foot of film.

The real climax is at the end of the fourth reel, and it seems a pity to have lost the punch and hunger for more which stopping at that point would make, but there are several surprises after this which the picture would suffer seriously in losing.

The story at first does not impress you as being overburdened with plot, but somehow it is carried along at a lively pace until the interest does get acute, and it is certain any audience will enjoy the keen wit of several of the situations, and the rapid development of the events preceding the abduction of the girl.

While there is a comedy vein, there is also a decided theme of romance, so that we would call this serious drama, with much comedy relief. It is better than average program production.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Justine Gibbs (Mae Murray), whose middle name is “romance,” is about to marry Ralph Gaylor, whose polished manner has won her her consent to a marriage that to him means only the acquisition of a much needed fortune. Justine’s favorite novelist is Hartley Poole (Sam T. Hardy). She often thinks how fine it would be if Ralph were a bit more “romantic,” like Hartley’s heroes.

What is her surprise, a few days before marriage, when there drops off at her station Hartley Poole himself—as the name on his suitcase shows. Justine loses no time in getting acquainted with her author-hero, and the result is a gradually ripening love, which the author all the while mistakes for interest only in her as his heroine for his newest story. Finally, however, he realizes that she will make a fine heroine to own permanently as his wife—his action being forced by the arrival of the local constable, who accuses him of abducting Justine, who has fled to his protection to escape the threats of the scheming Gaylor.

“A Dog Catcher’s Love”

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

NEW sensational-comic devices and the performance of Teddy, a remarkably clever dog, make “A Dog Catcher’s Love” a decided success from the Keystone viewpoint.

Slim Summerville, riding about the ocean on a speeding torpedo which eventually beeches him, the spectacle of Glen Cavender running along in a huge rolling barrel, the blowing up of a miniature passenger vessel (done extremely well), and a number of scenes taken aboard a battleship, to say nothing of a fire scene that would do more than justice to a melodrama, are welded together to form a picture of the most harmonious sort.

To doubt, though, the work of the dog will be remembered even ahead of the fine comedy performance given by Summerville and the many thrills. Edward Cline directed. The cast includes Peggy Pearce, Hal Cooley, Jack Henderson and Harry Breen, besides those already mentioned.

“A Strange Transgressor”

(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

AS a vehicle for Louise Glaum, “A Strange Transgressor” offers her many big scenes which she carries off with a sincerity and firmness of purpose more convincing than in her other later pictures. Her role of Lola gives her ample opportunity to play the alluring vampire while the undercurrent of mother love which ultimately dominates her character provides an equal number of chances for her to portray an inward clash of contrasting purposes. The gown she appears in were never more striking.

“A Strange Transgressor” is melodrama and when considered on its basic lines turns out to be of conventional yet powerful material. John Lynch, the author, has, however, aided and abetted the plot by several new twists. There are times when his secondary characters count effectively as supporting characters, and other times when it comes as rather impossible to eschew comfortably. But there is action aplenty and for the fan who wants Miss Glaum and glories in her extraordinary personality the picture is quite correct and suitable fare.

Reginald Barker directed from the continuity supplied by J. G. Hawks and has turned out a picture complete in every directorial department. The support is well selected, particularly with the case of Colin Chase, who as Irwin Hampton plays a difficult juvenile role in realistic style. The subtitles might have been better if there had been less reference to character names in them.

Lola Montrose (Louise Glaum) accepts the wealth, if not the name, of John Hampton (J. Barney Sherry), a prominent surgeon, in order to bring up her young son, David (May Giraci). Her one desire is that Hampton marry her and when he announces his intention of making Paula Chester (Dorcas Matthews) his wife, she determines to become avenged. Irwin Hampton (Colin Chase), John's son, becomes enraptured with her and one night, while under the influence of liquor, agrees to marry her. The minister refuses to perform the ceremony. When sober, Irwin, believing Lola his wife, takes her to his father. He denounced her. A call is received from David's school that he has fallen and badly injured his skull. Urged by Paula, Hampton operates and saves him. Finally Lola's realization of parental love causes her to relinquish her hold on Irwin.

Cupid's Rival

(King Bee—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE D. GOULD

A COMEDY which in luxurious settings fully bears out the appellation "de luxe" bestowed by the producers, but fails somewhat short in entertainment through the too continued slap-stick situations provided by the author for the Chaplinesque Billy West.

The entire first reel is devoted to fun making in a studio apartment house, of rather explanatory nature. Were it not for continued cut-backs the action might have been as fast in the last part as in the first, concluding with

The troubles of an impoverished artist through what he possesses is falseness on the part of his sweetheart, the comic tortures inflicted on a fashionable paint dauber, and a general hard time for a bevy of really pretty "artist's models" forms the plot structure of the story. Throughout all runs Billy West, as part of the Luxe Apartments, and the continually inhabited apartment-house owner.

A really amusing scene occurs when West, using a vacuum sweeper, unconsciously partially disrobes a "model" from her white wrappings. This and other live situations in the second reel makes the comedy worth while.

Ethel White, the sweetheart of the poor artist, does her share toward the fun making. Ethelyn Gibson, as the shapely model, did what little she had to do well. Florence McLaughlin, Lee White, Babe Hardy and Bud Ross all filled their parts acceptably.

The Forbidden Path

(Lucky-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

Sessue Hayakawa, Vivian Martin and Carmen Phillips are a strong trio in a powerfully dramatic story that has as its climax the well-known Japanese personal loyalty even to the sacrifice of life itself—in this case for his love of an American girl whom he cannot honorably seek in marriage because of his race.

We have not in many months seen a more impressive ending to a picture than Mr. Hayakawa and Miss Phillips present in the slowly sinking motor-boat—the one giving his life as the greatest possible sacrifice, the other compelled to die as a just punishment for her persecution of the man she had inveigled into a regrettable marriage with her.

Other well-known favorites, including Tom Forman as the lover, Paul Weigel and James Neill in supporting roles, make this one of the strongest recent Paramount releases, and Paramount exhibitors can safely bank on this as an unusual picture and one their audiences will enjoy immensely.

The picture was produced under the direction of Robert Thornby, who should be credited with having achieved a masterpiece.

The Story and Players

Sato (Sessue Hayakawa) is the right-hand man of James Thornton, San Francisco importer, who, as a reward for his faithfulness, makes him a full partner. Shortly afterward, Thornton dies, leaving his daughter Mildred (Vivian Martin) under Sato's care. Harry Maxwell (Tom Forman), who was raised with Mildred, does not think of her as a grown woman, although she loves him dearly. He leaves for Mexico, as ambassador, and there becomes entangled with a notorious woman, whom he believes to be a good woman, and marries her, only to learn a moment later of her folly. He, of course, refuses to live with Benita (Carmen Phillips), who in consequence plans revenge. Returning home, disheartened, he discovers he really loves Mildred. Sato also dearly loves Mildred, but cannot, of course, honorably consider such a possibility as marrying an American girl. When he learns how dearly Mildred loves Maxwell, and later the Mexican woman comes to seek her revenge on Maxwell and the girl who has supplanted her, Sato solves the situation for all concerned by taking Benita out in a motor boat, which he settles in midocean, drowning them both.

The Ghost of Old Morro

(Edison-K. E. S. E.—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

RAISE of "The Ghost of Old Morro" must become faint if not to an abrupt ending after justice has been done to the scenes and photography. Laid in the picturesque island of Cuba in the vicinity of old Morro Castle, the picture boasts of some of the most attractive scenes ever snapped by the motion picture photographer. The photography is excellent, although when shown for review the tinting had not been finished.

As from James Oppenheim's story, it is essentially a tragedy and might have fared to better advantage had a number of its twists been more soundly motivated. In the latter reel when Amado allows Captain Jose to escape his trap, one has just cause to wonder why. In the opening reels there is such a superfluous amount of plotting and counterplotting undertaken by all the characters that the spectator is rather confused in the maze of cross purposes that result. Furthermore, "The Ghost of Old Morro" fails to reveal a hero, virtue goes down to defeat, and there is not a character that comes out of the story as free from crime when he wins.

The acting of the cast attains a fair average and Richard Ridgley's direction is most artistic. Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Connors, a pair of leads from the old Edison days, are featured.

The Story and Players

Old Mother Morro (Helen Strickland) earns her livelihood from contributions furnished by a band of smugglers headed by Pastio (Herbert Prior). Captain Jose (Robert Connors) allows the smugglers to operate because Mother Morro aids him in his various underworld affairs. When the women of the island have a meeting and Jose is asked to come, she makes a time when Jose's eyes fall on Mercedes (Mabel Trunnelle), Mother Morro's daughter, the only being she loves. A fate like those meted out to Jose's other victims befalls her. In revenge Mother Morro arranges for Amadio (Bigelow Cooper) to kill him. Mercedes attempts to save him and Amadio decides that he'll kill her instead. He places her body in a bag and together with Mother Morro throws it from the cliff. Afterwards she discovers the substitution. Jose approaches and Mother Morro, grappling with him, causes both to fall to their deaths.

The Land of the Rising Sun

(America-Japan Pictures Co.—First Four Chapters, One Reel Each)

JUST how different Japan is from the rest of the world is interestingly shown in "The Land of the Rising Sun." The first four of ten thousand-foot chapters reached a hundred per cent. entertainment value for almost any audience, because of our present keen interest in the little yellow men, and because they are not merely views of strange people sitting around doing nothing, or doing things we don't ourselves understand. The first reel, under the title "First Impressions," shows us Yokohama, the jinrikshas, fine buildings and street scenes, including one street of stone steps a quarter of a mile "long" or "up," as you choose to express it. Street sprinkling from small hand-drawn carts, filled by hand with a bucket, gives the first impression of the cheap labor of this country. Great titles of humanity are seen in Tokyo, with beautiful Japanese gardens and a scene entitled "Battle of the Fireflies," which will make the spectator wonder whether it is real or "fake."

Under the title "A Night in a Japanese Inn," most extraordinary experiences of the traveler in the hotels of the country are shown. Girl servants are everywhere, even to tucking the guest into bed. The third chapter, "Odd Fishing Methods," shows a Japanese fishing village and some of the finest seascapes ever pictured. Quant, curious, every foot is filled with a new revelation of something worth seeing. Fishing with corromants is one of the subjects, the latest half-swallowing the fish and then being thrown ashore. The fourth reel, or chapter, "Jap Kiddies," is a subject sure to prove popular. From the time they are strapped on the nurse-girls' backs until they are shown to their schools and other activities the children of this country of little people are unusually bright and worth seeing in their native doings.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR BUSY EXHIBITORS

Mutual

"A Fight for a Franchise." (Mutual. Episode of "The Railroad Raiders" series. Two reels. Men, June 25.)—Many startling and spectacular tricks are rendered on the lid of the box. The audience seems to be fascinated by the picture. A gripping and exciting story is told.

"Reel Life, No. 60." (Gaumont. One reel. Top. Thurs., June 28.)—The major part of "Reel Life, No. 60," is devoted to the art of hosiery knitting by machinery, every detail being faithfully and distinctly depicted by the camera. The pictures are of interest to those engaged in the line of work. The study then follows pictures of parks, including the auto trains, which make no tracks upon the scoped out, beaded streets, the water sliding down the trolley tracks in the park. The entire composition of the picture is a hit. The theory of the film is a little too much for the time being. There are many fine sequences of photographic material, and the different angles of the subjects are worked out to a nicety.

This is an episode that will catch the general public unless the censors get busy and eliminate the pocket picking incident.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 129." (Gaumont. One reel. Top. Wed., June 20.)—This reel opens with a view of a girl's pool vacant contest, at Coney Island, Conn. Showing off the contestants covering 3 ft. 4 in. height, followed by official pictures showing the art of German knitting and the German fashions of France, showing war scenes "somewhere in France," and also includes pictures of German prisoners in war. Then back to Colorado where the final tribute to the late Colonel Wm. F. Cody are pictured. This interesting reel concludes with a French conception of the German Spy, Poudre, practised in the 13th, in animated cartoon form.

"Mutual Tours Around the World No. 33." (Gaumont. Top. June 21.)—Nantes, a port of Western France is the introduction for the week. We see the river Loire and the city of Nantes. The view from the river is delightful. In the next reel the visitor to Pozzolli, a town of Italy, where the temple of Serapis, the Roman baths and the ancient temple of the goddess of love are seen. A superb maritime scene is given full scope. It concludes with a view of the village of Avignon in a Russian village in which the full resources of the picture camera and the talents of the directors are taxed to the limit in clearing away the snow.

Paramount Will Issue Serial in 15 Episodes

National Campaign of Advertising and Publicity to Be Inaugurated for the Picture as Part of Promotion Work

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by Paramount Pictures Corporation that they will issue a serial of thirty parts, fifteen episodes, in September.

This is the first serial that this organization, or any of the producing companies making Paramount Pictures, has ever issued since their inception, four years ago.

The picture is said to be a wonderful serial. Paramount says the cast contains the largest number of high-priced stars that have ever been brought together in a single series of pictures, playing in a production the story of which is said to be thrilling in its every detail.

Paramount will issue their first serial to all exhibitors, and special departments will be established in each of the Paramount exchanges for the handling of this new product.

An advertising and publicity campaign for the serial picture will be inaugurated in the very near future. Prior to the time the picture is shown in any theatre in the country it is expected every person in every city and town will know of this production.

It is not to be doubted that its qualifications will create interest. Aids and accessories of all sorts and descriptions are being planned for the production to help every exhibitor showing the picture to make big money.

Further announcement of the production has been promised by Paramount in the very near future.

Pathe Features to Be Written by Will M. Ritchey

Will M. Ritchey, who photodramatized Mabel Herbert Ureer's "The Journal of a Neglected Wife" and "The Woman Alone," to make Pathe's serial, "The Neglected Wife," in which Ruth Roland is starring, is now at work in the Astra Studio on features and serials for Pathe.

Mr. Ritchey has had a long experience in the newspaper and motion picture business. His first connection with the industry was as scenario editor of Lubin in the Western branch. After a year there he spent several months in free lance work, and joined the Balboa staff in 1914.

"Woman and the Beast" Sold for Many States

Graphic Features announces the closing of the following territories on "The Woman and the Beast" during the past week:

Texas, Oklahoma and Arkansas, to Southwestern Art Dramas, Dallas, Texas; California, Nevada and Arizona, to Peerless Picture Film Company, with offices in Los Angeles and San Francisco; Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, to the Hudson Feature Film Company, Pittsburgh, Penn.; Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia and Virginia, to the Philadelphia Ideal Film Exchange, of Philadelphia.

Sales Manager W. Ray Johnston says: "This leaves very little territory unsold. In fact, we have closed about everything now, or are awaiting the final signed contracts, and I think we can give a buyers' list that will show every district in the country distributing 'The Woman and the Beast.' This achievement would not make it appear that there is a summer-time lull in the state rights business.

Credit for Latest Pickford to Jeanie Macpherson

A wire from Cecil B. DeMille, received at the headquarters of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, gives sole credit for the story of Mary Pickford's new patriotic photoplay, "The Little American," to Jeanie Macpherson. Although the general impression has been that Mr. De Mille was co-author of this scenario, the director announces that Miss Macpherson was entirely responsible for the greatest patriotic story ever written for the screen.

Miss Macpherson has written the original scenarios for many screen successes, including "Joan the Woman."

Hugh Ford Selects Cast for George M. Cohan Film

The cast for the new George M. Cohan Arctraft picture, "Seven Keys to Baldpate," adapted from the Broadway hit and now being produced, has been selected by Hugh Ford.

Anna Nilsson will be opposite the author-producer. Her work will be recalled in "Shenandoah," "Regeneration" and "Who's Guilty." Mrs. DeWolf Hopper, popularly known as Elda Purry, has the role of Myra Thornhill. Corene Uzzell will be Mrs. Norton. She was in "On Trial."

Others in the cast are Joe Smiley, Russell Bassett, G. Warren Cook, Armand Cortes, Carlton Macy, Eric Hudson, Paul Everton, Frank Lovee and Farnell Pratt. Dan Pennell assists in the staging.

Smiley and Bassett were both in Mr. Cohan's first Arctraft picture, "Broadway Jones."

"The Barrier" Still Draws Big Crowds

Continued successful showings of "The Barrier," the Rex Beach picture of frontier life in Alaska, are reported to the offices of the Lewis J. Selznick Enterprises, by its exchange managers throughout the country, and exhibitors handling the subject.

Sol J. Berman, manager of the New York Exchange, upon his recent trip through the Middle West and eastern Texas received gratifying reports from numerous exhibitors. At the Twelfth Street theatre, Kansas City, "The Barrier" was booked for one week for its first run in that city and drew such business that it was held for a second week. Herman E. Field, manager of the Colonial theatre, Chicago, says, "'The Barrier' drew such good business that we held it over for a third week at the Colonial. It is a great picture."

Similar reports have been received from the Pacific Coast, the Northwest and the Southeast where "The Barrier" has been playing the big houses to capacity business.

Establish as Scenario Firm

John B. Clymer and Harry O. Hoyt, known as writers for the screen, have leased the building at 125 West Fortieth street, New York City. Reinforced by assistants and stenographers, this organization will specialize on the writing of big feature stories, working scripts and titling of pictures.

Both men have seen service as editors and staff writers with various big producing companies.

With a limited number of accounts, the organization will contract for a general service, after the example of the successful organizations in other lines of business.
“Queen of Spades” Nearly Ready

The Russian feature, “The Queen of Spades,” which will probably be the first release of the Russian Art Film Company, is now being completed and will probably be ready for a private showing to the trade in the very near future.

The production has been adapted from the book by Alexander Pushkin, the Seventeenth Century poet of the Russian people, and was produced by the Ermoliev Studios of Moscow, under the personal supervision of Jalev Alexandrovitch Protopanoff, one of the foremost directors in the new republic.

It is in six parts, and the story is portrayed by a special cast of players from the Imperial theatre of Moscow, the national institution of Russia. The picture was titled by Shepard and Van Loan, who are preparing most of the productions for the Russian Art Film Company, and something very interesting in the line of art titles has been prepared which will no doubt create interest.

Included in the cast are I. I. Mosjukhin, the leading dramatic actor of Russia, who does some excellent work as the Russian cavalry officer in this picture; Mlle. E. P. Shebueva, who appears in the role of Countess Anna Fedotovna; Mlle. V. G. Orlova, who takes the part of Liraveta Ivanovna; N. V. Panoff, who portrays the role of Count St. Germain, and Mme. T. I. Duvan, who appears as Countess Anna Fedotovna (in youth).

In addition to “The Queen of Spades,” the Russian Art Film Company have now ready for exhibition, when they start their big campaign in a few weeks, “The Dagger Woman,” “The Beautiful Witch,” by L. Andrieff and A. M. Pasuchin, and “The Deluge,” by Siemkiewicz.

Elaborate Sets in Selig Version of “Caleb Conover”

It is announced by William N. Selig that feature films taken from “Caleb Conover, Railroader,” will soon be ready for presentation. The source of this play is Alfred Payson Terhune’s novel.

Gilson Willets wrote the film version. George Fawcett, Thomas Santschi, Fritzi Brunette, Frank Elliott, William Robert Daly and Goldie Caldwell are in the cast. The Selig company states the interior sets are the most magnificent seen on the screen this year. In some of the scenes are hundreds of people.

In its photodramatization the famous old play, “The Peddler,” will be found to be unchanged. Frederic Chapin, the adapter for the U. S. Amusement Corporation-Art Dramas, retains the characters and events that caused it to hold the boards for a generation.

Hal Reid’s play deals with the lower orders of society and was frowned upon by old time critics for this reason. Today its true merit is appreciated.

Joe Welch takes the part of the poor old peddler, Abraham Jacobs. The picture will probably be six reels.

“Christus” Founded on Biggest “Best Seller” Among all Books

As one goes down the line of “best sellers” among publications, he finds that every one of them has made a successful photoplay. In most cases they have been successful in pictures in proportion to their popularity in book and serial form.

This bit of psychology was largely instrumental in the acquisition by Historic Features, Inc., of “Christus,” the Cines photo-spectacle of the life of Christ. One of the directors of the company, which was formed for the exploitation of pictures of artistic and educational value, happened to be in Rome last Fall, shortly after the run of “Christus” began in that city. Not only was his attention attracted by the size of the audiences but also by the fact that here was an elaborately-made picturization of the book which must rank as the “best seller” of all time—the Bible.

Figuring that the volume with the largest circulation of any ever published must have a tremendous screen value, he sought the American rights for Historic Features and was successful in obtaining them. That his judgment was correct has been proven by the popularity of the picture in New York City and the state rights offers now in hand.

Pa and Son Meet at Parsonage in Selig Play

“Trials and Tribulations,” a Selig-Polyscope Company release through General Film, deals with the undying theme, a stern father’s efforts to mar his daughter to the man she does not love. But in this case the comedy element is introduced. The father himself is courting and the couples meet at the parsonage. Al Green directs the two-reeler. George Fawcett and Vivian Reed are being featured.

A second release is “Through the Eyes of the World.” This is described as a tense drama. Guy Oliver and Stella Razeto have the leading roles.
Twenty O. Henry Films—Ten More Coming

Harold Bolster, General Film, Says as Short Length Motion Pictures They Have Established a New Standard in Screen Entertainment

TEN of the first series of two-reel O. Henry stories has been distributed and the series is to be increased from sixteen to twenty. A second series of ten has been begun, so exhibitors will have four available before the first series have been shown. Titles in the new series include "No Story," "The Love Philtre of Ikey Schoenstein," "A Departmental Case," "Strictly Business," "Specks of Garnered Fruit," "Discounters of Money," "The Best Seller" and "The Lonesome Road." Harold Bolster, of General Film, says: "If the second ten meets anything like the reception given the first ten this series will prove the most popular unit of twenty short length motion pictures ever issued in the history of the camera. They are acknowledged rivals of five-reel features, at the box office, before the reviewers and in public appreciation."

"When I say rivals I am not considering the score of instances that are reported which prove what seems to be overshadowing a feature in the exhibitor's advertisement, in the reviews and before the audience. These O. Henry pictures have done more to establish a new standard in screen entertainment than any short length pictures ever shown."

S. R. Kent, general sales manager, expresses himself as delighted with the reception of the pictures in big and little houses all over the country. In this city alone thirty-nine houses were booked for the pictures several weeks ago.

In the hundreds of houses that are showing the O. Henry pictures in all sections of the country are many of the biggest and best theatres. In California the list includes S. Rialto and Valencia, San Francisco, the Franklin in Oakland, the Strand in Fresno and thirty-two more in other parts of the state.

In Phoenix, Arizona, the Columbia theatre; in San Diego the Cabrillo; in Dallas, the Crystal and in San Antonio, the Wigwam are showing O. Henrys.

Finish "The Road Between" with Marian Swayne as Star

"The Road Between," the Erographic Art Drama starring Marian Swayne, was completed last week by Director Joseph Levering, and is now in the process of being cut.

During the past week a number of showings of "Hate" have been given in New York and the eastern territory. It was the aim of Mr. Bolling and Mr. Mooney to give the picture a run on Broadway for at least two weeks, but these plans were abandoned because of the interest shown by buyers who are anxious to secure this territory. Mr. Mohme has been in constant communication with New England buyers during the past week, and as a result he will leave for Boston on Saturday presumably for the purpose of closing negotiations for this territory. It is expected contracts have been closed between Fairmount Film Corporation and foreign buyers for the sale of the picture in Latin America.

Art Film Releases for Summer Are Nearing Completion

With productions completed over a month in advance of their release dates, and with others for summer issuance in hand, the four studios contributing to Art Dramas Program are keeping hard at work.

At the Apollo studio "When You and I Were Young" is practically completed, although it is not due for release until the middle of July. This week's work will be begun on the next Apollo, which has as a working title "Behind the Mask." This was written by Charles E. Dazey, author of "Manhattan Madness" and "Wolf Lowry" Triangle pictures. This last production is dated for release the last week of August.

Alma Hanlon, who is starred in all the Apollo photoplays, has been unable to secure the much needed vacation she had planned for, owing to the desire of the company to keep ahead of schedule.

Later in the summer, however, she intends to take a month off from her labors. At the Van Dyke studio 'Miss Deception,' from the story by Joseph Frankin Poland, is being put into shape by Eugene Nowland, who was recently engaged to direct Jean Sothern in this picture.

Two pictures are in work at the Erographic studio. These are "The Road Between," which is being made by Joseph Levering, with Marian Swayne in the leading role, and "The Millstone," from the story by Albert Payson Terhune, which Ben M. Goetz is directing. One of these is nearly finished, while the latter has just been started.

The U. S. Amusement studios are occupied principally with the production of "The Peddler," which Herbert Blache is directing, with Joe Welch in the title role.

Many Exhibitor Aids Planned for "Robespierre"

The Export and Import Film Company reports a ready response from exhibitors concerning its historical subject, "Robespierre," as the result of the layout of still pictures used in the announcement appearing in the News. Many exhibitors have written the company for information as to the publicity aids they may expect when showing the film. Ben Blumenthal has now in preparation a special booklet, which will contain necessary information for the proper exploitation of the picture by exhibitors, as well as facts for buyers handling the subject.

"Robespierre" is being worked out for road show purposes as well as metropolitan runs. Showing as it does the birth of democracy in France, the picture has the advantage of timeliness.

"The paper will include window cards, novelty dodgers and twenty-four sheets. But the big drive in this production will be the opportunity for advertising demonstrations. Closely linking the destiny of France with that of our own country, the film allows effective press work."

"Robespierre" is true in historical detail, and the original set, club and school work on it should be a big factor in the campaign," says an official of the company. "There are special features in it for advance work, which will be selected and indicated so that in no territory will an opportunity be overlooked."

The provisions of the Export and Import Company's auxiliary material provide also for the inside of the house and lobby. S. M. Berg is preparing a music score. Over two hundred special suggestions are made for the guidance of the exhibitors. A novelty in this connection is that the redecoration of the house, costuming of the ushers, setting of the screen and displays for lobbies of various sizes are exhaustively dwelt upon.

Several Big Contracts Given Shepard and Van Loan

Shepard and Van Loan, who recently opened offices in the Godfrey Building, New York, have been tendered a contract to do a large portion of the editing and titling of sixty-seven Russian features.

The first big deal put over by these well known young film men was the "Allenbaugh Process," which was announced in the trade papers last week. Many inquiries regarding this are reported to have been received by the Hedwig Laboratories who are handling the process.

The Russian films have just arrived in this country and the work of editing and titling them is a big one. The majority of the features are from such Russian authors as Tolstoy, Pushkin, Tergeniev and Andrioff.

H. H. Van Loan of the firm expressed the belief last week that his plan was going to give the industry a surprise when he showed the first Russian picture.

In addition to this big undertaking, Shepard and Van Loan have been engaged by the Wharton Brothers to prepare their latest production, "The Great White Trail," for the market.
“Hercules” Ready for State Rights

“The 13th Labor of Hercules,” which commemorates the Panama-Pacific Exposition, is now running at the Rialto theatre, New York City, for twelve weeks. The picture is composed of a series of twelve parts, each part a complete subject, and composed of various ceremonies and events of the world’s greatest exposition. The Cinema Distributing Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, Henry J. Brock, president; Leon Schlesinger, manager, is offering this historical subject for state rights. An entirely new policy has been inaugurated for the selling of this subject for territorial rights. An attractive line of advertising is available, which includes a ten-page two-colored herald of striking appearance.

Levey Closes Sale of Serial for Foreign Countries

Arthur Levey, exporter and foreign market expert, visited Chicago, recently, and incidentally closed the sale of the rights to the American Film Company’s serial, “Secret of the Submarine,” for the territory of Spain and the Kingdom of Portugal. Mr. Levey, it will be remembered, as vice-president and general manager of the Overseas Distributing Company, Inc., placed the distribution of the entire Mutual program, including serials and superfeatures, throughout the whole of Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, Fiji Islands, India, Straits Settlements, etc., etc. A fact, perhaps not generally known to the trade, is that it really was Mr. Levey who promoted and arranged the sale as a broker, of the rights to the entire series of Mutual Chaplin productions, for the territory of England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Africa, India, etc., etc., to Walker’s Chaplins, Ltd.

Mitchell Three Years Editor of Gaumont-Montreal Weekly

With the printing of the current issue of The Gaumont-Montreal Weekly, No. 130, Pell Mitchell completes his third year as editor of this news reel. Mr. Mitchell has come to be known as an authority upon news pictures, his ideas and advice being sought upon all points requiring a decision based upon technical knowledge and good news judgment. He is secretary of the committee collaborating with the Government in regard to news pictures of the war.

“Who’s Your Neighbor?” in Demand

The Master Drama Features, Inc., announces a number of inquiries from state rights purchasers after the private showing of “Who’s Your Neighbor?” shown last week before a specially invited audience at the Broadway theatre, New York City. Arrangements are under way for its presentation in a New York theatre, announcement of which will be made in the near future.

Cinema Issues Attractive Herald for “Hercules”

The Cinema Distributing Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, of which Henry J. Brock is president and Leon Schlesinger is manager, has issued an attractive herald, profusely illustrated by the new rubber offset process, as an exhibitor aid for its “Thirteenth Labor of Hercules.”

James Steele, Paramount, Opens Cleveland Exchange

James Steele, formerly treasurer of Paramount, has opened a new Paramount and Artcraft Exchange, third floor Standard Theatre Building, Cleveland, Ohio. E. T. Gerrish is sales manager and W. B. Rich, office manager.

The consolidation will be of benefit to the exhibitor who will book under the new Star Series Booking Plan to be inaugurated by Artcraft-Paramount on August 5.

Jap Film Still at Rialto

Continued success at the Rialto theatre has been the record of “The Land of the Rising Sun,” the ten-episode film in Japan, to be released serially in July, at the rate of one reel a week, by the Japan-America Pictures Corporation, 15 William street, New York City. Rialto patrons have been seeing these pictures at the rate of two episodes a day.

M. F. Tobias, President Superlative Pictures Corporation

From bookkeeper to president in twelve years, every step achieved by his own efforts, is the enviable record and one that Maurice F. Tobias, executive head of Superlative Pictures Corporation can well be proud of.

Mr. Tobias entered film business as a bookkeeper for the Greater New York and Empire Film Exchanges, then on Fourteenth street, in 1905. He was one of William Fox’s first associates when that gentleman made his advent in film business, and while with him originated a system of booking that is still in vogue. This system termed by Mr. Tobias the “lock system,” looked a complete show for a period of consecutive days, thereby eliminating any loss of time from one exhibitor to another, and avoiding any mistakes in the course of shipments.

Joining Paramount, Mr. Tobias traveled through New York state selling Paramount at unheard of prices to dubious exhibitors who afterward proved to be his best friends. As manager of Mutual New York Western Exchange Mr. Tobias proved his worth, when having taken over the office of that organization when it was in a state of chaos, he promptly righted matters, and when after four years he resigned, Mutual New York was the pet of the Mutual circuit of exchanges.

At the present writing Superlative Pictures Corporation, the mother organization of Irving Cummings Pictures, Inc., and Lois Meredith Pictures, Inc., feels that with Maurice F. Tobias as its head the success of the firm is assured.

Thanhouser Says “Ads” Don’t Stop Roasts

Edwin Thanhouser, president of the Thanhouser Film Corporation, in a recent letter, discusses trade press criticism in the motion picture field. He says:

“Advertising may carry weight, but I do not think so. We have had the experience of some trade papers praising a Thanhouser picture and others ‘roasting’ the same; the ‘roasting’ ones all carried our advertising, and none of the praising ones did!

“I do not think as conditions are today in the trade press field that one of them could ‘sell’ its criticisms. At least, I personally think they print honest—though maybe inaccurate, at times—opinions.

“But I never believe the trade press advertising pages. So much goodness doesn’t exist on earth as is claimed for the films represented.”

Mr. Thanhouser’s letter is in reply to rather tart, but quite usual, criticisms of the press fathered by Dr. Leonard Keene Hirshberg, of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, who writes:

“So-called favorite reviewers and press opinion are seldom sincere, honest, or unbiased. I’ve worked long enough on newspapers and magazines to know that unpleasant reviews, however accurate and honest, will usually not be published.

When We Designed the Simplex

we reasoned that outside gears were exposed to dust and dirt, and that the Operator was exposed to injury by the gears: bad both ways.

SO WE BUILT THE SIMPLEX LIKE A WATCH: WITH THE GEARS ON THE INSIDE

And when we had shown the way, others (give 'em credit for that) recognized the wisdom of such design, and followed our lead.

IN A WAY, WE DON'T MIND THAT IMITATION. IT'S THE SINCEREST FORM OF FLATTERY

But YOU understand, of course, that nobody can make a Simplex out of another machine by enclosing the mechanism any more than you can make a bulldog out of a mongrel by clipping his ears.

NO, SIMPLEX MEANS MORE THAN ENCLOSED MECHANISM. IT MEANS SIMPLEX DESIGN, SIMPLEX QUALITY, SIMPLEX PROJECTION

Only a Simplex Distributor can help you to Simplex Projection. See one; or let us mail you Catalog "N."

SIMPLEX IS SUCH A SIMPLE NAME—BUT WHAT A LOT IT MEANS ON THE SCREEN!
From the scientific angle there is need of much improvement and each member of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers realizes this. Representatives of most of the leading equipment manufacturers have already made reservations. Others are coming every day either to the committee or to the president of the society, M. C. Francis Jenkins, 712 Eleventh street, Washington, D. C., or the secretary, E. K. Gillett, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

In working out standards in equipment, etc., it is necessary for the biggest manufacturing brains in the business to take part, otherwise the most improved standards may not be set up. It is for this reason that Motion Picture News urges every manufacturer who makes equipment for the picture industry to send on a representative from their engineering department, making him a member of the society as soon as possible.

ALTHOUGH the supply interests of the country are not planning to hold any formal gathering, nevertheless many influential men in this branch will be on hand. Developments in this line have been progressing rapidly of late and it would not surprise anyone connected or in touch with it to see still greater strides made. We have received word from houses on the Pacific as well as on the Atlantic coasts that they intend to be on hand. This branch, therefore, should also have a large representation.

THE only unit which is not to be represented in large numbers are the operators. They have not planned a general convention or meeting of any kind. Their organization through the I. A. T. S. E., though complete, could be technically improved were they to be represented. There are many things which could be taken up by their representatives with the theatre owners which would improve general operating conditions. Many of these have been already discussed in the News, others will be. It may be as well at this particular meeting that they may be omitted, as the theatre men will have their hands full with their own personal affairs. However, a better understanding will be arrived at when the operators are able to put before the theatre interests as a body certain facts which pertain to operating conditions which are entirely wrong and must be righted.

In addition to all these meetings and conventions there is to be the annual exhibition at the Coliseum, which begins on July 14th and continues through the 22nd. At this the leading producers and manufacturers will have their displays of various kinds, all of which will be of interest to those who are in the city on business, as well as the public.

The importance, therefore, of Chicago between the dates of July 14th and 22nd cannot be overestimated, as far as the motion picture industry is concerned. E. K. Gillett.
New Film Containers

THE Transportation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry held an important meeting at the headquarters in the Times Building last week for the purpose of considering the specifications which have been proposed for motion picture film containers by the Bureau of Explosives.

Walter S. Topping, Assistant Chief Inspector of the Bureau of Explosives, explained the purpose of the specifications and several new types of film shipping cases which in many respects are approved by the Bureau of Explosives, were inspected by the representatives present.

A committee consisting of Allan Rock, of Paramount; H. S. Clark, Artcraft; and A. I. Segal, V. L. S. E., was appointed to submit various types of metal fasteners to be attached to the film cases so as to conform to the proposed regulations as Inspector Topping stated that it was only a question of time when the use of the web or leather straps which are now used on film case would be discontinued.

It was estimated that there are about fifty thousand of the square type of film cases now in use by the various branches of the industry and it is the desire of the committee to devise plans for continuing the use of these cases by conforming to the new specifications, thereby saving the distributing companies and exchanges many thousands of dollars during the year.

A draft of the proposed new specifications for film cases as submitted follows:

43 (a) Motion picture films must be packed in inside metal or fiber containers complying with Specification No. 32, and with not more than 1 reel (1000 feet or less) in each inside container.

These inside containers must be packed in strong and tight outside wooden boxes, or in sparkproof metal boxes complying with Specification No. 32.

Shipping Container Specification No. 32

(See Paragraph 43)

1. Inside containers used for the shipment of motion picture films, positives or negatives, must comply with the following specifications:

METAL CANS

2. Metal containers must be made of metal not lighter than 30 gauge, U. S. standard (.0125 inch thick).

FIBER CANS

3. Fiber inside containers must be made of strong and tough vegetable fiber so interwoven as to afford strength and resiliency, and must be not less than one-sixteenth inch thick. The containers must be so treated as to make them heat-resisting and moisture-proof.

COVERS

4. The covers must fit tightly with a lap of not less than three-quarter inch, and if necessary to insure tightness, an adhesive strip of tough paper or other suitable material must be used.

OUTSIDE WOODEN BOXES OR CASES

5. Boxes must be made of good sound white pine or any wood of equal or superior strength, dry and well seasoned and without knots, or knots liable to grow in any part. Boxes must be of sufficient strength to carry contents without rupture, from shocks incident to ordinary transportation.

OUTSIDE METAL BOXES, CANS, ETC.

6. Metal boxes, cases or cans must be made of sheet iron not less than .02 inches thick, and must be lined throughout with hard fiberboard at least one-eighth inch thick, or with some equivalent insulating material, approved for this purpose by the Bureau of Explosives.

COVERS

Covers may be permanently attached to metal boxes, cases or cans by not less than two hinges, or they may be slip covers, closely fitting. The covers must be lined with insulating material of the same character and thickness as required for the body of the container.

Hinge covers must fit tightly against the shoulder of and lap over the body, or fit tightly inside the body, not less than seven-eighths inch on all sides. A strong metal hasp must fit over staple or eye bolt, and must be provided with a permanent, non-detachable catch to engage in staple or eye bolt.

Telescope or slip covers must fit tightly against the shoulder of and must lap over or inside the body not less than one and one-half inches. A strong metal strap, permanently secured at one side of the box, must pass over the top of cover, and engage over a staple or eye bolt on the opposite side of box, to which it must be secured by a permanent non-detachable catch. This strap must securely hold the cover in its proper position so that the sides lap their full depth over or inside the box proper. Leather or web straps will not be permitted.

MARKING

8. Each inside metal or fiber can, and each outside container must be marked to show compliance with this specification. Boxes must be plainly marked with the words "Complies with I. C. C. Spec'n No. 32," or, if desired, this marking may be indicated by a symbol consisting of a rectangle as follows:

I. C. C.—32

The letters and figures in this symbol must be at least one-half inch high.

This symbol shall be understood to certify that the package complies with all the requirements of this specification.

When offered for shipment the package must also bear such other description as may be required by the I. C. C. Regulations for the particular article contained therein.

WEIGHT

Carbon Co. Extending Activities

W. E. Green, formerly manager of the Kleine Optical Company, Chicago, last week became associated with the Speer Carbon Company in the position of special sales representative. It is felt his past associations with the motion picture trade will render him invaluable in further promotion the projector carbon business of the Speer Company.

This organization has recently effected a change in its sales policy and it is now the intention to place live dealers in all the larger cities and towns in the country.

Not a Union Operator—Yet

E. Still R. Telford, Salem, III., approves of the Anti-Film Frame League and wishes to become a member. (You are, as you will see by glancing over the Roll of Honor—Ed.) He says he is not a union operator, but expects to be soon. And closes by wishing the League and Projection Department all success.
"Anti-Misframe League"

Pledge

As a motion picture operator who has the interest of his profession at heart, and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils existing in the operating room, I promise, that I will, to the best of my ability, return films to the exchange in first-class condition. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remove all misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother operators and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by enabling them to see films in perfect condition. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

Notice—Anti-Misframe League Members

In an editorial by E. K. Gillett, which appeared on page 3481 of the June 2 issue of Motion Picture News, speaking of the purpose of the Anti-Misframe League, Mr. Gillett said: "There are no strings of any kind attached to a membership except that every member must be willing to stand by the membership pledge." There is, however, one "string" and that is that each member send to the department the following information which is for the purpose of keeping our members: Member's Name, Address, Home Address, Name of Theatre where employed, Address of Theatre and name of Manager.

On receipt of the above information, button and membership card will be issued to members without any cost whatever. In this way we hope to prevent those who are not bona fide operators from obtaining something to which they are not entitled.

Army Y. M. C. A. Selects One Hundred Motograph

O. F. SPAHR, manager of the Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company, was in conference several days this week with P. F. Jerome, purchasing agent of the Army Y. M. C. A. Instructions were given to immediately ship one hundred Motograph machines to United States Army camps in different parts of the United States.

Mr. Spahr states that Motograph was selected on its merits, for its strength, quality, and excellence of projection. He adds that the enclosed mechanism is expected to be a great advantage, as many of the machines will be operated out of doors, where they will be subjected to a test owing to the quantities of dust and dirt. The factory is compelled to work overtime in order to deliver these extra equipments in addition to the regular Motograph orders, which Mr. Spahr states are unusually heavy for this time of the year.

Are You a Slacker?

In a letter received from Lebanon, Ind., written by Brother Charles Wheeler, he offers a suggestion for the promotion of the Anti-Misframe League and puts it directly up to the managers to see that their operators become members. It is to the interest of the manager to see that his operator's name is on the Roll of Honor, also that he stick to the pledge. If a manager finds that his operator does not remove misframes, bad patches, etc., he should report him to the Department, where under the heading of "slackers," the names of those operators who do not take sufficient interest in their profession to do good work could be listed.

The suggestions as outlined by the brother are very good, and if theatre managers would cooperate with this Department there is no doubt a remedy for the poor condition of film could be more readily effected. Co-operation on the part of the operator, manager, and film exchange is absolutely necessary if any good and lasting results are to be obtained. The Anti-Misframe League has a deeper significance than its name implies; it is not only for the purpose of agitation against the poor condition in which film is sent to exhibitors by the exchange, but it is, we hope, destined to improve projection in general, and to improve the working condition of the motion picture operator whether he is unionized or not, and this can only be done by agitation, co-operation and more agitation. When a body of men such as the fifty-two brothers of Local 307, Philadelphia, Pa., sign such a pledge as that of the Anti-Misframe League, it shows that they at least are men who desire to give the best that is in them to exchange for their employer's money. Several other local organizations are, I believe, doing the same thing as Brother Murray (mention of his name was made in a recent issue), and it is expected that the membership will in a short time number many thousand operators who desire to be classed as good workmen—not slackers.
New York Boys Are Slow

A BROTHER from “Somewhere in the Bronx” writes: Seemingly the New York City boys are slow to sign the pledge of the League. Why? They aren’t bashful, are they? Or perhaps they are all going to sign in a body. Far be it from me to do any knocking, so will you therefore kindly enter my name on the Roll of Honor as a Member of the Anti-Mishmash League.

In Reply: I will and have. I would hardly go so far as to say that the New York boys are “slow,” and we know they are not bashful, so it may be quite possible that after the strenuous work occasioned by the election and installation of officers has been completed the members of Local 306 will sign the pledge in a body. We cannot say. However, let us hope that they will do so, for as they are most generally in the forefront when called to the support of any measure that will tend to increase the popularity of the motion picture, their signing the pledge in a body would not only give me a feeling of satisfaction but might induce other locals to act likewise. We await their pleasure.

In the early days of the motion picture industry the source of light was in many instances the well-known calcium type. Artificial gas, such as acetylene, was also used, but as the public became interested in this new form of entertainment and education, the demand for a better form of illuminant necessitated discarding these sources of light. This was due to the increased size of the picture theatres and the demand for larger and better illuminated or more distinct pictures. It was for these reasons, primarily, that the electric arc was adopted for motion picture work.

The electric arc is particularly well adapted to this service, as it is one of the most intensely brilliant artificial illuminants known to science. The major portion of the light produced, however, is not obtained directly from the arc, but from the incandescent tips of the carbon electrodes. The brilliant illumination of the film is secured by the condenser lenses, which collect a portion of the light produced and converge it through the aperture plate, the illuminated area being generally known as the “spot.” It is obvious, therefore, that if the spot is to be uniformly bright over its entire area the source of light must be concentrated in a fixed and as small a point as possible.

Co-Stars

To get “star” profits, good projection must always “co-star” with good pictures—one is valueless without the other. Give your features the advantage of vividly projected images by using

Bausch and Lomb
Projection Lenses

All the countless details of the film need the help of brilliant illumination and clear definition, not only in the center but all over the screen, to bring them out properly. Such illumination and definition, right to the very corners, is the kind which Bausch and Lomb Lenses give you. These lenses are part of the regular equipment of all Edison and Nicholas Power machines. They are also obtainable at your film exchange.

SILVERTIPS AND ECONOMY

The Best Light For The Least Money Is The Wisest Economy

More light—less current consumption, is the economic ideal of every exhibitor. Silvertip negative projector carbons are a sure means to this end.

The use of this heavily plated carbon insures maximum current capacity with a lower arc voltage. With the higher current you obtain that intense white light so necessary for perfect projection.

The economy of Silvertips is not a dream, it has been a pleasing reality to thousands of exhibitors the country over.

The whole-hearted endorsement of theater owners answers unqualifiedly the question, "Do Silvertips Fill the Bill?"

Meet our representative at booth No. 17, Section B, at the Chicago Convention and hear about Silvertips first-hand.

the various types of converting equipments is used, with the exception of the Mercury Arc Rectifier, it is advisable to provide for "break down" service, so that if the auxiliary equipment is disabled the projectors may be operated temporarily with alternating current.

4. When alternating current only is available, and is to be used, the apparatus for obtaining the proper arc voltage may consist of a choke coil, reactance, transformer or rheostat. The transformers ordinarily used are of the single winding or auto type, designed with sufficient reactance to stabilize the arc. A standard double winding transformer having suitable voltage characteristics could be used, providing a suitable reactance coil is connected in series with the arc. Rheostats should not be considered on account of their extremely low efficiency.

5. On alternating current a very short arc must be maintained; we cannot deviate from this operating condition. The arc voltage is therefore settled for the operator, and usually is between 33 and 39 arc volts; that is, at a very short arc just after feeding, the voltage may be 33, and as the arc length increased with the burning of the carbon the arc voltage will increase to a value of about 39 volts; if the arc is permitted to get any longer we find an immediate irregularity and unsteadiness in the arc. It will be found in practice that an alternating current will require feeding every 75 seconds. On direct current we have an inherently steady arc; that is, inherently steady as compared with an alternating current. The range of arc length and arc voltage can be made whatever the operator desires within certain limits, but there is one fact to be borne in mind, and that is that for each given current value there is a definite arc length and arc voltage at which we have the most efficient operation. This can be determined in the following manner: Set the carbons or a constant current, then shorten the arc length gradually, and you will finally produce an unstable noisy arc. Just previous to that point is the minimum limiting arc length for that given current and given carbons. Likewise, take a given arc length and increase the current until a noisy and unstable arc forms, then decrease the current a trifle and you will have the conditions of maximum efficiency for that arc length. Because of the fact that a given arc length can only accommodate a certain maximum amount of current it can readily be seen that we must increase the arc length each time we increase the current. Arc length is, of course, synonymous with arc voltage, so wherever we have mentioned increasing arc length we can say increasing arc voltage. So, making this change in nomenclature, we can make the statement that increasing current values in an arc requires an increased arc length and voltage. In actual practice it is found that there is some variation in the arc voltage for a given current with the make of the carbons and the combinations used, so that the voltages which we have listed are averages which are built up on the principles given above.

For direct current combinations using the ordinary positive carbons as indicated in the table and matching them up with plain negatives, "Group A," we have a table of voltages as indicated in the following table, marked "Group A" Negative Voltages.

In the above table the table of voltages given for the combinations in which the positives are matched up with the small negatives of "Group B," it will be noticed that these voltages are somewhat less. It has been found in actual practice that a well-shaped crater can be obtained at these lower voltages with negative carbons of diameters which are one-half that of the positive. The usual size negative is approximately two-thirds the diameter of the positive. These special small negatives are metal clad in order to give them carrying capacity and life, since they are operated at current densities far beyond their possibilities were they not metal clad.

ST. MARYS, PA.
California Inventor Demonstrates Color Process

ACCORDING to press notices and other data just received, another process of color cinematography has been demonstrated, the exhibition having taken place in San Francisco, Cal.

Mr. Leon F. Douglass, an inventor of talking-machine appliances, is sponsor for this latest of color processes, which has, been tested for the public in the inventor’s San Rafael laboratory, and also at the Bohemian and Press clubs in San Francisco.

Details regarding the theoretical and mechanical aspects of the Douglass process are at present lacking, with the exception of the following brief outline given by the inventor. In a statement prepared by Mr. Douglass he says:

“As my patents have not been issued, I am unwilling to explain the process in full at this time. I can say, however, that with a simple attachment on any ordinary moving picture camera now in use a negative is made; from this negative a positive is made, and up to this point the process is precisely the same as the regular black and white process. After the positive is finished in the usual way, it is treated with chemicals to bring out the colors. This additional treatment, which brings out the natural colors in the black and white film, costs about half a cent per foot.

“The simplicity of this process lies in the fact that any projecting machine now in use in moving picture theatres will display the natural color pictures without any alteration. In fact, parts of a play can be in black and white and parts in natural colors, as far as the projecting is concerned.”

According to reviews in the San Francisco newspapers, the results shown by Mr. Douglass were exceptionally fine, but it must be considered in this connection that up to the present the Company witnessed the results of numerous other workers with whom comparisons might be made.

We understand that copies of these new color films have already reached New York, and if we are successful in seeing them projected will describe the results in the Camera Department. In so far as the theory and practice of the method is concerned, we believe that this can easily be deduced from the data set forth by the inventor.

Considering the advanced stage to which the scientific (theoretical) side of color photography has been developed, and the enormous number of patents relating to the mechanical phases of color cinematography which have been granted, it really is surprising to see or hear of an inventor who is unwilling to set forth the details of his technical procedure.

As a result of exhaustive patents research we incline to the opinion that there is scarcely any method of making natural color motion pictures which has not already been described or foreshadowed by photographic and technical writers. This being so, it will prove interesting to attempt the elucidation of Mr. Douglass’s methods, using as our basis the meager outline which he has given of the process.

In the first place, it must be emphasized that all processes of natural color photography and cinematography require the use of panchromatic negative stock wherewith to produce negatives which record the colors present in the subjects photographed. We need not expatiate further upon this point, because color sensitizing has received lengthy treatment in the Camera Department. In common with all other color cinematographers, therefore, Mr. Douglass must first sensitize his negative film to light of long wave-length, or else use a commercial variety of panchromatic negative stock, if his pictures are, as alleged, real natural color photographs.

Coming now to the taking-camera, Mr. Douglass says that any ordinary cine camera may be used upon the addition of a “simple attachment.” To those who are in any way familiar with the requirements of color photography, it will at once be apparent that this simple attachment consists of the color-filters through which the color-sensation records are photographed. For reasons to be subsequently stated, we are led to assume that the process now under analysis is a two-color process, so we may premise that the taking-filters used are orange-red and blue-green filters of well known type.

As to the mechanical arrangement whereby the filters are operated, this may be the customary rotating disc, having orange-red and blue-green transparent segments, although we can conceive that the filter device may be one of numerous other patterns, such, for instance, as a small continuous celluloid band, bearing alternating red and green sections, corresponding in height to the exposure aperture of a standard cine-camera. Such devices as those above mentioned are, of course, well known to all workers upon color cinematography.

It is stated that when the negative has been made a positive is next made, the printing operation being similar to that practiced in ordinary black and white cinematography. We have naturally to assume that the negative is developed in darkness, or by a suitable green safe-light (according to the variety of panchromatic negative stock used), but the process of printing the positive tallies exactly with the usual procedure when preparing prints for an additive color process.

Now, when we have secured our positive color-selection record in the form of a black and white print, “it is treated with chemicals,” according to the inventor, “to bring out the colors.” Although, at first glance, this statement may seem somewhat cryptic, there is nothing about it to mystify the student of color photography. The color-values possessed by the positive film strip may be translated into colors upon the projection screen by several well known methods, of which the following are examples:

Suppose we took our black and white positive print, which we may assume bears alternate color-sensation images photographed through red and green filters, respectively, and proceeded to apply to each red-sensation image a smooth coating of transparent red dye, and, likewise, to each green-sensation image an even coating of transparent green dye.

If, now, we project this film at 32 images or more per second, we should see upon the screen a representation of the subjects photographed in approximately their natural colors—provided that suitable panchromatic negative stock and correct taking-filters had been used. In the following we have sated of the procedure, and provided furthermore that the dyes with which the alternate red and green sensation positive images have been colored are theoretically and spectroscopically correct in hue.

A variation of the method outlined for coloring the positives would be to tone, or to dye with basic dyes, the red and green sensation positive images to their requisite colors, but we have dwelt upon the straight dyeing method as being the simplest in operation, and therefore the method most probably utilized.

Having followed our positive color film through all of its probable stages of manufacture, we are now ready to project it, and projecting the results by Mr. Douglass’s process is said to be simplicity itself. We may, according to the inventor, display the natural color pictures on any projector and without any alterations. Nothing is said by the inventor about the rate of speed at which these latest color pictures are to be projected, but an item in the “San Francisco Bulletin” of May 17 gives us some information in this point.

Says the “Bulletin” in describing Mr. Douglass’s demonstration: “Aside from a little difficulty at first in timing the pictures properly, the exhibition was practically flawless. At the outset, when the film was being reeled off slowly, there was a slight tendency for the colors to blur, but this defect was obviated by the simple expedient of increasing the speed of the projecting machine.”

It is now apparent that we had good grounds upon which to base our earlier assumption that these color pictures are projected at a rate 32 per second or higher, and if the positive films used are colored with alternating patches of red and green coloring matter, as we have assumed that they are, it should be emphasized that a high projecting speed must be rigorously maintained, in order to secure satisfactory color fusion upon the retina of an observer’s eye.

We have now reached the limit to which we can describe Mr. Douglass’s results upon supposition, but a few more observations may prove interesting concerning such a variation of additive color cinematography as we have outlined in the foregoing paragraphs:

In the course of the last two or three years various workers have experimented with the process of applying red (or red orange) and green (or blue-green) coloring matter to the alternating red and green color-sensation images of film positives produced by successive methods. We have long been cognizant of this variation of the additive method of color cinematography, and mention was made of it in the Camera Department upon a former occasion.*

Theoretically the correct projecting colors (colors with which the respective film pictures are stained) for this system should be a pure red and a minus red or bright greenish-blue, but in practice it is hard to secure steady, non-pulsating screen pictures with this color combination unless the film is projected at excessive speed (so or more pictures per second). In practice, therefore, the experimenters with this method have resorted to orange-red and a very bluish green as the projecting colors. While it is easy, by passing along the spectrum in this way, to select color combinations that are nearly complementary, and thus capable of rendering whites as whites upon the projecting screen, the coloration is certain to lack realistic purity, or saturation, unless correct projecting colors are used, which, as above noted, requires projection to be accomplished at very high speed. It appears that the best results with this variety of additive process would be secured if the shutter of the projector was so adjusted as to expose the red and green positive images for different periods of time, as is provided for in the Joy patent (U. S. Patent No. 1,202,724).

We certainly await with interest the opportunity of seeing Mr. Douglass's California-made color pictures and of learning at first hand the exact methods employed by that gentleman. A. S. C.

The Allenbaugh Process of Preserving Film Positives

WHAT promises to be a considerable advance in the technique of positive film preparation is the introduction of a treatment for prints, which is said to greatly prolong their useful life, and also render them highly impervious to scratches.

The new mode of treatment is the invention of Major O. J. Allenbaugh, of the Film Renovating Company, and is the result of upwards of years' experimentation on the part of the inventor.

The exact details of the treatment which a film positive undergoes when processed by the Allenbaugh method are not made public, but some generalities concerning the method may be of interest to the technical workers in the industry and also to exchangers.

Briefly stated, the emulsion side of a finished film positive is treated with some preparation which is said to greatly increase its durability, and which leaves the emulsioned surface in such condition that it is not readily scratched. The increased strength, or wearing qualities, of an Allenbaugh processed film is particularly noticeable along the edges or sprocket-holes, which is an important consideration, for the sprocket-holes are the most vulnerable point of a cine film. A film after treatment by this method has what inventor Allenbaugh terms an "egg-shell gloss" on its emulsion side, and is most notably characterized by the fact that a new print so treated may be run through a projecting machine without depositing any emulsion on the tension-springs, which latter occurrence, as is generally known, is a cause of much trouble and damage in the case of ordinary "first-run" prints.

So far as we are able to ascertain, Mr. Allenbaugh's preparation is not applied to the film while it is being processed in the laboratory, but is applied by a machine through which the finished and dried positive is run. The effect of the application, according to the inventor, is to create a closer union between the emulsion and the celluloid base than exists when the film is in its original state, and this result is secured without increasing the thickness of the film; without appreciable shrinkage; and without any loss of pliability.

The process appears to have nothing in common with conventional methods of hardening the gelatine of photographic films, such as the use of chrome alum and formalin. Excessive treatment with either of these chemicals may render the emulsion so hard that it sometimes peels from the celluloid base, whereas by the method now under consideration the emulsion is made to adhere more strongly to the base. In response to a question Mr. Allenbaugh stated that results would probably be more satisfactory in this respect with films which had not been fixed in a bath containing a hardening reagent. The emulsion of an Allenbaugh processed film will not strip from the base, declares the inventor, under any conditions, but may be readily scraped away for the purpose of making a join, as we have ascertained by practical test.

It is claimed that numerous feature reels treated over a year ago, as a preliminary test, are still in an excellent state of preservation, notwithstanding hard usage.

We shall study the wearing qualities of films treated by this method and may set forth some further observations at a future time.

The exact rationale of this process forms an interesting study in cellulose chemistry, and in colloid chemistry, and Major Allenbaugh deserves credit for the diligence with which he has pursued his experiments.

New Division of Business by American Photo Player Co.

M. J. SAMUELS, vice-president of The American Photo Player Co., 62 West 45th street, New York, signed a contract recently with George C. Cuff, president of the Mutual Theatre Co. of Orange, N. J., for $30,000, for two Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestras, to be installed in the Colonial and Palace theatres, Orange, N. J.

The American Photo Player Co. have just announced a new division of their business, devoting itself entirely to the manufacture of a wonderful new instrument—the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra.

The construction department heads of the company have been devoting the last two years in the planning and erection of the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra, working toward an ideal. This instrument is designed especially to represent and duplicate the tones of a symphonic orchestra, in addition to the results to be obtained from a cathedral organ and an orchestral organ.

At the time that the model instrument of the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra was tested, the officials of the company procured the services of a symphony orchestra of twenty-four pieces. They played the overture of "William Tell" and in the midst of the overture, the orchestra was stopped, and although it appeared that orchestral music was still continuing, nevertheless the organist sitting at the wonderful new instrument, the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra, continued playing the overture, and

Our War Songs of Fifty Years Ago

OVER fifty years have passed since the great Civil War was fought, and now that the Blue and Gray have become more than ever united, it is interesting to recall the old melodies that cheered the boys at the front.

During the Civil War, whenever the opposing hosts lay encamped near each other, Federal and Confederate bands at night-time made a practice of playing with each other in tossing back and forth, alternately, their favorite melodies, until, finally, at "taps," Northerners and Southerners, friends and foe, settled down to a joint rendering of Paine's exquisite air of "Home, Sweet Home."

The Army songs which sprang into existence then, although lacking in many of the requirements of musical composition, in spite of adverse criticism, enjoyed a wonderful popularity during that period, and have been sung over and over again since in all English-speaking lands.

It is to be regretted that the names of the composers of these famous lyrics, although deserving of a better fate, are fast passing into oblivion. Scarcely one of our readers could name, offhand, the man who wrote "Dixie" or "John Brown's Body." To recall to mind the names of the authors of a few of the immortal songs is our present purpose.

"Maryland, My Maryland," the most melodious and inspiring of all the songs sung by the followers of the "Lost Cause," was composed by James R. Randall.

"Marching Through Georgia," which will be sung and played as long as the Republic survives, was composed by Henry Clay Work, born in Middletown, Connecticut, 1832, died at Hartford, 1884. He also composed "Kingdom Come," "Babyon Is Fallen," "Nicodemus the Slave," "My Grandfather's Clock," "Lily Dale," and "Father, Dear Father, Come Home with Me Now." Work possessed considerable mechanical as well as musical skill and was the inventor of a knitting machine, a walking doll and a rotary engine.

"In Dixie's Land" was composed in New York in 1859 by Daniel Emmet, a principal member of Bryant's minstrels.

"John Brown's Body Lies Moldering in the Grave" was written by Charles Hall, of Charlestown, Mass.

Walter Kittredge, born in Herrimack, New Hampshire, 1832, was drafted into the Federal army in 1862. Before going to the front he wrote in a few minutes both the words and music of "Tening on the Old Camp Ground." The song at first was refused publication, but later on become immensely popular, its sale reaching into the hundred thousands. It is still in demand.

"The Bonnie Blue Flag" was written in 1862 by Mrs. Annie Chambers Ketchum to an Irish melody composed by Henry McCarthy. It was first sung in the early sixties at a variety theatre in New Orleans.

"Tramp, Tramp, Tramp" and "Battle Cry of Freedom" were composed by George F. Root.

"The Battle Hymn of the Republic," as is well known, was written by Julia Ward Howe, under the inspiration of a visit to the Army of the Potomac while lying in winter quarters; I have seen him in the watch of a hundred circling tents."

"Blue and Gray" was written by F. M. Finch; "Bivouac of the Dead," by Theodore O'Hara; "Sheridan's Ride," by T. Buchanan Read; "Somebody's Darling" was composed by Father Ryan; "We Are Coming, Father Abraham," by S. J. Adams, and "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," by Patrick S. Gilmore.

"Who Will Care for Him Now?" and "When This Cruel War Is Over" were written by Charles Carroll Sawyer.

"All Quiet Along the Potomac" was composed by Mrs. Ethel Lyncr Beers, a lineal descendant of John Eliot, apostle to the Indians.—San Francisco Call.

Are Effects Effective?

IN many a moving picture orchestra there is more attention given to securing "effects" of a low comedy nature, than real consistent "effect." Sandpaper and bear growl, the slamming of a door and the screeching of steamboat whistles, imitation of a dog barking, gongs ringing out while a burglar sneaks through a chimney—burlesque realistic "effects" of this kind are anything but "effective" if not exactly timed. We are very apt to get these "comic" effects after the reason for it no longer exists. In many cases these forced "comedy effects" are vulgar and likely to offend the better part of an audience. And quite indefensible is the introduction of "comedy effects" into serious or tragic pictures. An occasional laugh may be secured, but at the expense of which is artistically right and fitting. It should be remembered that the majority of people who attend the photoplay houses are "serious in their serious moments," and object to the introduction of comedy where it is out of place.

Comedy has its own legitimate field where humorous effects are in order, and in company of music players the drummer is the leading comedian. But he should confine his efforts to his special field and give the authority on comedy to the humorist.

"A comedy is the only battlefield for the live drummer. He should try to work in all possible effects to get a good laugh from the audience. But he should not get the laugh owing to the confusion arising through being always too late with his instruments. I have heard a dog bark while a lady spoke—a locomotive bell ring for an ambulance!"

Efficient Management of a Rehearsal

The conductor's object must be to employ the time for rehearsal as usefully as possible. A conductor must recognize at once what are the difficult parts of a composition, what will require much rehearsal and what little. Orchestral players are very sensitive and naturally resent having their time wasted. The conductor must realize which mistakes may be passed over lightly as mere slips, which are radical and must be insisted on. Economy of time is especially important, where a conductor often has to direct a "scratch" orchestra collected for the purpose, with only one rehearsal to prepare for a long program. In such cases the conductor must be ready to seize on the essential points and let the rest take care of itself.

American Photoplayer Changes
were it not for the fact that the evidence was before all assembled that the orchestra had ceased playing, every one agreed that it would have been impossible to distinguish between the human orchestra and the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra.
Various other tests were made, such as placing a violinist in the expression chamber of the Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra and requesting him to play, and the musician sat at the console playing with him, and at no time was there any difference in the intonation of the violin or the remarkable duplication of the instrument.
The Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestra is all under the control of one man; the instrument may be played by hand, but is also equipped with an emergency device operated by means of rolls, putting all the resources of the instrument at the disposal of even an operator without technical skill; the instrument also contains a piano of highest artistic merit.
The Robt. Morton Symphonic Orchestras are built to order, and it is advisable in the construction of new houses to have the architects confer with The American Photo Player Co. in order to secure the maximum of efficiency; these instruments range in price from $7,500 to $50,000.

Princess Theatre, Markle, Indiana

The Princess theatre, located on Morse street, of Markle, Indiana, threw open its doors to the public of that town during 1913. The theatre is owned by H. O. Boyd, under whose management it is operated.

The proportions of the house make it ideal for the showing of pictures. The plans and specifications for the house were drawn up by L. E. Lakey, of Markle. It measures 20 feet in width by 100 feet in depth. It is constructed of concrete, brick and steel. The front of the theatre is finished in glazed brick and, although it is very simple in construction, it makes a neat appearance.

The lobby, which measures 20 feet in width by 12 feet in depth, has a concrete floor and is lighted by the direct lighting system by a row of incandescent electric lights which have been strung across the front. Many display frames and posters adorn the lobby and attract the attention of passersby.

The doors leading into the theatre have been set with large plateglass mirrors, which add greatly not only to the attractiveness of the lobby but also to its size, making it appear really larger than what it is.

Passing through these doors the interior is reached. This is neatly decorated in cream and old rose. Here everything for the comfort of the patrons has been installed. The American Seating Company of Chicago has installed 235 comfortable leather upholstered opera chairs.

For ventilating purposes numerous electric wall fans and several exhaust fans have been installed. These used in conjunction with a steam heating plant keep the house perfectly heated and ventilated.

The indirect lighting system is used here, the fixture being of chain suspended type, with bowls of an opaque material. There is sufficient light at all times in the theatre to read a newspaper by, but not enough to disturb the showing of the picture any.

The projection room, which is in charge of Ernest Dumbaugh, is equipped with a Powers 6-B and an Edison Keniscope projector. The length of throw is about 75 feet onto a plaster screen.

The music for the picture is most delightfully handled by a Lyons and Healy electric piano. The music rendered is that which is most appropriate for the picture being shown.

Vitagraph pictures are shown here exclusively, "The Cave Man" and "The Island of Regeneration" having "gone over" in great shape. There are three performances daily, consisting of five or six reels, admission price for both evening and matinee being 10 cents.

The theatre maintains a large mailing list and distributes heralds about town, besides its extensive advertising in the daily newspapers.

Quimby's Theatre, Zanesville, O., a Modern House

Among the well-equipped theatres in the business section of Zanesville, Ohio, is "Quimby's," which has stood the siege of competition for seven years, which is a long time in the theatre business. W. C. Quimby, who owns this house, has spared no expense, however, in keeping it up to date, whether in equipment or service, and great pains is taken with the projection by Roland Bateman, in charge of the operating room. The stars which are most popular at Quimby's are Theda Bara, the two "Bills" (Hart and Farnum) and Clara Kimball Young. Newspaper and billboard space is used liberally, and 10 and 15 cent admission prices are obtained Sundays and 10 cent admission on week days.

"Quimby's" is located on South Fifth avenue and is controlled by the Quimby Amusement Enterprises. Built in 1910, from plans by H. C. Myers, architect, this theatre covers an area 80 by 100 feet, with a handsome structure of brick and tile. Indirect lighting and up-to-date ventilating and heating systems, the former installed by the Typlloon Fan Company, mark it as a thoroughly modern house. The American Seating Company installed the chairs and a "gold fibre" screen is used.

The operating booth is equipped with two Powers 6-A machines, with a 70-foot throw, and special spot and flood lights for singers. There is a main floor, seating 600, and balcony.

An unusually generous lobby, 10 by 40 feet, is equipped with automatic ticket machine and cash register. Packard Grand piano and Stevens pipe organ supplement the picture with good music.

This house usually gives a seven-reel program, using Triangle, Fox, Mutual, Metro, Bluebird and Selznick features.

Remodel Big Los Angeles House

The Superba Theatre, a downtown first-run house on Broadway, Los Angeles, is being remodeled under the direction of Manager AL Nathan. The box office, which has heretofore been on the side of the lobby, will be placed in the center, thus making possible a wider lobby and a more spacious entrance. Within the house it is to be redecorated throughout, and changes made that will materially increase the seating capacity of the theatre. Manager Nathan has already made several changes in the policy of the theatre. Girl ushers in costumes to suit the subject have replaced the male ushers of uniforms. A large orchestra has been added and a feature of the six programs given daily are selections by a jazz band and vocal numbers by a soloist. The Superba is the home of Bluebird films in Los Angeles, and one of the popular downtown houses that enjoys good business week in and week out.

Nate Erber, a Danville, Illinois, theatre owner, announces that his newest theatre, the Lincoln Square, is ready to open at Decatur.

Indiana

John J. Ryan is installing a new motion picture theatre in the business room at 920 Main street, Anderson, formerly occupied by Daniel Goehlter. The theatre will be named the "Indian" and will have a seating capacity for 250 persons. The theatre has a handsome front. It will be completed in about a week and will run new up-to-date pictures.

Kansas

Two new theatres are under construction at El Dorado, and will open in the near future. The Belmont will seat eight hundred, has a big stage, balcony, and all modern improvements and will be under the management of Elmer Munson. The Princess will seat 500 and will be managed by Oscar Everton.

Kentucky

The Kentucky theatre, recently erected at Dawson Springs, was opened to capacity business a week ago.

Arthur Bloomfield and Fonda Minor have closed a deal with the local order of Masons at Winchester for the lease of the room formerly occupied by the Cozy theatre. Extensive improvements have been made, and the new picture house was opened a few days ago under the name of "The Family."

Missouri

The Aida theatre, the first municipally owned open air theatre in this state, was opened to big business two weeks ago.

Nebraska

The new Wonderland theatre at Hastings was opened last week to capacity business.

A new theatre is in course of erection at Sidney to cost about $25,000. J. A. Bentley is behind the project.

New York

A motion picture theatre with a seating capacity for 10,000 persons, twice as large as the largest, which is now under construction at Broadway and Fifty-first street, will be erected on the site of the car barns on Eighth avenue between Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets, if a deal pending for the property is consummated. Felix Isman, Leopold Weil and another have formed a syndicate which plans to lease the property for twenty-one years from the New York Railways Company at a rental which will total close to $2,000,000 for the term. Leases have been prepared, but no signatures have been placed on them yet. The deal is as near closed as it is possible to have a deal without being actually closed. The car barn property has an area of about thirty-seven lots, embracing the entire avenue frontage and considerable space on Forty-eighth and Forty-ninth streets.

Theatre planned for the property will cost $800,000 to build and will be the largest in the world.

Memorex Kendall is now preparing to build on the Wendel property at the southwest corner of Broadway and Fifty-first street a motion picture house which will seat more than 3,000 persons. This new holds the position of the largest show house built or under construction in the city.

Ohio

A new motion picture theatre is to be erected in Toledo, incurring an expenditure of $30,000. Charles Tafecki is putting it up.

Ontario

Mr. George Reinhardt, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel, Kitchener, is building a new theatre in this city, to be completed and in operation by fall. He is using the best of everything and is modelling it after one of the large Toronto houses. He has already placed his orders for Acme screen and Simplex machine.

Pennsylvania

The Grand theatre at Seventh street and Snyder avenue, Philadelphia, is being torn down. A new and better theatre to cost about $15,000 will be erected on the same site by the owner, M. Stieffel.

The Lafayette, at Kensington avenue and Cambria street, Philadelphia, is another Fifth Sunday house that will be entirely remodeled during the summer season at a cost of $3,500.

The Frankford theatre at 4715 Frankford avenue, Philadelphia, has been repainted, improvements made to the ladies' room, and the lobby hung with draperies in city and national colors. Two new drinking fountains have also been erected.

The Broadway theatre, Philadelphia, has given up vaudeville for the summer season and will run a series of special pictures beginning with "Twenty Thousand Leagues under the Sea."

Texas

A. L. Blasingin is erecting a new $10,000 theatre at Shamrock, to be called the Liberty. The seating capacity will be 700 and the stage 25x10. At present calculations the theatre should be open about August 1.

Utah

W. H. Swanson, president of the Swanson theatre circuit, composed of theatres throughout Utah and Colorado, is having plans drawn for a twelve-stone theatre and hotel building to be erected in Salt Lake City. The plans may also include a motion picture theatre. The structure will cost in the neighborhood of $500,000.

MAKE YOUR THEATRE ATTRACTIVE AND SAFE AT REASONABLE COST

Take two theatres, each running high class pictures. One has an attractive, decorative interior, while the other has ordinary plaster walls and ceilings. Which draws the larger crowds? The attractive theatre, of course.

Then, make your theatre the attractive one in your town—whether you're building or repairing.

Nothing will add more to its beauty than Berger's "Classik" Steel Ceilings. They give the rich appearance of expensive moulded plaster, yet are reasonable in cost.

The ceilings are also fire retardant, non-collapsible, sanitary, durable and easily erected. Hundreds of artistic designs to choose from.

Give lasting satisfaction and eliminate expensive maintenance.

Is Acknowledged by Successful Exhibitors

The supremacy of the AMERICAN FOTOPLAYER as THE musical instrument for the highest success in motion pictures is recognized by successful exhibitors in all parts of the country.

This remarkable instrument has marked the most important event in the world of music today, and is destined to revolutionize music for the pictures, both economically and artistically.

Exhibitors appreciate the importance of installing a musical instrument of the highest tonal qualities with the least expense of operation.

The FOTOPLAYER is a real instrument with that touch of velvet, the beautiful singing tone that penetrates the depths of your soul; the utmost tonal beauty is awakened by the musician, by hand or by roll, producing the touch, the thought, and feeling of the composer.

It is not what you pay, but what you get for what you pay which determines whether a product is cheap or dear.

In the motion picture industry many are attracted by the silly "¼ cheaper-than-others" bait, but few benefit by this fancied "saving."

We offer perfect developing and printing, tinting, toning and toning-tinting, at a fair one-price-to-all which allows us legitimate profit, and gives you quality prints, satisfying service and the business security that makes for comfort and success.

MARY PICKFORD

During the coming year Mary Pickford will make eight big productions for release by Artcraft Pictures Corporation.

Known as the "World's Sweetheart," Miss Pickford has been a more potent power for increasing patronage than any other single agency in motion pictures. "A Romance of the Redwoods," is even surpassing her wonderful "The Poor Little Rich Girl" as a box-office attraction.

"The Little American," directed by Cecil B. deMille and "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," produced by Marshall Neilan, are ready for early release.
Get New Patrons

You don’t have to appeal to the “regular patron” or “fan” with novelty pictures. As long as everything you show is good and they’re pleased, they will come back. Your good pictures should also have the added power of attracting a few new people to your theatre.

You can attract the hundreds or thousands in your town by plugging just the Quacky Doodles feature of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs. “The Magazine on the Screen” offers marvelous advertising possibilities.

Put the Pictographs to work for you—NOW.

These stars and titles on the opposite page compel attention.

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers.

Goldwyn Pictures for the Clean-Minded Millions

GOLDWYN PICTURES will be seen by millions of women and children with enjoyment instead of shame. They are censored in advance of production by clean-minded producers who have never on screen or stage catered to the lower or cheaper tastes.

They are the type of pictures that every organization of watchful men and women guarding against impurities or indecencies on the screen can indorse without a single reservation or exception.

They are stories of love and laughter, of honor and refinement, built to appeal to the mental and internal finenesses of the wholesome American people.

Goldwyn has recognized the necessity for screen betterments and staked a fortune upon its ability to gauge intelligently the desires and requirements of an enormous public throughout the world—the kind of a public we are most anxious to serve.

ALBERT CAPELLANI ENGAGED TO DIRECT JULIA SANDERSON

Albert Capellani has been engaged by John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, to direct Miss Julia Sanderson. Mr. Capellani is recognized as one of the world's foremost directors of motion pictures. The productions which he stages for Miss Sanderson will be made at the studios of the Empire All-Star Corporation and will be released through Mutual Exchanges everywhere.

Brilliant Career.

The career of Albert Capellani has been a brilliant one. Born and brought up in France he was artistic by nature, and early in life found the stage as a means of expression. His motion picture work began in the studios of Pathé Frères in Paris, where he was first assistant for three years. Later he acted as cameraman and then rose to the post of director. In all he spent seven years in directing feature productions abroad, five of which were devoted to Pathé productions. Some three years ago he came to the United States and entered the World studios in New York as producing director. While here he made such notable pictures as "Camille," "The Face in the Moonlight," "The Flash of an Emerald" and "The Impostor." When Clara Kimball Young headed a company of her own, Mr. Capellani was engaged as her director, and he staged both "The Common Law" and "The Foolish Virgin." And now he feels that in Julia Sanderson, one of the latest of the Charles Frohman stars to be selected for screen work with the Empire All-Star Corporation, he has even more wonderful opportunities than have been offered him in the past.

Already at Work.

Mr. Capellani and Miss Sanderson are both now at work on the first of the big features to be released through Mutual Exchanges. The title and release date of the initial photoplay starring Miss Sanderson will be announced soon. In the meanwhile exhibitors can make reservations at their nearest Mutual Exchange.

Captain Peacocke Will Act With Jackie Saunders.

Captain Leslie T. Peacocke, widely known as a short story writer, scenario editor, poet and playwright, will play an important role in the next Jackie Saunders Mutual release. He will appear as Jackie's millionaire father in the photoplay entitled "Betty Be Good," which is scheduled for release through Mutual Exchanges during the month of July.

Start Productions for July.

Write or visit your nearest Mutual Exchange for release dates.

Title. Lead.
The Masked Heart, William Russell
Mary Moreland.. Marjorie Rambeau
Betty Be Good... Jackie Saunders
Melissa of the Hills........ Mary Miles Minter

Marjorie Rambeau Has Splendid Role in "Mary Moreland." Marjorie Rambeau, star of the current "The Peacocke" series released through Mutual Film Exchanges, has a splendid role in her newest offering, "Mary Moreland." The title, and throughout the acts of her affair Miss Rambeau is seen at her very best. The picture is released the week beginning July 9th.

A Harper's Bazaar Novel.

"Mary Moreland" is an adaptation of the Marie Van Vorst novel of the same name which was published serially in Harper's Bazaar. In its serial form the story was read by thousands of women the country over. As a book it sold even better than previous Van Vorst novels, and this celebrated author invariably finds her works among the "best sellers." Now in film form the exhibitor is enabled to appeal to the great number of readers of the serial or the book. For surely everyone who has read the story will be eager to see the pictured version of the same tale.

The story is a highly dramatic one, dealing with a love affair in the big city world. Miss Rambeau is cast as Mary Moreland, the stenographer of Thomas Maughan, a broker. Maughan in dictating letter to Miss Rambeau reveals the unhappiness in his own home—the fact that he and his wife are not congenial. Mary sympathizes with him and suddenly finds herself overwhelmed by love for him. Accordingly when he seizes her in his arms she submits to his embrace. He suggests that she elope with him and makes all arrangements to meet her at the depot. A wire calls him unexpectedly to Boston, and from there Mary is summoned to join him. Before she departs Mary discovers that Mrs. Maughan really loves her husband and that there is every reason to believe the two can be reconciled. What then shall she do? Do on what will she send him back to his wife? Grievously dramatic are the scenes in which she makes her decision.

Released Week of July 9th.

"Mary Moreland" is released through Mutual Exchanges everywhere the week of July 9th. It is the sixth Marjorie Rambeau release. Now playing are "The Greater Woman," "Motherhood," "The Debt," "The Mirror" and "The Dazzling Miss Davison."

Exhibitors playing the Mutual Weekly will find views of unusual interest in No. 159, which pictures the first American troops leaving Paris for service at the front. These scenes can easily be made the feature attraction at any theatre on account of their popular appeal.

The Beloved Characters of "O. Henry"

"Ikey Schoenstein"

East Side night clerk at the "Blue Front" drug store—wizard of the pill, the plaster and the potion—

'Twas he that loved "Rozy" Riddle with an affection that was deep and with a cunning that was low—"Rozy"—the compound extract of all that was desirable to a night clerk of broken speech and uncertain years.

'Twas he that hated Chunk McGown, her burly swain of the pave and alley—hated him with all the animosity of contrasting race and temperament.

'Twas he that snapped up the challenge of circumstance and sought to hand a transient sleep, the vicarious knockout punch of the apothecary shelf, upon "Rozy." It was in the guise of an absurd love philtre requested by the romantic urban yokel, Chunk.

His tactics of jealousy strove with grand intentions. The love philtre as concocted for the unsuspecting Chunk was to save her from him—for Ikey. She would drowse and not elope with Chunk at the appointed hour. Aye, and beautifully the philtre worked.

But not upon "Rozy"!

MYSTERY OF THE DOUBLE CROSS

Pathé serials are in the feature class as to quality. They are better than most features in drawing power.

OUR BEST ADVERTISEMENT IS THE SATISFIED CUSTOMER.

"Several months ago I booked your serial 'Mystery of the Double Cross' to run two days a week in connection with my vaudeville. Up to that time I had never run a mystery serial because I was afraid my business would be hurt by using a two reel non-completed story each week. Now after nine weeks of success I can readily say that this serial is a money maker for the box office—my patrons are more than satisfied."

PEARL WHITE

Some exhibitors dread the so-called "off season". They are the ones who have not played Pearl White, champion box office attraction, in a Pathé serial. Ask the exhibitors who in 1914 played "The Perils of Pauline"; those who in 1915 played "The Exploits of Elaine"; or those who had "The Iron Claw" in their houses in the summer of 1916. They will tell you that Miss White in a Pathé feature-quality serial can fill your house in the hottest dog days!

It is to give you good summer business that Pathé has decided to advance the release date to July 8

To the Man on the Outside

LAST year at Chicago there was a prominent exhibitor who didn’t think much of Conventions. He stood, for the most part, on the outside looking in. He was frankly critical. Finally he walked in.

This year he has his sleeves rolled up and he is the hard-est working man in the Exhibitors League. We refer to Ludwig Schindler, manager of this year’s Convention and Exposition.

There are a good many exhibitors, especially prominent exhibitors throughout the country, like Mr. Schindler—before he rolled up his sleeves. They are still on the outside looking in.

They, too, are frankly critical. They stand at the doors of the League, shake their heads and walk away. They will agree heartily with you that exhibitor organization is highly necessary. But they don’t walk into it.

To all such we recommend the experience of Manager Schindler. We believe that once these men walk in they also will roll up their sleeves.

This year seems to hold out an opportunity. We say this sincerely and not in an attempt to boost the Convention.

We have decided, by the way, not to boost conventions any more unless they bear promise of making good.

This opportunity at Chicago must be as apparent to the outside exhibitor as it is to us.

* * * *

A LARGE number of new states have come in under the banner of the National League, among them New Hampshire, North Carolina, Missouri, Maine, Kansas, New Jersey, Vermont, North Dakota, Washington, Tennessee.

This is a remarkable showing.

The steady, persistent and sincere work of national organizer Herrington has shown results, and there will be banner delegations this year from states whose organizations have been dormant or which, last year, sent delegations to Chicago not representative of the normal strength of the state bodies.

For the first time in League history, practically every state in the Union will be represented at this year’s convention.

And, finally, a lot of men of the kind we are talking to, prominent, substantial exhibitors, converted critics, have joined the League this year and will make their voices heard at Chicago.

It is time for you to join.

Frankly, we don’t blame you for having been critical.

You have been disgusted with the League’s peanut politics.

But you will note that delegates this year are going to Chicago uninstructed as to whom they shall vote for as President. A few may go with names written upon their cuffs; but very few. This convention, in other words, will be called to organize a large, permanent, national body of exhibitors; not to sell out its name and insignia to any enterprise or any branch of the industry.

You have also been disgusted with previous conventions.

WE don’t blame you. A letter has just reached us from a man whose long and sincere services toward the League puts his name above reproach, in which he characterizes last year’s convention as a “gas party.”

It was. The speeches made, the resolutions passed, and many committees formed—all vaporized away into thin air. Nothing whatever has been carried over except a Presi dent, the motive of whose activities is decidedly question able—and luckily a national organizer to whose sincere offices the forthcoming Chicago Convention will owe the main measure of its strength.

The reason why last year’s convention vaporized itself into nothingness is apparent; no permanent organization was effected to carry on the work outlined by the Convention. That is all.

This year such a permanent organization must be built.

You—you on the outside and you on the inside—will have to walk into the Convention hall, organize yourselves into committees and do this work.

You will have to do it, so that you will have back of you this coming year, at any time, an organized power, protecting you against unjust taxes and unfair laws and against oppressive business policies.

Speaking Editorialy:

Herrington Steps to the Bat

FRED J. HERRINGTON, National Organizer and former President of the National League of Exhibitors, asks us to announce his candidacy for President this year, and we cheerfully respond. "Do it your own way," he says. "Say exactly what you feel."

He makes but one statement, namely: that on his recent trip he has played no politics; he has squelched every mention of his name for President; he is being pushed now into the ring by several states who say they will make the announcement if he does not.

Fred Herrington, in our belief and experience, is at once the hardest working and most sincere supporter the League has ever had. He believes in organization for organization's sake and he works for organization for organization's sake only. He has made many sacrifices, and got nothing in return save the reward of seeing his work bear fruit. He is part and parcel of exhibitor organization. When you think of the National League today you think of Fred Herrington.

As we have stated before, Mr. Herrington took hold of an organization which at San Francisco two years ago was at the end of its rope; and practically unaided he brought it out of debt and up to the strength it showed at Chicago last year. He was, by all signs, the sentimental choice of last year's Convention.

And it is our honest opinion that the strength shown by this year's attendance at Chicago will be principally due to his hard and loyal efforts as National Organizer.

Eliminate the Parasites

NUMEROUS complaints have recently reached us about a certain phase of the state rights market.

Its disorganization has bred, it would appear, a considerable number of parasites or "touts" whose business it is to frequent New York hotels, insinuate themselves into the buyer's confidence and lead him to the seller. For a consideration, of course.

The consideration is unnecessary; and the tout is a flagrant mismanagement.

There are a number of reputable brokers in the field and there will be more. The seller's door is easily reached.

Motion Picture News guarantees complete information and full service to any buyer on any picture, free of any cost or consideration whatsoever.

Honorable Mention

WILLIAM FOX'S "Jack and the Bean Stalk" is a distinct achievement.

This ten-reel production, which is both a Fox Special Release and the first of the Fox series of "Kiddie" pictures will be reviewed later in this publication. It will probably be released in the early Fall, after a Broadway showing.

We simply record here the estimation an extraordinary picture deserves, especially an extraordinary picture that meets a basic demand of the picture public. A simple fairy tale has been faithfully made into an elaborate and striking production with the result that the interest never lags an instant and that it is difficult to decide whether the delight all children will find in this picture will exceed that of their elders.

Another Big Job for Chicago

THE importance of the task that confronts the Exhibitors League delegates at Chicago in selecting a National President cannot be underestimated. But there are other tasks of well-nigh equal importance.

One lies in the selection of an aggressive and independent National Executive Committee.

We have heard much concerning the race for the League presidency, much concerning the need for a real leader.

But too little thought has been given to the body of men who should be the new president's main reliance, his shoulder to shoulder support in every phase of League activity. A progressive president may possibly instil renewed vigor into the League without the aid of an energetic Executive Committee. But a broad-gauged leader, backed by live-wire aids from every section of the League, will return two-fold value to the organization.

Get Another Telegraph Blank

GET your pen and ink out again. Take a telegram blank in hand. And wire—quickly—to your Representative in Washington.

Tell him that a vote in favor of the Daylight Saving Bill recently passed by the Senate will bring down on his head not only your wrath, but that of every element in your community dependent upon "night-life" for its support.

Tell him that the Main Street merchants who depend upon the family's evening stroll to bring added lucre to their coffers will howl even louder than you—though in your case it means not merely a heavy loss but almost total ruin.

And if your Representative wants proof of your statements tell him that Australia and Canada can give him the answer of experience.

at your mind, just consider the scare over war taxes you have just passed through—taxes that would have assuredly closed your theatre doors.

The first step at Chicago is the appointment of a budget committee which will see that the League finances itself.

Any organization dependent upon balls, expositions, donations is worse than useless. An organization unable to finance itself is weak enough to sell out overnight to almost any bidder. It is dangerous.

Make this budget, arrange for its collection, hire capable men and back them up with a President and an executive committee composed of your most substantial members, and you will, at least, have an organization that your most critical exhibitors will be proud of and mighty anxious to join.

Chicago is your opportunity.

Are you going?
Herrington's Hat in the Ring—Varner Campaign Active

Many States Reported as Ready to Back Former League Head to the Finish—Sams, of North Carolina, Explains Need for Change in League Management

FRED J. HERRINGTON, National Organizer of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, is the latest entrant in the field of candidates for the office of National President of that organization. The announcement of the former League's head's candidacy for the office which he held for a year came as a result of the enthusiastic meeting of Pennsylvania exhibitors at Philadelphia last week.

In other localities that had prompted him to once more toss his hat in the ring for the League presidency, Mr. Herrington declared to a Motion Picture News representative in Philadelphia: "When I started on my recent organization tour of the country I had no intention of once more entering the race, and I stated so on every occasion that the question was put to me. But I soon found that dissatisfaction with the condition of League affairs was everywhere present, and several states urged me to become a candidate.

"I have refused to give a definite answer until the present moment, but I now feel that with my friends giving me assurances that they will be in the fight for me to a finish it is up to me to accede to their wishes. No one has ever accused me of not being a fighter, and if several states are going to fight for me I certainly cannot hesitate about getting into the thick of it with them.

"I have no other platform but my record as a League worker for the past ten years. In and out of season, under the most trying circumstances, I have worked for the organization. I have always been loyal, I have never torn down but have always sought to build up,

"The election to head the League at San Francisco in 1915 came to me unsolicited and at a time when the National League was little more than a name. I found a bankrupt treasury and an organization far from including the best state units of the country. The record I made during that year—from bankruptcy to a treasury of six thousand dollars, from a mere name to the foundation of a real organization, is all the campaign platform I need.

"And I believe it will be all the platform needed—for Chicago is to be a real exhibitors' candidate, and those who expect that they will be able to do the usual wire-pulling and political bargaining at Chicago this year are doomed to a sorry disappointment.

The events of the past year in legislative channels have taught League members the necessity of a real organization. The men who have forced me into this race declare that they want no ward politics, no dickering with cliques, no bargaining for later favors to particular states. 'An open and above board fight!' is the slogan of most of the coming candidates, and I believe they will deal a bitter pill to any faction attempting to introduce star chamber methods.

With Herrington's hat in the ring and several of the most important state organizations already hard at work in his behalf, the League battle is already assuming more than interesting proportions. Friends of H. B. Varner, of North Carolina, are waging an energetic campaign on behalf of the Southern editor and exhibitor, and reports are that the Ochs opposition is already wavering.

Mr. Varner's friends are especially wroth over the attempt to make it appear that his candidacy is merely a sectional one, and to bring the issue of the South versus the North into the League battle.

H. B. Varner, Candidate for President of the National Exhibitors' League

A. F. Sams, of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, attorney for the North Carolina Motion Picture Exhibitors League, a member of the campaign committee which is boosting the candidacy of Colonel H. B. Varner for president of the National League, talked interestingly of the ideals which North Carolina exhibitors have in mind for the National League should the North Carolina candidate be elected.

"As we see it, the first great task that confronts the National League is the thorough organization and enlistment of the various state Leagues," declared Mr. Sams to a representative of Motion Picture News.

I was utterly surprised upon inquiry recently to find that in the majority of states where there are so-called organizations of exhibitors, the Leagues are conducted in a very slipshod manner with little regard to correct organization. I understand that in West Virginia they have been unable to get a quorum of exhibitors together for the appointment of delegates to the Chicago convention. Over in South Carolina, where a branch was organized last spring under very favorable circumstances, no further effort seems to have been made to bring them into the National League, and they will have no representation at Chicago. In Michigan, a state which I supposed was well organized, it is reported that their convention was so poorly attended that it was a farce.

"With this glaring lack of interest in the organization and forwarding of the State Leagues, it is small wonder that the National League stands about where it did three years ago, and has accomplished nothing for the exhibitors of the nation. Tell me, pray, in what direction has the National League receded so wonderful if rightly applied, but useless if allowed to lie dormant? The League employs a regular organizer, and I believe Mr. Herrington is a capable man, but it is evident that he has not received the proper construction and with his efforts to organize the states that he should expect from the heads of the National League."

"In North Carolina we have been given the credit of having the best organized, most compact and effective organization in America. To accomplish this it has required the expenditure of time and money and a thorough campaign of enlistment and inspiration for the major portion of which Colonel Henry B. Varner deserves the credit. That the labor has been worth while is evidenced by North Carolina's great work both in our state capital and at Washington and is an example of the power of one small but well organized state which effectively combated and won over obstacles placed in its path, seemingly by the entire industry.

"Mr. Varner is a man peculiarly fitted by natural endowments and training for exactly this character of work, and I am convinced beyond question of doubt that if the National League in session in Chicago should see fit to place its banner in his hands, that a militant campaign will be waged which will result in the organization of a National League of dynamic power and influence. With such an organization the entire forces of the League could and would, be immediately concentrated in the National capital or in the various state capitals when unjust and discriminatory legislation is threatening the existence of the industry, and the necessary expense incurred in work of the kind would be borne equally by all who share in its benefits and would not be burdensome to anyone.

"Another thing—we have reached the point where the influence of the screen is beginning to be recognized as a great force in the world, and a campaign of further enlightenment along this line seems the most desirable and necessary. The National League should exert its concentrated influence in an effort to make the screen unquestionably clean and moral and also to make it as great an educational force as possible in the community of which this land is a part. The right of an industry to live and thrive is measured by the extent of its usefulness, and the sooner this principle is accepted and acted upon by the exhibitors of the country the sooner we will our industry come into its own and become a great force in moral, social and political activities of the country."
Coliseum Hums as Convention's Opening Nears

Reports Indicate Record Attendance of Exhibitors During Week of July 14-22—Preliminary Schedule of Events

THE buzz of activity is beginning to mark the Chicago Coliseum, where beginning July 14, the seventh annual convention and exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America will be held. Carpenters are already at work; decorators are painting and hanging their scenery and the various film concerns, and others who will be represented on the exposition floor are laying out their space and starting their booth construction.

It is figured that at least a dozen new States will be represented at the convention under the national banner. Manager Schindler is receiving letters every day from exhibitors at all points of the compass, which shows the interest that is being taken in the coming convention. The delegates due from Virginia, North and South Carolina have made arrangements for an Exhibitors' League Special to take them to Chicago.

The Red Cross booth and its campaign for the convention is receiving much attention from the committee in charge, and is expected to arouse equally avid interest among the thousands that are expected to visit the Coliseum during this week. Many Miles Minter has been one of the first stars to answer the call for "star donations" for this booth, and has sent in a splendid little present that will be auctioned off with all the rest of the donations from the various stars. Marguerite Clark has also answered the call; Anita Stewart offers her "Goddess gown" and some other articles. The Red Cross booth will be in charge of J. W. Champion, executive secretary for the Chicago Chapter of the American Red Cross.

The exposition will open on Saturday, July 14. The convention will open on Tuesday afternoon, July 17. Delegates are requested to apply at the convention headquarters, Morrison Hotel, on Monday, the day previous for their badges and credentials.

The opening day of the exposition will be assigned to Goldwyn and Mac Marsh. Sunday will be Pathe-Pearl White Day. Tuesday will be Butterfly Day, with Violet Merserue featured. Wednesday, July 18, will be World-Alice Brady Day. The closing day has been assigned to Metro, with Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne as the stars of honor.

Maryland to Send Delegates to Chicago, After All

There has been a change of feeling among the members of the Maryland Branch of Motion Picture Exhibitor's League of America. It now looks as though Maryland will be represented on the floor of the convention in Chicago.

Seven delegates have been tentatively selected, but it has been learned that some of them will be unable to serve.

In order that there should be no disappointment, President Frank A. Horning, of the Maryland Branch, has sent out a circular letter asking all members who can serve as delegates to submit their names to the secretary. From the names submitted delegates to succeed those already suggested, and unable to go, will be selected, and also alternates.

A meeting for this purpose will probably be held Friday night, June 29. At the meeting delegates will be instructed also.

Altogether Cleveland raised $2,000,000.

Frank R. Shattuck Is New Censor in Pennsylvania

Frank R. Shattuck, Philadelphia attorney, has been appointed by Governor Brumbaugh as motion picture censor of Pennsylvania. The Senate confirmed June 28. This fills a vacancy caused by the forced resignation of J. Louis Breitinger, who was formerly the czarlike chairman of the board, on January 15, last. Breitinger got the place as a political appointment, and afterwards became involved in factional fight in the lower house of the Legislature.

Mr. Shattuck is a high class lawyer. His name was not mentioned for the office. It is reported that the governor appointed him because he believed Mr. Shattuck would work for the moral uplift and betterment of the picture shows. His term of office expires May 18, 1918.

Clarence J. Caine, Film Editor, Dies in California

Clarence J. Caine, film editor, authority on scenario writing and trade journal editor, died after a long illness at his home in Sierra Madre, near Los Angeles, June 21.

Mr. Caine was last employed in New York on Picture Play Magazine, Street & Smith publications, and later in Chicago as editor of Exhibitor's Herald.

Born in Milwaukee, March 19, 1895, he first wrote scenarios when with the Northwestern Life Insurance Company. This gave him the editorship of a motion picture column of the Milwaukee Free Press. He went to Motion Picture Magazine, as staff editor, and then was film editor and publicity man under J. A. Berst with the Selig Polyscope Company. His sunny disposition and undoubted ability attracted all who met him.

Lively Interest Makes Penn. Convention Rousing Success

Strong Attendance, Fine Weather, Brass Bands and Enthusiasm Make Philadelphia Assemble a Notable Event—Herrington Bgs for National as Well as State Spirit—Officers Elected

NOTHING stood in the way of making the sixth annual convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Pennsylvania held in Philadelphia June 25, 26 and 27, an event to talk about.

A parade of twenty-five motor cars up and down Broad Street preceded the Convention which, through the courtesy of the American Automobile Co., was held in the latter's auditorium in the Parkway Building.

After singing "The Star-Spangled Banner" the Convention was called to order at 10:45 A.M. by State President G. W. Sahner of Pittsburgh.

In his opening address Mr. Sahner, after a brief account of the use and scope of the motion picture said the Pennsylvania League stood unqualifiedly for the repeal of legalized censorship, while equally strong in demanding clean pictures.

John J. Herrington, league president, in welcoming the delegates to the city on behalf of the Philadelphia League, reiterated the League's stand against censorship and begged for closer co-operation in an endeavor to organize the state and thus help the industry.

National Organizer Fred J. Herrington pleaded for a loyal national as well as State organization. He reiterated the opposition against legal censorship but not against regulation, and pleaded for a league so strong that it could prosecute any producer of obscene pictures.

After making Mr. Cattell an honorary member of the League, the president announced that C. Rappaport, Fred J. Herrington and H. C. Kliehm constituted the Credentials Committee.

J. O'Donnell, Chas. Rappaport and H. Berman of the Philadelphia League, spoke on various phases of the industry, especially the problems that beset the Philadelphia League. Opinions were divided about the advantages of the open booking system.

Mr. Rappaport thought the National League should act on the Philadelphia situation.

Other speakers along the same lines of independent action and organization were G. W. Sahner, Stephen Busch, F. J. Herrington for National League; Leo Levison, Geo. Dembom, Harvey Day, B. F. Tolmas for exchanges; David Starkman for the salesmen and Pearl White for the stars.

J. O'Donnell was toastmaster.

The banquet was followed by a dance at which the Liberty Bond was exchanged by the exchangean was voted to Mr. and Mrs. John O'Donnell.

The following officers were unanimously declared elected: President, John O'Donnell, Philadelphia; first vice-president, C. O. Baird, of Portage; second vice-president (a new office suggested by the committee on organization), A. H. Nace, of Quakertown; secretary, C. H. Goodwin, of Philadelphia; treasurer, H. C. Kliehm, of Pittsburgh; resident vice-president, G. W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh.

All officers begged for hearty co-operation and promised to work hard to build up the league in Pennsylvania.

There was the number chosen, resulting in the election of J. O'Donnell, C. H. Goodwin and F. J. Herrington.

A motion was read from Morris Spier, Assistant District Attorney of Philadelphia, announcing that every bill of adverse legislation to the film industry in the state had been defeated, through Mr. Spier, who represented the State League at Harrisburg.

Delegates were sent un instructed. The choice of the next meeting of the convention was left to the executive committee to be decided before December.

Universal held first innings on stars. Violet and George Mersereau being the first to arrive.

Little Madge Evans and Carlyle Blackwell gave us a preview of what they were introduced later in the evening.

The Peerless Film Exchange, in charge of Harvey Day and Harold Rodner had the most novel. book with facsimile submarine, a working wireless a ship and a man dressed as a diver.

The Universal booth boasting the only electric sign was most attractive. Here was seen C. V. Mt. new York; S. Ford; Allan May, T. J. Tracy of the Willes-Barre exchange.

The Selicko booth was the only one daily decorated with fresh flowers. Max Milder, J. F. Flynn and B. F. Tolman.

Supreme Photo Play Productions besides a bandanna booth had a helpful feature for the exchanges—a stenographer, Miss Eva Taube. Credited twelve days and night to make any dictation desired.

"The Planter," with Tyronne Power, Pleases Reno

Audience

Tyronne Power, in a ten-roue version of "The Planter," was given a first public presentation on the screen in Reno, Nev., this week. The stockholders in the producing company are local men.

According to the dispatches from Reno the feature received the biggest demonstration any picture ever received there. The report states the audience was "wild at the climax."

Hurst Brothers, owners of the Grand theatre, where it was shown, are quoted as saying it is the most successful film they have ever played. They have played many features. "The Planter," is to be moved to New York about July 20.

Violet Mersereau, as Guest of Marcus Loew, Captures South

Violet Mersereau, Bluechild star, has just returned from Atlanta and Birmingham, where she went as the guest of Marcus Loew. She had a unique trip and a remarkable reception according to the press accounts. She had, intended to appear only in the evening three days in each city, but crowds were so enormous she had to go to the afternoon performances also.

Several thousand young girl admirers and a band of ten pieces were at the station in Atlanta to receive her. That evening she had to come out on the stage at 7:30 and again at 10 o'clock instead of once, at 9 o'clock, as was the plan. Next day Miss Mersereau pressed the popular star into service and she raised $5,350, selling Liberty Bonds.

Miss Mersereau was entertained at the exclusive East Lake Country Club and by the army officers from Fort Sheridan.

At Birmingham Miss Mersereau was the guest of Mayor Ward and Mr. Hanson, owner of the Birmingham News. She was in a whirl of social entertainment, at dinners, country club receptions and motor tours. Miss Mersereau left for Washington, Friday, and also appeared in Balti-

Messrs. Brock and Cromelin are two of the best-known operators in the film industry. Mr. Brock's name has been almost continuously associated with important purchases of foreign and domestic rights; Mr. Cromelin instituted here the Cosmofotofilm Company, American agents for the London Film Company; has been known as one of the most constructive workers within the industry and was formerly vice-president of the Columbia Phonograph Company. He has had much business experience abroad and organized the American Chamber of Commerce in Berlin.

"Queen of Spades" Is Shown to Russian Emissaries

Special Commission to This Country Sees Pushkin Picture at Auspices of National Press Club

IN the grand ballroom of the Willard under the auspices of the National Press Club, in its reception to the Special Russian Commission to the United States, there was shown last week the first of a series of Russian Art Film pictures, "The Queen of Spades."

These pictures were brought to this country by Nathan S. Kaplan and they are the first pictures of their kind to be shown in America. In the series of productions brought to this country last May by Mr. Kaplan, every well known writer, poet, painter, actor, singer and dancer of Russia is practically represented.

"Pikovaya Dama" ("The Queen of Spades") was written by Russia's greatest poet, Pushkin, and the music was composed by Tchaikowski. The opera was given six years ago at the Metropolitan Opera House and is considered one of the rare novelties of the Russian amusement world. The story told is of romance, love, intrigue and passion, with dramatic denouements. The pictures were taken in the Ermoliief studios of Petrograd and Moscow and the greatest living actors and actresses in Russia today enact the leading roles.

Such literary names as Tolstoy, Pushkin, Turgenieff, Dostoevsky, Sholokhov, Ostrovsky and Andreeff have furnished the subject matter of the pictures which will be shown to Americans by the Russian Art Film Company.

Boris Bakemetieff, the head of the Russian Commission, complimented Mr. Kaplan on his missionary work, in the filming for presentation in America of the works of Russia's great authors, painters, actors, dancers and historians.

In all Mr. Kaplan has brought over fifty photo productions.

On the occasion of the Washington showing of "The Queen of Spades" last week, Mr. Kaplan transported a large party of trade fare representatives and a Russian symphony orchestra of twenty-five pieces from New York on special train.

The party left New York at 3:30, returning immediately after the showing on the midnight train. The hospitality of the Russian Art Films made the trip a never to be forgotten day in trade annals. Under the general management of Mr. Kaplan's right hand workers, Goldsol, W. C. Fields and H. H. Van Loan, every possible thought was expended on behalf of the guest's comfort.

"Jack and the Beanstalk," the first of the Fox Kiddie Features, will be presented at a Broadway theatre within a short time. Work on the composition of a distinctive musical score to accompany the showing of the elaborate production will go forward in a few days. An unusually large orchestra will be required for the engagement.

The ten reels of "Jack and the Beanstalk," in its completed form represent the result of cutting and assembling from negatives and celluloid. Indeed, in the months spent in the erection of the massive settings, and the time devoted to preparation of the long "script" and the casting of thirteen hundred children for various parts in the magnificent pictorial fantasy, it is estimated that practically one year was needed for the film.

Although C. M. S. A. Franklin, who made the subject for Mr. Fox, were well known in the photoplay world as directors of children, it is said, their newest achievement will establish their reputation firmly as two of the keest men behind the silent stage.

Several other screen plays in the series have been finished, others are in work, and plans for still more have been projected. It is Mr. Fox's intention to make an institution of the Kiddie Features, so that they shall occupy the same place on the screen as children's literature. However, each of the Kiddie releases will be as thoroughly interesting to grown-ups as to the younger generation.

Mass. Exhibitors Boom Boston

The Massachusetts League of Exhibitors is determined that the next convention shall be held in Boston.

At the Massachusetts State Convention, held June 21, at Pemberton, near Bar Harbor, several speakers made addresses, the keynote of which was that it is "all wrong" for Chicago to have the national convention year after year.

The Massachusetts Convention was a well-attended affair and a spirit of eagerness made it evident that future meetings will be met with more and more enthusiasm.

Outdoor sports took up a large share of the time, as the committee on entertainment successfully kept aware of the important part that "stilt" racing, three-legged racing, fat men's races and kindred sports play in such an event being a happily remembered occasion.

Many actors and a strong representation of Massachusetts exhibitors were present.

Fox "Kiddie Feature" Series Warmly Received

Speedy Response from Exhibitors Will Be Staged on Spectacular Scale

WIDESPREAD interest among exhibitors is reported from the Fox offices since the initial statement that William Fox planned the making of Kiddie pictures with a direct box office appeal both to adults and children.

Mr. Fox's first conception of this thought came primarily from his close contact with the public, through the twenty-two picture theaters he now controls, deciding that it was but natural if these conditions existed in his theaters, located in all corners of neighborhoods, the same need existed throughout the country.

With these facts before him, and in an effort to carry through his plan, he immediately began casting about to secure the best talent available for the fulfilling of this long felt want. The first production is "Jack and the Beanstalk." A nationwide publicity campaign is planned in the different magazines and newspapers on this subject and the succeeding "Kiddie Features."

Harry A. Sherman Gets "I Believe" as Opening Feature

Harry A. Sherman, head of the newly formed Sherman Pictures Corporation, has purchased the exclusive right to "I Believe," from George Loane Tucker, who wrote the scenario and directed the production. The deal was closed in five minutes.

Mr. Sherman looked over all the films on the market. The merits of "I Believe" were brought to his attention. He went straight to it, saw it, and was deeply impressed with its possibilities. He got into communication with Mr. Tucker and secured the film.

President Wilson Appoints Brady to Mobilize Industry

Letter to National Association's Head Pleads for Co-ordination of Film People—Wants Brady to Work Close to Cred—Mentions Splendid Work Already Accomplished by Screen

RECOGNITION of the highest order has come to film men from President Wilson, in a letter addressed to William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. President Wilson has appointed Mr. Brady chairman of a committee to organize the film industry in such a manner as to organize the audiences of the nation from the start of picture theatres. These men are to be known as "Four Minute Men."

That President Wilson holds the motion picture industry as a mighty power in the molding of public opinion, is shown in his letter to Mr. Brady, which follows:

"Mr. William A. Brady,

"New York City.

"It is in my mind not only to bring the motion picture industry into fullest and most effective contact with the nation's needs, but to give some measure of official recognition to an increasingly important factor in the development of our national life. The film has come to rank as the very high medium for the dissemination of public intelligence, and it is through it that we tell the story of this country's achievements to the world. It is the most important portion of the presentation of America's plans and purposes.

"May I ask you, as chairman of my appointment, to organize the motion picture industry in such manner as to establish direct and authoritative co-operation with the committee on public information, of which George Creel is chairman.

"It is much to ask, but my knowledge of the patriotic service already rendered by you and your associates makes me count upon your generous acceptance.

"Cordially and sincerely yours,

"Woodrow Wilson."

Mr. Brady accepted Sunday, sending the following reply to President Wilson:

"Dear Mr. President:

"I am in receipt of your highly esteemed favor of June 28 requesting me as chairman by your appointment to organize the motion picture industry in such manner as to establish direct and authoritative co-operation with the committee on public information of which Mr. Creel is chairman.

"In the full appreciation of all that is entailed in bringing about the desired conditions under which the motion picture industry will throw its weight to the last ounce in the fight confronting American people, I accept your commission with enthusiasm. The devoted men and women of the motion picture world have already shown their eager loyalty to the country's cause with a spontaneous fervor freely beyond words, and in speaking thus for them I but feebly reflect the noble sentiments which fill their hearts. I hereby assure you of the undivided conscientious and patriotic support of the entire industry in America.

I have the honor to be your obedient servant.

"WILLIAM A. BRADY.

"President National Association of the Motion Picture Industry of America."

N. A. M. P. I. Names National Directors

Various Divisions of Industry Select Candidates to Be Voted Upon at Chicago Meeting Held During Convention Week

CANDIDATES for the Board of Directors of the National Association were appointed from various branches of the business last week and will be voted upon at the first annual meeting of the Association, which will be held at the Princess Theatre, Chicago, Wednesday, July 18. The producers made the following nominations:

William A. Brady, World Film Corporation; D. W. Griffith, Artcraft Pictures Corporation; William L. Sherrill, Frohman Amusement Corporation; Carl Laemmle, Universal Film Manufacturing Company, and Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

General Division—Paul Gulick, Universal Film Manufacturing Co.; Arthur James, Metro Pictures Corporation; William A. Johnston, Motion Picture News; Joseph F. Lee, Silent Rights Player, and Thomas G. Wiley, Novelty Slide Co.

There are thirty members on the Board of Directors of the National Association at the present time, one-third, or ten of whom are nominated by the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Each of the other four branches, above named, nominates five directors. President Brady has announced that it is his purpose to apply through the regular channel for an increase in the number of directors from the exhibitors from ten to fourteen and from the other branches from five to seven. This action is taken in view of the large growth in the membership of the National Association during the past eight months and with a view to bringing to the directorate the men representing important interests who have been helpful in upbuilding the organization and whose advice and counsel will be welcome by the active officials who have given so much of their time and money during the past year to make the National Association a truly representative organization of the film interests. It is assumed that the various increases in the directorate will be appointed at the annual meeting, in which event the producers have recommended that Samuel Goldfish of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and William Fox of the Fox Film Corporation be nominated as the two additional producer directors.

The distributors have appointed a nominating committee to select their two additional representatives on the Board. The supply and equipment division has recommended N. C. Cotabish, National Carbon Company, Cleveland, Ohio, and Joseph F. Costal, Novelty Slide Company, as the two representatives from this division.

Fred J. Beecroft, of the Exhibitors Trade Review, and George Irving, motion picture director, were recommended on Friday as the two additional representatives from the general division.

If these plans are made effective the National Association will have, after July 18, a board of directors of forty-two in number, as against thirty during the past year.

Many of the officers and directors of the organization are planning to leave for Chicago Monday, July 16, and arrangements are being made for a special car to be attached to the Twentieth Century Limited, leaving the Grand Central at 2:45. Applications for executive rooms have been made at the offices of the National Association, Times Building. The headquarters of the National Association in Chicago will be the Congress Hotel, and will be in charge of Frederick H. Elliott, Executive Secretary.

General Film to Open Three More Exchanges

As a result of the expansion inaugurated by General Manager Harold Bolster in the General Film Company's volume of product, the order has gone out for the opening of three exchanges in as many different cities not now used as distributing centers. The three new exchanges will be announced soon. It was found necessary to provide them to relieve other exchanges of pressure of business arising out of the larger product being handled.

General Sales Manager S. R. Kent is at present engaged in organizing the staffs of the new exchanges and arranging quarters.

A New Arrival

The wife of J. M. Goldstein, president of Exclusive Features, Inc., on Friday morning, June 23, presented him with a daughter, weighing ten pounds. First announcements state the new arrival is crying to be starred in the movies.
Fox Announces Plans for New Fiscal Year

WILLIAM FOX, who has just returned from his California Studios, announces plans for an auspicious twelve months of moving pictures, beginning next September.

The Fox organization has in the last year created a distributing organization that encircles the globe. The Fox agencies are located in twenty-seven cities of the United States, six in Canada, six in South America, five in Australia and the Far East, ten in England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales, and offices in every other civilized country in the world.

In this connection it is worth of mention that Carmen produced by Mr. Fox with artificial Spanish scenery in Fort Lee, N. J., was shown in Seville, Spain, and was well received in Madrid.

Likewise, Romeo and Juliet staged in the little New Jersey town with the costumes of the Shakespearean period, was shown on the screen in Stratford-on-Avon, England, during the recent Shakespearean festival.

"It is recognized in every foreign country that American films excel and have a world-wide appeal in theme, action and story," said Mr. Fox. "The American producers competing with the best brain and the wonderful scenic locations of France, Italy and other European countries, have defined all foreign competition.

The war conditions have not permitted the foreign producers to stage as elaborately or expensively as we in this country, but I believe that the greatest imagination, biggest themes and most elaborate cinema creations, will continue to be staged by American producers for the future.

"For the season 1917-18, I will present Annette Kellermann in a new sub-sea picture of which George Bronson Howard is the author. The director is John G. Adolfi. Scenes at the bottom of the ocean by means of a patented submarine apparatus will inaugurate a new angle of entertainment.

"The assistance of the Smithsonian Institute, of Washington, and the British Museum are acknowledged in connection with Miss Kellermann's new film, also the co-operation of the United States Fisheries Commission. This picture is yet unnamed, but the new film will be more elaborate, but totally different in story and action from "A Daughter of the Gods." It will be shown in New York this autumn.

"In response to a general demand throughout the country from Women's Clubs, editors, educators and others interested in the welfare of the young, I have staged a series of children's fairy tales.

"The first, 'Jack and the Beanstalk,' will be shown at a Broadway theatre not later than September. In the children's pictures, all parts will be enacted by juvenile artists, selected with great care, and the themes are intended for young and old. 'Aladdin' and the 'Wonderful Lamp,' 'Treasure Island' and 'Babes in the Wood' are among the children's pictures already staged.

"William Farnum will appear at a Broadway theatre in 'The Conquerer,' which is the life story of Sam Houston, and depicts the early political life of the State of Texas. I believe this play will point the way to educational filming of American history, yet giving the necessary dramatic action. Mr. Farnum will also appear in 'When a Man Sees Red,' by Larry Evans, and 'The Doctor,' by Ralph Connor, the Canadian author.

"Miss Theda Bara will make her initial appearance on Broadway in a picture version of 'Cleopatra.'

"The Honor System," dealing with American social conditions, will be shown in September throughout the United States.

"Mr. Dustin Farnum, who has been absent from the screen as well as the speaking stage for the last ten months, will be seen in 'The Scarlet Pimpernel,' by Baroness D'Orcy; "Durand of the Bad Lands," by Maibelle Heikes Justice; "North of Fifty-Three," by Bertrand Sinclair, and 'The Spy,' by George Bronson Howard.

"R. A. Walsh has written and staged a remarkable American story, 'The Innocent Sinner.' In this play Miriam Cooper is the star. I will also stage a series of comedy pictures and farces.

"Ferrets of the New York engagements of these film will be announced shortly, as well as the opening of the Broadway theatres in which they will be presented."

Mr. Fox has completed arrangements with the British and French war offices, as well as the British Admiralty, for showing films to soldiers and sailors in the European war zone. He has also made a similar offer to the War and Navy departments at Washington.

Clara Kimball Young is Ready for the Fray

Winding Up Tour in South and Will Return Shortly to Take Up Production of First Picture Under Her Own Management—Play, Not Named, Selected

CLAARA KIMBALL YOUNG is still engaged in visiting the principal cities of the country in the interests of her own motion picture producing company, which has just been organized, while her representatives in New York are engaged in preparations for the actual work.

The first release is scheduled for about the middle of August. The initial picture will be from a big story from the pen of a well known writer for the screen—and the story has already been bought and paid for.

The director chosen for the first picture is one who has already achieved an enviable reputation in the motion picture industry and will, in himself, bring much value to the production.

A studio in the New York community has already been secured and the players whom Miss Young has personally selected to support her are being engaged. Definite announcement of the name of the first picture cannot be given now, as changes will be made in the studio, and the prominent supporting players in the new company, will be made soon after Miss Young's return to New York in the very near future.

According to advance announcements, Miss Young is to have liberties in the working out of her further screen destiny which have never before been enjoyed by a motion picture player.

One big point which Miss Young is making in beginning with her own company is that under no circumstances or conditions will she have to do with the production of any picture which is at all likely to run foul of censor boards throughout the country. She says that she has little personal liking for the sex plays and will be a lot happier keeping away from them. Moreover, she argues, the commercial value of a picture which finally reaches the screen after having been cut and ripped by censors is invariably impaired for the reason that the taking out of the matter to which exception has been taken destroys the producer's idea as he originally visualized it.

Miss Young's trip through the South and West has been in the nature of a friendly visit to exchange men, exhibitors and the public in general.

R. S. Peck Makes His Bow in Film Publicity

R. S. Peck is the new publicity man of the Canadian Universal Film Company, at Toronto, Ont. He succeeds Mr. Cambridge.

Recently Mr. Peck has been doing special advertising work for the Toronto Daily News. He is well known to newspaper circles throughout Ontario, having held editorial positions on a number of dailies there, as well as in the United States. He has also been in sales work in the automobile field on both sides of the border.

Friends have a high opinion of Mr. Peck's ability and enthusiasm and predict success for him in the picture industry.
Daylight Saving, Latest Menace to Exhibitors, Passes Senate

LEGISLATION Far More Harmful to Every Exhibitor Than the Ticket Tax Is Speeded Through Senate Without Dissenting Voice—Congress Will Let Bill Slide Through Unless Properly Informed

DAYLIGHT saving, declared by film men to be a far greater menace to the business than the recent threat of a tax, passed the United States Senate without a dissenting voice on June 27.

Motion Picture News warned exhibitors more than a month ago that the daylight saving plan is madness, as far as the exhibitor is concerned. It was pointed out then how hastily and with what little thought had the Parliament of Australia passed the daylight saving bill, to push the clocks ahead an hour.

"It sounds splendid on the surface," said a well-known film man Saturday, speaking of the "save an hour" plan, "but it means that, if passed, the exhibitors—every one of them—will go bankrupt or go out of business. People won't come to shows in broad daylight. They will patronize beaches and outdoor recreation parks, neglecting the theatres.

As previously noted in the columns of Motion Picture News, the bill provides for the division of the United States into five zones, the limits of each of which are to be defined by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission, having regard for the convenience of commerce and the existing junction points and division points of common carriers.

Section three of the bill provides "that at two o'clock ante meridian of the last Sunday in April of each year the standard time of each zone shall be advanced one hour, and at two o'clock ante meridian of the last Sunday in September in each year the standard time of each zone shall, by the retarding of one hour, be returned to the mean astronomical time of the degree of longitude governing each zone respectively."

The Senate was informed that this law would accomplish valuable economies in our national life; the comfort and convenience of many millions of our people will be promoted by its passage; and it is regarded of special value in the present national emergency. As stated above, nothing has been said of its disadvantages. The only interests objecting to the bill, according to the remarks of Senator Robinson of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, were some of the railroads, whose representatives declared that a great deal of confusion would arise in the railroad business as a result of this change of time. Motion picture interests were not heard at all in the matter, and they probably are more vitally affected than any other business, because of the fact that "daylight saving" means "business losing" for them.

It is very likely, however, that when the bill comes up in the House it will meet with considerable opposition. It is understood that Judges Warren C. Adamson, chairman of the Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, does not favor the measure, and his opposition has led to a skeleton proposition being introduced into the House, so worded as to get it before the House Judiciary Committee.

It has been suggested by Harry M. Crandall, head of the Crandall Amusement Company, who is keeping close tab on all matters of legislation, that a protest against the passage of the bill by the House of Representatives be immediately dispatched to Commissioner William C. Adamson, and that another such letter be sent to Hon. Edwin Y. Webb, chairman of the House Committee on the Judiciary. This latter suggestion is made in view of the fact that a bill having the same project in view has been referred to the Judiciary Committee for its consideration.

FOLLOWING several months of the usual wild rumors which characterize the signing of a star, an authentic statement has come from the Los Angeles office of Motion Picture News that Charlie Chaplin has been secured for one year by the First National Exhibitors Circuit.

Chaplin's income for that period will exceed that of any star, $1,000,000 for the year, which is more than $300,000 above the amount he received for his past year's work with Mutual.

According to the statement from Los Angeles, Chaplin will produce eight pictures during the forthcoming year, each of which will be of two reel length.

Before beginning his activities with the First National Exhibitors Circuit, the comedian will complete his twelfth picture for Mutual, then go into retirement for a month, whereupon he will start production on the first film for his new employers.

It is announced that Chaplin will continue to use his present studio, and that no changes in his staff will be made.

J. D. Williams, manager of the First National Exhibitors Circuit, showed up small elation at the acquisition of Charles Chaplin.

"We consider Chaplin to be the greatest comedian in the world," Mr. Williams told Motion Picture News. "We know of no star who can take the public up front of the theatre to a greater length, or cause the S.R.O. sign to be put up more quickly than Mr. Chaplin.

"A great many people, when the Exhibitors Circuit was organized, took the usual "thumbs down" attitude, because such organizations have never amounted to anything in the past.

"I think that the doubters are now convinced that a circuit of such reputable and reliable exhibitors as our members represent can accomplish anything that money and organization can be expected to accomplish. It is needless to say that the available capital of this organization is almost limitless, and it has the peculiar advantage of being capital that is working hard every minute of the time.

"Regarding Mr. Chaplin's future productions for us, it is probable that he will continue along the lines that he has so successfully developed in the past. It pleases the patrons better than any type of comedy we can find, and with the war gloom hanging over the nation, we believe that the finest sort of comedy should be secured for them."

Mr. Chaplin, who is now in Los Angeles, had nothing to say about his new affiliation. He would neither affirm nor deny the report that he might receive $1,000,000; but the information comes from a source which has heretofore proved thoroughly reliable.

It is understood that Chaplin is to receive $75,000 bonus for signing the contract. He is said to have rejected an offer from Mutual to produce twelve pictures for $1,000,000. Chaplin received offers, when it was known that he was again in the market, from practically every important film concern.

Circuit Holds Convention

Four hundred theatres and $30,000,000 of dollars was said to be represented at the convention of the First National Exhibitors Circuit held at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, last Friday and Saturday. Twenty-seven members and representatives of the new organization gathered for this first Chicago meeting, which resulted in deals and plans partly consummated that when they are announced, it is said, will be epochal within the motion picture industry.

The present, representing most of the links in First National chain were: S. L. Rothapel, of New York; T. H. Tally, of Los Angeles; J. D. Williams, of Australia and New York; Harry Schwab, of Philadelphia; Aaron Jones, of Jones, Linick and Schneider, Chicago; E. H. Halsey, of Dallas, Texas; Robert Liebler, of Indianapolis; J. H. Kunsky, of Detroit; Mr. Dahaken, of San Francisco; Nathan H. Gordon, of Boston; E. Mandelbaum, of New York; Tom Saxe, of Milwaukee, and William Sievers, of St. Louis.

Many important plans for next year were arranged at the private sessions held. In reference to their producing and distributing activities it was stated by Aaron Jones that five of the biggest film stars are expected to sign contracts with the First National Company.
Producing and Selling Ends Distinguished

W R O K I N G on the assumption that the business of producing pictures and that of marketing them are two separate and distinct occupations, Felix Malitz, formerly vice-president and manager of Pathé Frères and Pathé Exchange, Inc., now general manager Piedmont Pictures Corporation, 729 Seventh avenue, has taken up the selling end of the business on a somewhat different scale than this end of the business has been exploited before.

In reality Mr. Malitz takes the broker's point of view and applies it to the selling of pictures. This is not a new idea, but Mr. Malitz has taken it up with the intent to carry it to a point of efficiency and magnitude which has in the past been ignored.

"The production of pictures," says Mr. Malitz, "is such a complicated and difficult task, that those attending to that phase of the business ought to strain all their energy in order to reach the highest degree of efficiency possible. The opinion seems to prevail in many quarters that, so long as the pictures are good one or is called good, it matters little what its cost is because it has to bring and will bring fancy prices as soon as it is placed on the market. Such an opinion places the business of producing pictures in the gambling class."

"It is quite natural that a group of men who risk a large sum of money on the production of a picture without taking into consideration its different angles, and whether or not its fate will be success or failure, are suddenly awakened to the fact that their production has cost too much, and that its exploitation has cost more than the benefits to be reaped. These men take a chance on the picture turning out to be a winner."

"In my opinion," continued Mr. Malitz, "the future of the business is not in that direction nor should it be. The film business needs stability and a firm serious basis upon which to stand. No matter how good or how bad a picture is, the mere fact that it has cost an exorbitant price does not put it in the super-picture class, and a average good picture which is produced with the idea that it is not to be a 'world beater' often develops into a hundred per cent. picture, judged wholly by the reception given it by the public. A good picture, produced with economy, will be the final winner because it can be put on the market without asking an exorbitant price, and the public can enjoy it at a reasonable entrance fee. The mere fact that someone asks a big admission fee to see a picture that cost him a lot of money to produce, does not make that picture a super-feature and amounts in many cases to unfairness to the public."

"Very often, pictures cost, by far, too much money, because they have not been produced with an eye toward efficiency and alacrity, because the man in charge and the one who has everything to loose, is not in attendance to supervise every detail. He is, no doubt, away from the scene of operations, exploiting his last picture and placing it before the public. In the meantime, general expenses, waste, inefficiency and incidental expense piles high and brings up the cost of the production unnecessarily."

"The producer should stick to his job, to the studio, and leave the marketing of his finished product to other hands devoted exclusively to the exploitation of production. In this way his attention is not distracted from his production under way, and he can make a good picture at the least possible expense."

"It is the practice of most producers to maintain an expensive selling force which cost an amount of money out of all proportion to the actual cost of the production. So that whatever the picture might have yielded the producer, is consumed by the expense attached to the selling forces. An efficient and reliable selling organization costs money—a lot of money, and it requires familiarity with domestic and foreign markets, business relations and a heavy expense."

Fox Convention Opens—Changes Prophesied

Representatives from All Parts of the World Present at Third Annual Convention in New York

W I T H the opening of the third annual convention of the Fox Film Corporation, Monday, July 1, in the ball room of the Biltmore Hotel, William A. Fox expressed the opinion that it would be one of the most successful conventions yet held, and that in all probability the policy of the Fox organization would undergo some radical changes.

Representatives from all parts of the world, including United States, Canada, South America and the countries of Europe were present at the opening of the convention. The convention will remain in session for three days after which and for the balance of the week the managers and representatives will be entertained by Mr. Fox and his chiefs of staff.

The first day of the session was given over to a get-together welcome. Nothing of very great importance from a business standpoint was given serious consideration. Mr. Fox announced that he would have something to say with regard to the probability of the organization and what steps he intended to take in this direction.

Mr. Fox expressed great satisfaction with the success of former conventions and hopes for the same from this convention. As he expressed it: "They knit more closely the great fabric of the Fox organization."

These conventions were conceived by Mr. Fox as one of the best ways possible to bring to a better understanding the representatives of the different branches of the organization. Reports will be read by men with expert knowledge of the film market conditions throughout the world, and the condensed thought of the convention will, Mr. Fox believes, be of the greatest aid to him in the production of pictures suitable for the widest possible distribution.

Those present were: William Fox, W. R. Sheehan, A. Carlos, Herman Robbins, C. W. Eckhardt, F. H. Wachter, A. F. MacIntyre, Clayton P. Sheehan, E. Waldo, H. L. Clark, Mr. Preis, Mr. Yarnall, H. J. Roberts, Mr. Maisch, Irving Mass, Sam Shapin and Aaron Fox, Walter Sanford, Hamilton Thompson, E. Richard Schayer, D. B. Morrissey, Jay York, Geraldo B. Spero, Stuart Acheson and A. B. Borad, W. T. Wilson, Mr. Goodman, Carey Wilson, H. Fuld, Thomas W. Brady, F. B. McClure, Fred W. Lange, Mr. Richland, Harry Leonhardt, Paul C. Mooney, Lewis S. Levin; John L. Day and Sam Dembow, Atlanta; C. G. Ince with Four Stars Casts His Lot with Paramount

Exclusive Announcement of in Acquisition of Director

CONFIRMING the exclusive announcement in Motion Picture News last week, a statement was issued Friday by Thomas H. Ince that he and four of his stars have concluded negotiations with Artcraft and Paramount, and hereafter will produce pictures for those organizations.

While no definite announcement has been made concerning the stars who go with Ince, it is believed that three of them are William S. Hart, Enid Bennett and Charles Ray.

The announcement from Ince headquarters said, in part:

"By the terms of the agreement which was entered into with Mr. Ince by Adolph Zukor, Hiram Abrams and Walter E.
Greene for Famous Player-Lasky, Paramount and Arctraft, respectively, all productions which Mr. Ince supervises personally will be released by Arctraft. This means that they will be grouped with productions starring Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, George M. Cohan, Geraldine Farrar and Elsie Ferguson, and that all other Thomas H. Ince productions will be released with the pictures starring Mme.
Petrova, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick, Billie Burke, Lina Cavalieri, Vivian Martin, Julian Eltinge, Jack Pickford and Sessue Hayakawa. By this arrangement also Mr. Ince becomes associated with David W. Griffith and Cecil B. De Mille as individual producers for Arctraft.

Mr. Ince will continue to make his producing headquarters in California and expects to return to the coast in a very short time to begin active work on production under the new releasing arrangement.

"My association with the Famous-Players-Lasky Corporation comes as the result of careful deliberation and of a painstaking study of motion picture conditions.
I have kept much more closely in touch with market conditions than is the case with the average producer, and I therefore speak with impartial authority when I say that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has evolved a distribution plan which is for the interests of producer, star and exhibitor.

"Furthermore, my own inquiries of exhibitors, made while negotiations with the concern were pending and after my resignation from Triangle, convinced me that Paramount and Arctraft had given the exhibiters just the method of distribution which they most desire. Frankly, I suryeyed the field very deliberately before making any new alliance, as I was in no hurry to make new connections. I have reached a point where a few dollars more or less do not mean as much to me as happiness in my business relations, and to know that my efforts for the industry are in sympathy with the most progressive and lasting policies."

"Mr. Zukor paid a high compliment to Mr. Ince in the few brief remarks which he made concerning this highly important transaction.

"As a producer and as a man, Thomas
Ince has always commanded my highest admiration and respect. There is an individuality stamped upon every one of his productions which gives it a flavor all its own. They are full of vitality and of real American manhood—the pictures with a punch which the red-blooded American likes to see. These elements have always

Mack Sennett's Comedies to be Distributed by Paramount

Originator of Keystone and Keystone Cops Casts His Lot with Paramount—To Discontinue Keystone Name—Will Produce Two-Reelers—Severed Triangle Connection Last Week

MACK SENNETT, who has tickled the ribs of the civilized and the uncivilized world, from Tuscara to Timbuctoo, with the antics of his band of Keystone fun-makers, has aligned his forces with the Paramount Pictures Corporation, and will hereafter not use the Keystone as his brand name.

The comedies will be two reels in length, will be issued at the rate of one every other week, and will be known as Sennett Com-dies.

Mack Sennett severed his connections with Triangle last week. Triangle retains the privilege of using the Keystone name.
For several days Mr. Sennett and Charles
O. Bauman, business associate with Mr.
Sennett in his new enterprises, and formerly vice-president of the New York Motion Pictures Corporation, had been in conference in New York with Adolph Zukor, president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation and Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount Pictures Corporation. Arthur Butler Graham was Mr. Sennett's attorney in the transaction.

Mr. Sennett will leave for the Pacific Coast this week, and will produce his pictures in Edendale, Cal. In his announcement regarding his new association with Paramount, Mr. Sennett did not refer to the players who will appear in his company.

Coming directly after the announcement that Thomas H. Ince will also produce for Paramount and Arctraft, the statement of
Mr. Sennett's association with Famous Players-Lasky created considerable comment in motion picture circles.

Thomas Ince, who on Thursday announced that he had decided to release productions through Arctraft and Paramount, lost no time in getting busy. Less than twenty-four hours after the deal had been consummated, Ince had packed his bag and baggage and was headed for the balmy climes of California. Ince left for the cost Friday afternoon without knowing exactly where he will produce. Several California towns have offered to build a studio for Ince, without telling him, provided he will locate in their midst. It is certain that Ince's studio will be built near Los Angeles, the film-producing center of the United States.

Triangle has changed the name of Inceville to Hartville. The new Triangle-Keystone comedies will probably be produced in the Fine Arts Studio.

Mack Sennett will start production at an early date.
Julian Johnson is Selznick Editor-in-Chief

Louis J. Selznick Picked Him For His Clever Work on Photoplay Magazine, Where He Wrote "Shadow Stage" and "Close Ups" for Years

JULIAN JOHNSON, editor of Photoplay Magazine, has resigned from that publication to accept the position of editor-in-chief of Selznick-Pictures. His resignation from Photoplay will go into effect as soon as the publishers engage a successor. He will take up his new duties immediately, probably soon after July 1.

In the three years that Mr. Johnson has been editor of Photoplay, it has grown from a small beginning until it is recognized as a leading "fan" publication. He had two departments, "The Shadow Stage" and "Close Ups." Speaking of his regard for Photoplay Magazine, Mr. Johnson said:

"When I began to write screen reviews, less than three years ago, scarcely any publications except the trade papers printed such things. Now every newspaper of consequence in the United States has its department of film criticism, in the main honest and outspoken."

Kleine Policy of "No Advance" Gets Praise

George Kleine has been fairly deluged with congratulatory letters from exhibitors since he announced that he, acting for Kleine, a successful manner that had abolished the advance deposit system. Exhibitors express themselves as believing that Mr. Kleine's standing in the industry will assure a similar announcement from many of the other big organizations.

Parsons Hires Eight Acrobats for "Tarzan"

William Parsons, president of the National Film Corporation of America, to ensure success to the coming production of this company, has engaged eight acrobats, and brought them to the coast from Chicago and New York to try them out for the role of Tarzan for the production. The leading part in this unusual story pertains to a human baby that was raised by an ape mother following the death of her baby when she kidnapped the white child from a party of explorers. A greater portion of the photoplay pertains to the life of this child after it has grown to manhood, and the actor who takes the role must be an acrobat of unusual talent, as well as a good dramatic actor.

Chaplin, Fairbanks and Eltinge Raise $4,000 for Red Cross

Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks and Julian Eltinge served to raise $4,000 in Hollywood Saturday evening, June 23, for the Red Cross fund. The three luminaries of the film world agreed to attend an open-air concert given in a Hollywood Park, and took charge of the event in such a manner that everybody present gave up all the coin they had on their person.

Fred C. Aiken, Selig Man, in Edmund M. Allen Company

Fred C. Aiken has been elected a guiding spirit of the Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation. Although busily engaged in the state rights field for the Selig Company, he plans to spend a portion of every working day in the Allen offices, 29 South LaSalle street, in association with Edmund M. Allen, Harry J. Ridings, Joseph Haxton and others.

"The Garden of Allah" will be formulated and launched. The company is planning an elaborate booking and publicity campaign in eight states.

Territory Still Open for Buyers of "The Crisis"

Edward Nelson, president of the Sherman-Elliott Company, of Minneapolis, Minn., while in Chicago recently, conferred with Mr. Schaefer enthusiastically concerning "The Crisis," considered by many as one of the greatest feature films ever made. "The drama has love interest, historical accuracy, and a strong appeal to patriotism," said Mr. Nelson. Reports received from state rights buyers are all indicative that the picture is going big everywhere.

According to Mr. Nelson there is some territory remaining open for "The Crisis," and those interested should communicate immediately with Mr. Nelson, 854 McNichol Building, Minneapolis, Minn., for territory will not remain open long. The territory which can be acquired by prompt action includes Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Texas, Oregon, Washington, Montana, Idaho, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico and Wyoming.

New Educational Film Company

A department of the Standard Films Industry, Inc., entitled "Educators' Cinematograph Company" has opened offices in the Educational Building, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City. This department is in charge of Alfred H. Saunders, who has been connected with the publishing or educational end of the industry for some ten years past.

Mr. Saunders plans through the cooperation of educators to produce educational film at the American Film Laboratories in New York City. He is now on his way to extend the cooperation of the National Educational Association at Portland, Ore.

A pamphlet entitled "The Tiffany of the Film Industry" has been issued by this company and may be obtained upon application as above.

"Mutt and Jeff" in New Series Released July 9

A new series of Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons will be released on Monday, July 9, and will there be a new one each week thereafter.

Bud Fisher, the creator of these world-famous characters, ceased releasing them about three months ago in order to accumulate a reserve fund enabling him an opportunity to improve the animation and the humor as well as the quality and finish.

The releasing syndicate estimates that these characters are enjoyed by about fifteen million readers daily in the United States.

"Pershing in France"

The Universal Film Manufacturing Company received a shipment of negatives from France last week, showing Major General Pershing's landing in France and his reception in Boulogne and Paris.

These are the first pictures of the commander's arrival on the European continent to be received. The Universal company, appreciating this fact, hastily made a hundred and fifty prints of the negative, and before last Friday it was shown in all the large picture houses of New York City and was on its way to other cities.

The pictures show the transport which conveyed General Pershing and his staff from England to France entering the harbor, his reception by the French officials, the crowds of civilians and soldiers that lined the walks wherever he went, and the still bigger reception accorded him in Paris.

"Persuasive Peggy" Will Have Trade Showing Soon

Mayfair's first production, "Persuasive Peggy," is completed, and Mr. M. A. Schlesinger, president of the company, is so impressed with the work done by Peggy Hyland, Mayfair's first star, that he has selected Director Charles J. Brabin to collaborate with Miss Hyland and authoress, Miss Maravene Thompson, to do the cutting and titling, believing that they can obtain the best results because of their intimate knowledge of the story.

"Persuasive Peggy" is the story of a girl who wanted to convert her husband to her convictions. The story is said to be quite true to life.
ON THE FIRING LINE

"Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" was the most popular recent picture with Robert Landry, of the Strand, Ogdenburg. The Strand shows Vitagraph and World pictures with occasional specials. It is stated to be as nice a house as in any town of the size.

Ben Wilson and Ham and Bud divide the honors for popularity with patrons of C. C. Waskey's Idle Hour, Baltimore, Md. First run Universal and General Film services are offered in this 227-seat house at a five cent admission. Business is reported "fair."

Mary Miles Minter in "Faith" brought the money in for Verne Schewski at the Star theatre, Belvidere, Ill. Pathe, Bluebird, Art Dramas, Mutual and Super Pictures are used. Other popular stars are William Russell, Alma Hanlon and Florence La Badie.

The Lyric, Earlville, Ill., a short time ago played the reissued "Tess of the Storm Country", and the business done causes it to be listed among the four recent "big hits." "War Brides," "The Common Law," and "Snow White" are other money-getters. F. M. Edgett is manager of the house, which, with a seating capacity of 325, shows Paramount, Selznick, Vitagraph, K-E-S-E, Pathe and World pictures.

Big Demand for Features in Fall, Says Backer

F. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, states that he looks forward to an increased demand for features in the autumn and that he feels it is logical to expect that the public, now educated to only the best productions, will not be satisfied with inferior productions.

Mr. Backer says: "You will hardly drop into a street car or subway train where you will not find a movie magazine or two being perused by some enthusiastic fan. In fact, these publications are more in evidence than the popular magazines."

"There is no star of prominence, no producer, no scenario writer that is not well known to the average fan. Even the cameramen are beginning to shape themselves personally before the eyes of these enthusiastic explorers in the realm of the film."

"Indeed, I believe that the legitimate theatrical profession received the close attention which has been given the movie industry it would have progressed further even that it has today."

"I shall shape my future activities suggested by these facts and shall buy only those features which will appeal to the exhibitors and their customers, feeling certain that such methods will tend to make relations more pleasant and profitable."

Oklahoma to Send Uninstructed Delegates

Rousing Convention, Attended by Leading Exhibitors from Many Cities, Votes to Leave Its Representatives Entirely Free at Chicago

Oklahoma is one more state to send its delegates uninstructed to the Chicago convention.

The state convention, attended by forty prominent exhibitors from the leading cities of the state, was a most enthusiastic gathering. The vote to leave the delegates free to act as they please at Chicago carried overwhelmingly. In the delegation are the following:

A. B. Moonand, Shawnee, president; L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, secretary; S. W. Jones, Atus; John Feeney, Okmulgee; Thomas H. Bolan, Oklahoma City; J. L. Olive, Chickasha, and John Slocum, of Mangum.

Alternates were elected as follows: J. H. Molder, Sapulpa; Maurice Lowenstein, Oklahoma City; J. S. Clayman, Cushing; J. L. Carr, Kingfisher, and H. W. McCall, of Oklahoma City.

The meeting, held at Lee Hicks' hotel, Oklahoma City, June 19, really marks the completed organization and campaign opening for a greater Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of Oklahoma.

Fred J. Herrington was present at the convention and was given an excellent reception. His report of the nationwide activity in organization was one of the features of the convention.

It was voted to pay all the expenses of the president and secretary to the Chicago convention and all the delegates elected agreed to attend the big meeting on the lakeside. It is the first instance of the Oklahoma Exhibitors' League paying any portion of its delegates' expenses at a national convention.

The action of the United States Senate in setting the war tax aside, leaving the motion picture—the poor man's amusement—without additional burden, came in for warm commendation in the speeches.

Resolutions were passed thanking the Senators and with them P. W. Wells, president of the North Carolina League; C. W. Meighan, president of the Oregon League; Mr. Sams, attorney for the North Carolina League, and William F. Fear, of New York.

The convention was in every way inspiring as indicating the spirit of progress that prevails throughout the industry in Oklahoma.

Shelved License Revision Plan

The planned revision of licenses for the motion picture theatres of Chicago has been shelved in the city council's committee and no action will be taken in the matter until the end of the next half year period, which will be January 1. This has been done because no suitable schedule had been decided upon by the committee and the representation of exhibitors previous to the opening of the new fiscal year on July 1.

The council's committee, however, warned the exhibitors that they have definitely determined to increase the theatre taxation in order to swell the municipal revenue for the next year and advised them to prepare some sort of a schedule to submit to the committee at its next meeting. Until January 1, 1918, the Chicago exhibitors will continue paying their taxes at the rate of $200 a year for all theatres charging under 20 cents admission fee.

Cool Weather and Rain as Business Helps

Theatres in New Brunswick had the best May in years, according to reports from St. John.

Consensus of opinion in Campbellford, New Castle, Chatham, Moncton, Halifax, Truro, New Glasgow and Wolfville attributes this to cool weather and rain, which kept the people in town.

Caine in Person at Theatres

Derwent Hall Caine, star of "The Deemster," which Marcus Loew selected as the feature at all of his Great New York theatres last week, appeared personally at each of the theatres as an added attraction. He was whisked around the circuit in a huge limousine under the guidance of Fred H. Mitchell, director general of the Loew theatres.

New England Believes Program System Dying Out
"There will be no such thing as program pictures shortly" is the prediction made by New Haven exhibitors. The Paramount plan to replace programs with series pictures is announced to take effect August 5; the Metro and Fox are reported booked to follow, and exhibitors believe that the other companies will follow suit. Exhibitors generally favor this plan, as yet untried, believing it will give them better results as to securing pictures the public likes.

One Million Lead Pencils

The Art Dramas Service, distributors of Art Drama films in Chicago and the western territory, recently ordered one million bright yellow lead pencils upon which are printed an Art Drama advertisement. They will be given away to friends and possible friends of the Art Drama Company.

Mr. Clove, Our Hat Is Off

A personal appearance of Mary Pickford before any audience is probably the most difficult thing to arrange in this business. Yet the Turner and Dahmken theatre of San Jose, California, did it successfully. How it was arranged we can only credit to the type of brains which provides the material to keep this department forging along.

Mary Pickford made her little speech from the T & D stage on the evening of June 12, and the T & D theatre gained so much free advertising in the local newspapers that the clippings, now lying on our desk, look like a small mountain.

E. V. Clove, manager of the theatre, modestly explains how it was accomplished in a letter. He says:

"After camping on Mary's trail for over a month I finally persuaded her to appear at our theatre.

"It took six policemen to hold them back and in spite of the officers of the law they made one grand rush for the stage entrance and literally mobbed the poor little girl.

"The enclosed clippings will explain the rest of the incident."

I believe this is the first time in the history of the motion picture business that such a galaxy of stars have been assembled from one company to appear on the stage. The entire company, about 60, were present, many of the stars actually appearing on the stage.

Mr. Clove's reference to "the entire company," concerns Mary Pickford's company of players.

The proceeds of the performance went to a local charity.

R. R. Yards in His Lobby

Patrons of the Mecca theatre, Saginaw, Mich., entered the playhouse the other night through a miniature railroad yard. Charles Q. Carlisle, the manager, had transformed his lobby into an imitation switching terminal for a realistic presentation of the first episode of Mutual's "The Railroad Raiders."

A hand-car, one of the familiar pump-handle kind, stood in the center of the lobby. Railroad lanterns were strung across the front of the entrance. A six sheet poster was stretched above them. Almost every available inch of wall space was covered with three and one sheet posters and lobby cards.

Our Gallery of Live Ones

We are glad to hear, as often as possible, of the successful careers of exhibitors whose tactics merit them a place in this department. So it is with a feeling of pleasure that we relate briefly the career of George A. Mauk, of Phoenix, Arizona.

In 1911 Mr. Mauk opened a small house in Ray, Arizona, and from that nucleus has developed a chain of thrivin theatres extended through the southern part of the state. Each house is under the direction of a capable manager who understands and appreciates Mr. Mauk's methods. In fact, managerial ability is one of Mr. Mauk's most successful by-products.

Mr. Mauk's business policy, condensed into a few words, is this: Give the people what they want, get away from old circus ideas, develop patronage on strength of service rather than on an individual's personality, and, finally, devote your time to your own business, letting the other fellow play to the grand stand.

That policy is such a simple affair that its depth and breadth are apt to be underestimated.

The history of the Columbia theatre in Phoenix illustrates his ability in developing business.

This house is the best equipped in the city, but after a varied career of stock, road-show, vaudeville and a constantly changing management in which business grew from bad to worse, Mr. Mauk secured the services of E. J. Cooper, well known to exhibitors through the West and former manager and owner of a string of houses in Colorado and southern California.

Straight film showings were decided on and bookings of the best feature subjects on the market were obtained, a liberal advertising campaign was inaugurated with the result that the attendance increased rapidly to the point at the present time where capacity houses are the rule. This also despite the fact that admission to regular programs is twenty-five cents, while other houses in the city (ten in number) show at from ten to twenty cents.

McCormick Looks Out for Coming Heroes

S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the beautiful Circle theatre, recently made a patriotic move that also, as a matter of course, brought considerable valuable publicity to the Circle. At Fort Benjamin Harrison, Mr. McCormick arranged for a free motion picture show for the 5,000 officer students and 8,000 enlisted men stationed at the post.

The performance was no small matter to stage. As the shows are planned for frequent occasions during the summer, a crew of the Circle's stage employes spent several days in carrying out the extensive arrangements, building a large permanent frame for the screen, projection platform and band stand.
Circle Theatre Newspaper Ads Would Fill Any House

The newspaper advertisements contrived by S. Barret McCormick, manager of the Circle theatre, Indianapolis, Ind., are of a type that would create business in any community.

They show, among other excellent things, an effective use of the poster style in cuts. All of the cuts are a combination of the half tone and line processes, with the result that the impression they give is bold.

The exhibitor who is anxious to improve the general tone of his newspaper advertisements can gain another pointer from Mr. McCormick’s experience, in the arrangement of type, rules and the general employment of white space. His follow-up advertisement, which appeared after the opening of “On Trial,” is an excellent idea in itself.

We agree with Mr. McCormick, that by calling attention to what the critics have to say about his picture, places the screen on an equal footing with the stage. An air of dignity and sincerity is evident in every inch of the Circle’s “copy.”

Every time we hear of a good idea that will benefit exhibitors’ business, we print it. Every time you tell us of a live wire stunt, we are grateful. Send along those good ideas of yours—for the other fellow.

Mr. McCormick used space generously. This is a four-column display ad. The day after that appeared—

Is Your Lobby a Hash of Odds and Ends?

Here Is a New York Theatre’s Lobby Display That Defies Interest—It Scatters Your Attention to the Four Winds

Do you ever observe how a clever shoe went over for a look, and we were so impressed that we sent our artist over to draw a sketch. The sketch is presented here for your earnest consideration.

Does your lobby look anything like this? We sincerely hope not.

Men who really know advertising principles find out, before they make any progress at all, that the public has a “single track mind.”

When it comes to entertainment, your easy going public—the man and woman you want to lure into your theatre to the music of clinking dimes and quarters—only wants to think one thought at a time.

They are in precisely the same frame of mind as the customer who wanders into a shoe store to buy a pair of shoes. You can sell him more surely, more quickly by giving him one good thing to think about and admire than by giving him a dozen confusing things to think about.

This theatre illustrates, decisively the wrong way to plaster your lobby. Next week, we will illustrate, with photographs, how the “single idea lobby” can be hammered home with the most profitable results.

That Gray Ghost

The publicity departments of the various Universal exchanges have been concentrating lately upon Universal’s most recent serial, “The Gray Ghost.” Jones Cambridge, in charge of the publicity service department of the Canadian Universal office, has issued a chatty letter to “fans,” setting forth the merits of the picture, and enclosing a lapel button upon which is printed in gray a symbol and some matter pertinent to “The Gray Ghost.”

The man who arranged this lobby evidently thought that the public could carry dozens of ideas in its head at once. He was decidedly wrong.
June Caprice. All Smiles in Her Latest Picture, "Patty"—Tomboy and Society Bud

About a year ago Boston, "The Hub of the Universe," was startled by a woman who had emerged from a wintry cellar of local drama as a winter witch on the baseball calendar. The girl was Miss Caprice, a woman who had been brought to Boston on an acting tour with the Fiske stock company. The play in which she appeared was "The Rain in Spain." Miss Caprice was a "Charm" in this production, and the people of Boston were delighted. Since then she has been in many productions, and has become a popular figure in the theatre world. Her latest picture, "Patty," is a comedy in which she plays a tomboy. Miss Caprice has a wonderful voice, and her acting is excellent. She is a natural for the screen, and her portrayal of a tomboy is sure to appeal to both boys and girls. The picture will be shown in all the leading theatres of the city, and is sure to be a big success.

line into Copper City. This chapter of "The Gray Ghost" is different from the ones that have gone before in that it provides a thrill, a drama, and a train. The secrets of the pickpocket are exposed and a very clever ray gun invented. Lighthearted. Tom, a convict, is engaged by Helen and Wilson to defeat the scheme on the "K & W" franchise for the spur to be run into Copper City. Justina, to accomplish the mission, has some clever stunts and the papers which are transferred from "K & W" to the Easterners are changed to read in favor of the opposing candidate in the election. He is sentenced to a life sentence which he has been sentenced to a long term for defending himself against the insults of a moral leper. There are parallels in this story, since both knew that each was meant for the other. These are paralleled also, as the charge is brought against them for marrying which which will place them behind the walls that both of these stories. The Cabaret—Its Human Side Without the Paint—Gladya Hulette—"Cigarette Girl" (Pathé, Five-Seat Production). - To come to New York and not visit the restaurant, not see the cabaret, not see the circle without red lemonade and peanuts. It is one of the best shows of the season. It is one that is distinctive and apart from that any other city unless that city be Paris itself. It is the cabaret in our own large cities that nothing like it. New York seems to be the only place where people will give themselves over to a night of revelry such as is to be found behind the walls of Broadway. Apfel Will Direct First Film for Paralta

Oscar C. Apfel will in all probability have the distinction of making the first subject to be released under the Paralta plan. This is "A Man's Man," featuring Jack Kerrigan. In the making of this Mr. Apfel has established thoroughly the fact that producing depends largely upon preparations and the perfection of plans prior to filming of a subject. There have been no waits or delays of any kind since Mr. Kerrigan arrived in Los Angeles from his trip. Mr. Apfel has shown that time spent in getting the script to conform to just what the photoplay will be when finished prior to the making of scenes, is of most important moment. In making this picture it has not been necessary to waste in any respect, not even in the exposure of film.

Director Apfel had an out of the ordinary cast for this picture. Lois Wilson, who has appeared in many subjects opposite Kerrigan, is leading woman, and others supporting are Ed Coxen, Harry Von Meter, Jean Pallette, Ida Lewis, Kenneth Harlan and others.

David Horsley to Release Through Art-Dramas

Crane Wilbur Feature Pictures to Be Booked Through Raver Organization— "Eye of Envy" to Be Followed by "Unto the End"

After consideration of all the film distributing organizations in the field, David Horsley has selected the Art Dramas program as the medium for releasing his Crane Wilbur special features. Art Dramas exhibitors will have an opportunity to book this famous star in his productions.

The initial pictures of the series are entitled "Eye of Envy," "Third Generation," and "Unto the End." These were directed by Lorimer Johnson, a producer of experience. The Crane Wilbur features are all of the standard five-reel length.

A series of Western dramas starring this popular player is in preparation. These will be of a new sort that will go far toward re-establishing that particular style of picture in favor.

"After exhaustive study of releasing conditions and policies, I have selected the Art Dramas program to handle my Crane Wilbur features, because the principles on which that organization is founded are the fairest to both producer and exhibitor," said Mr. Horsley.

"Art Dramas, Inc., has been successful because its contributing producers have practiced intensive production methods, and through a centralization of effort have achieved satisfactory results for manufacturer, distributor and exhibitor alike.

"This policy of fairness to both producer and exhibitor has brought Art Dramas a wide following all over the United States, and I doubt if there is another organization in existence which is so advantageous to all concerned. I was interested in seeing whether or not the policies it advocates were working policies. Time has proven that they are.

Mr. Horsley is a veteran in the motion picture industry, one of the first successful independent producers. His studios in Los Angeles are now among the largest. He has been active in every movement to better conditions in the industry and is one of the leaders of the business. He fought the so-called "trust." It is due largely to his efforts that motion pictures have attained their present prosperity.

Harry Raver, president of Art Dramas, in speaking of Mr. Horsley's action, said:

"David Horsley is too keen a business man to be influenced by anything but facts. That he selects Art Dramas to release his Crane Wilbur features points clearly to one thing—the supremacy of the Art Dramas program. We are highly elated over this, for it will have a marked effect on those who are still of the opinion that the company is merely an experiment."

Mr. Wilbur has been with David Horsley for several years, during which time his pictures were released through Mutual. Among his latest successes are: "The Morals of Men," "The Painted Lie," "The King of Make-Believe," "The Love Liar," "A Law Unto Himself," "Wasted Years," "The Conscience of John David," etc.

Before joining Horsley Mr. Wilbur was with Lubin, where he starred in "The Road of Strife" and other important productions. With Pathe he was leading man in "The Perils of Pauline" and other serials. For seven years he toured with Mrs. Fiske as her leading man. His first stage appearance was at the age of fifteen, and he has been busy ever since. He is now twenty-eight years old.

Mr. Wilbur is physically the ideal matinee idol. He is nearly six feet tall, well built and handsome. He excels in athletics, being expert swimmer, boxer, wrestler, rider and motorist.

Announcements regarding release dates of Wilbur productions, together with stories and casts, will be given out.

Douglas Fairbanks Finds Alpine Scenery Near Artcraft Studio

Douglas Fairbanks is now hard at work on "The Optimist." The play which he wrote has scenes in the Alps, in Africa and the South Sea Islands. The first films require a setting in the Alps.

The Fairbanks company left Artcraft studios on the West Coast in seven passenger automobiles to find, if possible, scenery that would duplicate that in Switzerland. It is reported they have discovered it sixty miles from the studio and are hard at the photographing now.

In constructing "The Optimist," Fairbanks is quoted as saying he had Moliere in mind. He tried to make the play simple though dealing with a highly complex problem of life.

Universal Employees and Friends to Have a Picnic

Employees of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company will give a clambake under the auspices of the Universal Club at Donnelly's Grove, College Point, July 7. Carl Laemmle, P. A. Powers and R. H. Cochrane will be present as official hosts.
Platonic Love on Stage in "Strictly Business"

All the subtle humor of which O. Henry could boast is centered in the latest of his stories to be released through General Film in its series of twenty-two reel Broadway Star Features by this noted author. In "Strictly Business" the platonic relations of a pair of vaudeville artists is featured.

They travel together in a successful sketch, but appear off stage on purely formal terms. This is made the background for a great dramatic climax—followed by the inimitable comedy anti-climax which O. Henry uses with such galvanic effect in his short stories.

Alice Rodier, who plays the girl in "No Story," another recent O. Henry success, is seen as the vaudeville actress. J. Frank Glendon reappears in this Broadway Star Feature after his former work in "The Marionettes," "Friends in San Rosario," etc.

Art Dramas Booked in Small as Well as Large Towns

Having booked up almost every important house in its territory, the Standard Film Corporation, which distributes the Art Dramas program for Iowa, Kansas, Missouri, Minnesota and Nebraska, has set out to introduce the pictures in the smaller towns, and in the past week it has succeeded in contracting for one a week in Waukee and Menlo, and for two in Armstrong, Iowa. These towns are respectively 200, 350 and 400 in population.

"It may seem a trivial achievement to sign up the program in such tiny places," says R. C. Cropper, president of the Standard Company, "but it shows Art Dramas in an extremely favorable light, for it is conclusive evidence of the fact that they are of universal popularity, appearing in the largest theatres of the largest cities as well as in the smaller ones.

The Des Moines office of the Standard also succeeded in securing a first run contract for the Majestic theatre in that city. This is the largest house in Des Moines, and its acquisition is expected to materially help bookings all over the territory.

Merit Marks Universal's List—Week of July 9

Allen Holubar Writes, Directs and Acts in Butterfly Play, "The Reed Case"—Program Sparkles with Comedies and Comedy-Dramas—Episode of "Gray Ghost"

Allen HOLUBAR wrote and directed and is himself a star in "The Reed Case," a Butterfly feature which heads the offerings of Universal for the week. The Butterfly features carry separate release dates in the advertising hereafter and are really not a part of the regular program. It is purported this particular play in five reels has strength. The plot threads entwine a cut-clean, ambitious young detective and a society girl and unravel to a happy ending.

On the regular program the offering for Monday, July 9, is a Nestor comedy, "Minding the Baby." Written by Fred Palmer and produced by Roy Clements, this picture leads the spectator down the lane of lankiness to the discovery of the missing infant in a veritable jungle of jubilation. Eddie Lyons plays Mr. Youngwed. Edith Roberts is Mrs. Youngwed, while Lee Moran as that autocrat of flats, the janitor, adds the convincing touch.

The feature for Tuesday, July 10, is the Gold Seal three-part drama, "A Limb of Satan." It stars Ruth Stonehouse, who produced it, in the sympathetic role of a mischievous orphan. In support are Jack Dill, Chester Bennett and Mrs. Witting. On the same date will appear "The Paper Hanger's Revenge," a Victor release featuring Eileen Sedgwick.

For Wednesday, July 11, an L-Ko two-reel comedy of merit, entitled "Hearts and Flour." These L-Ko releases are steadily growing in popular favor. Also on this day appears the regular issue of the Universal Animated Weekly, that mirror of the world's events with its news beats.

On July 12 the Rex feature, "Three Women of France," a two-act war drama is filled with action, being a five-part picture compressed into two reels. It was written by Bess Meredith and produced by Ruth Ann Baldwin, with a cast which includes such well-known players as Jack Mulhall. Irene Hunt, Adelaide Woods, Daniel Leighton, Dick Ryan and Virginia Lee. On the same day there is a Victor brand comedy, "Meet My Wife," featuring Neal Hart and Mignon Anderson.

The weekly issue of the Universal Screen Magazine appears on July 13. On the same day there is released a two-reel Victor comedy, "Kicked Out." Carter De Haven is starred. He also produced the picture in his own studio.

Others in the cast are Marcia Moore, Ed Clark, Dan Duffy and Marguerite Whistler.

Universal Current Events and the Joker comedy, "Kitchen-silla," featuring Gale Henry and Milton Sims, appear Saturday also.

Sunday, July 15, the chief offering is the Imp drama, "Hatton of Headquarters," written by Crawley and Maude and produced by Donald McDonald. Lee Hill and Charles Hill Malles appear in the leading roles. Also a Powers comedy cartoon, "Monkey Love," and a Dorsey Educational, "In the Rocks of India."

During the week the third episode of the Gray Ghost," entitled "The Warning," the serial adapted from the Saturday Evening Post story, "Loot," will be released.

Harry Von Meter Making Jump from Ocean Liner

Harry Von Meter is playing the role of Ricardo Rucey in J. Warren Kerrigan's support. A few days ago he gave a thrilling exhibition of his abilities as a realistic actor by making a jump from the promenade deck of an ocean liner off San Pedro.

His jump into the sea and his progress to the shore was followed by two cameras. This incident of the new Kerrigan story was filmed about noon to get the best possible light, but when "A Man's Man" is screened in August it will be projected as a night scene.
Bluebird Completes Scheduling of Features for August

RUPERT JULIAN'S presentation of E. J. Clawson's scenario, "Mother of Mine," shown to Bluebird executives last Wednesday, was immediately scheduled for release August 20. In every essential this feature, starring Mr. Julian and Ruth Clifford, was found to meet the exacting requirements of Bluebird standard. One of the principal factors in supplying a satisfactory dramatic element is stated to be the work of Ruby La Fayette, an actress of the old school, who received her initiation to the photodrama in this feature, although her stage debut was made in the early sixties.

"Mother of Mine" makes the third Bluebird assignment for August. Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon start the month, August 6, with "The Clean-Up," a comedy-drama satirizing the "purity squads" so generally employed in regulating the social conditions in various communities. "The Show-Down," set for August 13, is a Lynn F. Reynolds "nature study," photographed in Palm Canyon, Cal., and on Santa Cruz Island, off Santa Barbara, Cal., nine scenes out of ten having been acted out-of-doors. Myrtle González and George Hernandez, standbys of the Reynolds company, will be starred, and many of their assists are retained.

Several features, complete and waiting, will be programmed as future Bluebirds in due course. The return of Ella Hall to the series will be marked by Jack Conway's presentation of "Little Miss Fix-It"; another Lynn F. Reynolds production, based on Alice Hegan Rice's novel, "Mr. Opp," is ready; Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon, under their new director, Elmer Clifton, have completed "The Fourth Glove," and Dorothy Phillips will make her September appearance in "Triumph," a feature produced by Joseph De Grasse from Samuel H. Adams' story in Collier's.

Two Long Triangle Subjects for Week—Release Date Change

LOUISE GLAUM in "A Strange Transgressor," and William Desmond in "Time Locks and Diamonds" are featured on the Triangle Program for the week of July 8.

As Lola Montrose in "A Strange Transgressor," directed by Reginald Barker from the story by J. G. Hawks and John Lynch, Miss Glaum has a sympathetic delineation of a woman who has cared only for indolence and luxury until her maternal instinct causes her to make a great sacrifice for the life of her little son, and thus discovers her true nature.

The star is supported by J. Barney Sherry, May Giraci, Colin Chase and Dorcas Matthews.

In "Time Locks and Diamonds" William Desmond appears as "Silver Jim" Farrel, a gentleman whose robberies have annoyed the police from New York to Rome. In order to raise money for a former associate, "Silver Jim" calmly removes a famous diamond necklace from under the eyes of its owners. This is his last theft, however, as he is taken voluntary captive by a woman.

The play was picturized by J. G. Hawks from a story by John Lynch, and was directed by Walter Edwards. A new leading woman, Gloria Hope, makes her entrance to Triangle pictures as the sister of "Silver Jim." Others who have important roles are Robert McKim, Rowland Lee, Mildred Harris, George Beranger, Thomas Guise and Milton Ross.

Due to a change of schedule, "The Sawdust Ring," the circus play starring Bessie Love, will be released the week of July 15 instead of July 29.
Thrilling Serial, a Comedy and Cartoons in Pathe's List

Gladys Leslie, "the girl with the million-dollar smile," in her second Gold Rooster play, episodes of "The Neglected Wife" and "The Fatal Ring" serials, and a two-reel Lonesome Luke comedy are features of Pathe's program for the week of July 15, 1917.

"It Happened to Adele," is the title of the Gold Rooster play with Miss Leslie. It is produced by Thanhouser, under the direction of Van Dyke Brooke, and written by Agnes C. Johnston, author of "The Shine Girl," "Her New York" and other hits. The cast includes in addition to Gladys Leslie, Peggy Burke, Carey Hastings, Charlie Emerson, Justus Barnes, Clarine Seymour and Wayne Argy.

Pearl White stars in the second episode of "The Fatal Ring" called "The Crushing Wall." Thrill follows thrill in this chapter, and "don't pick your own pocket" is the advice attributed to a prominent exhibitor who hastened to book it is giving to other exhibitors who have so far failed to do so.

"A Veiled Intrigue" is the title of the tenth episode of "The Neglected Wife" serial in which Ruth Roland is the star. It is described as one of the strongest chapters in a serial.

Lonesome Luke appears in "Stop! Luke! Listen!" a two-reel comedy, produced by Rolin and directed by Hal Roach. It is said to be a "thirty-minute-laugh." Harold Lloyd is supported by Harry Pollard, Bebe Daniels and Bud Jamison.

A Pathe scenic and educational split reel, entitled "Swede Waterways" and "Placer Goldmining;" an international cartoon and scenic split reel and Hearst-Pathe News, Nos. 58 and 59, complete the program.

Fifteen Reels Weekly in Program Is K-E-S-E Plan

George Kleine's distributing organization, K-E-S-E, is releasing fifteen reels each week, a K-E-S-E feature of five reels; an Essanay series of "Do Children Count?" (two reels each); a Selig Charles Hoyt comedy of two reels every other week, and seven reels of Conquest Pictures.

In addition to this, Mr. Kleine's organization is releasing three series of Musty Suffer comedies and is booking the Billie Burke serial, "Gloria's Romance." He is also offering the George Kleine Cycle of Film Classics, several strong super-features and many educational and scenic subjects.

Arrangement and selection of the first four Conquest Programs of seven reels each have been completed. Release date of the first subject has been set for Saturday, July 14, and each succeeding program of seven reels for each Saturday thereafter.

Programs consist of from three to five subjects—one four or three-reel feature and the balance of shorter subjects, from 100 to 1,000 feet each. Each subject is distinct, and even if the programs are intended for distribution as a unit, each subject may be rented individually. This system should be favorably received.

Praise for Greater Vitagraph from Rural Exhibitor

Greater Vitagraph reports it has received letters praising its new service from various exhibitors in smaller towns. One of them, from Pedroja & Medland, Mulberry, Kansas, reads: "We have cancelled a contract that we had with an exchange for the season owing to the fact that the service they have been giving us has been all mixed up and we have never been able to ascertain in advance the name of the picture we were to present. "We want to start service with your company on July 24 next, immediately after our thirty days' notice with the other company becomes effective.

"We certainly are pleased at the manner in which your exchange handles the business and it is a pleasure to do business with you people. We have found in our experience that some exchanges are very hard to get along with, but that certainly is not true with yours."

"Woman in White" in Six Not Five Parts

The Pathé Exchange announces that owing to an error in proof-reading, the Thanhouser made Gold Rooster Play, "The Woman in White," was advertised as being in five parts, whereas the picture was actually released in six parts.

"The Woman in White" has Florence La Badie in a dual role.

Vol. 16. No. 2
Essanay Releases "The Range Boss" and "Golden Idiot"

Two big features in a week is the Essanay Program. The release date on "The Range Boss," a Western, with Jack Gardner, former musical comedy star, is July 16, and on "The Golden Idiot," Bryant Washburn's feature, July 23. Both are handled by K-E-S-E.

In "The Range Boss" the scene of actual production was on the plains of Arizona. It is a red-blooded true American drama, so announcements state. Ruth King and Carl Stockdale are supporting stars in Gardner's company.

The "Golden Idiot" proves to be the type of the vagabond, who has a 1,000 to 1 chance on a fortune. The eccentric uncle dies, and the boy gets the money. They are 65-minute pictures.

Constance Talmadge's First Star Picture

Constance Talmadge's first Selznick-Picture, "The Lesson," the first picture in which she has appeared as an independent star—has been completed. Director Giblyn made speed in this production. Four weeks of the date that Miss Talmadge was announced as a star picture is on the film. The release date will soon be announced.

The play is from a story by Virginia Terhune Van de Water.

Constance Talmadge has the role of a girl just out of school in the first part of the picture, a young wife in the second, and in the third she is the mature product of all her experiences.

Director Giblyn has devised a number of novel and interesting effects in this photodrama.

Kathleen Williams and Lions in Selig Drama

A wild animal drama in two reels, "In the African Jungle," is announced by the Selig Polyscope Company, to be released by General Film July 2. Kathleen Williams stars, along with the lions, tigers, leopards and elephants.

A one-reel Selig drama, "Checkpoint," is to be released July 7, through the same distributing company.

Mutual's Program Includes

MUTUAL leads its program for the week with the sixth of Marjorie Rambeau's productions, "Mary Moreland." The star has the title role. As a stenographer from an ordinary suburban home she wins the love of a rich married man, but resists the temptation and wins.

The supporting cast includes Robert Elliott, Gene LaMothe, Augusta Barmester, Fraser Tarbutt and Edna M. Holland. The picture was produced under the direction of Frank Powell at the studios of the Frank Powell Producing Corporation, College Point, L.I.

"The Trap" is the title of the fourteenth installment of "The Railroad Raiders," Mutual-Signal photovoyel, released July 9. Helen Holmes plays the leading role. She makes a daring leap from a moving train, crossing a viaduct, drops into a river and rescues the hero. Miss Holmes' exploits in "The Railroad Raiders" are termed the most sensational of her screen career.

George Ovey's Horsley-Mutual one-reel comedy, "Jerry at the Waldorf," is scheduled for release July 12. Jerry beats his board bill, and gets into a fashionable hotel, where his experiences in hunting a bathroom create wild commotion and eventually land him in jail.

Hawaiian atmosphere has been introduced into the LaSalle comedy, "When Lulu Danced the Hula," on the Mutual schedule for July 10. Grass begirdled Hawaiian girls take a conspicuous part in the one-reel laugh provoker.

Four-Reel Dramas, Popular Stars, Weekly by General Film

GENERAL FILM is adding a four-reel feature to its weekly releases.

This is in harmony with a recent announcement of the distributing company promising rapid increase in product.

Not less than ten of the four-reelers are nearing completion in the laboratory. Each picture shows popular stars. The films are to be marketed as "Sunset Features."

"The four-reelers will be on the market, scarcely, when the product will be still further augmented by other new features different from anything we now have on our program," said Harold Bolton, general manager of the company.

At present the General Film product is classified as follows:

Dramas—A four-reel series; the Selig two-reelers and one-reelers; the O. Henry two-reel Broadway Star features.

Comedy Dramas—The "Black Cat" features from Essanay in 25 minute lengths; comic dramas subjects which alternate with O. Henry drama releases.

Series—"The Further Adventures of Stingaree," with True Boardman, in fifteen episodes (Kalem). The "Sparkle Comedies," one reel; "Pokes and Jabs," one reel; Johnny and Emma Ray, one reel; Ham and Bud, one reel; Bieter comedies, one reel; Selig one and two-reel comedies.

Educational—Selig World Library, one reel, weekly.

Vitagraph Stars Find Quaker City Welcome Strenuous

On "Vitagraph Day," at the exposition of the Exhibitors' League, Philadelphia, at the Parkway Auditorium, Miriam Fonche and William Dunn were guests of honor.

It was Miss Fonche's first personal appearance in Philadelphia. The pair were met at Broad Street station by a special committee, escorted to the Bellevue-Stratford, dined and then taken by automobile around the city. About five thousand persons, it is said, were in the convention hall when they were brought in and literally carried to the platform.

Miss Fonche is a new Vitagraph star. Dunn scored a success in "The Secret Kingdom."

To Solve Summer Problem Use Human Interest

H. C. Allen of Peter Pan Urges Production of Clean Heart-Appealing Work of Masters and Points to Success of George Beban and Mo-Toy Comedies

H. C. ALLEN, president of the Peter Pan Corporation, is one of those who believe the real future of the motion picture lies in the film interpretation of the great masters. "I don't mean the so-called high brow," explained Mr. Allen. "I mean the production of such masterpieces as make a real human appeal, expressed, if I may use my own phrase, 'in the mental vernacular of the people.' Take the works of George Beban, for instance. There is nothing trashy in them, but they have human feeling. Humanity is interested in itself.

In my opinion, the Mo-Toy Comedies, as they are now being produced, are in harmony with the opinion I express. They have a wide-open appeal to all classes of people. The man or woman who lacks interest in children, or is out of contact with that delightful other world in which the child mind lives, is lost.

I thought of this the other day at an afternoon show fostered by the women of a community who brought their children with them. The manager of the suburban theatre, by some mistake doubtless, had put on a reel that soon developed a dance-like scene, with barroom and concomitants. In an instant mothers in various parts of the room were gathering up their chickens and preparing to leave. The picture was snapped off instantly and a Mo-Toy Comedy put on. The delight of the audience, adult and juvenile, was audible expressed.

"Without a shadow of doubt the success of Mo-Toy Comedies lies in the fact that they get quite away from similarity to anything else in the motion picture field. The dolls are well selected, animation is carefully done and the pictures are not long enough to tire. They are crisp and refreshing.

"This is a matter exhibitors should bear carefully in mind with the approach of the hot summer months. They will be well advised to go more into the open market and avoid booking long features at high prices. Good class stuff, with a wide appeal and not long drawn out, will keep the theatres well filled in the hottest weather.

"The key to the summer situation is the ability of the exhibitor to interest, to amuse and to elevate without labored or palpable effort."

Mr. Allen considers it convincing confirmation that Mo-Toy Comedies met with a good reception before the National Congress of Mothers and the Parent-Teachers' Association in Chicago.

Paramount-Bray Mingles Fun, Psychology and Scenic

"UNMASKING THE MEDIUMS," third in the series, will be a feature of this week's Paramount-Bray pictograph, released by Paramount Pictures Corporation. The film has been made with the cooperation of Hereward Carrington, one of America's psychologists.

In this picture Mr. Carrington staged a seance for so-called astral body materializing. The deception seems just as remarkable as though made before a select few at some medium's establishment. A tiny bit of shimmery white on the floor grows and grows until it has attained the height of a full-grown person.

Another picture in the release, "Bobby Bum's Fourth," shows Bobby and his pup on the day of days. Bobby seems to be well acquainted with fireworks, while Fido is a bit dubious at first. But when a firecracker fails to go off the pup picks it up, when it decides to explode and puts a crimp in Fido. The pup retires hastily, only to be overtaken by a "saguer-chaser." This puts a finale on Fido's patriotism, and disgustedly he crawls into a hole. The cartoon is by Earl Ford.

The Paramount-Bray magazine on the scene first illustrated "going to sea in the heart of New York." on the U. S. S. "Re- cruit," constructed in Union Square. Cap- tain C. F. Pierce, in command, is shown in-

France, Italy and Sahara in Gaumont Program

A PROGRAM of single-reels comes from Gaumont through Mutual for the week of July 13. The first release is "Travels Around the World." No. 37, released July 17.

First in importance upon this reel is Avignon, France. This ancient city is known to all the Roman Catholic world as the home of the popes during the four-teenth century, and for this reason will ex- cite a great deal of interest among millions of this faith. The city is picturesque in the extreme, and the views of it are comprehensive.

On the same reel are pictures of Timbuktu, a city situated on the edge of the Desert of Sahara within a few miles of the River Niger. A third section shows the ruined palace of Tiberius upon the Island of Capri, Italy.

The second release of the week is Gaumont's Mutual Weekly No. 133, July 18. This contains the latest news of the world obtainable for motion pictures. War pic- tures, sent from the Societe des Etablisse- ments Gaumont in Paris, are the first usually to reach this shore.

"Reel Life" No. 64 is released July 19. "Incandescent Mantles" tells in pictures just how these aids to illumination are manu- factured. "The Boy Scout Signal Corps" shows the youth of the nation being trained for work that may well fit into the war scheme at some future time. "The Cocoa- nut" gives views at various periods of growth, and also some grotesque carvings of the rind of the fruit. Other sections of the reel are "A Novel Bicycle Race" and "Leaves from Life."

Hoofed Animals from Educational in Ditmars' Series

Ditmars' Living Book of Nature series current release is "Odd Hoofed Animals," a most interesting study of the correlation between the many strange creatures who are marked as of one race by the hoof and horn.

HOW PICTURES ARE BOOKING

Newspapers Speak Well of "The Neglected Wife"

Pathé exchanges over the country report they are receiving thousands of letters presenting solutions of the problem in "The Neglected Wife." The Pathé Company's offer is $1,000 for the best, $500 for the second best and $100 each for the next five worthy replies.

The New Orleans Item, Omaha World-Herald, Pittsburgh Gazette-Times, New York Evening World and New York Evening Journal are among the newspapers urging their readers to enter the contest.

It is stated hot weather is not interfering with the popularity of the photoplay. Among recent criticisms are these:

"The New Journal, Columbus: "An increasing number of theatres running one of the most appealing photoplays ever produced—"The Neglected Wife.""

"Picture Play News, Rochester: "It is a brilliant exposition of the interplay of warring souls."

"Bulletin, San Francisco: "Ruth Roland has one of the biggest parts of her career, a character demanding rare subtlety of art."

Successful Run of "Joan the Woman" in Detroit

"Joan the Woman," owned in Michigan by the Barnett Film Attractions, opened its Detroit engagement at the Opera House, Sunday, June 17. So far the engagement has been very successful, the attendance growing each day. The newspaper comment was very high in praise of the production, and especially for the work of Geraldine Farrar.

Performances during the Detroit engagement are 25 and 50 cents, with a few downtown stairs in the last few rows at 75 cents. Four performances are given daily, two in the afternoon and two at night. The engagement is indefinite. Will M. Elliott is handling the production for the Barnett Film Attractions.

"Do Children Count?" Breaks House Policies

At a breaker of the fixed policy of theatres Exposay reports that the series, "Do Children Count?" has established a record. Theatres who have not run a two-reeler for years have been convinced, so branch managers for K-E-S-E state.

In Chicago two downtown houses, Ziegfeld and Pastime, have taken the series. Other houses are the Strand, Birmingham, Ala.; Fenway, Boston; Broadway, Salt Lake City; Strand, Sacramento, Cal.; Regent, Detroit; New Grand Central, St. Louis; Hippodrome, Portland; Colonial, Cincinnati; Majestic, St. Paul; New Grand, Minneapolis; Washington, Dallas, Texas, and the Keeney in Newark.

Showing for War Sufferers

A Citizens' Committee has completed plans to bring to New York "Christus" for exhibition in the very near future. The proceeds of the performances, which are planned for a week's run, will be for the benefit of the Armenian sufferers.

Big Clientele Is Consistently Taking Mutuals

Consistent standard of productions and "service beyond the film" is claimed by Mutual to have developed a clientele which books that company's pictures year in and year out.

G. W. Ziegfelder, manager of the Princess theatre at Piqua, Ohio, is one of Mutual's family. In a recent letter to Mutual, he says: "I have been using Mutual productions ever since they were first released and I have found them good, wholesome, clean comedies and dramas that are acceptable to ladies, gentlemen and children, besides stars that are box office magnets themselves."

W. C. Hart, manager of the Southside theatre, Ironon, Ohio, in a letter says: "We can certainly recommend Mutual star productions to any exhibitor that wants real classes. The Mary Miles Minter and Margarita Fischer series are, in our opinion, the most satisfying pictures we have ever had in the house."

Mutual Takes Toronto Into Its Camp

Downtown Toronto was almost solidly booked with Mutual productions during the week of June 25.

Charlie Chaplin in "The Immigrant," Mutual Tours, "Jerry's Getaway" and "A Zeppelin Attack on New York" were at the Strand theatre. "The Immigrant" was at Loew's. William Bendix showed at the Empress in "My Fighting Gentleman." At the Red Mill, Nance O'Neil was booked in "Mrs. Balfame." The Globe and Rialto were playing Helen Holmes in "A Lass of the Lumberlands." "My Fighting Gentleman" was at the Odeon. The Royal was showing Gail Kane in "Whose Wife?" Chaplin in "The Cure" and Richard Bennett in "And the Law Says" were playing at the Mary Pickford theatre.

Summer Run for "Birth of a Nation" at Brighton

Arrangements have been consummated with the Brighton Beach Music Hall for the presentation of D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at that theatre for a limited summer engagement beginning Friday night, June 29. The Griffith feature will be given precisely as presented during the record-breaking year's run at the Liberty theatre, and a symphony orchestra of forty men will render the musical accompaniment.

Real First Night Showing for "The Lone Wolf"

"The Lone Wolf," by Louis Joseph Vance, is to have a real premiere at the Broadway theatre on Sunday evening, July 1. According to the director, Herbert Brenon, not a single person has seen the picture in advance of this showing except two or three studio employees and himself.

On the same night that the picture is shown in New York before an audience, it will be exhibited in Chicago at the Studebaker theatre, in precisely like manner, for the first time.

Mr. Brenon says that reviewers for trade papers, state rights' buyers, exhibitors and even executives of the Herbert Brenon Film Corporation will view the picture drama in the two cities at precisely the same moment. He adds:

"Klaw & Erlanger, Cohan & Harris and the Shubert Brothers do not give special performances of their new productions for their friends or for the newspapers, and I see no reason why we should with the 'Lone Wolf.' The reviewers and critics will see the picture in its proper setting with its musical accompaniment, and will have an opportunity to judge its effect with an audience present."

Mr. Brenon says months of painstaking effort and thousands of dollars have been expended on "The Lone Wolf," for this reason it is desired that the premier should be real.

Adopts "Hot Weather" Plan of Bookings

Reports of bookings in Nebraska territory show the Summer season is hard on serials, no exhibitor wanting to start a picture that will run into the hot weeks of the Summer months. There is a demand for serials, including 35- and 40-reel productions, such as Gold Rooster, five reels, and Pathe News, one reel; or Mysteries of Myra, two reels; and Beatrice Fairfax, two reels, and one comedy, one reel; or any serial, two reels, and a one-reel comedy. He calls them "hot weather suggestions."

New Bookings of Terry Human Interest Reels

It is stated that the Marcus Loew circuit of theatres has consented to run the series of Terry Human Interest reels, the first of which is "How Character Is Revealed by the Nose."

The picture was shown at the Strand theatre the week of June 3, after which Harold Edel, manager, contracted for the series. The managers say the films will break all records for single-reel bookings.
Sherman Will Handle Only Big Productions

Well-Known Operator Organizes Company to Take Over Popular Pictures

Extensive State Rights Campaign

1. Sherman will purchase outright the world's rights for a good state rights production for cash.

2. Sherman will exploit the world's rights for state rights productions for the manufacturer, assuming all the expense of marketing and exploitation.

3. Will advance any responsible producer the cash to make or complete a satisfactory production.

The Sherman Pictures Corporation will exercise its option in the next few days for several productions, announcements of which will be made through the trade papers. The publicity and advertising will be handled by Shepard and Van Loan.

"I am in the market for pictures of the very highest type, for I consider that the market will stand only such productions as box-office attractions," says Mr. Sherman.

"When I am satisfied that I have such a picture I am willing to back my judgment with my own money and also render whatever service I can in the various territories to assist my buyers to properly market their purchase.

"I have not altered my opinion in the least that the state rights market is the only logical market for productions of size. To the producer I will say, that if you have a good picture you will get a good price. The purchaser will make money and the exhibitor will get big returns. I personally believe that any good production will find a ready market and both the state rights buyer and the exhibitor will make money."

God's Man" Draws Well

When F. E. Backer, president of the Mammoth Film Corporation, opened the H. B. Warner feature, "God's Man," at the Goodwin theatre, Newark, where it received its New Jersey premier, it proved in its second week of exhibition to be the second largest opening since the erection of the house.

Overflow State Rights News will be found on pages 258 and 269.

Griffith-Biograph Films for Baltimore

Arrangements have been made for showing a number of D. W. Griffith's early Biograph photoplay productions in Baltimore. These pictures will be distributed by the Isidor Weinz Film Company and will include such plays as "Home Sweet Home," "The Gangsters of New York," "The Great Leap" and other films made by Griffith. The collection includes a number of other four and six reel subjects.

The Isidor Weinz Film Company has moved its office and entire accessories plant and also its film exchange to 404 E. Fayette Street. This has been done on account of the concern needing larger quarters and for the purpose of concentrating all its branches.

"Deemster" Sold for Foreign Territory

India, Burma, Ceylon and Brazil figured in territorial sales on Hall Caine's "The Deemster" last week. David P. Howells bought the rights to the first named three countries and the Pan-American Trading Company the rights to Brazil.

Practically every country that is open to a venture of this nature has been disposed of by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation, and J. Frank Brockliss.

Standard Releases Air Raid Subject

The Standard Film Company, Cleveland, will release on Sunday, July 1, a picture showing a Zeppelin raid on London. It is a short reel feature, called "The Menace of the Air." The first release is to be made in Toledo, at the Alhambra, for which theatre its manager, Mr. Horner, has booked the picture for the entire first week of July.

"One Law for Both" Bought by Owl

Negotiations were concluded last week between the Owl Features Company, of Chicago, and the Ivan Film Productions, under the terms of an agreement by which the Owl Features Company becomes exclusive distributor of the Ivan super-feature, "One Law for Both," in the state of Illinois and also southern Wisconsin.

Warren Begins Second Film

Work has begun on the second subject of the Edward Warren Productions, New York, makers of "The Warfare of the Flesh," and the cast, it is said, will be supported by four hundred extras.

The character of the new photoplay has not been disclosed, but it is understood that it will have present day settings.

Exchanges recognize the desire of MOTION PICTURE NEWS to bring about complete co-operation between the buyer and seller of subjects marketed on a state rights basis.

The Creswell Feature Film Service, Indianapolis, says:

"We certainly must commend the spirit of co-operation being manifested by your state rights department. Such real 'pep' is going to make your department a winner in short order."
Realignment Is Necessary in the Middle West

Iowa and Nebraska Should Be One Entity, with an Exchange Center at Either Des Moines or Omaha, and Missouri and Kansas Another Section

BY JESSE J. GOLDBURG

[In this, the fourth article written by Mr. Goldburg exclusively for the News, the reader will obtain information on the peculiar condition of the state rights field in an important part of the country. These observations of the special exploitation and service manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation throw an illuminating light on the dark corners of many obscure problems.—En Nove.]

THE conditions attaching themselves to the Missouri, Kansas, Iowa and Nebraska territory are different in a good many essentials from those which are typical of the other states I have visited.

The geographical line of demarcation because of population, number of theatres, railroad connections and distances between points should be as follows: Iowa and Nebraska, as one entity, with the exchange center either at Des Moines, Iowa or Omaha, Nebraska, preferably Des Moines, and the states of Missouri and Kansas with the exchange center at Kansas City, Mo., as another.

The most profitable of these four states, from a motion picture standpoint, are Iowa and Missouri; so you can readily see that by this division of territory the state rights buyer in each instance will have a most lucrative and fertile state, together with one of lesser importance. It has been the custom heretofore to dispose of the four states as one proposition, but in every instance where the photoplay has been sold for the four states on the one contract the buyer usually disposed of two of them to another exchange.

I was not surprised to find on the desks of many of the exchanges in Kansas City the outline map of the United States circled by Motion Picture News, with notations of their own as to their idea of territorial division, and the consensus of opinion, although tardily admitted, is in line with my own.

The state rights situation here is unfair to the producer as well as the exchange. Photoplay houses have not as yet appreciated the fact that the open booking policy is the best to follow for themselves. In the city of Kansas City, Mo., there is but one downtown theatre that adheres consistently to an open booking policy, and this is the most profitable one run in the city, although not the largest. The front of a house is plastered with lithographs and lobby displays, the newspapers are generously patronized with advertising, but there is no-house organ, no mail advertising, and, what is to be regretted, no attempt to deal fairly with an exchange with respect to a booking.

Cut-throat competition seems to be the order of the day; there is absolutely no cooperation either between the exchanges or between the theatre owners either to minimize expense, or to give to the public the best on the market. The policy seems to be play what is cheapest; with the result that while there is a decided photoplay "fan" aggregation, there is not that enthusiasm for the cinema on the part of the public that is evident in other territories.

The independent producers have, indeed, a worthy yet difficult task on their hands to drive from the exchange field the dishonest and incompetent exchange. Of course, I have met with several up to this point, and at this point I have been doubly impressed with the despicable methods employed by some of the exchange men who heretofore have borne a good reputation, earned, however, through deception.

I believe Motion Picture News can enlist its columns and its efforts in purifying state right purchasing field in addition to its all-import work in permanently doing away with territorial divisions. If there is anything more likely to place the business in disrepute than invasion of other territories by state rights buyers, in releasing mediocre and cheap productions under the title of a worthy one, which they do not control; in going outside the state and somewhere buying a print of another production, not released here, and booking it in small houses in this territory; in defaming and damming an extraordinary attraction in order to kill its reputation so that it may be purchased at a bargain, then I have yet to learn what it is.

The question of censorship here is an all-important one. In Kansas City we have a one-man local board, a high-minded, fair and intelligent gentleman, but, as he expressed it, it is wholly unfair to the industry and to him to place the responsibility of censoring a photograph in the hands of one man, and it is for that reason that where there is the slightest doubt in his mind as to the propriety of a production or of any particular scene in it he places the whole proposition up to an Appeal Board, composed of ladies whose qualifications I have not as yet been able to gauge.

Then, in Kansas we have a Censor Board, and, although the same print works in both states, and, from a booking standpoint, the territories are as one, the decision of the Kansas State Board is oftentimes diametrically opposed to that of the Kansas City Board.

This is, indeed, a lucrative field, but if the state rights buyers operating here do not alter their methods, it is up to the manufacturers to combine in the formation of business principles that can be applied here to the effect that productions will receive their proper worth and proper exploitation. In short, up to this point this has been possibly the most backward territory in embracing the advantages of state rights exploitation and open booking.

[As an evidence of the service maintained by MODON PIC- TURE NEWS for the benefit of its readers, the McMahan and Jackson Film Company, Cincinnati, says—]

"We want to compliment you very highly on your move in the right direction; namely, the state rights department in your publication."

[And hundreds of other letters have been received at this office, praising the state rights section of MOTION PIC- TURE NEWS.]

Interest Manifested in Jap Film

Dwight MacDonald, general manager of the America-Japan Pictures Company, reports great interest in its serial, "Film Trip," showing Japan and the Japanese, released under the name, "The Land of the Rising Sun." It combines the scenic with the strictly dramatic. Three reels out of the five are devoted to the well-known theatrical stars. These three dramatic features are made simply to show the oddity of Japanese customs in an unusual and often amusing way.

The film is now ready for showing to state rights buyers together with all the special publicity for its exploitation.

Central Film Buys Three Features

Upon returning to Chicago from New York early last week Aaron Jones, of Jones, Linick and Schafer, announced that he had purchased three big features for his Central Film Company and the states right market. "The Submarine Eye," at the Studelbaker, was purchased for Illinois from the William- son Brothers. "Redemption," with Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, has also been purchased for the State of Illinois and it is expected to bring it here immediately after the run of "On Trial," at the Colony, well-known theatricals.

The third big feature is "Parentage," which has been purchased for Illinois and southern Wisconsin.

"Allah" Sold for Many States

Buys Canadian Rights

The Canadian rights for Selig's "Beware of Strangers," have been purchased by the Monarch Film Company, Limited, Toronto. This company plans to institute an elaborate exploitation campaign in connection with the showing of the drama.
Paper Must Be the Best to Push Pictures
Exhibitor Should Exercise as Much Care in Its Selection as He Does His Films, Says Spitzer

DOES the exhibitor attach the same importance to the paper as the state rights buyer? Most people offhand would say that he does, but Nat H. Spitzer, vice-president and general manager of the King-Bee Films Corporation, is of a contrary opinion.

"'What's the paper like?' is one of the first questions your up-to-date state rights buyer asks of the man who is wanting him to take his pictures," says Mr. Spitzer. "Let us suppose it to be a $100,000 feature with a Broadway star. 'What's the paper like?' Or a comedy—the same question. The state rights buyer knows that the measure of the impression made by the paper on an exhibitor is the measure of the picture's pulling power, or at any rate largely so. It is chiefly the paper which gets an audience together for the first time.

"The exhibitor only too frequently allows himself to be misled in this important matter. He slurs over the question of the paper. He does not put out fresh, bright paper with every picture he books.

"Undoubtedly, mounted paper, for that is where the trouble originates, is not essential; it is not even advisable! You see, it gets dirtier and dirtier with each booking. Dirty paper prejudices a picture because it repels the public. Mounted paper is a great convenience if it is kept clean and shown clean. But it rarely is, unfortunately, except on first runs.

"His duty to the public should oblige the exhibitor to be sure that the paper is always clean and fresh and has not before been publicly exhibited. He should exert as much care in the selection of his paper as of his films, and the interior equipment of his theatre. Small town exhibitors are peculiarly careless in this respect, and it is to them I am mainly addressing this warning."

"Do you think mounted paper should be discouraged out of use?" Mr. Spitzer was asked.

"I do—if it is mistreated so as to unfavorably affect the attitude of the public towards the picture. In recent years the paper for motion pictures has become artistic as well as striking, and it seems to me a pity that it should so frequently be shown in a dirty and dilapidated state. It is bad business for the picture."
Hirsh Makes Quick Turn-over on State Rights

He Sells Part of Territory for “Redemption” and Gets Bookings Before Releasing in His District

A NEW phase of the buying of state rights has cropped out in the course of the disposition for state rights of Julius Steiger's production of “Redemption,” which had such a successful run at the George M. Cohan theatre, New York.

Nathan Hirsh, purchaser of the New York and north New Jersey rights, sold a part of the territory outright and contracted for a sufficient number of bookings of the film to completely cover the cost of the purchase for his entire territory, thus insuring his profits in advance before releasing in the territory.

It's run at the George M. Cohan theatre, where it was intended to stay two weeks, and remained five, combined with the variable prosperity it has enjoyed in the many other houses where it is now playing, in spite of the weather conditions, has brought this picture forcibly to the attention of the state rights buyers.

The picture is now being shown, ranging from twenty-five cents to $1 at Keith's Alhambra theatre, New York, and various other theatres in and around New York, including Tellier's Shubert, Brooklyn, which always big business; and the various Shubert shows; Proctor's theatre and roof garden, Newark, N. J., and the Shubert theatre, Newark, and the Colonial theatre, Chicago. It will open at the Forest theatre, Philadelphia, shortly.

Hiram Abrams, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, one of the biggest men in the film world, purchased the New England rights. Jones, Linick and Schafer have bought the rights for the state of Illinois; Stanley V. Mastbaum, eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey, and the Civilization Pioneer Film Company bought the rights for the State of New York and northern New Jersey. Many other big buyers are now negotiating for other choice territory.

Child Life in “Parentage” Will Appeal, Says Seng

ONE of the distinctive phases, which caused a great deal of comment, at the trade showing of “Parentage,” at the Rialto theatre last week, was the manner in which the child acting and type characters were portrayed and directed in Hobart Henley's Thought Film of Real Life.

“At no time intruding on the smooth-running action of the story, rather building it into a fine dramatic suspense, colored with humor and pathos, the delightful bits of child play, and the human flavor of the type characters have been pronounced by those well versed in film matters to be the best yet delineated on the screen,” says Frank J. Seng, who controls the picture.

“Every one who saw the film, recognized in the 'kid stuff' the incidents of their school days, the childhood love affair that hit home, and the incidents of the shanty gang are those of yo-yo familiar.

“The scene of the tough boy in the schoolroom shooting the rubber band at the teacher shows the handling of a boy and a situation that is truly remarkable. The amount of poise, the fine repose in the face of Matty Reubert is singularly effective, because it registers so true to life, so humanly with the reminiscent touch of boy life to it.

“'To the average patron or exhibitor, who is very much interested in child portrayals, it is difficult to visualize the hardships attendant on taking this kind of material. The director must use the story and the types that they harmonize, one with the other and make part and parcel of the whole drama.

“Don't this which Director Henley has put into this phase of the 'Parentage' production has repaid him in ample results and praise, because the child's art is imbued with a natural and unaffected charm seldom seen on the screen.

“About 6,000 feet of the schoolroom scene alone was taken, but in the film it is melted down to 500 of cut-and-flash action.
Sawyer and Lubin, Handling "Crusoe," to Make Films

Mr. Sawyer is well known in the trade as one of the pioneers of the industry, and was the first man to establish state right "zones" or territorial rights.

Messrs. Lubin and Sawyer handled the Savage production of "Robinson Crusoe" in Canada and broke several house records for high attendance with this well-known picture. It is their intention to book the picture in adjacent territory, selling the foreign territories and some of the territories in the states.

In addition to "Crusoe," they will soon announce two other big subjects that are now in the making.

Two subjects, each seven reels in length, will be exploited in a new and original manner which will prove of exceptional value to the exhibitor, Mr. Sawyer working on his former plan of directly helping the state rights buyer and the exhibitor.

Climax of Brenon Film

The King Bee Comedy Company has started on the production of the seventh comedy of its series of laughmakers. Billy West, Babe Hardy, Lou White and Bud Ross are in the cast. The story is one of domestic intrigue.

The company has moved to the Horsey Studios in Bayonne, N. J., and proposes to remain there during the summer months.

Good Prices in Northern Iowa, Says Kirk, State Rights Man

J. E. Kirk, manager of the Fontenelle Film Exchange, state rights dealers, in Omaha, Neb., has just returned from a trip through Iowa.

"I find northern Iowa exhibitors getting the most select pictures they can, and running just as long as the picture will stand," he said. "I find their admission prices are never below fifteen and twenty cents and frequently fifteen and twenty-five cents. E. H. Helms, exhibitor in the little town of Mt. Pleasant, Ia., gets twenty and twenty-five cents and has turned the Auditorium from the third house to the first house in the town."

"In southern Iowa a number of the exhibitors are still charging five and ten cents. They are complaining about dull business just now. They are rapidly becoming more progressive."

Buyers Want to Know "Who's Your Neighbor?"

Following the private showing last week of "Who's Your Neighbor?" in seven reels, to exhibitors, state rights men and trade paper critics, the officers of the Master Drama Features, Inc., 1493 Broadway, New York, have received many bids.

The interest manifested by state rights buyers and exhibitors in this, our first screen production, has exceeded our fondest expectations," said General Manager Herman Becker.

The story was written by Willard Mack, author of "Kick In," a play that had a long run in New York, and the direction was in the hands of S. Rankin Drew. The cast includes: Christine Mayo, Evelyn Brent, Anders Randolf, Frank Morgan and William Sherwood.

The Overland Film Company, Samuel Krellberg, general manager, has been appointed selling agent, and will co-operate from the offices of the Master Drama Features, Inc., 1493 Broadway, New York.

Two Renowned Pictures Sell Well

The Renowned Pictures Corporation, New York, Atilio Weinberg president, one of the newest companies operating in the state rights field, reports additional sales for "Should She Obey?" and "In Treason's Grasp."

The first subject was produced under the supervision of Lieutenant Governor Barratt O'Hara of Illinois, whose fame as an advocate for reform is widespread. The picture is said to deal a strong blow to the divorce evil.

The second picture is expected to make an appeal to the public from the popularity of Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, who have starred in the subject.

Cranston Makes Two Films

The Canadian National Features, of Trenton, Ont., have completed two pictures, it has been announced. These may be held over until the fall before being released. Wm. Cranston is president of the company, and is well known throughout his work in arranging for the presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" throughout Canada for V. S. Courtney.

Vol. 16. No. 2

Iliodor, Herbert Brenon and an Interpreter Lunching at the Brenon Studio Between Scenes of "The Fall of the Romanoffs"
"Her Fighting Chance" in Eastern Pennsylvania

James Oliver Curwood's story of the Canadian Northwest, "Her Fighting Chance," is another picture which M. H. Hoffman, Inc., has added to its list. Contracts have been signed with Frank Hall for the rights to the film in Eastern Pennsylvania.

At the same time Mr. Hoffman arranged to increase his territorial holdings for the distribution of "The Bar Sinister," for which his company originally purchased the New York state rights. Eastern Pennsylvania for "The Bar Sinister" has just been secured, and in this production and "Her Fighting Chance," exhibitors in that territory should find two features having elements of popular and commercial appeal, says Mr. Hoffman.

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., will offer, in place of trade showings of its various motion pictures, individual runs for private exhibition.

"I purpose calling them 'perpetual screenings," says Mr. Hoffman. "We have two admirably equipped projection rooms in the Godfrey Building, where our offices and exchange are located, and it will be a pleasure to present on reasonable notice screenings of Foursquare photo plays."

"The Foursquare features, for which we are now selling state rights and direct bookings to exhibitors are 'Madame Sherry,' 'Should She Obey?' 'The Sin Woman' and 'The Bar Sinister.'"

Fielding at Work on "Liberty" Interiors

After two weeks in Canada, Romaine Fielding and the company he is directing in Captain Edwin Bover Hesser's patriotic feature, "For Liberty," is back in Philadelphia, completing the interiors at the Lubin Studios. E. K. Lincoln is the star, as a young American officer in the heroic American Legion of the Canadian Army, Mr. Fielding plays the "heavy," and Barbara Castleton assumes the role of the heroine.

The feature will be at least seven reels in length, and ready for release early in July. No method of distribution has yet been announced.

Special Publicity Devices for Ivan Film

For the purpose of better exploiting "One Law for Both," Ivan, various special publicity devices are being used which are designed to be of aid to exhibitors who run this picture.

Special triple expansion display frames, 9 feet wide and 6 feet high, holding all the 22 by 28 photos, the 11 by 14 photos and 8 by 10 photos on this production, as well as the trade mark of the company and special description of play and cast, have been designed and beautifully veneered and enameled for lobby display.

Drawings made by such famous artists as Merle Johnson of the New York American, and Stella Flores of the Evening Journal, which appeared in the newspapers during the run of "One Law for Both" at the Lyric, have been reproduced in mat form, and all exhibitors playing this feature have an opportunity to use these special, exclusive drawings by famous artists in their local newspapers at a most reasonable cost.

Advertising mats from fourteen lines, single column, to half a page have been devised so that a uniform and systematic scheme of advertising can be resorted to by all exhibitors who desire to use newspaper advertising in connection with this feature.

A special book giving various publicity aids, articles ranging in size from a stick to half-pages and showing replicas of the great number of mats and cuts available on this picture, as well as the reproductions in miniature of the various styles of special oil paintings made by Kassel, and the styles of paper, are reproduced in this book.

Jacques Kopfstein, general representative of Ivan, has also designed a special newspaper-size reproduction of the favorable newspaper reviews which were accorded this production during its presentation at the Lyric theatre, New York, and these fill the better part of several sheets, newspaper size.

Other stunts such as securing newspaper co-operation in connection with this feature and the taping it up with the American ambulances in Russia, which was resorted to in New York with beneficial and effective results, are all published for the benefit of the exhibitors throughout the country.

Cue Sheet for "One Law for Both" Is Ready

The cue sheet announced in preparation for "One Law for Both," Ivan, by George W. Beynon, is now ready for distribution to exhibitors handling the picture. It measures twelve by nine inches and is printed on heavy cream-colored paper, deckled edge.

On the first page is a resume of the plot for quick reference by the musician for a sympathetic understanding of the theme to be brought out by the music. The thirty-seven numbers include selections from composers of note, and on the last page is a list of the musical selections, with prices, which can all be obtained from the Bryant Music Company, a house specializing in the music of all publishers and catering to the requirements of motion picture theatres.

Exhibitors See Good Business in "Submarine Eye"

"The Submarine Eye" has met with considerable success in Canada, so much so that the bookings in Montreal and Toronto have been extended for an additional week in each city, according to the Williamson Brothers. As a result of the demand for the picture, A. J. Small, manager of the Canadian Circuit, bought the picture for Hamilton, and will exhibit it at the Grand Opera House, in that city.

The Grand Opera House, Columbus, Ohio, has booked the subject for a second week, and the Studubaker theatre, Chicago, has also extended its run.

Very little territory remains to be disposed of, and the Williamson Brothers are now devoting their attention to their next picture, which will be released early in 1918.
New York Will Be World Film Center, Says Hall

The rapidity with which Frank Hall is disposing of the foreign rights to "The Bar Sinister" and "Her Fighting Chance" is causing interesting speculation as to the immediate future of the foreign market. Miss Edna Williams, whose activities in disposing of film outside of the United States have made her a prominent figure in the industry for several years and through whose efforts much of the foreign territory for Frank Hall's productions have been disposed of, considers New York the legitimate center for all film markets of the world. According to Miss Williams, the close of the war will see New York in the position formerly held by London as the central distributing plant. Many buyers are now doing business through New York who bought only in London before the war, and it is natural that, their connections once made, they will continue to do so.

Scandinavian buyers, for instance, now deal direct and have been among the most active purchasers of film for several weeks.

The limited amount of producing now done outside of America has made our pictures more popular than ever, and it is doubtful whether other countries will be able to compete with us for a long time to come. The only possible exception in this regard is Italy, where the public has been educated to accept the artistic and the beautiful in pictures irrespective of the story value, and still prefer extra footage with long drawn out scenes showing attractive backgrounds in place of our closely cut scenes full of action.

Miss Williams sees a great future for American films in Russia.

Interest in Russia Brings Bids for "Ivan"

Probably due to the interest in Russian affairs shown in this country, almost every territory now has a bid in for "Ivan the Terrible," according to the Export and Import Film Company.

"The production will carry with it a striking display, dwelling on the political significance of the story as well as its intense dramatic value," says an official of the company. "In making the titles for 'Ivan the Terrible' great care was taken to lay stress on the historic effect of such rulers as Ivan IV, it being pointed out that in his time he was in the same absolute power as his descendant, Nicholas Romanoff. The picture sounds the keynote of the day indicating that the present world war will in future insure civilization against governmental tyranny of the type represented by such rulers as Ivan."

Foursquare Is Active

The Foursquare Exchange has started business with a rush in the Godfrey Building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York. The management is under Hy Gainsborg.

The following photoplays are available for direct bookings:

"Each of these features is distinctive of its class, and different from any of the others," says Mr. Gainsborg. "Combined, the product is one that indicates that Foursquare methods are being applied to the exchange bearing this unique but pertinent name."

Among the bookings made by Foursquare during the past week were "The Bar Sinister" and "The Sin Woman" for the Palace theatre, Washington Heights, New York; the Hamilton theatre, Yonkers, N. Y., and Keeney's theatre, Brooklyn, as well as the Fox, Keith and Proctor houses.

Buyers are After "Whither Thou Goest," Says Streimer

Klotz and Streimer report the receipt of many offers for the rights to "Whither Thou Goest," and Mr. Streimer, of the company, points to the fact that these offers were received prior to the publication of the trade paper criticisms, as evidence of a strong demand in the state rights market, for pictures on good clean subjects.

"It shows," says Mr. Streimer, "that buyers are on the alert for pictures that will not meet with opposition from censor bodies, and for the same reason can be confidently offered to the management of any and all classes of theatres. Almost as soon as the first announcements of 'Whither Thou Goest' appeared in the trade papers we began to receive inquiries and coincide with the publication of news articles describing the nature of the story we received definite offers without a viewing of the feature. This proves that we have made no mistake in determining to handle only such subjects as are above reproach from a moral point of view."

"Alma" Is Ready for Buyers

"Alma, Where Do You Live?" is now ready for the state rights market, according to Ralph W. Horne, president of the Newfields Producing Corporation, Woolworth Building, New York. The star of the new producing organization is Ruth MacTammany, a young American grand opera singer, who had many war-time adventures before she was able to get back to America from her studies in Italy. She plays the part of Alma, and was directed in it by Hal Clarendon.

Mr. Horne stated the policy of his organization as follows:

"We are in the market to make clean pictures of the highest type. For our initial presentation under our own trademark, we selected "Alma, Where Do You Live?" because the brilliance of the original plot seemed to offer excellent picture opportunities."

"Our publicity campaign gives every needed help to the exhibitor. The paper includes lithographs, twenty-four sheets, sixes, threes and ones and heralds. Attractive advertising cuts for local use will help to put the picture over."
First Farrar Picture Started This Week

Geraldine Farrar, who will soon make her debut as an Artcraft star under the direction of Cecil B. De Mille, is at present making a motor trip with her husband Lou-Tellegen. The couple are touring the northern part of California, and are expected back at the Lasky Studio this week.

Cecil B. De Mille, has set the machinery of the Lasky Studio at work preparing for the forthcoming production so that when the famous diva returns she will be able to commence work immediately. Upon completion of her first artcraft Picture, the title of which has not as yet been announced, Miss Farrar will take a two weeks rest before starting her second film.

New Vitagraph Stars Are Moved Into Combinations

In augmenting its companies, besides engaging Miriam Fouché, Greater Vitagraph has signed other capable people.

Edward Earle, who has been with Metro, will head a company, with Betty Howe. Arthur Donaldson will be their chief support. Wesley Ruggles will direct the trio. Their first play is a Blue Ribbon feature, "For France."

Another new combination includes Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald. Though a young man, MacDonald has appeared in "Purity," "Youth's Endearing Charms," and other pictures. Miss Manning will be featured in "The Princess of Park Row," a five-reel Blue Ribbon play to be under the direction of Ashley Miller. William Dunn will be the heavy.

Irving Cummings Picture Is "Man to Man"

"Man to Man" is the title chosen for the first Irving Cummings picture now nearing completion at Port Henry, N. Y. It is said to be in perfect harmony with the story.

All the members of the company suggested names, and were unanimously of the opinion that the one selected best fits the drama. The final exteriors are being made. Release will be through Superlative Pictures Corporation.

Dazeys, Father and Son, Go to American Film

Charles T. Dazeo and his son Frank have packed trunks and typewriter, and are to make the trip from Hollywood to Santa Barbara, where Dazeo is to write for the American Film Company.

Recently Dazeo was in "Manhattan Madness" with Douglas Fairbanks; in "Wolf Lowry," with William S. Hart and in "Flower of Faith," and "His American Wife." Earlier plays were "In Old Kentucky" and "Home Folks."

Eva Tanguay Leaves Vaudeville for Screen

Lewis J. Selznick, Who Tried to Capture Her a Year Ago, Keeps at It and Wins—She Will Be Managed by Selznick and Harry Weber

EVA TANGUAY, vaudeville headliner, is to appear as star of a Selznick-Picture production.

The Eva Tanguay Film Corporation, organized by Harry Weber and Lewis J. Selznick, will begin work soon at Selznick Studio.

Mr. Selznick engaged in negotiations with Miss Tanguay nearly a year ago. Premature announcements were made that she had signed a contract with him. The deal was called off, however, only to be renewed a short time ago, and consummated Friday.

Miss Tanguay brings to the moving picture screen a unique personality, and a following. She holds a record for business at vaudeville houses in America and abroad.

Miss Tanguay is regarded as distinctively a valuable and musical star. A number of years ago she made a name for herself in dramatic acting. She is, not merely an artist playing upon a reputation in another field, but is an actress of ability returning to her first love.

"I am particularly gratified," said Mr. Weber yesterday, "to be associated with Mr. Selznick in this, my first film venture. I have been making a close study of moving picture trade conditions. I came to the conclusion that an alliance with the Selznick enterprises would be most advantageous for me."

"Miss Tanguay's first production will be a lavish one in every respect. She will be surrounded by a cast which will be in every way worthy of her talents. We expect to produce this picture in record time, and have it on the market in the early fall."

Mr. Selznick added to this:

"I have been of the opinion for a long time that Miss Tanguay would prove one of the biggest box-office attractions in the film business. I am delighted to be able to offer her as a star to exhibitors under my open booking system."

Glass Stage for Fox Stars Built in California

To Pose Indoors for Outdoor Pictures in a Place Where It Will Not Be Considered a Proper Thing to Throw Any Stones at All

A GLASS studio is being erected at the William Fox plant at Hollywood, Cal. It is perhaps more accurately described as a glass stage. The area under cover in the new construction is 60 by 120 feet, enough space for quite elaborate outdoor productions. They will be outdoor productions in effect, though really posed indoors.

In the California rainy season many days have excellent photographic light and yet are unfit for the old-fashioned outdoor posing. The glass studio has a purpose warranting the cost. It is anticipated the new stage will be ready for use within three weeks.

A complete Mexican city is being erected on the Fox lot at Silver Lake, Cal. The border town has been planned by George Grenier and is typical to the least detail. The dode houses are provided even with dobe rainspouts. It is a reproduction of a border town needed for the newest George Walsh production.

In "The Kid is Clever," written by Randolph Lewis, in which Walsh poses, he takes the part of Kirk White. He is knocked senseless and wakes up in a dungeon in a Mexican town, and is rescued from the revolutionists by United States cavalry.

This Walsh subject, by a program change already noticed, is to be released July 22. Three of the supporting stars, Clyde Hopkins, Dor Like and A. Burt Wesner, are new to the Fox forces, but by no means are they new to the screen, all having made enviable records.

June Caprice, who was in "Patsy," released on July 1, will start on another production this week. A sudden change from rainy and overcast days to clear weather has made it possible to release "Two Little Imps," with Jane and Katherine Lee, on July 8.
Parke Rehearsed Seven Companies at Once
Pathe's Director Says He Was Led to Get Into Motion Pictures
After Trying a Nerve-Racking Feat with "Potash and Perlmutter"

WILLIAM PARKE, who is producing Pathe pictures made by Astra Film, once tried to rehearse seven "Potash and Perlmutter" road companies at once. He says himself it was this nerve-racking experience that decided him to try the movies. His first job with the pictures was in the Thanhouser Company.

In "The Cigarette Girl," starring Gladys Hulette, Parke directed. He had directed Miss Hulette when she starred in "The Shine Girl" for Thanhouser. When she went to Astra it was with the understanding that she should still be directed by him.

Early in his career Mr. Parke gathered a company of excellent players and put on good plays at a low price in Pittsfield. He gained in every way except financially. Walter Pritchard Eaton wrote of him at that time: "Just consider for a moment what Mr. Parke has done. First, he has shown Pittsfield a different play every week, and every play a worthy play. He has never sought pennies with salaciousness, and he has never let down the bars to publish.

"Mr. Parke has given to Pittsfield for the first time in her history a real theatre.

"This is the man chosen to direct Pathe pictures, a Pathe announcement says.

Program of "L-Ko Comedies" Has Some Bright Ones

Work on L-Ko Comedies, under the general direction of J. G. Blystone, is keeping several companies busy in Hollywood, Cal., meeting the requirements of the program. Vin Moore, Noel Smith and Dick Smith have each turned out new releases during the past month for midsummer distribution among exhibitors, who draw upon Universal sources for their entertainments.

"Love Behind Bars," directed by Vin Moore, features Phil Dunham, Myrtle Sterling and Lucille Hutton, with a bevy of "seminary girls" assisting in the mischief making.

Dick Smith has made "The Sign of the Cucumber" with Bob McKenzie featured in a dual role, supported by Eva Novak and Chester Ryckman. "Surf Scandal" will be an especially timely hot-weather feature, Noel Smith having directed Dan Russell and Gladys Varden in a tale of the seashore that carries many stunning "flashes" of pretty girls.

Praise for "Public Be Damned" on First Showing

The element of timeliness incorporated in the story of "The Public Be Damned," which was given its first public presentation at the Strand theatre, New York, the week of June 24, led to its hearty endorsement by critics and audiences. New York newspapers accorded it war notices.

The Tribune said: "It is the truth which it contains that counts. "The Public Be Damned" is most timely when the whole world is looking to the land under the Stars and Stripes to provide them with food."

The Herald: "The drama is full of thrills and is lightened by a strong thread of love interest woven through the plot."

Charles Richman and Mary Fuller have the principal roles in the drama proper, which is preceded by views of Herbert Hoover, United States Food Administrator, in his office, and by excerpts from Mr. Hoover's speeches, received warm praise for their part in the production. Mr. Richman is John Black, the head of the predatory Food Trust, and Mary Fuller is the inspired girl who fights the trust to a finish.

Fort Lee, Aghast at Goldwyn Circus, Stops Sunday Work

Edward A. White, mayor of Fort Lee, has issued an order to the motion picture producers forbidding all photographing of exteriors or other work "on the lot" on Sunday.

In the third Mac Marsh production for Goldwyn Pictures a costly circus scene is one feature. Circus performers, animals and 2,000 "extras" were used under a circus tent.

"I am glad at this time," wrote Mayor White, "to assure the motion picture companies with studios in Fort Lee, that they have no stronger supporters than the citizens of this city. I attended an evening performance of the Goldwyn circus and enjoyed every moment of it. The request that Sunday picture-taking be abandoned, not alone by the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, but by others as well, is a matter only of a proper observance of the Sabbath."

The mayor told Samuel Goldfish, of Goldwyn, that he had to take action because the "small boys in the town would not go to bed as long as the circus performers, animals and Italian hand stayed up."

Popular Theme Provides Action in Latest Mutual

Love and business furnish the theme for Marjorie Rambeau's sixth Mutual star production, "Mary Moreland," scheduled for release July 9.

The photodrama is a screen adaptation of Marie VanVorst's novel of the same title, one of the most popular pieces of fiction which has been published in a long time. It was produced under the direction of Frank Powell by the Powell Producing Corporation at the College Point studios.

Robert Elliott, who has played the leading role with Miss Rambeau in "Motherhood," "The Mirror" and "The Dazzling Miss Davison," appears with her in "Mary Moreland" in the role of Thomas Maugham, Wall street broker, a victim of domestic unhappiness and in love with his stenographer. Mr. Elliott has a long stage career and has appeared for some time before the camera.

Gene LaMothe, Augusta Burmester, Fraser Tarbell, and Edna M. Holland compose the supporting cast.

Jean Sothern in Art Drama "Miss Deception"

"Miss Deception" is the Van Dyke production to be released on Art Dramas program following "The Peddler." It was written by Joseph Franklin Poland and features Jean Sothern.

The theme is love and high finance with scenes in finishing school and a millionaire's office and home.

Donald Cameron is Tom and others in the cast are Mary Moore, Jack Newton and Edwin Stanley.

Humorists Pose as Audience at Movie Circus

The American Press. Humorists with their wives and children, one hundred in the party were the guests of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation at the company's studios in Fort Lee. A circus scene was being staged as a spectacular feature of Mae Marsh's third production.

The humorists dressed for their parts as circus audience, and with Charles Horan, assisted by Henry Edward Warner, of the Baltimore Sun, as directors, went through a number of scenes. At a studio luncheon the humorists met Jane Cowl, actress and co-author of "Lilac Time" and Mae Marsh, the star of the production now making.

Edgar Guest, of the Detroit Free Press, Don Marquis, of the New York Evening Sun, and James Waldrone, of Judge Weekly, assisted in directing a little scenario that was enacted by some of the better known paragraphers, including Roy K. Moulton, Claire Briggs, Ted Robinson, Charles A. Leedy, Douglas Malloch, E. W. Miller, R. D. McPhee, Dixon Merritt, and Julius Taumen.

Lively Booking in West on Path-Thanhouser Feature

W. W. Kofeldt, Pathe manager at Portland, Ore., has closed with Manager Myrick of Columbia theatre there for "The Vicar of Wakefield," Pathé-Thanhouser super-feature. The play is from Oliver Goldsmith's book.

A private screening has been arranged before the National Educational Association.

In Seattle, George P. Endert, manager there, arranged a private view of the play at the Liberty theatre. Teachers, ministers, city officials, newspaper men and delegates to the Mothers' Congress and the Parent Teachers' Association attended.

I. P. Arnold, manager in Salt Lake City, has closed contracts for the production of the photoplay at the American theatre, Idaho Falls; Grey Opera House, Anthony, Idaho, and the Oak theatre, Rexburg, Idaho.

Mastbaum Takes Goldwyns for Stanley Theatre

STANLEY V. MASTBAUM, Pennsylvania's leading exhibitor, has contracted for the entire output of twenty-six Goldwyn Pictures for the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia, a leading motion picture place.

This is taken to mean the Goldwyn Pictures will be shown in more than a hundred theatres under the same control. Mr. Mastbaum shares with Marcus Loew the distinction of booking more motion picture theatres than any other man in the picture industry.

Managers for nineteen American branches and six Canadian offices are announced this week. The work of choosing these men has been done in sixty days, though ten months of preparation preceded it. The offices were equipped from New York in thirty days from signing the leases, and every appointment is credited with being among the finest in the field.

Goldwyn is making its own positive prints at Fort Lee Studios. Exhibitors will be shown the pictures in the various branch offices.

Fairbanks Aids Two Directors to Speed Up Production

A GENERAL speeding up in production is to be made by Douglas Fairbanks following notification by Artcraft that exhibitors are calling for more productions than originally scheduled. Record-breaking business has been reported on the player's last picture, "Wild and Wooly."

In line with this move it was announced last week that two directors have been added to Fairbanks staff in the persons of John W. McDermott and Joseph Hena- berry, who will work under the personal supervision of John Emerson. The latter will hereafter be known as director-general of the Fairbanks organization, and believes that through the addition of the two directors he will be able to overcome the loss of time as outlined recently in the new working plan of this producing unit.

Both Mr. McDermott and Mr. Hena- berry have had considerable experience as directors, the former having been on the Morosco directorial staff while the latter is a graduate of the D. W. Griffith school and is responsible for many Fine Arts successes. Both are comparatively young men and will, it is thought, easily be able to adapt themselves to the Fairbanks method of production which involves the collaboration of star and directors as well as scenario writer, Anita Loos.

Triangle Stars Anna Lehr Again in Long Feature

Anna Lehr, who will be remembered by critics and fans for her work in "Civilization's Child" and "The Bugle Call," has returned to Triangle and will appear in the leading feminine role opposite Jack Dever- eaux in a picture now being produced under the supervision of Alan Dwan at the Vonk- ers studio.

Her part in the new play, which is the work of James W. Adams, of Philadelphia, is said to give her greater opportunities than any which she has had recently.

The supporting cast includes George Sig- mann, who appeared as Lynch in "The Birth of a Nation," and was co-director of "Intolerance"; Frank Currier, who was featured in "Fifty-Fifty," "Her Father's Keeper" and other productions, and Ed Gilley, best known for his work in such Broadway stage plays as "Kick In," "Pot- ash and Perlmutter" and "Deep Purple."
Three-Masted Ship, Rarity at Sea, in "When a Man Sees Red"

"When a Man Sees Red," a Fox production said to have cost $200,000, shows William Farnum as a sturdy sailor battling his way to victory against almost overwhelming odds.

The scenes were completed in San Francisco Bay and at Hollywood, Cal., and when Frank Lloyd, director, brought the film East with him for cutting and fitting, release is soon to come.

Director Lloyd experienced unusual difficulty in obtaining a three-masted ship for some of the scenes. He sought in vain at half a dozen big California ports, but no vessels were forthcoming because the war demand had given all the boats charters, and matters looked gloomy indeed.

At San Francisco the company finally discovered an able-bodied ship which could be leased long enough to get the required scenes.

Jewel Carmen, the "opposite" of "American Methods" and "A Tale of Two Cities," appears in a similar capacity in "When a Man Sees Red." Marc Robbins is another important member of the cast.

Mr. Lloyd says that everyone who had a part in the picture was imbued with the fine spirit of the story. It was called "The Painted Lady," when it ran in serial form in The Saturday Evening Post.

Larry Evans is the author.

Dorothy Phillips a Repeater on July Bluebird List

Since Joseph De Grasse, last December, introduced Dorothy Phillips as a star of Bluebirds she has regularly appeared upon the program on an average of once a month. For a time Mr. De Grasse was able to keep pace with his star's capacity for work, but eventually it became necessary for him to S.O.S. to his wife, Ida May Park, who had always assisted him in preparing scenarios and directing. It was Mr. De Grasse who introduced Louise Lovely to Bluebirds, and most of her features were directed from Miss Park's scenario. Since last April Mr. and Mrs. De Grasse have been busy supplying mediums to absorb Miss Phillips' energy.

The De Grasses and Miss Phillips are under long-term contract to Bluebird, and the average of a feature once a month promises to be maintained for some time to come, husband and wife alternating in directing. The Bluebird schedule shows Miss Phillips twice appearing with her attractions only three weeks apart, July furnishing an instance in "Fires of Rebellion," the current offering, and "The Rescue," July 23. Both of these presentations were created by Ida May Park.

Daring Dancing in "No Greater Love"—K.E.S.E

Regina Badet appears as "Sadunah, the Dancer," in the Selig play, "No Greater Love," released through K.E.S.E. The announcements speak of her as a French emotional actress known as "the vampire of the French screen" and "the Gertrude Hoffman of Paris.

Her dancing is daring in the play, in the plot of which she takes the part of a ballet woman who marries a financier and sacrifices all for mother love.

Story by Juvenile Court Judge Being Screened

Violet MacMillan, vaudeville artist, is playing the leading part in a five-reel feature entitled "Nancy's Baby," at Universal City. The director is Eugene Moore.

Miss MacMillan impersonates a ragged newsboy. The story was written by Judge Willis Brown, a former juvenile court judge. Miss MacMillan is supported by Charles H. Mailes and Gertrude Asten.

The picture is replete with incidents of the street and life in the tenements, Judge Brown having had ample opportunities for studying these phases from the bench.

"Tanks at Battle of Ancre" in Pathe Bookings

Following the announcement that Pathe's five-reel special official government picture, "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre," has been booked at Charles Dillingham's Globe theatre, Forty-sixth street and Broadway, New York, it is now stated that the engagement is for at least two weeks, at the highest weekly rental ever paid for a five-reel picture in New York.

Other big bookings are Orchestra Hall, Chicago; Tremont Temple, Boston, and the Brandeis theatre, Omaha, under the auspices of the Hotel Men's Association during its convention there.

The arrangements made for presenting "The Tanks at the Battle of the Ancre" in Chicago and Omaha typify C. R. Seelye's sales policy, according to which Pathe salesmen and managers work with the exhibitors in putting over Pathe pictures.

In Chicago the presentation is being made under the direction of Manager Vogeli of Orchestra Hall, in co-operation with Tom North, manager of Pathe's super-feature department, who is in Chicago for the motion picture convention.

North is making arrangements with John Philip Sousa and his Naval Reserve Band to appear during the week.

Finish and Start on Triangle Productions

Triangle Director Raymond B. West last week started work on the next starring vehicle of Dorothy Dalton who will give this versatile young woman an opportunity to portray the rise of a social butterfly from an environment of poverty. The locale of the piece is in the Adirondack mountains and New York City. In support of Miss Dalton are Jack Livingston, J. Barney Sherry, Aaron Edwards, Dorcas Matthews and Billy Shaw.

Director Reginald Barker this week completes the Triangle production in which Louise Glaum will be seen in the role of a dance hall siren, and is now busy preparing the script for "the peacock woman's" next screen vehicle. All of the completed piece was staged at the Triangle ranch studio. The cast included Jack Gilbert, Mildred Harris, William Conklin and Jack Richardson.

"Sudden Jim" Finished by "T"

Triangle Director Victor Schertzinger has completed the seven-reel picturization of "Sudden Jim," the Saturday Evening Post serial, and now one of the seven "best sellers" among novels. The story a two-reeler, was written by Shelley Sutton.
Special Attention to Titling by Bluebird Artists

Realizing that titles constitute an important factor in "putting over" photodramas, Bluebird began some time ago to give serious consideration to that all-important subject. After long experimenting, the solution was at last disclosed in the work of the Hoover-Hobson-Breuer artists now employed in putting the punch into Bluebird titles.

Titles that are peppy, explanatory and illuminating, through well thought out aid to continuity, are now features of every Bluebird, and because of the interest and inquiries that have come to Bluebird headquarters, the following information has been supplied. The Hoover-Hobson-Breuer artists have developed what is claimed to be a new idea in the correct illustration of titles.

These artists began illustrating titles for Selig and Essanay in Chicago, and by these concerns were considered a real find.

Elise Ferguson Likes Her Part in "Barbary Sheep"

Elise Ferguson expresses herself as greatly pleased with the screen play, "Barbary Sheep" selected for her debut in Artcraft pictures. She has gone to the Famous Players-Lasky Studio in Fort Lee, several times during the week to watch the building of the sets.

"I take the part of Lady Wyverne, an English noblewoman," said Miss Ferguson, while at the studio the other day. "I have read Robert Hichens' story several times now, and do you know I think when he described that character he drew my own picture, even to the hair."

Photographing will begin this week.

Woman Script Writer for Studio of National

Helen Starr, writer and script editor for Universal for two years, has joined the staff of the National Film Company. Studios have been obtained at Hollywood, Cal., and as soon as certain scenarios are completed producing will begin.

Lew Fields to Screen "The Corner Grocery"

Lew Fields is at work in Peerless Studio, Fort Lee, upon the second of the series of photoplays for World-Pictures Brady-Made. It is a screen version of "The Corner Grocery," which is said to have had the longest New York run as a spoken comedy-drama. "The Corner Grocery" was written and produced by Adolph Phillip, at the German theatre, in New York, where its career continued for 1,007 performances, outdistancing "The Old Homestead," and a host of other popular attractions.

The story is of the kind sometimes described as serio-comic—which is to say, it is merely humorous, but carries a vein of serious material.

"When True Love Dawns," the last of the series of French photoplays purchased by the Brady-International Service for the World-Pictures programme, is about to be published. Susan Grandaisé, called "the sweetest girl in Europe," is the star.

The cast includes Albert Signer, whose acting attracted general attention in Sarah Bernhardt's "Mothers of France" and Regina Badet's "Atonement."

"When True Love Dawns" is said by its American sponsors to contain certain unique features, among them a set of characters and a story without one thought of evil.

Miss Grandaisé is expected to come to America as soon as she finishes the play upon which she is working with Mr. Mercantour "somewhere in France."

Fox Comedy Beach Pictures

Two new Foxfilm comedies have just been completed at Hollywood, Cal. A third is getting ready.

Hank Mann's new comedy revolves around the happenings on the beach. A. Vallet had the camera. In the cast are Rena Rogers, Katherine Griffith, Eva Nelson, Harry Moody and Juss Weldon. The last-mentioned, it will be recalled, carries a vast amount of avoirdupois.

The picture for which the story is now being written is for Charles Parrott. The making of films will begin next week.

No Rental Change but More Service—Vitagraph

"Upsetting Rental Policies Disastrous to Every End of Business," Says a Greater Vitagraph-V.L.-S.E. Statement—New Weekly Features Added

GREAT VITAGRAPh V.-L.-S.-E. has no intention of changing its rental policy, it is announced by the company. The statement issued reads:

"Continual changes in rental policies we find are disastrous to every end of the industry. This is one of the reasons why we have no idea of changing our present policy, at least until such a time as our patrons show we are wrong and that they will be benefited by a change.

"Our present policy contemplates a volume of business at a price equitable to ourselves and to the exhibitors. In other words, our endeavor for months has been to rent pictures at a price at which the exhibitor may make money on every one of our features. In the past we have placed special Blue Ribbon features on our regular weekly release. Every so often it has been our policy to give the exhibitor one or two reels more than they are asked to pay for. We do this by putting a top-notch seven-reel picture in place of the usual five-reel feature. This policy we will continue.

"Greater Vitagraph V.-L.-S.-E. is continually seeking advice from the exhibitors of the country. It is upon these advice our policy is based. The exhibitors seem to feel that our present policy is correct. The only suggestion they make is that we increase our service."

In answer to the request of the exhibitors that the Greater Vitagraph V.-L.-S.-E. service be increased the corporation, after working for several months, has perfected its plan for a large increase in its service. This increase will start on July 21, and will further be increased on August 6.

The increase of July 23 will inaugurate Favorite Film Features, three reels weekly; either two drama and one comedy or two comedy and one drama. All are re-edited rushes screened for the executive board—the best of Greater Vitagraph's product several years ago. Following is the schedule:

July 23—"Her Husband," 2-reel drama, with Clara Kimball Young, Earle Williams, James Lackaye, Darwin Karr; "The Late Mr. Jones," 1-reel comedy, with Sidney Drew, Louise Beaudet, L. Rogers Lytton.

"It Happened to Adele" New Thanhouser Drama

"It Happened to Adele" is the title of the five-reel feature which Thanhouser contributes for release through Pathé on July 15. It was written by Agnes C. Johnston, author of "The Shine Girl," "Her New York" and other Gold Rooster hits, and directed by Van Dyke Brooke.

"It Happened to Adele," the star of "An Amateur Orphan," has another good picture.

The players are Gladys Leslie, Peggy Burke, Carey Hastings, Charlie Emerson, Clarine Seymour, Wayne Arey and Justus Barnes.

Ruth Roland, in Pathe Serial, Shut Up in Asylum

Ruth Roland, in the part of Margaret Warner in "The Veiled Intrigue," is imprisoned in an asylum by a crooked lawyer. This is the tenth episode of "The Neglected Wife," serialized by Pathé, July 15.

The Photoplay Journal of Cincinnati says in its editorial column: "Despite the fact that usually business is not as good in summer as in winter, and despite war depression an increasing number of theatres are running one of the most appealing serial photoplays ever produced, "The Neglected Wife."

Enid Bennett's Strong Aides

What is described as one of the best balanced casts ever assembled for a Triangle play will be seen in "The Mother Instinct," pictured by Lambert Hillyer from the story by Maude Pettus, and starring Enid Bennett.

Besides the star there is a long list of players, each of whom is well known. Included in this number are Margery Wilson, Gertrude Claire, Jack Gilbert, Rowland Lee, Tod Burns and Carl Ullman.
Robert B. Mantell's Son in Art Drama Picture

In the new Art Drama "When You and I Were Young," Robert B. Mantell, Jr., a son of the tragedian, has a role. He supports Harry Benham, who was in "Madame Sherry" and "Frou Frou." This is a change as it was first announced John Sam-polis would have the part.

The scenario is by Frederick Rath and is stated to be a story of both novelty and sentiment. The latter quality will be contributed in part by Alma Hanlon, and by Florence Short—who in this play will be an adventuress.

Harry Raver, president of Apollo Pictures, Inc., who makes the announcement, has been watching Mr. Benham's work with the Thanhouser, Fox, Universal and World Producing Companies. He supported June Caprice in "The Mischief Maker" and was leading man for Alice Brady in "The Dancer's Peril."

Kalem's Miniature Arsenal Is Called on for Guns

It has not been an uncommon sight recently to behold a banker shouldering a cane, marching beside a millhand with a broom-handle, while the Home Guards learn the manual of arms.

Rutherford, New Jersey, however, determined that their patriots should have the real thing to drill with, but found it impossible to secure guns of any description through the usual channels. Learning that the Kalem Company has one of the largest arsenals in the moving picture business—rifles, carbines, revolvers, and even cannons, used in Kalem's many military productions—the city fathers of Rutherford appealed to the Kalem officials.

"We believe we have one of the finest home guards in the country," they said, "and the men, young and old, are full of enthusiasm, but it's difficult to ask a fellow to keep up his interest while he's manipulating a stick in lieu of a rifle."

Whereupon Kalem instructed Manager Phil Lang at the Glendale, California, studio, to ship 200 Springfield rifles forthwith. The guns went forward to Rutherford by the next express. The illustration shows Lang inspecting the rifles.

Miss Pretty was featured in "Secret Kingdom," Lewis acted as "The Clutching Hand" in "Exploits of Elaine" and "Iron Claw" in the serial of the name. Mr. Hamilton was with Olga Petrova.

Though Miss Kenyon has never been in serial before she has made a hit in various screen plays for other companies.

The story is by Arthur B. Reeve and Charles A. Logue.

Mr. Reeve has a big following among magazine readers for his mystery and detective stories, while some of the best photodramas of the day have been conceived in the fertile brain of Mr. Logue.

Pearl White Tells How She Felt Over Boiling Oil

"I think 'The Fatal Ring' the most exciting and the most interesting serial in which I have appeared to date," said Miss Pearl White, after appearing in several of the episodes of "The Fatal Ring," Pathe serial, for release July 8.

"In one episode of 'The Fatal Ring' I am left suspended over a caldron of boiling oil. It is a safe bet to make that everyone who sees this episode will come back to see the next episode, to find out how I dodged that pot of boiling oil. When they got me up there, all trussed up like a turkey, I wondered how I was going to get down without going head-first into the caldron. It was nip and tuck as to whether I would or I wouldn't, and I had to see the film about four times myself to convince myself that I didn't."

Form Company to Produce Anti-Liquor Films

Theatre Men See Mae Marsh in Goldwyn Poses

Leading Exhibitors in Motion Picture Industry Attracted by Circus Scenes Requiring About 2,000 Extras and Whole Village

MARCUS LOEW, Robert Lieber, of Indianapolis; T. L. Tally, of Los Angeles; John H. Kunsly, of Detroit, and Nathan Gordon were among the men of prominence in the motion picture industry who saw Goldwyn circus pictures taken in Fort Lee.

News of the taking of these scenes crossed the Hudson quickly and attracted a great gallery of visitors.

An entire village had been constructed and through it marched the circus, with lions roaring and elephants pushing the animal cages over rough spots in the road. Night scenes were taken at night—not faked in daylight.

Mae Marsh was the star in the company and nearly 3,000 persons were employed. The extras are said to have numbered about 2,000.

A. H. Woods, the theatrical producer, with Kenneth Macgowan, were in the crowd; Others were Arthur Train, novelist; Mrs. Train and Miss Train, Mrs. Arthur Wood, wife of the Police Commissioner, and Miss Nysa McMein, cover illustrator of the Saturday Evening Post.

No one need be surprised when Miss Marsh’s picture is released to find that several of these well known persons have been photographed as part of the huge audience of village onlookers that watched the parade and shouted their approval of the antics of a dwarfed clown and his obtinate donkey. Mr. Tally, of Los Angeles, will unquestionably be found establishing a friendship with the elephants and gazing with proper rural awe at the astonish-freaks on the raised platforms in front of the sideshows.

Mae Marsh’s working schedule is filled to overflowing. She will complete her present picture on Thursday night, July 12 or the day following and will leave for Chicago on Friday afternoon, July 13, to attend the opening of Exhibitors’ League Exposition at the Coliseum on Saturday. This picture, incidentally, will be exhibited two days later at a trade showing of the Goldwyn productions in Chicago.

Boom Recruiting with “The Man Who Was Afraid”

RECRUITING was boomed in Chicago by use of the Essanay latest feature, “The Man Who Was Afraid.” This is a Bryant Washburn picture.

The entire First Illinois Regiment paraded the streets of the Loop district, carrying banners inviting the public to see “The Man Who Was Afraid” at one of the big downtown theatres.

No admission fee was charged at the theatre, and the place was packed from 11 a.
m. to 11 p.m. Between each showing of the picture officers of the regiment addressed the crowds, and urged the men to join and fight for their country.

Booths already had been erected in the lobby, where applications were received. Hundreds of spectators enlisted as they left the theatre. The regiment was enabled to bring its ranks nearly up to the war footing.

Besides the parade and the theatre show uniformed men were posted at street cor-ers in the downtown district. They asked men who passed to enlist. If the invitation was refused they handed out tickets reading, “Go see ‘The Man Who Was Afraid.’ ”

President George K. Spoor, of Essanay, donated the print that was used. The K-E-
S-E Service, releasing the film, is preparing to aid exhibitors in other towns in getting the co-operation of recruiting officers for a showing of this production.

Signs for Goldwyn First Run

tures. The contract is for the first twenty-six productions, and they will be shown at the Madison theatre.

terior hotel set was erected at Fort Lee and other sets are to follow. In the Fifty-sixth Street Studio, New York, several scenes have been filmed.

George M. Cohen and his company are working day and night to get out this play as rapidly as possible. No time is lost between scenes.

In one scene where the hermit burns his money in the grate, Carlton Macy, in trying to resolve the money in the flames, burned his hand, last week. He was quite painfully hurt. Release is through Artcraft.

Paul Scardon, Vitagraph, to Direct rected Earl Williams in his last six productions, has a new star under his care—

Harry Morey. Mr. Williams will be directed hereafter by William Earle.

Mr. Morey has been featured with Alice Joyce in “Womankind,” “Within the Law,” and other plays.

On the speaking stage Mr. Scardon had parts with Sothern, Nance O’Neill, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and the late Kyrie Bellev. He was born in Melbourne, Australia. The recent screen plays he has directed are “Transgression,” “The Stolen Treaty,” “The Maestrom,” “The Hawk,” “Apartment 29,” and “Arsene Lupin.”

Pearl White Trapped in Fire in “The Crushing Wall”

In the second episode of “The Fatal Ring,” titled “The Crushing Wall,” and released by the Pathe, July 15, Pearl White and Knox are trapped in a house which Carlske sets on fire.

Carlton attempts to rescue them, and they find themselves in a room, the walls of which slowly converge. A few seconds more and all will be over.

“Will theatre-goers come back for the next episode?” the Pathe announcement asks. And the answer is, “They will.”
Gladys Hulette in Pathe’s “Last of the Carnabys”

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Gladys Hulette stars in the Pathe Gold Rooster Play, “The Last of the Carnabys” to be released July 22.

In many respects this play is strongly dramatic, with tense situations. William Parke directed the picture. Philip Bartholomae, the playwright, wrote the story.

A young girl and her brother, once wealthy, are facing fading fortunes. A rogue lays his hand on the girl, and the brother, stung to manliness, shoots him and flee.

The sister, Miss Carnaby, tells the police she is herself guilty. The fugitive brother hears of the trial, and, trying to make his way back, is hurt in an automobile accident. He is carried into court, lives to admit the murder and then dies. The girl feels that death is the only remedy, but the man who has loved her from the beginning comes to her aid, and the last of the Carnabys finds new happiness.

“Neptune’s Naughty Daughter,” with Alice Howell

Century Comedies, of which Alice Howell is the star, have produced several episodes of circus life that promise to make “Alice of the Sawdust” the most popular of the Century series. Indeed, since the brand was established with the release of “Balloonatics,” General Director J. G. Blystone seems to have improved every issue. “Automaniacs” was the second in the series, and “Neptune’s Naughty Daughter” has just lately been offered to state rights buyers.

“Alice of the Sawdust” was created after a special circus had been equipped for the feats of daring and reckless romping had been outlined for Miss Howell to indulge in. Never was such a circus transported and it is extremely likely that there never will be quite such an outfit on the road. Mechanical effects and surprise “stunts” were thought out by Director Blystone with a view to presenting Miss Howell as a circus rider and aerial performer extraordinary.

Ergograph Thinks Well of “The Millstone”

Work on “The Millstone,” which the Ergograph Company is making from Albert Payson Terhune’s story in the current number of the Red Book, is rapidly progressing under the direction of Ben M. Goetz.

It is described as a story of unusual power, distinguished by that originality of viewpoint which is present in all of Mr. Terhune’s story. The picture is five reels.

Milo to Release Through General Film

The General Film Company of New York hereafter will release the product of the Milo Picture Corporation of Baltimore. The Baltimore company will try to complete a comedy by September 1, reopening the Frederick Road studio, where there is a glass 50 by 75 feet in area.

Billie Quirk will be in leading roles and direct the pictures.

Essanay Seeks Exhibitors’ Ideas on Advertising

In Placing “On Trial” with National Exhibitors’ Circuit President Spoor Asks Closer Co-operation with All Theatre Managers

ESSANAY is trying to get into direct touch with exhibitors, believing in a shorter route through the distributing companies. The company considers the need is greater in such a case as theirs because they are releasing through two different channels.

President George K. Spoor of Essanay, announcing he has placed the super-subject, “On Trial,” with the First National Exhibitors’ Circuit, says:

“As a step toward arousing the cooperative spirit toward the producer among the many capable theatre managers in this country we are requesting them to feel free to call upon us at all times for advertising ideas and at the same time send along anything which would be of use to us in issuing material and pictures to their liking.

Mouse Has Work in Vitagraph Play with Anita Stewart

Greater Vitagraph’s play, “The Message of the Mouse,” presenting Anita Stewart, will be released July 9.

Miss Stewart plays the part of Wynn Winthrop, the incarnation of feminine patriotism and exposes the plot of unscrupulous international agents to steal plans, blow up shipyards and divert fifty billions of American capital to bankrupt foreign countries.

Hallam Varrie, known as “The Rose” to his subordinates in a spy system, has a Winthrop shipyard blown up.

The night of the explosion part of a message Varrie has written to a woman confederate was picked up by a mouse and carried into the room of Wynn. She picked it up, discovering it bore the signs of a rose and had a message in cipher. This leads to the exposure of the plotters and brings the end of the romance between Wynn and a young Secret Service man, Paul Adams, portrayed by Rudolph Cameron.

The play is written by George Randolph and Lilian Chester, and contains many unique and striking situations.

Exhibitor Says Picture Brings Too Many to Theatre

R. M. Chisholm, president of the American Amusement and Producing Company, Inc., operators of the big Diamond theatre, New Orleans, has written Pathe Exchange, New York, as follows:

“It is not often we register a complaint or make any ‘kick’ on any picture that we personally screen and play, but we feel we have certainly a ‘kick’ coming, and you can cancel any more pictures like ‘Blind Man’s Luck,’ featuring fascinating beautiful Mollie King. The picture did business, in fact, packed the house to the doors—packed it so full it is time to call a halt.”

Valeska Suratt Back from Water Gap

The Valeska Suratt company of players has just returned to the Fox Studios in Fort Lee, N. J., after four weeks at Delaware Water Gap, where the exteriors for Miss Suratt’s coming photoplay were taken.

Members of the cast are Eric Mayne, Peter Lang, Martin Faust and Dan Mason. William Nigh is the director.
Movie Life One Suit of Clothes After Another

TAYLOR HOLMES is off the speaking stage for good, at least this is his present intention. His debut in "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" for Essanay signals a complete and permanent change in the ordering of his ways. He is now half-filmed for this production.

Just why an actor able to have led "Bunker Bean" to foothold fame should desert for the "movies" is puzzling theatrical circles. It was put up to Holmes. "I have been planning this step for the past two years," he explained. "You see, I have always believed that the screen would eventually surpass the stage as an amusement industry. It comes within reach of the greatest mass of the people, and its productions permit an unlimited and far more realistic field for settings. Such a combination with the proper acting was bound to win out, I believed. Therefore I decided that sooner or later I would get on the winning side. Here I am."

Mr. Holmes has been a close student of the motion picture industry for some time, and is a master of its technique, so far as theory goes. Thus it was that he was not altogether a "tenderfoot" when he joined Essanay.

"However, I have a tremendous lot to learn," he said, "One of my chief difficulties is in refraining from an exaggeration of expression."

"Does the lack of lines to read handicap you in obtaining the desired expression?" he was asked.

"Well, it probably would," he answered, "If I had not prepared before hand. But, you see, I fake lines to suit the action which I am portraying and actually speak them in the scenes."

The pictures have been more generous to the actor than the stage in more than one particular. He admitted that the large and luxuriously furnished dressing-room placed at his disposal by Essanay is the best he ever had. It was here, while being shifted from a suit of mobby brown clothes into another of blue by George, his dresser, that he gave this brief interview.

"This is the twenty-eighth change I have made during my two days' work here," he said, with a grin. "I am told this picture will require about a month to produce. Figuring on that basis I will have to make more than four hundred changes before we get through. Life in the films seems to be just one suit of clothes after another."

"Another feature most surprising to me is the apparently inexhaustible supplies of properties and scenery which a motion picture company maintains. I was taken through these departments here and shown enough furniture, in fact, to equip an entire city from the pauper's hovel to the millionaire's palace, and sufficient scenery to build that city, with a few mountains and deserts thrown in. There seems nothing from an Egyptian mummy to a volcano in eruption that a motion picture company cannot get for its productions."

Mollie King in Pathé's "On the Square Girl"

Mollie King, who is becoming popular on the screen, will appear in "The On-the-Square Girl," a Pathé Gold Rooster play to be released the end of July.

"The On-the-Square Girl" is announced as a fast moving, interest-holding feature, dealing with a little known phase of New York life, the speedy suburban club, town and country set.

It is said to be a strong picture and the best in which Mollie King has yet appeared. She has been seen in "Kick In," "Mystery of the Double Cross," and "Blind Man's Luek," all of them hits.

Art, Not Sub-Titles, in "A Sleeping Memory"

In "A Sleeping Memory," a picturization of E. Phillips Oppenheim's novel, produced by Metro, Emily Stevens and cast are required by their art to carry to the audience every shade of meaning, every angle of the story, almost without subtitles.

This is Maxwell Karger's idea. He supervises the production, the director being George D. Baker.

Miss Stevens takes the part of a sweet, generous girl who undergoes an operation that removes all memories of the past and becomes a cold mercenary creature. In the end, after a tragedy, she returns to her old nature. Frank Mills plays opposite. Work has commenced on the drama.
Vitagraph Managers Predict Summer Boom

Greater Vitagraph V-L-S.E. branch managers have been polled upon business conditions, with particular reference to the summer ahead. Contrary to all precedent, they declare business will increase steadily throughout the hot months.

These reports were made in the face of instructions from headquarters that managers would be expected to live up to their predictions and not to let too much optimism carry them away.

Reports were received from the following:

Monarch’s Toronto Changes

Phil Kaufman has been made general manager of the Monarch Film Co., at Toronto, Ont. Sammy Glazier, formerly a Monarch salesman, has been made the manager. Mr. I. Soskin has been appointed manager of the Famous Players Co. to replace Mr. Kaufman.
K-E-S-E Men Pleased with "Do Children Count?"

Among K-E-S-E managers reporting at the home office in Chicago during the week were Harry Scott, from the Eastern division, and H. B. Graham, Minneapolis. Both report excellent business on the Esanay picture, "Do Children Count?"

Mr. Graham says the "Star Spangled Banner" is having a good run throughout the Northwest. Mr. Scott has been making arrangements to handle the K-E-S-E increased product—the release being fifteen reels a week.

George Kleine's K-E-S-E branch, in Connecticut, has a new manager in S. W. Hatch, formerly with General Film and Mutual, then with V-L-S-E at St. Louis and Cincinnati.

Mutual Films at Cleveland Theatres

Three big downtown, first-run, Cleveland theatres showed Mutual productions over the week end of June 23.

Mary Miles Minter appeared in "Annie fo' Spit" at Stillman's theatre. Gall Kane was booked at the Strand in "Whose Wife?" and "Heroic France" was at the Hippodrome. Everywhere, almost, Chaplin was booked in "The Immigrant."

Mutual May Close New Haven Office Soon

Mutual Film Corporation, it is said, will close their branch in New Haven, Conn., after this week. M. H. Goldstein has been in charge.

L. S. Tobias, the former branch manager, resigned. Mr. Tobias was well liked throughout the territory, extending from Brattleboro, Vt., to Greenwich, Conn.

State Rights Operator Leases Westminster Theatre

The Criterion theatre, one of Atlantic City's leading playhouse houses, situated on the Boardwalk in the heart of the amusement district, has been leased for the Summer by Frank Hall, the New Jersey exhibitor and state rights operator, who recently widened the scope of his activities by purchasing outright from Edgar Lewis his latest production, "The Bar Sinister."

Mr. Hall opened the seashore theatre on Saturday night, June 23, with "The Whip" as the chief attraction, and this will be followed by "Enlighten Thy Daughters," "The Bar Sinister," "On Trial," "Joan the Woman," "Civilization," "The Garden of Allah" and "Beware of Strangers," to all of which Mr. Hall controls the New Jersey rights. The productions are distributed in that territory through the Civiliation Film Corporation, with executive offices in Newark.

"The Bar Sinister," which is now enjoying successful engagements in Boston and Pittsburgh, will have its Atlantic City premiere in a few weeks, after which it will be exhibited in all the leading theatres of the state under Mr. Hall's direction.

Mr. Hall is pleased with the reception accorded "The Bar Sinister" wherever shown.

Will Show "Spirit of Seventy-Six"

"The Spirit of Seventy-six," a ten-reel feature film entirely based upon authentic historical characters, will be shown in New York the second week in July as the initial offering of the Grapin Amusement Company, which recently opened offices in the New York Theatre Building.

Negotiations are already under way for either the Park or the Criterion Theatre. Incidents in the lives of George Washington, King George the Third, Benjamin Franklin, William Pitt, Hannah Lightfoot, Walter Butler and many others are portrayed, and scenes depicting the war of the Revolution ought to be of particular interest just now as a contrast to modern methods. "The Spirit of Seventy-six" is written and directed by Robert Goldstein, who was formerly associated with D. W. Griffith.

Jacobs Plans Special Length Film

Anxious to duplicate the success of "Her Fighting Chance," the James Oliver Curwood drama, in which Jane Grey is starred, A. H. Jacobs, of A. H. Jacobs Photoplays, Inc., is reading scripts in search of a story for his next production.

Mr. Jacobs is planning the production of a new special length picture to be started immediately, but is experiencing difficulty in finding a scenario in which the telling of the story does not call for the development of too many counter plots.

Ogdens Nearly Ready to Market Its First Subject

Large flocks of sheep and herds of goats, cattle and horses rounded up in the Wasatch Mountain grazing country of Utah and Idaho were used in some of the big scenes of "The Lust of the Ages," an eight-reel feature just completed by the recently organized Ogdens Pictures Corporation.

The picture was directed by Harry Revier, from Aaron Hoffman's original story, with Lillian Walker in the leading role. The method of distribution of the feature has not yet been definitely decided upon.

Balsly Helps Exhibitors for Standard

Since the announcement made several weeks ago that the Standard Film Corporation, Kansas City, Mo., had secured the services of L. D. Balsly as manager of a newly inaugurated department, "The Exhibitor's Aid and Promotion Department," many inquiries and requests for advertising help have been received by Mr. Balsly's office.

Mr. Balsly's former connection with the Paramount Kansas City office as advertising and publicity manager, and also his own long experience as an exhibitor, have made him personally known to a great many exhibitors.

The first exhibitor to receive his aid since Mr. Balsly became a part of the standard organization was the manager of the Strand theatre, one of the most popular and also one of the finest of the many fine first-class houses in Kansas City, for whom Mr. Balsly originated a very clever weekly program, which was instrumental in stimulating business at the Strand theatre.

"Babbling Tongues" Ready for Release

"Babbling Tongues," the new Ivan play, has undergone its final cutting, and is now ready for immediate release. Mr. Humphrey, who directed this picture, has been engaged since the completion of "Two Men and a Woman," which was finished five months ago, in the making of this new production. The play is written by James Morrison and Grace Valentine.

Others: Arthur Donaldson, Paul Capelhini, Louise Beaudet, Gladden James, Carolyn Birch and Richard Tucker, are in the supporting cast.

The story of "Babbling Tongues" was written by Mr. Humphrey and George E. Hall. A trade showing on this feature will be announced shortly.
"HOW to Write for Moving Pictures" is the title of a book by Marguerite Bertsch, just published by George H. Doran Company ($1.50 net, adv.), which as might be divined from the title tells how to write for moving pictures. Miss Bertsch was for some time connected with Storyland, and has been now for some months editor of the Vita-Graph scenario department, later editor of it, and still later director for the same company. More recently she has been contributing to the Famous Players Company.

The book takes up various angles of picture writing, and doubtless when it has been read and semi-digested by an ever-ready public, editors throughout the length and breadth of the land will find themselves flooded with a new flood of scripts. Miss Bertsch's book is, indeed, one of the most complete of the many manuals yet issued on the subject, and is decidedly well worth perusal.

Perhaps one of the most valuable passages in the entire books lies in that chapter entitled "Getting One's Story." Here Miss Bertsch hints at the methods of practically all scenario departments in selecting material for production. She says: "If we supply a second time to an audience what it was previously pleased at having gotten, provided we put it in a new guise, we have a second success, if but a slight one. If, however, we give to an audience what it has been grooping for and did not get heretofore, we have a much rarer thing, a great success."

"The studying of those tendencies in an audience, and those desires that have not hitherto been played up to, is productive at once of the greatest success and the gravest danger. The danger lies in an inability to understand sympathetically, and to analyze correctly the symptoms we see before us. Should we make a mistake in our calculations, and give to an audience what we have wrongly conjectured they are craving for, it stands to reason that we are striking out in an untried field, that will yield us not even that moderate success that comes through the repetition of what has previously been weighed and found satisfactory."

As we understand it, this means that the conventional can seldom be successfully banished from pictures. The unconventional is too liable never to have happened at all, and so appears artificial. But, continues Miss Bertsch, "the scenario must take its color from the market, it must be original even within its inoriginality." Which means a whole lot.

In a recent issue of the Moving Picture Weekly, to be exact, the issue of June 23 on pages 4 and 5, two reviewers are quoted who didn't think highly of a Bluebird Picture, and their opinions are matched with the telegram received from Sam Bernstein, of the Globe theatre, Montreal, Canada, who claims that the self-same picture turned 'em away at 7:45 P. M., and that business was so generally good that it was booked for a return engagement. The officials of that company don't, in advertisement, think much of the two reviewers. They are polite about it, though, and ask for opinions of their exhibitors.

Reviewers are disagreeable pieces of humanity when they go so far as to say "emphasize the human note and call the story a 'little story,' which is in a way 'an alibi'" and "an inadequate story is the real answer," specially when the picture turns round and makes good for an exhibitor, anyway. But we have it first hand that the story was actually inadequate and little, and all the success in the world which comes to the picture wouldn't alter these opinions.

No reviewer sets himself or herself up as infallible and being human in spite of the fact that they are reviewers make mistakes. It is generally admitted in the best circles that mistakes are made by every one. We would have a delightful millenium if no one did. However, that is all beside the point. The outstanding fact of the case is that the Moving Picture Weekly has several times seen fit to reprint reviewers' opinions when they were hortatory, thereby displaying themselves as placing some faith in those opinions, which is in a way contradictory to the advertisement on pages 4 and 5 of the June 23 issue of the Moving Picture Weekly.

The motion picture world will, no doubt, receive with enthusiasm the news that Myrtle Langford, well-known traveler and editor of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, is to be the new President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, which piece of news comes from the office of Williamson Brothers.

Consequently we may now expect the announcement that American troops are in France from Triangle, that the Food Bill is being discussed by the Senate from Paramount, that Cocchi's lawyer is attempting to prove him insane from Universal, and that a national registration for drafting purposes was recently taken in the United States from World Film or Vitagraph or K-E-S-E or General Film.

This department is in receipt of unreadable postal cards about once a week from Bennie Zeidman, which might signify a lot of things, but we'll leave the reader to grasp the subtility of this himself.

The American Press Humorists convened in New York City last week, and spent one whole day at the Goldwyn Studio in Fort Lee playing the part of an audience in a circus scene. Its too bad it wasn't crook stuff they were filming. Then George Pardy could have used the experience gathered in his long career to good advantage.

The Longacre Lampoon

All the News That Fits, We Print

Longacre Square, N. Y., July 14, 1917

It takes such a small amount of energy for an actor to remove his hat upon entering a room full of ladies that you'd think it would be done all the time, but it isn't. We can think of one reason why the actor refuses to do this. The set is, in all probability, put up in a strong draft by a property man, who has a grudge against the actor. The actor to get even remains with head covered. But in the interests of that which is considered polite in our best circles such quarrels should not find their way into the studio. Let the fight be staged in Rector's, the Alexandria or the Screen Club before an appreciative audience.

Perhaps some of the numerous persons who have forsaken the business for the army can set us right on the question as to whether soldiers attending a dance in full dress retain that part of the uniform that decorates the brow. In a recent picture a whole regiment danced around with their hats off, dress hats, too. If this is all according to form then the civilian-actor may be all right. Everything is military nowadays.

News Notes for Shrewd Exhibitors

"Seven Cutey Pups," the novelty animated cartoon, is being widely booked. It is so different from the average comic cartoon that shrewd Exhibitors are playing it up strongly as a feature. Everyone knows Vincent Colly's post card pups, and all are eager to see them brought to life on the screen. Book this strong single reel today.

Grace Cunard and Francis Ford, the popular stars of the great serial, "The Purple Mask," are known abroad by the names of the characters which they played in "Lucille Love." The fascinating Grace is known as Lucille, and Francis and his side whiskers is always referred to as Hugo. It is such popularity as this, together with the cleverly concealed mystery of "The Purple Mask," that has made the repeat bookings for this Universal multireel drama exceed all similar records.

Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran have an exceedingly funny comedy in "Seeing Things," the current Nestor release. Eddie and Edith (Roberts), engaged, quarrel. Eddie takes his colored servant (Lee) to a lonesome house in the country to nurse his grouch. Unknown to him a band of counterfeiters are making illicit use of the cellar, and some of the strange happenings which the crooks stage to frighten their visitors away are such as to bring Lee's sense of comedy to the front in a series of screamingly funny situations.

"The Sign of the Cucumber," the current L-KO release, has some of those novel and comical stunts for which the L-KO comedians and directors are famous. Did you ever see a donkey and its rider sailing over the housetops, with only an umbrella for a parachute? You can see it in this big-provoker and it's one of the funniest effects ever screened.

What do you think about Mary Fuller returning to Universal pictures? They're so good that they are being called Mary Fuller Pictures, too. That's their regular brand name. The first one is "The Beautiful Imposter," and it will be released on July 26th. It is a two-reel society drama and every woman will go crazy about it. All the latest styles in dress are shown.

"This World is so full of a number of things, I am sure we should all be as happy as kings."

So sings the poet. But—if millions upon millions of the good citizens and their wives and sons and daughters have no opportunity of seeing these "number of things" it is clearly the fault of no one but themselves. The Universal Screen Magazine is showing them every week to the delight and entertainment of millions of ardent movie-fans. This week we announce No. 29 of this fascinating magazine "movie," and in it are some of the things that every one is reading, talking, or wondering about. For instance the illustration shows a building of the U. S. Submarine Chasers, part of the plan to sweep these terrors from the seas. Such live topics from week to week are the things that pull the crowds, even on your traditional "dull day." Book through any Universal Exchange.

Prohibition Said to Have Helped Industry in Nebraska
Leading exhibitors of Nebraska and Iowa agree that prohibition has helped the motion picture business in these two states wonderfully. Iowa has had prohibition for over a year now, and this is somewhat of an old story in that state, but Nebraska went dry May 1. "Our box-office receipts show beyond a shadow of doubt how it has helped," said President H. M. Thomas of the Nebraska branch of the M. P. E. League of America.

Conditions Force Big Theatre to Admission Increase
The Empress theatre, one of the four big first-run houses in Omaha, Neb., last week announced an increase in admission prices from 10-20-30 to 12-25-35, to take effect at once. Increase in cost of film, labor and taxes were the reasons given. Every evening the sidewalk in front of the Empress is lined with show goers. The increased prices made no difference at all in the number of patrons, says the management.

Men in Khaki Fill Houses at Chattanooga
With thousands of soldiers now stationed at Chickamauga Park, the amusement houses and motion picture theatres of Chattanooga are enjoying good business.

On Saturday afternoons and evenings large numbers of the khaki-clad men, after a hard week of drilling and marching, find film places a haven of rest and enjoyment.

More Than Four Reels Tire Ohio Fans
Canvass of the movie fans in several Ohio centers seems to show that the four-reel picture satisfies.

"If the story goes beyond five reels we get tired," many of those interviewed said. A favorite program that hits the Ohio movie fan's fancy has a four-reel play, a one-reel comedy and a cartoon.

This conclusion is based upon conversations with patrons of a number of Ohio motion picture theatres and a fairly persistent endeavor to get a reliable expression of general opinion.

Red Cross Urges Need of Open Picture Houses
The State Defense Council, Governor James E. Ferguson, and all authorities of the state of Texas, are petitioned by the San Antonio Chapter of the American Red Cross to co-operate in enabling the theatres and motion picture showhouses of the state to remain open as much of the time as possible. Dr. Charles S. Venable, chairman of the chapter, has issued an appeal to these institutions to keep their doors open at all times to permit the greatest number of people to attend. He asserts that the country may be best served by people attending the picture shows and seeing the legends of patriotism thrown upon the screen. The people will not only receive relief from strained minds, but they will receive instruction and their patriotism will be stimulated, the petition adds.

Live Wire Censor to Halt Film Vandals in Canada
A. E. Wall, censor for Nova Scotia, is taking up the matter of bad film in an energetic manner, according to correspondence from St. John, N. B.

It is the plan of Mr. Wall to eliminate if possible the use by exhibitors of all machines which continually damage film. Warning has been sent out that the machine license will be canceled on any machine reported out of order and continually working injury.

Restrictions have also been placed on the exchanges. If they continue to send bad films into the territory Mr. Wall will cancel their licenses also. Likewise he will suspend the license of any operator who constantly damages films.

In this way Mr. Wall hopes to protect the film exchanges as well as the exhibitors in giving the public the best protection that is possible and eliminating the wholesale damage done to film by bad machines and poor operators. He expects to straighten the matter out as far as the exchanges are concerned by insisting on careful handling and proper revising.

Making Special Film for Use in Red Cross Campaign
The David Davidson Studios, of Providence, Rhode Island, are making a film for the N. E. Division of the American Red Cross. The story tells of the work of the Red Cross in peace and war. The ambulance corps of the State of Rhode Island are being used in the picture which was written and is being directed by F. Kimpton Abbott, formerly of Edison and Thanhouser.

The picture will be used for campaign purposes throughout New England in drives for new members. One picture has already been made by this studio in two days actual work, this picture is now being enlarged upon and will be finished soon.

Indianapolis Council Defers Action on Fire Ordinances
Action on three city ordinances regarding fire protection for theatres and motion picture shows in Indianapolis, Ind., has been deferred by the city council, following a hearing at which the motion picture men severely protested against the proposals.

One ordinance provides for an increase from $100 to $500 a year for a license for every theatre charging more than $1 admission; another propose for the employment of stage firemen and a fire guard for the seating section of each house to see that the fire laws are complied with; and the third provides for a license fee of $100 a year for the motion picture houses charging more than 10 cents admission.
Buyers Aid Sought in "Robespierre" Exploitation

I

N making territorial sales for "Robespierre," the seven-reeler controlled by the Export and Import Film Company, a new method of procedure is being followed by Ben Blumenthal, head of the concern. With the picture complete in every detail, he has laid out a plan which should be of interest to state rights buyers in the exploitation of a picture of this character.

"What might be ideal for a metropolitan engagement of a production might not suit the requirements of second and third class cities," says Mr. Blumenthal. "While it is true that feature releases undoubtedly devote their best efforts in devising the material which is calculated to draw the public, opinion as to selection will differ. We have all seen such instances, where very expensive, conscientious displays have been pronounced inadequate by the man whose money pays for it. I propose to draw the consensus of opinion on such matters and be guided by the men in the field. 'Robespierre' presents so many different angles for its presentation to the public that I want the final selection to be representative of the opinion of state rights buyers."

As soon as a few contracts for the sale of "Robespierre" now under way are closed, Mr. Blumenthal will call a conference to take matters up, from twenty-four sheet poster down to the neighborhood dodger.

"Sinister" at a Dollar in Keystone State

With the announcement of the opening by Frank Hall of Edgar Lewis' special production, "The Bar Sinister," at the Pitt theatre, Pittsburg, for a summer run, it is stated that preparations are well under way for a new Edgar Lewis picture, to be ready for release in a few weeks.

With an augmented orchestra and a special stage setting in which a large company of singers present an elaborate prologue, it is noted that this presentation is the first time to Pennsylvania audiences at dollar admissions.

State Rights Films Popular in Cleveland

State rights pictures have proved big drawing cards in Cleveland during the last week. "Idle Wives" continued to fill the Opera House for five weeks in the morning until late at night. "The Barrier," at the Orpheum, also a downtown house, proved as popular for the week as it did when shown at the Mall several weeks ago. "The Crisis" drew large crowds all week at the Liberty and the Gordon Square.

Pathe Reorganizes Its Office in St. Louis

R. K. Evans, formerly salesman in Pathe's Chicago office, has been appointed manager at the St. Louis office. He will have as his assistant G. R. Sirwell. Both are business men of the type now being used in increasing the efficiency of its sales organization.

MARINA STUDIOS, Hollywood, Cal., now occupied jointly by the Bessie Barriscale and the J. Warren Kerrigan producing companies, is rapidly undergoing a transformation. This week scores of workmen have been busy there. It will take two months at least to complete the changes planned.

Sounding boards are being placed so that the artists may pose to a musical accompaniment of full orchestra will be used.

Bert Crossland, the well-known violinist, was engaged to lead the orchestra. His duties will consist in co-operating with Directors Oscar Apfel and James Young. Crossland and his orchestra will be in attendance at the filming of strong situations which demand the semblance of deep feeling on the part of the players.

Besides the new indoor studio and other improvements, a new property storage house is being built, dimensions 100 x 125, and a new light diffusing system, laid out on original lines devised by Robert Brunton, is being installed.

During the week two important additions were made to the general staff. Miss Jessie Booth, one of the most experienced women connected with the industry, was engaged as general office manager.

Emmett J. Flynn, a very able assistant director, was added to Miss Barriscale's staff as an aid to James Young. Mr. Flynn was Jack O'Brien's assistant for three years in producing Fine Arts plays and in the making of several Mary Pickford productions.

Richard Holmes Paul, art director, is building a massive outdoor scene for "A Man's Man." This will represent the cantina presided over by "Mother Jenks" in Sobrante, Central America.

Lillian Walker's "Lust of Ages" Has Barbaric Splendor

Lillian Walker, international screen favorite, will be seen soon in more serious work. As star for the Ogden Pictures Corporation, Ogden, Utah, Miss Walker has been given an opportunity to display her dramatic ability in a big production to be released shortly.

"The Lust of the Ages," the initial eight-reel feature, Miss Walker in the leading role, has been completed after three months' strenuous work in the Wasatch mountain country around Ogden and Salt Lake.

An actual expense of approximately $100,000 was entailed in producing the picture. In the production new ideas never before tried out in the filming of motion pictures were used, with the purpose of putting over a big story replete with action and enacted before backgrounds of barbaric splendor.

Harry Reiver, formerly of the Ambrosia (Italy) and Faumont (France) companies, later becoming connected with American film companies, directed the production.

Aaron Hoffman, the New York playwright and scenario writer, is the author of the scenario for "The Lust of the Ages," and collaborated from the author's point of view with the director in the production of what he considers his masterpiece.

"Palmer Cartoons" Successful, Says Hammond

E. W. Hammons, vice-president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation of America, reports that his new release of "Palmer Cartoons" has met with instant success, following a pre-release announcement that the Educational Films Corporation would release these cartoons.

"Mr. Palmer's cartoons are not the slapstick kind," said Mr. Hammons. "They are well thought out and carefully made, with a view of keeping up with the times." The first release, "The Rise of a Nation," is a cartoon of timely interest.

From time to time subjects of a scientific nature that will lend themselves to drawings will be used as a basis of the cartoons.

"God's Man" Popular in Newark

The engagement of "God's Man," Frohman Amusement Corporation, for four days at the Goodwin theatre, Newark, N. J., was extended to an additional four days last week.

The management intended to continue the run, but the Mammoth Film Corporation, distributors of the production for the northern New Jersey territory, were obliged to withhold the print from the Goodwin because of other bookings.

General Manager Moore, of the Mammoth Company, reports that this organization has booked the picture for more than twenty-three weeks solid.

Marion Davies Goes to Lederer for Film Career

Marion Davies, in the cast of "Oh Boy" at Princess theatre, has contracted with George W. Lederer for his Ardsley Art Film Corporation. She is now at work on the final scenes of her own story, "Runaway Tommy." It is to be kept within seven reels for release in the Fall. It is a gypsy story.

Miss Davies will have the part of Firefly, favorite of the gypsy camp. She is a stolen child. The play has final scenes of restoration and restitution.

Mr. Lederer had a long career in musical comedy. He expressed himself as convinced that Miss Davies' training has given her everything required for a successful career before the camera.
Girl Film Inspectors' Strike Grows More Serious

The strike and attempt to unionize the three hundred girl film inspectors in the various Chicago film exchanges by Local No. 110, I.A.T.S.E., promises to become serious and annoying proportions. This is the view of the several exchange managers who are now being negotiated with by President Armstrong, of Local 110, who is heading the move to organize the inspectors.

In only a few of the exchanges did the inspectors answer the call of the strike on June 14. Those hardest hit at the time were, World, Pathe and Art Dramas. At the Mutual, Triangle, Paramount, K-E-S-E, Fox and V-L-S-E offices the girls remained loyal. At the World, Pathe and Art Dramas offices, where the girls walked out, demanding recognition and more money, their places were quickly filled with new girls. Some of those that struck returned to work the next day, carrying union cards, however.

Manager Rozelle, of the World office; R. O. Proctor, of Art Dramas, and all the other managers have refused Armstrong's request for recognition of the unionized inspectors. The managers allege that Armstrong has since written some very dictatorial letters containing inferred threats. One of the latest developments has been the announcement that after Sunday, July 1, an order will go out to all union offices throughout the city telling them to refuse to run Triangle, World and Pathe pictures until the branch offices of these companies in Chicago recognize the unionizing of the inspectors and their demands. Many exhibitors have called upon the managers of these various offices and asked them what plans are being made to meet this threat. It is said that each of the companies opposing the union move here will be arranged in groups like the former and discriminated against in their turn.

The managers have appointed a committee, who are dealing with the demands and threats of the union. They have put the case and circumstances before Chief of Police Schuettler and State's Attorney Hoyne, and necessary aid is promised.

The union is demanding recognition and a minimum salary of $12 a week for all inspectors and $15 for floor girls or over-inspectors. It is said that in the majority of the exchanges in Chicago the inspectors are receiving $12 a week. Manager Rozelle, of the World office, stated that he had just raised all of his girls to this amount some weeks ago, following their concerted request. Manager Sydney Abel, of the V-L-S-E office, gave out the statement that everyone in his office and exchange were receiving a share of the profits besides their salary, as in other Vitagraph exchanges.

LEAKS IN THE LOOP

"Should She Obey?" the divorce preachment film of the Arizona Film Company, of this city, is making a big hit along the Atlantic Coast and in war-stressed Canada, according to the reports coming into the Arizona offices here. It is being state-righted throughout the country.

Tom North has breezed into Chicago from New York with the "British Tanks at the Battle of Ancre" film which were shown all last week at Orchestra Hall. All comments on the pictures were laudatory.

The New Fellows Club entertained members and friends on last Friday night, June 29, with a smoker and buffet luncheon at their clubrooms. The big "movie" ball that will be given to the convention and exposition delegates here at the finish of the week will be held under the auspices of the Reel Fellows in the Morrison Hotel ballroom.

Messrs. Johnson and Schultz, owners of the Casto theatre at Ashatabula, Ohio, have taken over the C—It theatre there. They have purchased a Bartola orchestra for their new house.

Charles Pyle, the general sales agent of Bartola, has packed his bag and is off again for another ten-day jaunt. He goes to Cleveland, Columbus and New York.

Jack O'Toole, manager of the local Fox offices, has gotten out a spiffy looking two paged pamphlet for the exhibitors announcing that now is their opportunity to chase that hot weather jinx from their box office. The opportunity, according to Mr. O'Toole's folder, is three big Bara pictures and a like number of William Farnum's best, being offered on open booking.

Although not scheduled to open until July 15, the Goldwyn branch offices here are ready for business. Clean, shiny and bright they contain F. M. Brockell, the local manager and his force of assistants. Mr. Brockell was formerly with Paramount.

Mabel Spottwood, twenty years old and one of the workers in Terry Ramsaye's publicity headquarters at Mutual, was killed last week when hit with a train while on her way to work.

With the arrival back in this city of Frank Seng, starts also a wide local publicity campaign for "Parentage," the big propaganda film that Mr. Seng just finished.

The American Bioscope Corporation has just completed a one-reel subject called, "A Trip to Mother Gooseland." It was made for the United Cereal Mills, Ltd., and their product, Washington Crisps.

The day prior to Eugene Duffy's leaving the Triangle offices here to become manager of the Mutual Exchange, his former co-workers and associates presented him with a large silver loving cup and enough cigarettes to supply the allied armies.

Costly Film Fire in Art Dramas' Offices

A fire that started in the inspection room of the Art Dramas offices, on the sixth floor of the College Building, No. 207 South Wabash avenue, on Friday, June 22, destroyed fifty-five reels of film and caused a total of $3,000 damages, besides threatening the four other big film company branches and exchanges that are housed in that building with their tons of films.

The fire, according to Ralph Proctor, manager of Art Dramas, was caused by friction. One of the girl inspectors was winding a reel of film just received. A pencil which she was using as a windlass for the film became heated by the friction and the film burst into flame, communicating with the scores of other reels piled on the inspection table.

The three girls who were at work in the room ran to safety and gave the alarm. In all exchanges on the floors above and below the Art Dramas the first move made when the fire alarm went through the building was to quickly throw every foot of film into the various fireproof vaults and lock them.

Among the films destroyed in the Art Dramas office were two prints of "The Mute Appeal," just received shortly before the fire and for which Mr. Proctor had handed out a check of $1,700. Within three days after the fire Mr. Proctor had all the destroyed prints duplicated and all "sheets" were out by usual. The loss was covered by insurance.

Well-Known Manager Leaves Bandbox Theatre

Jack Haag, one of the best known and most experienced motion picture theatre managers in Chicago, is leaving the Bandbox theatre helm. Mr. Haag announces that this week will be his last as manager of the well known Loop house. Where he is going next, Mr. Haag is not ready to say. He admits having several offers for local houses, but has not given any of them full consideration as yet.

Mr. Haag took over the Bandbox theatre a year ago to build it up. This he has done in great style, for today the Bandbox is one of the best known and paying theatre propositions in the Loop.

During the showing of "The Desemter," at the La Salle, all last week, special performances were arranged by the management for high school pupils. They were accorded a reduced rate of admission when accompanied by a card from their literature or history teachers.

The summer camp of Essanay at Lake Geneva, has been opened once again. Bryant Washburn and his company, now making "The Golden Idiot," opened the camp.
MILLICENT FISHER, who has been working like an Amazon in the trenches for Metro, is taking a brief and well-earned vacation at her old home in Greensboro, N. C., where her parents live. She recently completed her role in "The Slacker."

These are her first weeks away since she began work under William Christy Cabanne, more than a year ago. Cabanne has called her "the girl with the most wonderful screening face in pictures."

EMILE CHAUTARD, director of Frederick Warde in "Fires of Youth," "Under False Colors" and "The Man Who Waited" for Thanhouser, has in his possession a program of the theatre de la Renaissance, Paris, dated September, 1909, in which Maurice Tourneur, now directing for Lasky; Leonce Perret, director of Robert Warwick, and himself played the principal roles in Henry Bettle's celebrated, "Le Scandale."

BRUCE WEYMAN, noted juvenile baritone who was soloist at the Strand theatre for a year and a half, has enlisted in the First Reserve Aero Squadron at Montreal, from where he expects to be sent to France.

Mr. Weyman studied for three years under De Rezi in France, and was three years baritone in the Montreal Opera Company, being the youngest soloist ever with that company, being only 16 when he began with them. He was also on the Keith circuit in B. A. Rolfe's big spectacular vaudeville act, "America First."

THREE members of one family appeared in "Sowers and Reapers," a Metro play in which Emmy Wehlen featured. They were Hazelne Drouant, Elizabeth Orr and Richard Orr.

Hazelne Drouant is the mother of the two children. Their father is Alfred G. Orr, the well-known artist. She is an actress of ability, who has had a career both on the stage and the screen. Her Olga in "The Merry Widow" received favorable comment by all critics when Henry W. Savage first produced that operetta.

RALPH KELLARD, a Pathe star, has retired from the film field, temporarily at least, and returned to the speaking stage, which he abandoned for pictures about a year and a half ago.

Mr. Kellard opened last week, out-of-town, for the spring try-out, in the leading role of "The Assassin," a new drama from the pen of Eugene Walter, author of "The Knife" and "The Easiest Way." The play is expected to open at one of the Shubert theatres in New York, early the coming season.

During his work as a Pathe star, Mr. Kellard has been in "The Precious Packet," "The Shielding Shadow" and "Pearl of the Army."

GREATER VITAGRAPH has been forced to post a notice at its Brooklyn Studio announcing that female leads are engaged on the strength of their dramatic ability, coupled with their personal appearance and not because applicants for positions have an abundance of money. For several weeks, almost daily, Production Manager Roosevelt has received calls from women who at least said they were wealthy, some of them offered to pay for the privilege of appearing in Blue Ribbon features, while others offered their services free, and all were perfectly willing to work hard at least six days a week. According to Mr. Roosevelt not one of these women could act and none of them were less than forty years of age.

VITAGRAPH has added to its list of contract players one of the youngest actresses in the world—Miss Aida Horton, who is three years old. They believe they have in her one of the future "g'rats" of the screen.

About six weeks ago, Aida, who is a beauty Miss with golden hair, walked into the office of Andre Roosevelt, production manager at the Vitagraph studio in Brooklyn, and said she had an ambition to be an actress.

"What makes you think you are an actress, Miss?" he queried. Aida, not a bit abashed, replied:

"Cause I want to be."

She was engaged on that speech and her mother was called in to make the arrangements.

AGNES LEVERING, nurse in the Vitagraph Studio, first aid room, Brooklyn, made a drive for Red Cross memberships in the organization the other day, getting 138 new members and $380 in money.

Alice Joyce, star in "Womanhood," Perry Vekroff and Miriam Fouché, Vitagraph stars, each took $25 life memberships. All the other stars, officers, directors and even the members of the comedy companies took memberships of one kind or another.

LITTLE BOBBY CONNELLY, Greater Vitagraph's juvenile star, fell from the running board of an automobile last Monday afternoon and suffered a fracture of the left arm. This did not cause even a temporary let-up in his work for the "Bobby Series" in which he is soon to be featured. His director, Charles M. Seay, immediately wrote a scenario in which the broken arm figures prominently and work is going on as usual.

This is the second time Bobby has been hurt recently. He was thrown by a pony he used in one of his pictures, "Bobby's Bravery."

On both these occasions Bobby has shown his gameness and has not even thought of laying off from his work.

TO exhibitor readers who know that first Triangle and then Arctraft released Douglas Fairbanks, the statement that Frederick Warde released the well-known "Doug" will be little short of startling.

"Released" in this instance has a meaning different from the usual film interpretation.

Years ago, so Fairbanks admits, the athlete of film appeared with Warde in the role of Francois in "Richelieu" on the dramatic stage. A well-meaning but misguided wardrobe mistress clothed him in odds and ends of ancient, modern and medieval garb, and so effectively did the costumes succeed in ruining the tense work of those on the stage at his entrance that Warde released him.

New York City
WITH the characteristic speed which has marked production work of previous subjects and serials of the Signal Studio, J. P. McGowan, the director, and members of the Helen Holmes Company, this week took up the making of another railroad serial, at present known under the title of "The Lost Express." This is a mystery story with a railroad background, and will have many of the thrilling scenes that have heretofore made Helen Holmes' releases attractive to lovers of melodrama.

Director McGowan has selected this story by Frederick Balfour Bennett, because of the very exceptional suspense maintained throughout the fifteen two-reel episodes. The suspense is made possible by a mechanical disappearance of an entire railroad train, which leaves one station bound for another eight miles distant. Between the two stations there is a straight piece of track making it possible for a person to stand at one station and see a train until it arrives at the other. While the train is making its trip it disappears, and will not be found until later in the story.

Helen Holmes will be supported in this production by practically the same players who were with her in previous releases. The list includes Leo Maloney as the leading man; Thomas G. Lingham, heavy; Wm. Brunton, Will Chapman, W. A. Behrens, and Andrew Waldron, together with Al. Smith, who appeared in character roles in "The Lass of the Lumberlands," and Edward Hearn, who has been seen in a number of feature productions, as well as late releases of the Kalem "Stingaree" series. "The Lost Express" will serve to introduce a new animated sub-title process perfected by S. A. Sues, cameraman for the Helen Holmes Company. The title superimposed over a background of moving figures is inscribed in a border which balances the frame and adds much to the attractiveness of the sub-title.

Director McGowan has engaged Carl Hill, a well-known scenic artist, to make a number of paintings, which will form a frieze about the entire drawing-room of a millionaire mansion's interior.

Director McGowan will maintain two cameramen for the making of this serial, S. A. Sues and Robert Phelan. The latter has just returned from spending a vacation with former acquaintances at the American Studio, Santa Barbara, and while making the trip from Santa Barbara to Los Angeles in his automobile, he encountered a fearful forest fire.

THE second addition to the Triangle forces of the West consists of Director Lynn F. Reynolds, who with his leading man, George Chesebro, his character actors, George Hernandez and Jack Cur- tiss, and Photographer Clyde Cook, became affiliated with the organization at the Culver City Studio. Reynolds has been with the Universal for more than three years, following one year spent with the Selig Company. For more than a year he has given all his time to writing and directing Bluebird releases, with most of his stories laid in the big out of doors. He has just finished "Mr. Opp," adapted from the Alice Egan Rice story of the same name, and other coming Bluebird releases are titled, "The Greater Law," made in the snow at Truckee, Cal., last winter, and "The Showdown," a sea picture filmed at Santa Cruz. Other noteworthy releases from this director are "God's Crucible" and "The Girl of Lost Lake."

It is stated H. O. Davis will arrive on the Coast about the first of July, and at that time it is very probable definite statements concerning future policy with respect to productions will be made at the Triangle Studios. No changes in the personnel of the producing staff have taken place during the past week, and it was again stated at the studio none were anticipated.

Thirty Triangle girls are this week mastering the steps of a cabaret chorus under the tutelage of a dancing teacher, and will appear in scenes for the coming Olive Thomas subject being made by Director Lambert Hillyer. These scenes will be staged in an elaborate cabaret interior 100 x 200 feet in dimensions, which is said to contain 250 tables, and require almost one thousand people for atmosphere. In all seventy-five scenes will be made in this interior. Charles Gunn and Margaret Thompson are other principals in the cast. Director Hillyer used a company of militia this week in the making of a factory strike riot scene which required a great number of men.

Director Irvin Willat now knows how slow a snail moves, for he photographed one for double exposure scenes this week. It took more than two hours to show the creeper climbing up a step. Exhibitors need not think the action of this photoplay will move that slow, however, for the particular scene shot, when completed with the second exposure, will show little Thelma Salter ride up the step on the back of the snail at the speed of a high-powered automobile.

RAYMOND B. WEST began the direction of a story which deals with the rise of a social butterfly, who in the early part of the story is an unfortunate girl of poverty who lives in the slums. The story is laid in New York City and the Adiron- dack Mountains, and will have Dorothy Dalton as star, with Jack Livingston as leading man. Dorcus Matthews, Billy Shaw, and others compose the supporting cast.

Director Walter Edwards' production will be delayed in the making because of an accident which befell Walter Perry, who suffered fracture of his shoulder bone in a strenuous scene for the mining story.

R. Wm. Neill found ideal locations this week for race track scenes at Wilmington, Cal., and the scenes were filmed by End Bennett, who has been working for several days. This story has a Southern atmosphere, and a supporting cast includes Melbourne McDowell, Roland Lee, and others.

Two directors of the Triangle plant completed productions this week. Reginald Barker has been directing Louise Glau, who appears as a dance hall siren, with Jack Gilbert, Wm. Conklin, Jack Richard- son, and others. The other subject finished is an adaptation of the Saturday Evening Post story, "Sudden Jim," made in seven reels, and featuring Charles REynolds. Victor Schertzinger is the director, and Sylvia Bremer plays the feminine lead.

ALL production at the Kalem Studio in Glendale has been discontinued, at least for the present. Phil Lang, who is manager, departed for the East Tuesday of this week to confer with heads of the Kalem Company with respect to future activities at the West Coast Studio. Storm V. Boyd remains in charge of the studio. The last company actively engaged was that making Ham Comedies; Messrs. Lloyd V. Hamilton and Albert E. Duncan had long time contracts, but these were canceled to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. The "Stingaree" organization finished its final release more than a week ago.

WHILE the 90 x 150 foot stage of the Lois Weber studio is being completed, the company is this week working on the first release titled "The Whim," using for location one of the handsomest exclusive homes in the Wilshire district of Los Angeles. Electric equipment has been taken to the palatial residence, and there both interiors and exteriors will be made together with night effects. The first release, The Whim," is founded upon the experience of a young man whose parents are desirous that he shall marry to secure a place in society, and all possible is done by his relatives to bring about this end. But the young man bored with the action of his family and the alterations of his fiancee lavishes his attentions upon a girl employed in his father's emporium. Kenneth Harlan takes the role of the youth, Mildred Harris the girl of the shop, Gertrude Aster is the fiancee, a daughter of society, and Alfred Allen and Adele Farrington are the parents. The picture is directed by Ethel Weber, William Brown, Teresa Young, and Colin Kenny.

The first statement issued by Miss Weber since beginning the production of this story is in the event that future productions, including the present, will contain in a hint of propaganda or preaching of any kind. She will use only a story which is entertaining and carries with it a sound idea without obviously pointing a moral. "I shall try in all my pictures to maintain a balance," Miss Weber said, "in favor of ideas rather than curbs."

The Vitagraph serial "Hearts of Flame," will be completed by Director-actor William Duncan by the end of the month, and he will then take up the filming of multiple- reel subjects in which he will play his own lead. This week was a thriller for one of the later episodes of the serial a mine explosion was staged in one of the foothills of the Vitagraph lot, and the explosion was so strong that it shattered windows in the houses of the residences in that section. No definite plans have been made for the subjects to be made by Mr. Duncan following the completion of the serial with respect to the cast. The serial company has been together approximately seven months, and it is likely that several of this organization will be retained for the feature producing unit.

Mary Anderson is being starred in the Vitagraph subject featuring Alfred Vosburg, "Captain Sunlight," from story by Cyrus Townsend Brady, which will be finished within a few days. Plans have already been made for the next picture to be made with Miss Anderson under the direction of Wm. Wolbert. It will be titled "The Red Prince" and already Otto Lederer has been selected to play one of the important parts.

Studio Manager W. S. Smith, of the Vitagraph plant, has the building operations moving along as rapidly as can be expected, and with this taken care of he plans to leave for New York shortly. Mr. Smith's trip East will be one of business primarily, but he will also spend some time with his brother, President Albert E. Smith at his home on Long Island.

Two additional producing companies were added to the organization at the Bernstein Studio this week. Both of these producing units will devote all of their time to the making of semi-slapstick comedies. The companies were organized at the instance of Mr. Bernstein, who is now in New York. His investigation of the market condition there led him to believe the time was ripe for good clean comedies and he began plans for filming this class of subjects at once. He secured Stan Jefferson, a comedian of the Fred Karno school in London, as the leading comedian for one company, and selected the name of Stanley Comedies to identify this brand. Jefferson is a former associate of Charles Chaplin on the vaudeville stage, and came to America several years ago with the same company with which Mr. Chaplin was identified. It is stated at the studio that Mr. Jefferson is in no way an imitator of Chaplin, but has a whimsical type of acting all his own. He has been in vaudeville since coming to America and his vaudeville partner, May Bahlberg, will play opposite him in coming pictures. Lucille Arnold, late of Keystone; Owen Evans, eccentric comedian in Vogue Films, and Charles Arling, late of Foxfilms, are other members of the Stanley Comedies Company. Robin Williamson, who came to Los Angeles from Florida, and directed the production of a number of Vogue subjects, will direct. The camera will be in charge of Harry Fowler.

The second comedy company will make novelty release. No description has been given for publication. It is understood that Lee Lawson, technical director at the studio and Ben Levy, will be in charge of the filming.

The second release of Bernstein's Cardinal Virtues series, "Loyalty," was finished at the studio this week. It is said to contain many thrilling incidents, but the most exciting is that of a free-for-all fight in a Chinese den staged by J. Morely and Sam Woods, both of whom are better than six feet in height. Betty Brice, star of the production, takes the role of an opera singer who is married to a dope fiend which is said to give her a number of very excellent emotional scenes. Particular attention was given to the settings for this subject. One of unusual beauty is that representing the interior of a lobster palace. Tables, chairs, silverware, linen and other furnishings for this setting came from the Hotel Alexandria of Los Angeles, which institution also furnished waiters for the filming. A magnificent fountain occupies the central feature of the scene, and a Hawaiian quintette and dancers furnished cabaret with this for a background.

Among the changes reported from the Fox Studios, in Hollywood, this week is that of DSL news camera that will be taking up the making of a series of comedies featuring Willard Louis. Louis has been seen in a number of Fox subjects, he being a member of the original Fox Company that came to California more than eighteen months ago. He shares in all of the William Farnum subjects made in the West, and appeared in several others. In most cases he was given a semi-comic character role, and he secured so many laughs the Fox organization decided his place was in comedy rather than with drama. Charles Parrott was the first director engaged by the Fox organization when comedies were added to their output. A series of stories is now being prepared for this company and production will be commenced with Willard.

Carl was selected this week for another Hank Mann comedy which besides Mann contains Rena Rogers, Katherine Griffith, Eva Nelson, Jess Weldon and Harry Moody. Miss Rogers has appeared in two Fox films in support of Tom Mix, which will shortly be released. Miss Nelson is a new member of the Fox forces, and Weldon will be remembered as having appeared in support of Hank Mann, where he brought laughs principally because of his savage amount of overduplication. The coming Mann story pertains to happenings on the beaches near Los Angeles.

To the Tom Mix Western Comedy Company has been added a vampire in the person of Rhea Haines. Miss Haines played in a number of the Bosworth subjects released by Paramount, but has not been in pictures for the past year. She is to appear in support of Mix and Victoria Forde, who take the leads. Others in the cast are Billy Mason, Violet Eddy, Sid Jordon and others. The company is working at an especially built western village in the vicinity of Silver Lake, north of Los Angeles.

The need of another enclosed stage at the Fox Studio has become apparent, and now workmen are engaged in the building of one, 60 x 120 feet. This will occupy a position in the rear of the western lot of the Fox Studios, and will be completely equipped with artificial light in addition to being enclosed by glass. To find space for this stage it was necessary to cut down a large number of lemon trees from the lemon orchard which forms a part of the Fox property.

Need of additional space to accommodate the many released Paramount films of the Lasky Studio, this week, caused plans to be made for the erection of another stage, which will be of the same size of the other three, namely, 80 x 200 feet. This is to be devoted exclusively to Artcraft productions, and the first scenes to be made here will be for the first Geraldine Farrar Artcraft release under the direction of C. B. de Mille. The new stage will be alongside and im-prominently adjoining the swimming pool constructed several months ago. When plans for the reconstruction of the Lasky Studio were being made approximately five months ago, it was thought at that time the enlargement would take care of additional production for the next two years. The studio has been completed according to the previously made plans, scarcely two months, and the managers find they do not have sufficient equipment, all of which again points out the inability of any one connected with the motion picture industry to correctly pro- phesy what will happen in even the near future.

The new stage will be ready for work about the first of July, at which time the first scene for the Geraldine Farrar subject will be made. Settings, costumes and story are now nearing the point of development that assure Director deMille that it will be possible to begin work at the appointed time.

The Lasky Company is to have a new leading woman in the person of Dorothy Abril, who has been with the Lasky organization playing ingenue and minor parts since the organization opened its studio in Los Angeles. Miss Abril will appear in support of Wallace Reid, who will be starred in a subject made under the direction of Robert Thornby. Other players selected for this production are Guy Oliver, Lillian Leighton, Noah Barry, Gertrude Short and others.

Julian Eltinge arrived in Los Angeles, Monday, of this week to take up the filming of his first motion picture, and he has spent a week becoming acquainted with make-up and becoming camera wise. Donald Crisp has been selected as director of this subject, but the cast is yet to be named. The title of his first release will be "Mrs. Raffles' Career," adapted from the story by Gillett Burgess and Carolyn Wells.

KATHLYN WILLIAMS, who wrote the story for the coming release for the George Beban play, is to devote considerable of her time in the future to writing scenarios for the Morosco and Lasky organization. Miss Williams is credited with writing a number of photo-plays of different types, some of which were filmed by Selig and others by the Morosco organization. She has in the past written by the synopsis, but in future will devote time to learning continuity writing.

William D. Taylor has completed the filming of his Jack Pickford and Louise Huff story and is now spending a two weeks' vacation. Frank Reicher is now directing the co-stars in a subject titled "Jack and Jill." This picture is being made at the Lasky Studio.

Lucien Littlefield, who has been with the Lasky organization since it came to California, departed this week for the East as a member of an ambulance corps organized at Pasadena. This body will spend a short time on the Atlantic Coast, where they will receive training and will then immediately go to France. Littlefield's first engagement with the Lasky organization was in the capacity of office and telephone boy. At that time every one of the organization took part in pictures when needed, and it was not long until he was doing character bits. He gave particular attention to the art of make-up, and was soon master of the ability to disguise himself to suit the needs of most any part. He became so proficient in the art that he has played numerous parts in the same production. In the "Warrens of Virginia" he took no less than eight different character roles. When the Lasky Home Guards was organized, Littlefield enlisted, and shortly afterwards was promoted to a corporal. He studied militarism and became interested in such an extent that when he learned of the opening in the ambulance corps he immediately enlisted. He did not tell his friends at the studio of this until the day before he was to depart for the East. They then presented him with a handsome gold wrist watch, and he was accompanied to the station and bid God's speed.

THE plans inaugurated early this year at Universal City, which provide for two directors for one company, has proven so successful, arrangements have been made for the furtherance of this plan, and the adoption of it more extensively at the plant. The next company to work under two directors will be that of Eddie Lyons, and Lee Moran, the Nestors. Since early in May, Roy Clements has been directing these leads, and now Burton George is added to the producing unit to make a picture while Clements assists in editing the film just completed, and works with Frederick Palmer, scenario writer, specially engaged to write comedies for Lyons and Moran. It is also announced two reel subjects are to be made in the future with these players, and work on the first one has been commenced. It is titled, "On the Owl," and was written by William Cressy of the vaudeville team of Cressy and Dane. The Owl, by way of explanation is the name of a night train between San Francisco and Los Angeles. Harry Maguire, who has been photographer for the Bluebird feature productions, has been added to the Nestor organization as photographer for both directors.

Edith Roberts, who has played with Lyons and Moran for the past several months, is to be cast in comedy dramatic subjects, and will shortly commence work at the head of a company. No successor has been selected for her in the Nestor unit. It is very likely that E. Mason Hopper will be the director of the new feature producing company.

Two additional directors were added at Universal City this week. Harry Solter is to have Ella Hall as star of a company, and the first picture he will make will deal with the approaching war situation. Scott Dunlap is to be his assistant, and players selected for the production are George Beranger, Jack Nelson, Billy Human and others.

George Cochran, former U director, has resumed work there, and will be in charge of productions featuring Ben Wilson who this week returned from a thirty day trip in the East.

WHILE working before the camera for scenes in the fourth episode of the Universal serial "The Quest of Virginia," Miss Marie Walcamp, the star, and Clarence Werts, fell to the ground a distance of fifteen or twenty feet. In the fall Miss Walcamp suffered a fracture of both wrist bones of her forearm and was internally injured. Werts fared better, sustaining a sprained ankle and receiving a number of bruises. The couple were rushed to Universal Hospital where they were taken care of by the physician in charge, and two days later were able to work in scenes. The business in which they were engaged at the time of the accident was a fight scene in which Miss Walcamp, who had been abducted, attempted to gain her liberty. The kidnapper was holding her prisoner in a tree until the parties chasing them had passed, and both became so enthusiastic in their efforts to put the scene over in a realistic manner, that they lost their balance. Mr. McKee and the other members of production at Universal City, first thought it would be necessary to disband the company for several weeks pending the recovery of Miss Walcamp, but rearrangement of the set, making possible the flash of scenes in which the star does not appear makes possible the continuance without any appreciable delay in the production.

The other Universal serial company making "The Gray Ghost" is now working on the eighth episode. Many of the scenes for this release were made in the store of Brock & Company, one of the finest jewelry stores on the west coast. A large number of customers and all clerks in the establishment took part in scenes which will show a daring hold-up of the employees, and robbers getting away with a major portion of the hundreds of thousand dollars' worth of precious stones, gold and silverware. Francis McDonald is the leader of the crooks in this story and was in charge of the band that held up the emerald necklace in the store.

Daniel Leighton, character actor, aged thirty-seven, died at Universal City on June 20th after an illness of a few minutes. Joseph Girard, his dressing-room mate, noticed he was taken ill and hurriedly summoned the resident physician from Universal City hospital. When the doctor arrived the stricken actor failed to respond to treatment and passed away a few minutes later. He leaves a widow and one child living in Los Angeles. He has been in films about six years, and prior to that time was a stock actor in Chicago, Pittsburgh, Memphis, Columbus and other cities, and also played in vaudeville.

A NEW child actress will be introduced in the coming Bluebird production being made by Eugene Moore in the person of Little Barbara Connolly, who is the principal in Mahlon MacMiller's new star. The other players in this child story titled "Nancy's Baby" are E. L. Pembroke, Mrs. A. E. Witting, Charles Mailes, Gertrude Aster, L. M. Wells and Sherman Bainbridge. Mr. Bainbridge was formerly with the Universal Company, and this is his first appearance in films for more than a year. Scenario for this production was prepared by E. J. Wilson, Jr., of U City scenario staff.

"The Cattle War" is a five-ree western drama starring Harry Carey, which was just released and directed by Jack Ford, whose principal support is Molly Malone. The story is by George Hively, who also prepared the scenario. During Carey's spare moments he is arranging to greet his mother, Ella J. Carey, and his brother, Jack, of Carey of New York, who is shortly to arrive in California to spend several months with her son. Carey has a ranch in the vicinity of Newhall, and it is said the improvements being made there now start the natives.

TOURS IN FLICKERVILLE

The official automobile of HOOKUM staff, the faithful Dodge (French pronunciation Doget, if you please) was the big kick near the corner of Selma avenue and Vine streets, Hollywood, and while waiting for John D. to bring more of the peppy liquid, the editor had opportunity to visit the Lasky Studio on the military guard of Machine Gun, Emerson, the chief, and McGaffey of the Home Guards. These studios (note the plural) remind one of the New York subway, in that the builders don't seem to gain new, leading toward ever finishing them.

The photodrama was born here, and since the date of birth, the father, Major Cecil B. DeMille (of the Lasky Home Guards) has carefully reared and tutored his beloved offspring. The going about, the arrangement of the swivel sheets of press agents, is of the nature of mountain travel. One is either going up the stairs to a stage, or down another flight to a walk that leads to another stage. Should travel be done at a Keystone speed, one would surely become seasick.

Doug Fairbanks was wearing his broadest smile for scenes in "The Optimist," and B. Ziedman, the official record of smiles, was keeping an accurate tabulation of the wraiths. Bull Montana took special care to see that his chauffeur car registered perfectly in the scene John Emerson was about to lay. Bill C. DeMille, through his actor-translator Hayakawa, was shooting scenes for Wallace Irwin's "Hashimura Togoro." We found Donald Crisp and many a new leading woman Julian Eltinge searching the lot for a leading woman; and Mary Pickford was all dolled up in a gingham dress and sunbonnet frisking about as "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," where they make the famous whiskey. Mickey Nolan's hair we noted, had grown considerably since his head was shaved. In the musical conservatory — a sound proof isolated institution — Wally Reid was practicing on the harmonium. Louise Huff and Jack Pickford were doing Jack and Jill antics as Frank Reicher prescribed, and "Whispering" George Melford tipped off his new pet number of the day to a leading woman. George keeps the entire neighborhood awake over the din of buzz-saws and planers.

Milt Hoffman, who is found behind the door bearing "general manager," is efficiency expert of the place, aided and abetted by "System Sam" Wellington Wales. The two of them entice from everybody on the lot, a daily report of voluminous size. Neither of them ever worked on a newspaper, or they would know the story of the creation of the world was written in 600 stone tablets by Moses. Kley, manager of production, writes volumes daily, and Amos Meyers is kept busy accounting for the straw that lost from the stage stairs.

Louise L. Verostek's report of largely of interviews with would-be leading women and ingenues, for he is the director of engagement.

On the day of our visit there was much preparation, and the studio had the general impression of anticipation. Max Fisher was tuning up the orchestra for the grand entree of Jesse L. Lasky, who is shortly to arrive.

Lois Weber has discovered the garden spot of the universe at the corner of Vermont Avenue and Santa Monica Boulevard, Hollywood, it's said the only difference between this and the garden of Eden is that they wear clothes here.

Clyde Cook misunderstood this back-to-the-farm propaganda and went out and raised a beard. If you didn't know he was a cameraman, you'd think he was made up for a Russian dude.

Lee took Eddie out Saturday night and forced him to help celebrate his, Lee's birthday, and the ingeneuse de mine company refused to tell the number, but the waiter was still counting corks when our reporter passed by the café.

Four rackets are needed for Lambert Hillyer's Triangle picture, and players are living, for the requisition for snake bite cure is still unsigned.

McDowell bought an almost shot by a buckaroo, who had a gun that wasn't loaded, given his bullent went through Mel's pants.

Ruth Stonehouse and a company voyaged to and from San Diego this week without a single seasickness.

“The Road Between” (Art Dramas—Five Reel)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

A RT DRAMAS’ latest release from the Erbograph studios, titled “The Road Between,” featuring Marion Swayne, is announced on the program as a comedy-drama. It is meant to be, but isn’t. Marion Swayne is a woman of a certain cast and finding a ready audience that there is much of either contained. She will, however, convince those who see her that she is pretty and very susceptible to the “close-up.” If it were not for the showing of some characteristic scenes of country life and the little star, herself, there would be little to hold the attention of the average picturelover.

The scenarioist, whose name does not appear on the program, overlooked some very important essentials to a good script. There is the plot, but one so hackneyed and time-worn that a new interest is difficult to incite. The characters are not firmly placed as to be the most convincing. If he meant the plot to be actionable, he failed. Joseph Levering, who directed, had a poorly written story to begin with, but this was not sufficient reason for his resorting to the “close-up” with such frequency. Interest wanes from the average to the almost imperceptible. Even when Polly’s father signs his name to the papers which means his ruin, the audience fails to register sympathy or any but the average interest. Nor is this the fault of Frank Andrews, who presents this part. He portrays the character with all the homely characteristics usually attributed to a man of Abbott’s station and surroundings.

Bradley Barker, in the role of Davy, the country boy, gives a good characterization. Miss Swayne is at times a trifle too affected in her action, but on the whole her work is commendable. Kirk Brown and Armand Cortes have minor roles.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Polly (Marion Swayne) is a vivacious little country girl. Her mother, Sarah (Gladys Fairbanks) is of the socially ambitious kind, who is discontented with life on the farm. Polly’s father (Frank Andrews) is an unassuming man, whose life is devoted to science. He discovers a process which he sells for a large amount of money and his wife insists that they go to the city.

Davy (Bradley Parker) is a farm hand and in love with Polly. She is happy on the farm, but it is decided to move to the city, where her mother can “enter society.”

Once in the city, they are the targets of social gangsters, and the father is induced to invest his money in an organization which eventually fails. Before leaving the farm he gave a strip of land to his daughter. She received a letter from Davy who informs her that a deposit of coal has been found on the land. The same day she was asked to sign over her interest to the company of which her father has been made a director, to satisfy his debts. She cleverly defeats the transfer. They return to the farm and she and Davy are married.

Selig World Library
(No. 5—One Reel)
REVIEWED BY WILLIAM J. McGRAH

JUDGING from this edition of the new World Library, that Selig has replaced the Tribune Weekly with, it will take its place at the forefront of the animated picture chronicles. This latest ready for the market has a combination of pictorial topical events from all points of the compass that makes it all it should be—entertaining, comprehensive and instructive.

Chief among the activities of the country shown is a rare and interesting glimpse of the interior of the Denver Mint, with coins in the making; another view of the human chess game played with men, women and children, gardens, kings, pawns and bishops. Then there are some historic views of Revolutionary landmarks of Washington City, finishing up with a rare view of the seal rookeries along the Pacific Coast.

Each of these one reels has so far been replete with live, interesting episodes, and this latest maintains every characteristic in the highest degree.

“The Neglected Wife” (Ballboa-Pather—Tenth Episode)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE mystery of the Veiled Woman deepens in this number entitled “A Veiled Intrigue.” Speculation as to whether Mary Kennedy is not acting the part herself at times will undoubtedly become rife in the audience that has followed the serial closely.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Lured by the Veiled Woman, Margaret (Ruth Roland) believing she is going to the assistance of Kennedy (Roland Bottomley) finds herself in a trap. She is placed in a private asylum and allowed to see no one. It is only through the quick and clever work of Mrs. Kennedy (Corenne Grant) and Norwood (Philip McCullough) that she escapes. Doyle (Neil Hardin) makes another attempt to get even with Norwood, even going so far as to let fall a heavy safe in his vicinity, but the editor escapes in the nick of time.

“Paws of the Bear” (Triangle-Ince—Five Reel)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

J. G. HAWKS, author of “Paws of the Bear,” didn’t mean to become pro-Teutonic in his story, we hazard, but the story takes such a turn, all unexpectedly and, of course, all regrettably. Your motion picture audience that applauds a boy scout parade will hardly be likely to countenance the fact that an American hero stands by and allows a German messenger to slip through the fingers of agents of Russia, particularly when one of the Russian agents is the heroine. In all probability “Paws of the Bear” was written before the United States entered the war, but with no complex of matters all changed the picture ought to be changed. The last few scenes would turn the trick very nearly.

The fact that the ending is not settled until the closing scenes is the big point in favor of the picture—dramatically. The story with its spies and plots and counterplots is excellently constructed and moves with a rapidity that never allows the interest to falter for an instant. The opening is laid in Belgium at the time of the German invasion and the scenes are most convincing with the exception of one. As the hero and heroine are about to be shot down by a German firing squad, along comes an Allied airship dropping bombs. One happens to land in the midst of the firing squad and when the smoke clears away the squad is not to be seen. When the hero and heroine escape with fairly whole skins in hand as the coincidence reaches a point bordering on the impossible.

William Desmond and Clara Williams in the leading roles do effective work and the production tendered the picture by Reginald Barker, who seems to be the Ince war specialist, is in accord with his usual fine work.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

In Belgium, at the outbreak of the war, Olga Raminoff (Clara Williams) shoots at a German general when the enemy enters the town. Ray Bourke (William Desmond), an American traveler, gives her the protection of his name, but this suffices not. Both are sentenced to death. An aeroplane of the Allies saves the day for them. Later, bound for home, Ray meets an old college chum, Curt Schreiber (Wallace Worsley), who is in the service of the German government. Schreiber has hundreds of papers to be delivered to Washington and he gives them in Ray’s care as he knows he will be searched by Olga and her companion worker, Drakoff (Robert McKim), also passengers on the ship. Ray secrets the papers somewhere. Olga beseeches him to give them up for her sake, but his word to Schreiber is sacred. Nearing America he tells her that he will make no effort to return the papers to Schreiber and moreover that if she marries him he will tell her all about it. Married, they settle on his estate. Schreiber is a visitor. He leaves suddenly with a borrowed suitcase, evades the subordinates of Drakoff and boards the train, discovering the papers under a label on the suitcase. Olga is content to let the matter drop.
"The Fatal Ring"
(Pathe—First and Second Episodes)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

PEARL WHITE returns to her own again—her own being, of course, “The Fatal Ring.” There are stunts in it, thrills in it and there is mystery in it; to say nothing of a three cornered struggle, both plotting and physical to gain possession of, this time, the Violet Diamond. The fearless Pearl, swinging around on chandeliers and bowling over swarthy men as if they were so many pins, behaves very much like a female Fairbanks. The female, incidentally, is much more wondrous than the male. She, however, doesn’t go to all the biffing and hanging. There is juvenile Earle Fox who for the time being has deserted the parlor drama for the tackling dives and two story jumps of “The Fatal Ring.” And then there is a fine cast of extras who fight like the pugilists of times gone by. And Mr. O’Bannon, the hero with the plotting look, erstwhile Mexo-Japanese of “Patria.”

Fred Jackson is the author of “The Fatal Ring.” He allowed his imagination free reign when he concocted the first two episodes, even to the extent of including in its scope the room with the closing walls, trap doors and iron shutters that bang down just as the hero and heroine are about to escape. Imagination makes the serial and Mr. Jackson seems to have a sufficient store of it to make even another one. Robert Milhauser did the continuity and George B. Seitz directed. Mr. Seitz, having written any number of serials now blossoms forth in this latter capacity and success seems to be his lot. For the first episode of “The Fatal Ring,” entitled “The Violet Diamond” is in three reels, the second “The Crushing Walls” is in two as all the remaining numbers will be.

THE STORIC AND PLAYERS

Pearl Standish (Pearl White), heiress, is held up by Nicholas Knox (Earle Fox), member of a secret order, and is ordered to give up the violet diamond. She informs the burglar she hasn’t got it, but longing for excitement, invites him in and hears the story of how her father procured the diamond from a burglar who stole it from its sacred resting place in Arabia. The setting is in the possession of Knox. Pearl summons Carslake (Warner Oland), formerly her father’s secretary to ask him if he knows anything of the diamond. Carslake holds up Knox procuring the setting but just then the Priestess (Ruby Hoffman) of the order arrives with her henchmen and a general free-for-all ensues. Knox regains the setting and refuses to tell Pearl why he wants the diamond. Pearl receives a note telling her that she has fifteen days to return the diamond. If she complies she and her lover die.

In the second episode, Pearl and Knox journey to Carslake’s house, believing he has the diamond in his possession. The priestess and her followers spy on them. Pearl and Knox are trapped in a room by Carslake, who then sets fire to the house. Attempting to escape, they fall through a trap door into a room with closing walls. The Priestess has already been caught. Carslake fights a reporter away who has tried to pull the lever and save the three. When the episode closes the reporter has just dropped from exhausting beside the lever, while the walls are starting to crush the unfortunate adventurers.

“An Eye for An Eye”
(“Stingaree” Series—Kalem—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE WORTS

FURTHER dangers and adventures to which the Australian bandit now shows more concern than an uplifted eyebrow make up the latest release of the “Stingaree” Series. The keynote of the present episode has been well sounded in previous ones—the desire of the outlaw to steal from people who don’t deserve their money, presenting the gains to people who deserve money but haven’t any. This motive makes the business a bigger one and results in a matter of saving ships out of a haze. The formula is that some one gets into trouble because of some evil doer, Stingaree turning tables and relieving those distressed by pillaging the evil doer.

THE STORIC AND PLAYERS

In a somewhat complicated but well-knit story, Stingaree holds up a stagecoach and kidnaps a young miner who has no money. Previously, the young miner left his sweetheart, who is expecting a child, to go to town to make good, succeeded and then fell in with a gambler, losing his pile. Stingaree undertakes to return the boy’s money, which he succeeds in doing by bearding the gamblers in their den.
feeding, sleep the open air until 2 p. m.; 2 p. m., feeding, then recreation in the open air until 5 p. m.; 5 p. m., light massage; 6 p. m., bottle of modified, certified milk, then sleep until 10 p. m.; 10 p. m., bottle of modified, certified milk, then sleep until 6 a.m.

These instructions closely followed, it is argued, will make for better babies to make better citizens.

Various ailments of children are exhaustively dealt with, the telling of ghost stories and others likely to frighten children and excite them are decried, vaccination is advocated, the removal of “tonsils” by the tonsilist when they impair the breathing is recommended, and almost every conceivable feature of child life is amply dwelt upon.

It is a highly interesting picture and cannot fail to be of immense service to the mothers of to-day.

“Ballooniatics”

(Century Comedies—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

A LICE HOWELL in her initial comedy release under the banner of Century Comedies, direction of J. G. Blystone, titled “Ballooniatics,” completes two reels of the celluloid of the “fun-maker” variety, with a “bang” and with most acceptable comedy favors for all who wisely select the theatre displaying in its lobby, posters announcing this screen comedienne as the comedy star and “Ballooniatics” as the comedy vehicle. Vehicle is used advisedly and literally in referring to the comedy because Miss Howell is carried the entire length of a seemingly endless thoroughfare somewhere in California, over house-tops and far above terra firma, part of the way in a “balloon” and the other proportion in an improvised aeroplane. She takes “chances,” the mere suggestion of which would elicit a negative response from the screen’s most thrilling “thriller.”

As the maid-of-all-work, in the home of wealth, Miss Howell makes her appearance in “Ballooniatics.” With the assistance of the Chef (name not announced), she re-hashes some bits of ancient comedy and between the two a palatable dish is served which if given a bit more seasoning would have been more appetizing. The comedy thrills start when the balloon and aeroplane come into play. Miss Howell’s presence is not always apparent, but she is there all the time and executing some clever bits of comedy-thrill “stunts.” When we do get a “semi-close-up” of her after abruptly leaving the “aerial” instruments she has just crashed through the branches of a tree near the roadside, having been rudely awakened from sleep in her bungalow which had been taken in toa in the realms of the cloudy by the revengeful Chef and his balloon.

“Ballooniatics” is a good comedy thriller. Miss Howell is seen to an unusually good advantage and with unusually good support. J. G. Blystone, displayed sure-fire knowledge of comedy direction and of the wants of comedy lovers.

“Caste”

(Vitagraph—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

CASTE is a treat, rarer than which there has never been.

Adapted and produced by Larry Trimble from the famous old play by T. W. Robertson and with Sir John Hare in the role of the “pub” loving Ecles, it is a superb example of real drama. Its every turn is so natural and it is so brimful of life, void entirely of the artificial, that one’s eyes glisten and the corners of one’s mouth turn up in a smile, not alternately but at one and the same time.

The simplicity of the play with its innumerable reflections of that which is true in everyday life is its charm. Dealing with the meeting and the resulting conflict between two sets of characters, the high and the low, in England, it never for the shortest instant allows the interest to falter.

Perhaps the audience that wants the blood and thunder, the murders and the thrills supplied by physical means will be unappreciative of “Caste,” but we think not. The fellow who isn’t thrilled through and through mentally by it, has little right to be termed a human being.

Sir John, the noted English actor, in his role of Ecles gives a performance full of the most enjoyable humor. His sense of pantomime is admirable and his every gesture and expression is natural. His support, including Peggy Hyland as Esther Ecles is of a high order seldom seen in current productions. The humor which Campbell Gullan and Esme Hubbard bring to their respective roles of Sam and Polly is delightful, the atmosphere of good fellowship created by Dawson Millward as the Captain, the very naturalness of Roland Pertwee as the hero, D’Alroy, and the majesty that Mary Rorke brings to the part of the Marquise are qualities that become inseparable from the picture as it runs along. In fact “Caste” and its players are so closely allied that to speak of the former without the latter would be a grave injustice.

Larry Trimble directed the picture while in England. Both in the adapting and the production he has reached a height seldom obtained by this five-reel feature. All in all, “Caste” can be recommended without any dissenting word. If Walter Pritchard Eaton looked at it, we think he would revise his opinion of the motion picture in this case at least.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

George D’Alroy (Roland Pertwee), reared by his proud mother, the Marquise (Mary Rorke) to respect his high social position, nevertheless marries Esther (Peggy Hyland), daughter of a disreputable old fellow, Eccles (Sir John Hare), whose life is led largely in the public house. Before leaving for Africa with his regiment his mother, Esther’s father, her sister, Polly (Esme Hubbard) and her fiance Sam (Campbell Gullan), a plumber, meet for the first time. The Marquise is disgusted. D’Alroy is reported killed and although he is brought to the hospital with the belief of Esther’s son, the Marquise’s heart softens she still remains aloof from her humble relatives. But with the belated return of D’Alroy, the complexion of the situation changes, the Marquise relents and there is a cheerful ending.

“Borrowed Plumeage”

(Triangle—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

“BORROWED PLUMEAGE” is an Ince picture featuring Besse Barrassale, written by J. G. Hawks and directed by Raymond West. It is a lavishly embellished costume production laid in Ireland at the time that John Paul Jones was sailing the seas.

The settings and costumes are a sheer delight and from all accounts, reproduce the atmosphere of the period with remarkable fidelity. Miss Barrassale, as the kitchen wench in Selkirk Hall, who assumes the role of mistress of the place when the English soldiers come to town, is offered full opportunity to exercise her ability as a comedienne.

The first reel, which is laid in the kitchen of the castle, is quite the funniest of the lot. The tactics employed to produce comedy are quite Keystonean in a way and are handled excellently. In this portion of the picture Tod Burns, as Giles the scullery lout, of Selkirk kitchen, does excellent work in a comedy part. He is displayed up to good advantage and is responsible for many a laugh on his own account. The half-witted air he assumes is ridiculously funny.

For comedy-drama artistically presented, “Borrowed Plumeage” is certainly excellent to the last department. It is an admirable successor to the list of comedy-dramas turned out by the Ince studio during the past few months.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

The Earl of Selkirk (J. Barney Sherry) and his family forsake their castle when news of the presence of Paul Jones off the coast is circulated through the village. Nora (Besse Barrassale), the kitchen maid, is the only one who stays, and when a regiment of English soldiers arrives to defend the place she receives them, clad in the clothes of the house. The boys, with the birth of Esther’s son, the Marquise’s heart softens she still remains aloof from her humble relatives. But with the belated return of D’Alroy, the complexion of the situation changes, the Marquise relents and there is a cheerful ending.

“Stop, Luke, Listen!”

(Rolin-Pathé—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ONESOME LUKE (Harold Lloyd) is welcomed into the home of a fair debutante (Bebe Daniels) in this “hit-me-and-think-you-missed” number, containing more action than incidental funny business. Kicking, shouting, drinking, and running wildly about with no plot to speak of hardly constitutes all that could be desired in a comedy of this sort. When gags are few and originality at low tide the wild actions of the players don’t get much in the way of laughter.

There are some good stunts in the number and Luke and Snubs Pollard are funny individually, but the various scenes don't hang together with even that small degree of continuity possessed by the majority of successful slapstick comedies.

"Her Excellency the Governor"
(Triangle—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

When producers go to dealing with governors and the signing of bills, they run a subject of great delicacy. For after they have created the necessary official atmosphere about their governor and his aides and the political bosses, they must conceive of dignified things for them to do. With the case of "Her Excellency the Governor," they have painted their governor as susceptible to the weight of Tuleton gold and have himself in an act of law that is altogether improbable and probably impossible. We doubt if there is a state in which there is a law giving final power to the lieutenant governor if the governor is absent from the state for only one hour. Yet this is what occurs in this picture.

The story told is fairly entertaining, portraying the manner in which the governor, a man misled by getting power from the minute he steps in office, is brought to his senses by the honesty and sincerity of the lieutenant governor—a woman. The climax could have been handled better; there could have been a punch supplied, which is decided wanting, but in other respects, if, of course, the improbability of the signing of the bill can be overlooked, the picture makes average fare.

Wilfred Lucas, though a good type for the governor, has little opportunity to display the abilities he has shown himself to possess in past performances. Elda Miller is again a good type for the opposite part, while the supporting cast, headed by Joseph Kilgour, as the boss, is well balanced. Albert Parker directed, under the supervision of Alan Dwan.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Barclay (Wilfred Lucas), elected governor by a corrupt party, gradually falls into its ways. He promises Sylvia Marlowe (Elda Miller) that he will sign the Child Labor bill, but when approached and threatened by Joseph Kilgour (the boss), he vetoes it. Next election he is only reappointed by a bare margin, while Sylvia, on the reform ticket, becomes lieutenant-governor. When the country enters the war, the Army Appropriation bill comes before Barclay, and Keller, who has listened willingly to the talk of a foreign government, succeeds in getting Barclay's consent to veto it. Sylvia, realizing the disgrace that will come upon the state, tricks him into leaving it, and, while he is gone, signs the bill, making it a law. Later Barclay comes to his senses and Sylvia is then willing to accept him as her husband.

Regan Hughston, Walker Walter, Edith Scaree and Albert Ferry are also in the cast.

"The Siren"
(Fox Film Corporation—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY GEORGE WORTS

The whirling of the vampire do not fill up this picture as the name of it seems to indicate; in fact, Valeska Suratt is the central figure in a rather complex but usual melodrama. The elements are relied upon to a large extent in getting over the various emotions, such as rain, for tears; thunder and lightning, for anger, and sunshine for happiness. It is not the first time these effects have been used, but they are done handily and tellingly. Some of the realistic scenes are splendid.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

At first it appeared that the only persons who would probably escape murder in "The Siren" were the camera man and the director. Later, it proved that this assumption was incorrect. The complexity of "The Siren" staggers its retelling in any detail. It is the story of an adventurer, who lures more than one man to his ruin, but who is finally killed. The cast includes Valeska Suratt, Clifford Bruce, Robert Clugston, Curtis Benton, Isabel Rea, Armand Kaliss, Cesare Gravina and Rica Scott.

The double bill, though a number of remarkable gowns which will be of interest to women patrons of the theatre. The picture on the whole will be well received by those who like their melodrama well seasoned.

"It Happened to Adele"
(Thanhouser-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

WRITTEN by Agnes Johnston and directed by Van Dyke Brooke, "It Happened to Adele" is smiling Gladys Leslie's second Thanhouser starring vehicle. The producers have seemingly relied on Miss Leslie's personality to carry the picture over a good many spots that are scant when it comes to either drama or comedy. The conclusion is that those who admire this recently risen little player will relish the picture as the dainty piece of confection that it is. But, regrettably, Miss Leslie, though pretty and smiling hardly has the strength of personality to win whole hearted interest in her work. A vehicle of greater interest in itself should have been selected, for a star never attains the meridian when supplied with such slight stories at the start.

Adele, the role in which Miss Leslie appears, is described on the synopsis sheet as "a child of great romance." That this is true is somewhat too greatly in evidence throughout the five reels. She is slightly more than romantic; she is what you might designate as "slushly." In brief there is too much sugar and not enough staple fare to "It Happened to Adele." And the sugar by the way, is bad.

The production is good while in the persons of Peggy Burke and Wayne Arey, Miss Leslie's has two strong supporting players.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Adele (Gladys Leslie) inherits a love for the stage from her mother and through the services of Blanche (Peggy Burke), a wise young lady of the chorus, she gains a start. Success is hers and before long she stars. She is loved by Horton (Wayne Arey) and Harvey (Charlie Emerson), a would-be composer. She favors Harvey until finally she discovers that he is rather selfish. Horton is her final choice after she realizes his true worth.

"The Brand of Satan"
(Thanhouser—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE brand of Satan" is a melodrama that alternately depresses and thrills. The former effect is the result of allowing murder and rape to run rampant throughout the five reels, necessities essential to the latter effect. So providing one can countenance these things and violations of virtue that provide the turning points of the plot, one can be thoroughly entertained by the story. The leading character, Jacques Cordet, is possessed of a dual personality. At one moment he is the respected prosecuting attorney of Paris and at the next a villainous underworld figure known as "The Stranger." While his decent self he attempts to capture his indecent self and vice versa. There are no number of strong moments resulting from the deeds committed by Cordet while influenced by one personality or the other. For action the picture never wants.

Montagu Love, featured alone for the first time, makes much of the role of Cordet. His transition from one phase of his character to the other is marked by facial signs of deep mental struggle. His support is of a high order. And though the point may be trivial, one is forced to remark on the wonderful ability of all the cast is making up. Gerda Holmes and J. Herbert Frank in particular show the passing of the many years from first reel to last four in an astonishingly realistic way.

Jere F. Looney is author of "The Brand of Satan" and George Archibald directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Le Grange (Albert Hart), an escaped convict, violates Christine (Gerda Holmes). A child is born to her, who after twenty-nine years, blossoms forth as Jacques Cordet (Montagu Love), district attorney of Paris. Tainted with the blood of Le Grange, Cordet at night becomes the leader of a band of Apaches in their crime. As attorney again he is unaware of the sinister place he holds in the underworld. Cordet falls in love with Natalia (Evelyn Greetley), daughter of Christine's former sweetheart, Despard (J. Herbert Frank). After a series of staging events, culminating in a climax wherein Cordet is only saved from being the victim of his own plotting by the interference of his underworld sweetheart, who gives her life that he may live, he is operated upon by Despard with the result that his malady is overcome.

Naugle Gross, Emile Le Croix and Katherine Johnston complete the cast.

"The Plow Woman"
(Butterfly-Universal—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE PLOW WOMAN," an adaptation of a novel, by Eleanor Gates, is a story of the plains of the West during the days of the first settlers when Indians ran rampant and white people had to keep an eye ever ready for the marauders. The picture has been given an admirably realistic production what with its stockade, old-time cabins and the always prominent bar and dance hall. Under this heading the clarity and brilliance of the photography can well be mentioned with unstinted praise.

Mary MacLaren is featured and her rather expressionless style makes her well suited to assume the duties of the title role. Her support is good throughout, headed by L. C. Shumway, Eddie Polo, Hector Sarno, Harry de More and Marie Hazleton.

The story concerning itself with love and devotion of Mary, the Powl Woman, to her family, how she shielded her younger sister from her father's wrath and how she loved and lost, to return to her labors in the field, makes truly interesting pictorial matter. J. Grubb Alexander made the adaptation, and Charles Swickard directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

MacTavish (Harry de More), a Western settler, is lord of his household. His daughter, Mary (Mary MacLaren) tills the soil. The younger daughter, Ruth (Marie Hazleton), away at school, secretly marries Lieutenant Fraser (L. C. Shumway), of the out-post. When a baby is born, Ruth is forced to return home and to protect her sister from her father's wrath Mary claims it as hers. Not believing her sister really married to Fraser, she goes in search of him, just at a time when an Indian uprising threatens the community. Mary and the child are saved from death by the reformation of Buck (Hector Sarno), a half breed, while the last-minute arrival of the troops vanquishes the Indians. The marriage proved, MacTavish relents and accepts Ruth and her husband into his home, while Mary goes back to the plow.

“Fires of Rebellion”

(Bluebird—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

“FIRES OF REBELLION” in its first three reels might be classed with the purely tragic. For the remaining two reels the action shifts from the factory town where the workers are in rebellion against the oppression of the factory owners to the city, where a tragic story is told of a girl's fight for the social position which was denied her by the overlords of the factory town.

Dorothy Phillips has been seen to better advantage than as Madge Garvey in this late Bluebird offering. She is called upon to present characters of opposite dispositions and the extremes in social life—the one a downtrodden factory girl, the other a socially ambitious girl who has rebelled against life in a factory town. Miss Phillips idealized the factory girl, but as the socially ambitious she does not register with the same convincing spirit.

This Bluebird offering presents a pictorial argument which for its soundness of teaching and the lesson sought to be taught deserves commendable praise. In its early reels certain phases of the home life of the factory help is provided with a little too much detail—not with suggestive detail, but with the scenes of the domestic troubles of the Garveys, giving vent to their family differences, offering too much of the crude. These incidents in the lives of some of our working classes are without a doubt true, but the truth sometimes "hurts."

The action moves swiftly without a perceptible break in its continuity. The cast is well chosen. Lon Chaney gives a good characterization. William Stowell presents the part of John Blake with thoughtful consideration for the traits common to a factory man. Belle Bennett in a minor role gives evidence of strong emotional talents. Misses in the cast are Cora Hayes, Alice May Yount, Edward Brady and Richard Loomo.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Madge Garvey (Dorothy Phillips), a factory girl, is dissatisfied with the drudgery of the factory life. Her father, Joe Garvey (Richard La Reno), is a drunkard. Her mother, Mrs. Garvey (Alice May Yount), leads a sorrowful life, due to the drunken brutality of the husband. John Blake (William Stowell), a new foreman of the factory, discharges Dan Mallory (Edward Brady), husband of Helen (Belle Bennett), sister of Madge. Mallory in revenge attacks Blake, and in the fight Mallory is knocked unconscious and dies from the effects. The doctors ascribe his death to a weak heart.

Cora Hayes (Golda Madden), a stenographer, tells Madge of the many opportunities in the city for a pretty girl. Madge, desiring to get away from the factory life, goes to the city, after promising her father to marry John Blake, who is in love with her. After days of disappointment in the city and discerning the reason why Cora Hayes had advised her to go, Madge returns to the factory with Blake, who had learned of her distress and had come to the city to protect her and claim her as his wife.

“Some Boy”

(Fox—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY GEORGE N. SHOREY

We always look for sure-fire entertainment and "something new" when George N. Shorey's reviews appear. We can safely predict that the present picture is far from a disappointment. Mr. Walsh does not do quite so many of his athletic stunts as he has been known to do in a single production, but he has plenty of "action." Climbing in and out of windows, boarding a ship through a very small port-hole, and dropping onto the top of a passing limousine as easily as one would board a leisurely street car are samples of this action, which is packed full of interest.

The most interesting part of the story begins when "Joyous" becomes press agent for a fashionable hotel and impersonates a "grand dame" and attempts in addition to pull off a great diamond robbery all by himself.

His plans miscarry, as is the least likely, and he is not a really treacherous until he has the chance to put one over on his own father and win the girl. All of which sort of stuff has been done before, but never better than in "Some Boy," and we cannot say too plainly this is the sort of pictures which will build box-office receipts permanently.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

"Joyous" Johnson (George Walsh) is "Some Boy." At school he is the star batter on his baseball nine, to the detriment of his studies, and his father (Herschel Mayall) has him "fired." But this does not daunt him. He next becomes press agent for a leading hotel, where he meets (on the way south) Marjorie Milbank (Doris Pown), who in the meantime has made a bet with Joyous' father that he cannot force her to sell him her Texas ranch.

The plot thickens as Joyous pulls some big publicity "stunts" and is run out of the hotel in time to catch the same boat with Marjorie, with whom he now gets real chummy and offers to help keep the "business pirate" from getting his property.

He succeeds admirably in doing, and his father forgives him for all his sins when he is outwitted by his own son and a girl.

Educational

(“Some Jugglers,” Second Number of “China and Chinese,” Series—One Reel—Small Animals, Ditmar Subject)

REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

“SOME JUGGLERS” is the second number of “China and Chinese” series, showing typical scenes of life in China. It is in one reel. The cleverness of the Orientals as acrobats is proven by one of the younger generation of Chinese, who all but ties himself in a knot and turns remarkable feats of contortion. The various trades practised by these people, and the primitive ways and means employed in carrying on the business of life, such as road building, structural work, boot making and the ways and means of disposing of merchandise and prepared food, are shown with clearness of photography and a renewed interest is awakened by each passing phase of the life of the Chinese, as shown. The last scene of this number, showing the workmen preparing timber for building, could be shortened some as it runs to repetition.

The Ditmar subject showing the smaller animals and their young gives intimate views of the rodent, the pig, the smaller birds, and the rabbit. The young of these animals are shown, as they look shortly after birth and in the case of the chicken, it is shown emerging from its shell. One hour later, as the sub-title announces, this baby is shown as a very lively chicken. These views of the smaller animals and their young are in keeping with high standard of interest incited by other Ditmar subjects.

“The Greatest Power”

(Metro—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ETHEL BARRYMORE'S latest Metro Picture is one containing much patriotic appeal, both intimate and spectacular. It is a picture that is up to the minute in timeliness, as the declaration of war by the United States is brought in and constitutes an important turning point in the play. And the incidents of a declaration of war are not omitted either. There is a recruiting speech circulated on a bill and a Betsy Ross touch, without which it seems, no war picture would be quite complete.

A. S. Le Vino prepared the scenario from a story by Louis Walsh and furnished a continuity that in every respect deserves such a name. The production was in charge of Edwin Carewe, who has done admirably well in this department.

Miss Barrymore has a role more congenial than that offered her in her last picture, and carries it satisfactorily. Her support with respect to William Davidson, Harry Northrup and Frank Currier is entirely capable.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Conrad (William B. Davidson), inventor of a high explosive, is backed by Monroe (Frank Currier), and in this way meets and falls in love with his daughter, Miriam (Ethel Barrymore). They work on the perfection of the explosive together. Conrad plans to sell the invention to every country, in order that its terrible effects may soon end the war, but when the United States enters the conflict Miriam attempts to persuade him to allow the republic alone to reap the benefits of the invention. Rand (Harry Northrup), a spy, attempts to secure the secret formula. A fight between Rand and Conrad ensues, with the result that the latter decides to take Miriam's advice.

“Duckling of the Circus”

(Peter Pan Film Co.—Mo Toy Comedies)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

“Duckling of the Circus,” a Mo Toy comedy, split reel, shows the doll family very active as participants in a miniature circus. The only difference between their exhibition and the Wild West exhibitions is that the characteristic three rings are not used. One ring is sufficient for our little animated friends to give an excellent exhibition of bareback riding, acrobatic stunts, tumbling, the pretty horsewoman in short skirts and, of course, the clown, without which a circus is not complete. These miniature subjects work with a precision and accuracy which could not be much improved upon by human ingenuity. They are a bit stiff in the joints at first, but after warming up on the sawdust arena, they become as active as experienced circus performers. “Duckling of the Circus” is a good subject, and one that should be well received.

“Shee Baby?”

(Triangle-Keystone—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A SELECTION of front row damsels that might easily vie with Ziegfeld's best are present in “Whose Baby?” The gym suits they wear are something quite out of the ordinary, too. They are pretty and show a lot—of taste. When a fat girl, a very fat girl, attempts to get around with her silph-like companions, the laughs come thick and fast.

In the latter reel all the action leads up to a well engineered thunderstorm. Chased and chaser balance on a bed that hangs on a balcony, ultimately struck by lightning, with the consequence that the participants are thrown into a water fountain by the force of the water. A good supply of subtitles help the fun along, while the cast, headed by Gloria Swanson, Bobbie Vernon, Ethel Teare, Charles Bennett, William Irving, Tom Nolan and Tom Kennedy, do appropriate work.

“The Lone Wolf”

(Brenon-Selznick Production—Eight Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

TRAGEDY—this one word, reinforced by its less formidable kin, melodrama, might sum up a criticism of the Brenon-Selznick production, “The Lone Wolf,” which had its first showing Sunday night at the Broadway theatre, if it were not that this screen presentation of Louis Joseph Vance's work has accentuated some and created other significant and salient points in favor of the silent drama.

Shakespeare—when he wrote “Macbeth” probably did not dream that its tragic moments and supreme quality of sustaining suspense would place his work in silent command of the forces holding the Gibraltar of tragedy on the stage. Herbert Brenon may or may not realize that he has given to the screen a production which assumes, by right of excellence and the presence of the accumulated talents to dramatize and present them, to the Gibraltar of screen tragedy. But he has if the silent tribute which the Broadway audience paid “The Lone Wolf,” can be accepted as a true omen of this assertion.

Some will say that, of tragic moments, this production has too many, but those who see life as it really is—as it is lived by some, the delinquent and the criminal, will unhesitatingly acclaim “The Lone Wolf” as a most remarkable production, bristling with tense moments, strong action, human incidents and powerful drama. To Herbert Brenon is due a full quota of credit for this production; to George Edwards-Hall who made the adaptation is due the maximum credit allowed a clever scenarist; to James McKay, who wrote the sub-titles, we can say, “Well done,” and to Louis Joseph Vance, who penned the thought, is due honorable mention.

Bert Lytell, in presenting the part of “the Lone Wolf,” will find his name written at the top of the list containing the name of some of the screen’s stars. He screens like a “winner” moves with agility and “pep” of a Fairbanks, and executes with a subtlety and unaffected air of a born artist. Hazel Dawn, as Lucy Shannon, registered an average percentage. In the lighter veins she lives up to her reputation in comic opera, but when called upon to follow “the wolf” through the more weighty parts, a hesitancy is noted in her action. Cornish Beck, the youngster who presents the role of Marcel, the Waif, carried the “heavy” element with a degree of emotion seldom expressed more convincingly by a seasoned actor. Stephen Grattan, Alfred Hickman, Ben Graham, Robert Fisher, Wm. Riley Hatch, Joseph Challes, William E. Shay, Edward Abeles, Florence Ashbrooke and Juliet Brenon—all are as splendid in a wheel—indispensable to Herbert Brenon’s crowning achievement, “The Lone Wolf.”

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Marcel, the Waif (Cornish Beck), saves Burke (Stephen Grattan), a clever crook, from the police. Burke adopts him, and teaches him his profession. Burke is killed by an accomplice, Eckstrom (Alfred Hickman). Years later Marcel becomes a master crackman, and takes the name of Michael Lanyard. His sparsely haled thatch below that of Irishman, and he is called “The Lone Wolf.” The Pack, a gang of criminals notifies the “Wolf” that unless he joins them he is marked for destruction. Lucy (Hazel Dawn), who has engaged herself as nurse to Bannon (Robert Fisher), leader of the gang, helps the “Wolf” to escape. The two have many thrilling adventures with the “gang,” and finally escape to England in an airplane. Upon landing in England, Wertheimer (William E. Shay), a detective from Scotland Yard, who has acted as pilot, introduces himself as a detective, and Lucy as his assistant. “The Wolf” thinks he is caught at last, but Wertheimer knowing that his assistant loves him, forgives and forgets, and Lucy and “the Wolf” combine forces.

Universal Program

"Ming The Baby." (Nestor. Week of July 9.)-Remarkable around the efforts of husband and janitor to pacify baby while the wife's away. The story is told in a comic scene. Lee Moran, Eddie Lyons and Edith Roberts are the leads.

"Three Women of France." (Rex. Two reels. Week of July 9.)-As a program release this is indeed an excellent bit of drama, full of pathos and containing a number of moments when tears come to the eyes. It tells of the great sacrifice made by Fifi, a nurse in a war hospital, that a dying man might be made happy with his wife. Bess Meredith is the author and Ruth Ann, Ethel Haldane Woods, Virginia Lee, Richard Ryan, Jack Molhall and Daniel Leighton are the principals.

"Double Suspicion." (Bison. Two reels. Week of July 9.)-So great is the friendship of the two men, principals in this picture, that each goes to great lengths to free the other from suspicion of a crime which neither committed. A rapid-fire, Western release that has many scenes of romance, humor and action. J. B. Hoadley, Janet Eastman and Joe Rickson are the principals. George Marshall wrote and produced.

"Kitchener." (Joker. Week of July 9.)-Bourgeois on the Cinderella stuff, with much slapstick humor. Kitchener goes along with Sweepers' ball wearing a slipper, in the toe of which is a valuable message left there by Count Jjasbo. The count retrieves his message, but the romance culminates in an ash barrel. C. B. Hoadley wrote this one and Allen Curtis produced, while in her support appear Chester Ben nett, Jack Dill and others.

"Meet My Wife." (Victor. Week of July 9.)-Fairly diverting comedy with Neal Hart and Mignon Anderson showing how the "come on" to a million dollar romance by a cowboy. George Marshall wrote and produced, and Allen Curtis directed the Universal cowboys away in support.

"Return of Headquarters." (Imp. Week of July 9.)-Rather tame but exciting melodrama showing how a detective rescued a girl from tears of relief at the mad cap antics of James Hill, Agnes Vernon and Charles H. Mallees are the leads. Constance Crawley and Arthur Maude wrote.

"Romefor Peter Piou." (Nestor. Week of July 2.)-Lee Moran and Eddie Lyons supported by Edith Roberts flash some clever comedy on the scene in this tamer reeler. The run is clean. A wholesome comedy throughout, showing the adventurous life of a lady who has been recommended to the father of the miss as the ideal husband. Eddie Lyons, her steady, anticipates the arrival of the missionary, whom the pretty miss has never seen, lures him to his home and while the unsuspecting preacher is enjoying a bath, the steady calls an ambulance and has him transported to the observation ward of a hospital, voughing for his insanity on the bath question. The missionary escapes, finds his way to the home of the miss, where the steady is impersonating him. The missionary confesses that he has a wife and four children, bringing the steady and the miss to a happy ending.

"A Young Patriot." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Week of July 2.)-The foreign spy comes into his own again in this exciting three-reel melodrama, but his machinations are defeated at the climax by the nerve of a little boy. Well-produced and containing patriotism in an emotionally melodramatic form this picture certainly makes a good story. Louis Chalet was produced from a story by William Pigott, while in the cast appear Claire Malles, young Elwood Bredell, Mignon Anderson, Ed Brown, Roy Stewart, Morris Foster and others.

"The Twitching Hour." (Joker. Week of July 2.)— compelling story of a woman, which registers to humorous advantage. Gale Henley and Milton Sims, both in eccentric parts, are the leads. As hotel employees they accidentally capture a foreign spy and receive a large reward. Tom Gibson prepared the scenario and Allen Curtis directed.

"Not Too Thin to Fight." (Victor. Week of July 2.)-More funny antics contributed by a cast of misfits, players, fair well as a whole and containing some very good moments. Eileen Sedgwick, Ralph McComas, Milton Sims, Ed Baker and Van Hoffman appeared under the direction of Allen Curtis.

"Seeds of Redemption." (Rex. Two reels. Week of July 2.)-Heart interest stuff depicting the manner in which a pretty but poor girl overcame the prejudice of her rich relatives and how she won the son of the house. There is some crook stuff introduced which provides additional interest and impression in the stellar role and receives support from Stanley Walpole, Johnson Badeau and others. Robert Hill wrote and produced.

Mutual Program

"Real Life, No. 61." (Gaumont. One reel. Week of July 9.)—Imposing number and treats with the marketing of tobacco, ex-hastively going into the industry from the picking of the weed to the finished product. Then the nude beauty of the ladies, how the new method of launching life boats is shown. "As they looked in the beginning" is an intensely interesting story of the development of the present day typewriter, railroad engines, and steel cars. The "butterfly" and "butterfly jewelry." It is an instructive, entertaining story which should be accorded a hearty reception anywhere.

"Jersey's Hopeless Tangle." (Cub. One reel. Comedy. Thurs., June 28.)—This is another of the slapstick variety of comedy for which George Ovey as Jersey has become famous. He has more encounters with the police and after many rough and tumble episodes eventually comes our victorious. There is plenty of action in the reel and double bills will be well received wherever Jersey's maneuvers are known.

"The Road Wreckers." (Signal-Mutual. 13th Episode of "The Railroad Raiders." Six reels. Mon., July 2.)—Desmond, having been detected in double dealings with his呼吸道, is forcibly resigned; therefore he aligns himself with the man who is to ruin him. A moral, with a strong, solid cut, the wires cross and the train moves through a thick fog between the Overland Express No. 10, and the Cannonball freight car. By a curious coincidence the trainmen burn his hand with the acid from the end of the damaged wire and Burke's hand is injured in a similar way. Desmond accordingly, with a strong, solid cut, the wires cross and the train moves through a thick fog between the Overland Express No. 10, and the Cannonball freight car. By a curious coincidence the trainmen burn his hand with the acid from the end of the damaged wire and Burke's hand is injured in a similar way. Desmond accordingly, while he is being treated in hospital, turns the job to Burke's charge and Burke proceeds to ruin his rival. Burke, absorbed with his mission, forgets his wife and Helen is the same dauntless, death and danger defying girl as in all the preceding chapters. And there are as many genuine thrills as ever and there's not a shadow of doubt but this will "go over" in royal style.

"Mutual Weekly, No. 135." (Gaumont. One reel. Hoover; annual bathing day parade at Venice, Calif., wherein is shown the latest styles in swimming toggy; Detective Sergeant M. S. Y. Secretary Treasure Secretary McAdoo on the success of the Liberty Loan at Washington; Ania Baldwin, daughter of the late Earl, (Lucky) Baldwin, breeding horses for war service.

Pennsylvania Bills Aimed At Movies Fail

In Rush of Closing Hours “Cine” Bills Directed Against Picture Industry at Harrisburg Drop by Wayside—Industry Saved by Good Luck

MORE by good luck than by any very effectively organized opposition to them, every one of the bills that was aimed at the motion picture industry failed of passage in the session of the Pennsylvania Legislature which adjourned finally in Harrisburg on June 28. The lawmakers have departed from the Keystone State capital, not to meet again until 1919—unless in special session—and with them vanished such bugaboos to the motion picture trade as:

The Beyer bill, which would have placed a tax of one cent on each linear foot of film approved by the Pennsylvania censors.

The Jefferson W. Smith bill, which would have barred children unaccompained by parents from motion picture theatres.

The Baker bill, taxing all motion picture companies incorporated outside of the state two per cent. of their gross earnings on shows given in Pennsylvania.

The Glass bill, giving negroes equal rights with white persons in all places of amusement.

The McNichol equal rights bill.

Cavalierei to be Famous Players-Lasky-Star

To Star in Two Paramount Pictures Either at New York or Fort Lee Studio—Productions Already Selected but Not Yet Announced

INA CAVALIERI, Italian operatic star and noted beauty, has contracted to appear in productions of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation exclusively for a period of one year.

Mme. Cavalierei will star in two Paramount pictures, one to be staged in September and the other in the spring of 1918. This arrangement is made in order that the diva will not have to interrupt her operatic career as the star of the Chicago Opera Company.

The acquisition of Mme. Cavalierei is considered an important one both for Paramount and its exhibitors. She is one of the best-known women in the professional world, her reputation being international and her beauty the source of newspaper and magazine comment for years.

Mme. Cavalierei is extremely popular in America, and is the idol of the Latin speaking countries. Her operatic career in Italy and in South American capitals won her popularity.

The fame of Cavalierei has reached even darkest Mexico during the days when that country was in a condition approximating peace. The diva made several appearances in Mexico City.

Cavalierei was originally a little dancing girl in Rome. Her marvelous beauty and grace won her coveted membership in the ballet at the opera house in Rome. Here her performances charmed the King of Italy. By Royal command she was placed under the personal tutelage of Lombardi.

First Showing of Goldwyn Films at Chicago

Seven Goldwyn Pictures are ready and the eighth and ninth pictures will soon be begun. A first showing to American exhibitors has been arranged for the exposition of the Exhibitors' League of America in Chicago, July 14 to 22.

Present arrangements are to run at least four of the pictures each morning at the Colonial theatre in Randolph street, this by arrangement with Messrs. Jones, Linick and Schaefer. Admission to exhibitors will be by invitation. F. M. Brockell, manager of the Chicago offices, together with the general officers from New York, will be in charge.

The first day has been designated "Mae Marsh day," and the star will be present. Samuel Goldfish and other officers have taken quarters in Chicago for the term of the exposition.

Carlos Wants Camels

A. Carlos, general manager of the Fox studios, departing Thursday for New York to attend the annual convention of the William Fox exchanges. Incidentally Mr. Carlos is starting a continental search for camels, and will look them up while in the East. A herd is needed for desert scenes in the "Cleopatra" film starring Theda Bara now being made.

Prior to his departure Mr. Carlos supervised the building of all sets needed for this spectacle, among them being a reproduction of a beautiful Egyptian palace on the banks of a pool of water twelve miles southeast of Los Angeles.

Jane Cowl's Goldwyn Work Halted by a Death

Jane Cowl's work on her first Goldwyn photodrama was halted last week by the death of Elsie Clareson, a member of the company. This necessitated the retaking of fifteen scenes and the rebuilding of six separate interior sets at the Fort Lee Studios.

It is a rather sinister coincidence that Miss Clareson had been playing a part in the death-room scene that occurs in this drama.

Miss Clareson had been a member of Maude Adams' company in the revival of "The Little Minister." Her health was broken by the strain of long hours and frequent rehearsals that Miss Cowl herself has been forced to go through.

ORIGINAL IN THE MOTIOGRAPH

The first of this model being sold in 1907—which was many years before the plan was adopted by other manufacturers—and any claim to the contrary is a misrepresentation as is well known by all who are familiar with the history of motion picture machine progress.

The MOTIOGRAPH is known the world over as a leader in quality and is noted for small upkeep and perfect projection.

Does any projector at any price give more than the MOTIOGRAPH?

JUST A FEW OF ITS IMPORTANT POINTS OF MERIT:

LAMPHOUSE—Large, well made and well ventilated.

ARC LAMP—To take 8" lower and 12" upper carbons; has 8 different adjustments.

CONDENSER MOUNT—So arranged that either condenser can be removed separately when desired; one of the latest improvements on the MOTIOGRAPH.

MECHANISM—Runs quiet, requires very little attention from operator, projects rock-steady picture due to accuracy in manufacturing.

STAR AND CAM—Accurately ground and run in oil bath.

NEW PATENTED SLIDING DISC CONNECTION—which has been used in the MOTIOGRAPH for over eighteen months—is becoming more popular every day with the users, due to its "no wear" qualities and rigidity produced in the framing device. (Ball Arbor used in former models, has been discontinued.)

TWO BALANCE WHEELS—To insure perfect action and steadiness of picture.

PEDESTAL—Heavy; designed so as to eliminate vibration.

MAGAZINES—Made of heavy material, will hold 2,000 feet of film.

MOTOR—1/2 H.P., entirely enclosed. (Machine can be purchased with or without motor.)

RHEOSTAT—Adjustable, 20 to 55 amperes.

REGULAR MOTIOGRAPH LENS with each equipment.

OUTSIDE SHUTTER—Used on the MOTIOGRAPH instead of inside shutter, as on former models.

PRICE COMPLETE $305.00

Music Tax

The question has again come up as to conditions which exist in connection with the music tax which the members of the "American Society of Composers and Music Publishers" are endeavoring to impose.

We know from letters which we have received and are receiving from our subscribers that the tax is being collected and will continue to be as long as any particular music is copyrighted by individuals or companies belonging to the Society.

At the present time about 90% of the publishers printing popular music and over 50% of the publishers printing standard and classical music belong to the Society. This leaves a small margin of publishers on the outside which can be drawn on.

Those not belonging to the Society make the statement that "All of our publications except those on which we do not control the copyright may be played at public performances." This is a loophole for the publishers for, without owning the copyrights, free use of the music can not be given.

With this in mind a clean bill of health can not be given by any publisher whether he is personally a member of the Society or not. He may be entirely free himself and willing to give all rights to any purchaser, but the particular number may be actually copyrighted by a man who feels that he is able to get more out of his work than his royalty, etc., and therefore, he wants all he can lay his hands on.

This new move in collecting revenue can only be met by having the purchaser or the prospective purchaser of given selections write the publisher and find out in whose name the copyright stands, and whether there is to be a tax imposed if the selections are played where admission is charged.

The whole affair is unfortunate as many theatre owners do not feel that the publishers have any right to demand additional revenue over and above their sales price. It has been compared with a condition which can be conceived where a man who buys sugar for a price can use it for that price if he uses it himself, but if he makes anything with it which is put on sale, he has to pay extra per pound. What would the candy man or the cake makers say to such a condition as this?

The theatre men or musicians who wish to build up their musical libraries are in just this position technically, yet by careful investigation they can avoid the tax, though it may take time for inquiry. There are plenty of pieces of fine music on which the copyright has run out as well as many thousand controlled by publishers who are not members of the Society and demand no tax.

We want to give all the help we can in every way; we want to work with all concerned as we have been doing in the past; we want our subscribers to feel that they can call on us and whenever we have the information or can look it up, we will let them have it. We do, however, want you to know conditions so that you may be ready and prepared to avoid any trouble which might arise.

Music for pictures at best is difficult and therefore it is our hope that the Society will eventually find some way of reaching the desired end without continuing this tax. This must be done or much good music will not be used in theatres, hotels, cafes and other places which at the present time are to a large extent, popularizing it. This is one fact which seems to be ignored by publishers, for it is through these very channels which are now being closed or loaded up with the tax which are directly or indirectly responsible, in part at least, for their prosperity.

The whole condition is one of waiting and watching but in the meantime, of buying the best music obtainable under the most favorable circumstances.

Unionism—Its Advantages

NOT a few operators have written me asking why I advised them and others to become members of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Motion Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada. It is in answer to them and for the guidance of all who are not members of a trades union that I am setting forth the following facts: Unorganized workers complain a great deal of the scant courtesy and small consideration they receive from employers and their fellow workers who are members of a union, and they do not seem to realize the cause of this. If they would all join the union of their craft and put their energies at work in aiding the efforts the unions are making to improve conditions for all workers they would soon find a larger quantity and better quality of "fat" in their share of the "milk of human kindness."

The trade union movement is the highest and best developed working class movement thus far evolved, a fact that no thinking man can successfully dispute, although there are some who will say that labor unions are selfish. This we want to dispute. There is all the difference in the world between the selfishness of a capitalist and the so-called selfishness of a great labor organization. The one means an increase of self-luxury for one man and a single family. The other means an increase of self-respect; more schooling for the young, not of one family, but of a thousand—or ten thousand families. Others may call that selfishness if they please; I call it humanity and civilization and the furtherance of the welfare of the nation, for the workers are the nation. As long as they thrive the nation thrives. As they succeed in life, the nation is prosperous and great. The future of the nation is inseparable from the future of the nation's workers. The question might arise: What have the unions ever done for the workers? We answer, The trades unions foster education and uproot ignorance, shorten hours of labor and lengthen life, raise wages and lower usury, increase independence and decrease dependence, develop manhood and balk tyranny, establish fraternity and discourage selfishness, reduce prejudice and induce liberality, enlarge society and eliminate classes, create rights and abolish wrongs, lighten toil and brighten man, cheer the home and fireside and make the world better. All of these in answer to the question, and that is why all wage workers should be union men. As Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, said recently:

"Let us concentrate our efforts to organize all the forces of wage labor and within the ranks contest fairly and openly for the different views which may be entertained upon the different steps to be taken to move the grand army of labor onward and forward. In no organization on earth is there such toleration, so great scope and so free a forum as inside the ranks of the American Federation of Labor, and nowhere is there such a fair opportunity afforded for the advocacy of a new and brighter thought."

And that is why I say, double the wages of every wage earner and there comes into the home of that worker not only an educational force, but the means to realize higher standards of life that are revealed. Higher wages mean better houses, better sanitary conditions, more wholesome food, better clothing, the satisfaction of a greater number of natural wants, physical and social. Better health and better lives are the inevitable concomitants. Therefore, don't wait until too-morrow, you who are not union men, for to-morrow never comes. Do it now.

Though Moving Submits Department Dope

A operator from the Pacific slope, who requests that his name and city be suppressed, and whose P. S. is as follows: "The typist work in this letter is bad, but we are moving at my house, and if I take time to have it corrected you won't get it.

Please don't judge my projection by my typewriting," says: "The different little helps that I have noticed you hand out to the boys through your department from time to time made me think possibly you might care to pass this along.

This device, which I have illustrated, is particularly for use of those operating Powers and S. A. machines, those who work where two machines are used, and but one operator on the job at a time. The use of this attachment allows the operator's chair to be left in one place, that is, between and even with the rear of the lamphouses, so that speed regulation and lamp feed may be controlled at the same time with either or both hands and without moving from the chair. My machines set five feet apart from lens to lens. (You evidently have operator's port, or look-

EQUIPMENT OPERATING

PROJECTION

By I. G. SHERMAN

Questions answered made of sheet iron three thirty-seCONDS of an inch thick. For the right hand machine it requires two pieces like Figure 4, and they must be placed on the pipe so they are in line with each other. On the left hand machine, with the front piece horizontal, the rear one must be placed perpendicularly and projecting above the pipe. Connect lever link R-52 on each machine to hole Q,
R-47 and R-48 correspond with 1 and J, Figure 3, and bolt it there. In Figure 3, hole H should be 2½ inches below hole F;
1 2 inches below hole F, and 2 ½ inches below hole F. Do this machine fasten Figure 1 on at holes K and L. Now place R-50 and piece Figure 4 parallel with each other, and make a small connecting link to reach from hole Q, Figure 4, to hole R-43.
On the right hand machine the speed control lever will work vertically, while on the left hand it will work horizontally.

Comment.—While this is apparently rather difficult to understand, I believe that operators familiar with a Powers machine, who study this out carefully, will be enabled to make the installation with but very little trouble. I would request that the brother send in if possible a photograph of the device in actual operation, so that those who may not be able to grasp the modus operandi will receive more light on the proposition. The device looks good to me, but what do you do when you meet a misframe?
Then you must leave your chair, unless you have some way of automatically framing your picture. Trust your moving day is over and you are settled in your new home, so that I may have the pleasure of hearing from you again in the near future, although I cannot understand why you should desire your name and names, etc., for your operators. This is a suggestion that may be of help to brother operators, I believe they should receive full credit for same.

“Anti-Misframe League” Pastre Writes

FROM Gary, Ind., comes a letter signed by John C. Pastre, whom I have dubbed Anti-Misframe League Pastre, from the fact that it was he who suggested the idea of such an organization. This letter is in reply to one which I wrote to Brother Pastre, asking for further suggestions, and is as follows: Dear Friend: Since you announced the Anti-Misframe League, I have been quietly watching developments to see how every one would like the idea. It certainly pleases me to know that the boys and exchanges are endorsing it, and you certainly deserve credit for the great work you are doing. It is my opinion that many operators are following out the ideas of the League, and as yet have failed to register, WHICH IS ALL WRONG. They should send their clearances to the D.O. in Philadelphia; E does the left. I think it will be necessary to “draft” any members if they once get a glimpse of the card and button you are giving away. You ask me to make further suggestions, so here goes:
(1) You can save valuable space by publishing only the names of new members as they register, and give the fans the number of members in figures each week.
(2) For those who dislike publicity make them members without publishing their names.
(3) Set a goal of 1,000 members for a starter, and let us know each week how far we have yet to go.
(4) Invite the inspectors in all film exchanges to become members.
(5) Ask each operator, or member who is already enrolled to get the signatures of other operators for the Roll of Honor.

Enclosed you will find signatures of all the operators in Gary's new local No. 489, for which a charter was issued by the I. A. on May 23, 1917. While obtaining these signatures one of the brothers reminded me of the fact that I once had a ticket punch, which is true. But I buried it the day I wrote the suggestion, and I stand behind the axiom “A WISE MAN CHANGES His MIND, BUT A FOOL NEVER DOES.” Here’s hoping that many more will bury their punches, too, and bury them DEEP.

In Reply: First, I want to thank you for your activity toward the upbuilding of the League, and second, I want to compliment you, copy of your extremely well-written letter, it being one of the few to pass the board of inspectors without censorship.
I agree with you in your expressed belief that many operators are following out the ideas of the League, but have failed to register. But then, you know, there is also an old saying, “Slow but Sure,” and probably these operators will come in without the necessity of a conscription “act.” Commenting upon your suggestions numerically, will say that—(1) was along the lines which I had already mapped out, only I had not considered giving a weekly score, which is a good idea, and will hereafter be used. (2) While there may be some who dislike having their names published, though there is no apparent reason why they should object, they can become members by simply filling out the information blank, which appears in the department, with the request that their name be not published, which same I will respect. (3) A goal of 1,000 members will do very well for a starter, and if all the brothers show the same activity as Brothers Murray of Philadelphia, R. H. of Manhattan, R. H. of St. Louis, this goal should be reached in a very short time. (4) Letters will be sent to every film exchange asking their inspectors to become members as well as for the exchange itself to co-operate with us in something that is to their interest as well as our own.
(5) It is hoped every member will do his best to obtain new members, and help us to reach that 1,000 membership. I am glad to know that the operators of Gary have received a charter from the International Alliance and wish them all success in their undertakings, and would call to their attention the fact that success is sure to attend a local organization which is conducted along business lines, and with the spirit of “Do Unto Others As You Would Want To Be Done By” prevailing. This is a very old saying, but it is still good. You handed me a good laugh when you said that one of the brothers was kind enough to remind you that you once had a ticket punch. And you are quite right in your axiom, "A Wise Man Changes His Mind, but a Fool Never Does," and the fact that you have buried your punch "on the lone prairie" proves that you are not to be classed in the latter category.

For Rapid Threading

VERN HICKS, Marion, Ill., writes a somewhat lengthy epistle and has much to say about the Anti-Misframe League, as well as giving an idea of his own for the promotion of better film service, but as operators’ blanks seldom receive any con-consideration from the film exchange, I did not think much of it.
I send in a suggestion for threading film in the mechanism, which I am submitting to the readers of the department for their consideration. The brother makes no claim that this is something new, and says: “At present we are using only one machine, a Powers SixA, therefore, I must thread up as quickly as possible, and thread in frame, which I usually do in from twenty to twenty-five seconds. I am not very good at explaining anything like this, but perhaps you can get the idea, so here will be something new. I have it so arranged that the bulb lights when I open lower shield; another very good arrangement is a punch button on the floor which should be within easy reach of the operator's foot when threading. To thread throw framing lever clear down, and thread with dividing line of picture in center of aperture plate opening. Before starting pull frammer to level position and you will be in frame every time, providing intermittent has completed its movement and is in lock before starting to thread.
The threading lever being on level, or in center, the shutter will be in the best position. I also use one of these little lamps in the lamp-house and find it invaluable in aiding me to trim chars, or install a new set quickly. I wish you success with the thing and want to get in on it. If I ever write again, will try to not to take up so much of your time.”

Typhoon Fans Even on Garden Pier
J. F. DALY, traveling representative and ventilating engineer of the Typhoon Fan Company, 1544 Broadway, New York City, has just returned from his trip to Baltimore and Atlantic City.
Mr. Daly secured an installation in the Western theatre, Baltimore, and also the Brodie theatre of Baltimore. An installation of Typhoon fans was also arranged with the Garden theatre of Atlantic City.
Although the Garden theatre is situated on the Garden Pier, where ocean breezes blow constantly over this theatre, the management did not hesitate to install this artificial system of ventilation to insure patrons cool and refreshing breezes at all times.
Another installation worthy of note is that of Loew's Orpheum theatre, Eighty-sixth street, New York City.

Service on Power's Projectors

After the recent announcement by the United Theatre Equipment Company to the effect that they had taken over the distribution of the Nicholas Power Company projectors for the territories covered by their branches, the following statement has been made:

"In handling the Nicholas Power machine the United Theatre Equipment Company intends to give the exhibitors every possible service which an up-to-date distributing organization can render. The familiarity which the branch offices of this company have with the Nicholas Power projector should bear this out, as is shown by the statement that in the past their branches, as independent dealers, have sold three of these machines to every one of any other make.

"It is therefore a foregone conclusion that with this experience the branches are in a better position to handle exhibitors' needs with this machine than with any other.

"The projectors produced by the Nicholas Power Company range in price from $185 to $337.50, which allows the taking care of any possible emergency, whether for school, church, home or theatre use.

"The United Theatre Equipment Company also state that they are safe in saying that the Nicholas Power Company will give the exhibitor the benefit of every improvement possible, and, further, that at the proper time a new model, far superior to anything which they have produced heretofore, will be ready for distribution."

Twice as Much Current?

G. W. Pomeroy, Iowa, says: My boss says I have used twice as much current as when he operated six nights a week, and as I only operate three nights a week, I don't see how this is possible. Am using a Howell inductor and it delivers from forty to sixty amperes. My employer claims he always pulled forty amperes, and as I only operate three nights it would be necessary for me to use eighty amperes all the time to consume twice as much current, and as the inductor will only pull sixty at its highest notch, I wish you would explain it for me as I do not believe it is possible.

In reply: I do not see either how it is possible for you to consume twice the amount of current when operating only one-half the length of time as your employer, unless it be that you do not carry a proper arc. But I don't believe that even this would account for the doubling up, and am submitting it to the readers of this department, as well as to the manufacturer of the inductor for the solution. Anyway, how does your employer know he always pulled forty amperes, is there an ammeter in the operating room? Your membership button of the A.M.F.L. will reach you in a few days.

This article has evidently stirred up the operators of that city, for they wrote, under date of April 27, as follows: "You may rest assured that the article entitled 'Wake Up, Ithaca,' was read by the Ithaca operators with a feeling of, to say the least, rather mild amusement. It is hard to find anything in the whole article (Continued on page 303)

UNION ANNOUNCEMENTS

Officers Local 182, M. P. M. O.

The following are the officers of Boston Moving Picture Machine Operators, Local 182, I. A. T. S. E. and M. P. M. O., whose headquarters are located at 119 Pleasant street, Boston, Mass.

James F. Burke, president.
Joseph S. Cifre, vice-president.
J. H. Fullick, treasurer.
A. R. Moulton, financial secretary.
J. B. Williams, corresponding secretary and business agent.

The moving picture operators of Boston have what is, perhaps, one of the strongest union organizations in the United States. Every applicant for membership must first be licensed by the State Police Department, which calls for a very stiff examination, and before being admitted into membership they must also undergo the very rigid examination given by the local. In this way the organization is certain that each one of its members is fully competent to handle any equipment, or take charge of any operating room in the city.

Hudson County, N. J., Operators Elect Officers

At the annual election of officers held by the Moving Picture Machine Operators of Hudson County, N. J., Local 384, I. A. T. S. E. on Saturday, June 23, at Breman's Hall, 642 Newark avenue, Jersey City, N. J., the following officers were elected to serve until July, 1918:

President, Anthony Boscarielli; Vice-President, Charles Murphy; Secretary-Treasurer, Edward W. Bordmann; Recording Secretary, Frank Brown; Sergeant-At-Arms, Harvey Sapp; Trustee for two years, Edward Dougherty; Trustee for one year, George Hoffman; Delegates to the State Federation of Labor, Edward Dougherty, Anthony Boscarielli and Edward W. Bordmann.

These officers will be installed at the first regular meeting in July, and it is hoped that a large number of the members will attend on that occasion and do honor to those who have been elected to serve them.

The retiring president, Walter A. Bemis, who has served the local unfalteringly is deserving of much praise for his efforts in the past and in going out of office does so with the best wishes of a large majority of 384's membership.

To the newly elected officers we wish all success, and hope that they will continue to have the welfare of the organization at heart, and resolve that the coming year will see no lessening in the good results that have already been accomplished.

Crickmore Installs 306's Officers

At a largely attended meeting held on Wednesday, June 20, at 12 St. Marks Place, the newly elected officers of the Moving Picture Machine Operators of Greater New York, Local 306, I.A.T.S.E., were installed by Assistant International President Charles C. Crickmore.

It was expected that International President Shay would perform the ceremony, but owing to his absence from the city he was unable to do so, that duty devolving upon Brother Crickmore. The officers who will serve for the coming year are: S. Kaplan, president; Simon Terr, vice-president; H. I. Sherman, recording secretary; A. I. Mackler, secretary-treasurer; Harry Mackler, business agent; S. Goldfarb, sergeant-at-arms.

Three trustees, J. Daisy, R. Goldblatt and G. C. Edwards (the retiring president), were also sworn in office, as well as E. T. Stewart, Executive Board member.

The local reports great progress.

We Admit It

Our old friend, H. S. Fuld, calls us a "bird," owing to the statement made in an article published in June 9 issue of the News under the caption "We Go Visiting," in which I said I was on West Seventy-eighth street near Second avenue at one and the same time. Fuld then asks the following question: "Have you been to a Liberty Loan Drive?"

In Reply: We admit the "bird" part, for we have been flying high lately, and while it was owing to no mistake of ours, will say that the "topographical" error was the fault of the printer. In reply to the query we answer: WE HAVE—HAVE YOU?

"The Carbons With a Guarantee"

A Bibliography on Color for Photographers

Although we have dealt in preceding issues with the mechanical, the physical and the chemical aspects of color photography (and cinematography), we have omitted to go very deeply into the psychological aspects of the case; but no amount of study upon the subject of color photography will result in a thorough understanding unless the theory of color vision, and the determination of the fundamental sensations, is taken into account.

As is generally known, the theory of color photography rests upon an accepted theory of color vision (the Young-Helmholtz, Maxwell theory); and it is apparent, therefore, that if we are to understand the basic theory of color photography, we must first of all understand the theory of color vision, and, likewise the laws of color measurement and mixture.

Up to the present this branch of the subject has received but scant consideration in the literature upon color photography, for the aim of the text-book writer is to enlarge upon the practical, rather than the theoretical side of things. Any attempt toward improvement in existing processes of color photography, or cinematography, without proper understanding of the underlying theory, can only result in failure, as many a disillusioned experimenter knows; but when once the theory is grasped, the way is clear for intelligent study of the numerous problems of color photography. It cannot be too strongly emphasized, that without a thorough knowledge on the part of the student or investigator, of the theory of color vision, color mixture and color measurement, all work upon the photographic color processes must be of a grossly impractical and empirical nature.

To the subject of color vision, that we color sensations is a large one, and, perhaps, only of interest to a limited portion of our readers, it cannot be dealt with at length in the Camera Department; but in response to numerous requests from cameramen in general, as to what constitutes the most useful literature upon the subject of color, we are pleased to present the following references, which have been selected, after due consideration, from the extensive literature on the subject.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

This is Maxwell's classical paper upon the fundamental, or so-called primary colors, and describes in detail his oft mentioned "color-box," with which his determinations were made. Inasmuch as all researches of an extensive nature, with the exception of some work by Helmholtz, come after the publication of Maxwell's results; this paper assumes historical as well as scientific significance.

In addition to a good resume of earlier work upon the subject, Maxwell's article gives numerous experimental color mixture data in tabulated form, and those who consult this article should not fail to inspect the two plates, at the end of the volume, which illustrate the "color-box," and the method of plotting the mixture equations in the form of "sensation-curves."

This is the report of Maxwell's famous demonstration of three-color photography by triple projection, which was given at the Royal Institution on May 17, 1861. This was the genesis of tri-chromatic photography, and as Maxwell's demonstration is frequently referred to, by writers on color photography, this report is mentioned for the benefit of those who like to consult original sources.

This is one of the earliest of the systematic treatises on color to be published in English; it first appeared in 1879, but maintains its place to the present time as the soundest and most valuable work which a student can acquire. In addition to the extensive experimental work of the author, which is of course duly set forth, Rood has also taken cognizance of the work of other authorities upon color, and we can recommend the study of this volume to all who require a good grounding in the rudiments of the subject.

On account of the general nature of Rood's treatise, some branches of the subject, which are of special importance to the color photographer, have not received extensive treatment, but these aspects of the study of color are thoroughly covered in other works, shortly to be described.

Of all the workers upon color vision none has given the subject a more philosophical and lucid treatment than has Sir William Abney, whose researches in trichromatic analysis were extended over a considerable period. To see the spectrum demonstrated by Sir William, with his famous "color-patch" apparatus was to receive never to be forgotten lessons in color mixtures and colorimetry. The "color-patch" apparatus was an arrangement whereby the spectrum, produced with a slit and two prisms, was projected upon a small screen, and a patch of white light reflected from one of the prism faces was projected beside it. This latter beam could be altered in intensity by means of a rotating-sector with adjustable openings, while a rod placed in front of the projection screen provided means for photometric comparison by means of the Ramsford shadow test. Three adjustable slits in the path of the spectrum, dispersed by the prisms, provided means for showing percentage mixtures of the fundamental colors, and with such an apparatus a host of experiments were devised, which are described in detail in the work now under consideration.

Although Abney's "Colour Measurement and Mixture" was first issued long ago, this valuable little work is still procurable and forms a most valuable and appropriate text for the experimentalist upon color photography. The thorough perusal of this book, which is not difficult to assimilate, cannot fail to advance the reader's knowledge of color vision, measurement and combination.

This lengthy, exhaustive and valuable paper has served as the fountain-head of exact knowledge concerning the fundamental color sensations and chromatic visibility, in the case of many of the best physicists and authorities on color photography of the present day.

The experiments of König and Dieterici were, apparently, carried out in the laboratory of von Helmholtz, and the data set forth in their paper represents the results of innumerable measurements. Their apparatus is described and illustrated, and numerous sets of plotted curves are given, representing the color sensations as found for normal (trichromatic) eyes, and also for various forms of color-blindness, and the complementary color mixtures determined and plotted, and in addition to the curves numerous tables are given of color equations, complementsaries and spectrum luminosities.

These data have proven of particular value in the hands of subsequent investigators, by reason of the fact that König possesses normal trichromatic eye, and although he is an anomalous colorophiliac, could therefore be used as a reliable basis for further study. All thorough students of color photography should become familiar with König and Dieterici's results, as well as with some extensions of their work which will be mentioned shortly.

Helmholtz's book on Physiological Optics is generally considered as the master-work on its particular subject, but the original edition (1867) cannot be compared to König's edition (second edition, 1896) as far as the data on color vision is concerned. In the second edition, which we are here considering, the theory of color vision is given largely (pp. 273-284), and, in addition, such revelant subjects as photometry, irradiation, and persistence of vision are dealt with.

König is largely responsible for the data on color vision, the color-sensations, complements, etc., which appear to be selected from the results of his investigations cited above. The second edition of Helmholtz's "Physiologische Optik" will, therefore, provide us to those who cannot consult König and Dieterici's original paper; for the most important data contained in the former work will be found in more or less complete form in the latter also. The Helmholtz volume will prove instructive in other ways, for it is an important item in scientific literature.

This is one of a series of numerous papers upon color measurement which were presented before the Royal Society by Sir William (then Captain) Abney. As the title indicates, this paper is devoted to the determination of the relative luminosities of the fundamental sensations, as found for sunlight and arc-light. We might also remark here that all of Abney's "color-patch" experiments were performed with the aid of the positive role of a D. C. arc as light-source.

Curves representing the luminosity of the spectrum, and the percentage luminosities of the fundamental colors, are given in this paper, and in addition much tabulated data, such as mixture equations covering many cases. Although Abney chiefly utilizes the prismatic spectrum, the measurements for a normal spectrum (from a diffraction grating) are likewise given, and Abney's sensation curves for the normal spectrum have been used by some workers as a basis for the preparation of tricolor filters.

The consensus of opinion among careful physicists, however, favors König's curves, which are probably the most nearly correct interpretation of the fundamental color-sensations which have yet been deduced. Exner's recalculation of König's curves is somewhat in favor at present. (See "Sitzungsberichte K.K.-Akad. der Wissen.," Wien, Vol. 3 (Cl. 2), 1902, page 837.)

Abney's work upon the color-sensations is of great interest and scientific value, and the paper here cited can be studied with profit by all workers upon the subject of color photography.

In this paper Dr. Nutting has sought to formulate the relations between radiation and light, as regards the quality, quantity and duration of the luminous sensation. The result is an article of absorbing interest and undoubtedly scientific importance, which treats of such considerations as: chromatic sensibility at high and low intensities; sensibility to different wave lengths (colors); the growth of the visual sensation with time (an important consideration in additive color cinematography); the definition of white light, and numerous other important phases of the subject.

In common with most of Nutting's published work, a good physical and mathematical training is required of the reader, but even an amateur student can secure valuable information by reading between the lines, or, we should say, between the integrations of this valuable and comprehensive paper.

In this publication Nutting emphasizes the desirability of adopting a fixed scale of color, as a primary standard to which dyes and other colored material can be referred. A method of establishing such a scale of pure colors is outlined, and examples of the necessary experimental determinations are given, reference...

being had to the data of Steindler. The suggestion conveyed in this article is a rational and important one, but the experimental data will be the main issue with most readers, and can be recommended as worthy of study.

This short item is really an extension of some experiments detailed in Nutting's former paper, "The Luminous Equivalent of Radiation," to which it may be considered as supplementary:

The article now under consideration consists, essentially, of a recalculation of König's data on visibility, as set forth in Dr. Nutting's earlier paper, just referred to. It should therefore be studied in conjunction with the visibility data in the original article.

This is a recent and thoroughly modern treatise upon color, and treats of the subject from the viewpoint of the modern physicist. There is an unquestionable demand for an exhaustive and up to date work upon the physical and physiological aspects of color, but we do not consider that Mr. Luckiesh has fulfilled the requirements in compiling his treatise. An enormous amount of experimental results are mentioned, it is true, but this end has been achieved at the expense of thorough and accurate treatment in numerous instances. As examples of this lack of conciseness we might mention the chapters upon spectrophotometry and color photography. These subjects are of interest and importance to the modern student, and require to be thoroughly elucidated or else left severely alone by the text-book writer.

While the theoretical aspects of the study of color are probably more thoroughly treated in Rood's treatise (previously mentioned) than in Luckiesh's work, nevertheless, the latter will find wide appeal on account of its up to date nature. There are interesting chapters upon Color in Lighting, Effects for the Stage, Color in Painting, and allied subjects of practical nature, upon which the author can speak with authority by reason of his connection with the Nela Research Laboratory.

Mr. Luckiesh has largely compensated for the conciseness of his theoretical and scientific chapters by the inclusion of numerous references, and this treatise on "Color" should become widely read by students of the subject.

Ithaca Awakened

to which exception could not be taken. In the first place, there are five motion picture theatres in Ithaca, one of which is a five-cent house, of which we will say nothing, and the remaining four are ten and fifteen cent houses. Of the latter four mentioned, three are using, or have used, silver tip or hold-ark carbons and two are equipped with Radium Gold Fiber screens. The article goes on to state that not a few of the boys still persist in using a two blade shutter instead of a three blade. As a matter of fact, only one operator is using a two blade shutter. He does not use a three blade shutter just because somebody tells him it is better, but does use the two blade because he has both right there and has found out that under his particular condition the two blade gives the better results. We are further informed that the Ithaca audiences are made up largely of Cornell students, who are more critical than the average audience. As nearly as can be estimated, the students form 25 to 30 cent. of our audiences, and we will agree that no one questions the fact that they are critical, not infrequently critical beyond reason. In fact, having had considerable experience with students in general, would venture the guess that the article was written by some student, or recent student, who is just sufficiently acquainted with the condition here in Ithaca to confuse the facts. And now if anybody still thinks we are behind the times he had better take a trip up this way and look the place over; then perhaps he will share our opinion that it is not the Ithaca operators who are asleep. Trusting some one may avail himself of the above invitation, we are...

MUSIC AND THE PICTURE

Music Cue Sheet for "The Barrier"

Several weeks ago we published a music cue sheet for this production, and we stated at that time that the composition "A Song of the North," as directly suggested in the play, was not published.

We are now in a position to state that this song has been composed by Levy and Hanks and is obtainable from any music dealer or direct from Messrs. S. Levy and Frederick Hanks, Columbia Theatre Building, Seventh avenue and Forty-ninth street, New York City.

Musical Review of Latest Compositions Suited for Picture Playing

1. Joan of Arc, the biggest song hit of 1917, by Bryan-Weston and Wells. (Edition Watson-Berlin & Snyder.)

Made up of Southern motifs and melodies, interspersed with original themes founded on negro rhythms, blending in such a manner that in many cases it is difficult to distinguish one from the other—the original from the traditional. Particularly effective for ensemble combination.

5. Oh, Boy! selection—the greatest musical show of this season. (Edition T. B. Harms.)

6. The Novelty Orchestra Folio.

The latest and best folio entirely of characteristic and descriptive numbers. (Oliver Ditson Edition.)

7. The Passing Show of 1917. A selection and dance orchestations have now been published by G. Schirmer, New York.

Rubbell Installs Projector

MR. RUBELL, of Independent Movie Supply Co., 729 Seventh avenue, has just installed a complete projection outfit consisting of a Little Giant home projector, screen, etc., in the summer residence of Michael Dreisen, of Dreisen & Company, Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, New York.
Rutherford Has Model House

RUTHERFORD, N. J., may well be proud of its motion picture theatres, which rank among the best in the country.

The Criterion, which is located on Ames avenue of Rutherford, is the largest. It is constructed of hollow tile, brick, concrete and steel, making it absolutely fireproof. It has a forty-four-foot frontage on Ames avenue and a depth of one hundred and forty feet. The front of the theatre is simple in design, but still pleasing, and has wonderful facilities for making excellent lobby display.

The lobby, which measures about twenty-five feet in width by twenty feet in depth, is most attractively finished. The ceiling is semi-dome shaped, is of stained glass, behind which numerous incandescent electric lights have been placed, which, when illuminated at night, give forth a pleasing soft light. The side walls and doors have been paneled with French plate glass mirrors, these not only adding to the attractiveness of the lobby, but also to its size, without mentioning what effect they have on the women patrons of the theatre. The box-office, which is centered between the doors which lead into the theatre, is equipped with a National Cash Register ticket selling machine, by means of which crowds can be handled with ease. Several display frames taking one and three sheet posters adorn the lobby.

The interior of the theatre makes a homelike and comfortable impression as one enters. Everything for the comfort of the patrons has been installed. The general decorations of the interior are carried out in dark green, trimmings being of gold. There are 600 comfortable opera chairs, which were furnished by the American Seating Company of Chicago. Some of these are leather upholstered, back and seat.

The theatre is heated by steam and is ventilated by means of suction fans in the ceiling and numerous electric side-wall fans. The indirect lighting system is used in the interior, the fixtures being of chain suspended type, the arc of an opaque material. A Berger metal ceiling has been installed, this being finished in cream color, and acts as a reflector.

The projection room, which is located above the lobby, is exceptionally large, running three-quarters the width of the house and about eighteen feet in depth. This room is equipped with two Simplex projectors, a Hallberg generator and Kleigl spot light. Speer "Hold Ark" and National carbons are used. The length of throw is 120 feet onto a specially constructed screen. Much credit is due the operator for the results he obtains.

A stage fully equipped for any kind of theatrical work is another interesting feature of this house.

Music most suitable for the picture being shown is furnished by a piano, an orchestra being engaged for special occasions, the once famous "Bunky" Williams rendering the music for the regular performances.

There are three performances daily, consisting of from seven to ten reels each. Paramount and Triangle service share the weekly program.

The theatre is owned by John T. Collins and operated under the management of G. R. Alyea. Both these gentlemen deserve credit for their unlimited efforts, which are duly repaid by the box-office receipts at the close of each day. Admission prices are five and ten cents in the afternoon and ten cents straight at night.

The weekly program is extensively advertised in all the local papers, window display cards, and also by a large mailing list.

Society of Motion Picture Engineers

WASHINGTON, June 30, 1917.—C. Francis Jenkins, president of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, has made the following statement concerning the coming meeting to be held in Chicago, July 16-17-18:

"I look forward to the Chicago meeting as being epoch-making in the motion picture industry. Our main object will be united efforts for standardization—standardization in sprockets, in film perforations, in frames, and many other parts and processes that will tend to give a more absolute picture projection on the screen for the public. We mean to do for the motion picture camera and projection machine what the Automobile Association has done and is doing for the automobile industry. It is not necessary to have all the machines of the same manufacturer to accomplish this, but it is necessary to have certain parts interchangeable, or universal.

"We already began this work seriously at the Atlantic City meeting when we issued a motion picture nomenclature standardization, giving parts and processes a definite meaning. This has received commendation from the courts, as they are now able to conduct a case on motion picture machines, etc., with more intelligence and basic facts.

"I believe the standardizing of the engineering side of the motion picture industry will have a steady—stand—effect on the industry as a whole. For to a great measure it is through the projection machine that the public receives its interpretation or impression of the manufacturers' product—all the art, labor, thought, time, and money of actors, directors, photographers, and scenic artists. That is why this machine should be of the highest standard, that it may in no way deteriorate the production of the manufacturer.

"The society is celebrating its birthday of one year, and during the time of its existence has confined its work to organization, which means that it has gathered into its fold a select membership of men engaged in the mechanical side of the motion picture industry who are willing to labor harmoniously and to give their services, without recompense, for the good of the cause. We are at the same time advancing the theory and practice of our own profession, gaining and disseminating knowledge for mutual benefit.

"The various committees for the standardization of cameras, perforation, projection, electrical devices, optics, and others appointed at the Atlantic City meeting, will make their report in Chicago, and we anticipate some very substantial advances towards this end.

"President Wilson has recently called together the heads of many automobile factories to standardize auto trucks for army use. It is quite possible that the engineers of the motion picture industry will be called to do the same thing with their industry, considering the use the National Government is making of motion pictures in training the army and navy, as an amusement, as news pictures and as records. We want to be in some ways prepared when this call comes."

Lyric of Rutherford Does Big Business

THE Lyric theatre, of Rutherford, N. J., is a unique little house located at Sylvan street and Springdale. It was completed during 1911, and is at present operated under the management of G. E. Bannister, who has leased it for a number of years.

The theatre has a frontage of 35 feet on Sylvan street, and a depth of 105 feet. It is constructed of brick and concrete, the front is plain in design, but makes an attractive appearance. At night it is brilliantly illuminated by two powerful arc lights. The lobby is neatly decorated, and contains several display frames on which posters of the current and coming attractions are displayed.

The interior of the theatre is neatly decorated, the main color used being dark green. The ceiling, which is metal, is finished in white, and was installed by the Berger Manufacturing Company. The direct lighting system is used in the interior, ceiling and side wall fixtures having green-stained glass shades upon them these harmonizing with the general color scheme.

Steam heated used in conjunction with roof ventilators keep the house well heated and ventilated. The ventilating system can be used for cooling purposes in the summer. The seating capacity of the house is 337; opera chairs having been furnished by the American Seating Company, of Chicago.

The projection room, which is located above the lobby, is in charge of Joseph Broome, and is equipped with two projectors, both of which are motor driven. One is a Power's 6 A, the other a Simplex. A motor generator set which designed by the manager completes the equipment. The length of throw is 100 feet onto a specially constructed screen, which has been prepared with a coating of slate colored alabastine, and the results obtained are excellent.

The music for the picture is furnished by an organ orchestra of large dimensions, and very appropriate music is rendered.

Westinghouse Company Declares Red Cross Dividend

The vacant room in the Briarcliff block, at the southwest corner of the square at Robinson, has been remodeled and a motion picture theatre installed. The show will be under the management of Carl Malone, who for a number of years has been connected with the management of the Grand Opera House. Mr. Malone has been actively engaged in the motion picture business in Robinson since he was old enough to turn a crank on a machine and thoroughly understands the business, and no doubt will make a success of his new venture. The new place has been christened "The Orpheum" and was opened to capacity business a week ago.

Miss Malone, who managed the Savoy theatre, Geneva, formerly run by Howard Ashton, of this city, announces to the public that the show will be closed from Tuesday of this week until the room can be prepared in such a manner as will make the room one of the most modern of its kind. Mr. West has purchased a projecting machine of the latest model and a "mirror" screen which eliminates the flickering of the pictures. The name of the theatre has not been definitely decided upon, but it will probably be named the Lincoln. The admission will be five cents and the best of pictures and music are promised.

It is rumored that a deal is pending for the purchase of the Peabody theatre on North avenue, near Charles street. It is understood that the deal is being negotiated in the interests of the Parkway Theatre Company, which controls the Parkway theatre on North avenue, near the Peabody. Details of this transaction are not known, but it is understood that it will be executed within the next few days.

NEW YORK

Announcement was made a few days ago by Messrs. Ely Elting and A. S. Carland that a handsome new moving picture theatre known as the Stratford will be erected in the immediate future at the corner of Cannon and Liberty streets, Poughkeepsie. Plans were drawn by a New York architect, and as shown by the owners call for a handsome two-story house with ample exit room on both Cannon and Liberty streets. The property is now known as the old Nelson property and has been a landmark in this city for generations.

Demolition of the present structure has already commenced and the theatre will be ready for business, it is expected, not later than November 1.

One of the features of the theatre in the building will be an orchestra costing about $10,000.

The exterior will be executed in terra cotta and tapestry brick. The lobby will be through a tiled floor vestibule, which will contain an office for the manager, and box-office. A ladies' dressing room has been provided on the orchestra floor and a gentleman's smoking room below. Many other modern features are to be incorporated. The lighting arrangements will be a distinct feature of a very original nature, being so arranged as to permit of any color scheme desired for the varied performances that may be given. The heating and ventilating schemes are of the very latest type.

North, the father of Martins Ferry movies, may start a moving picture theatre in the North End, Wheeling, according to a local moving picture man to whom Mr. North was talking during his recent visit to this city. An attempt was made by North while here from Salem to lease the Rex theatre on South Fourth street, but failing in this, it is said, that he is considering the proposition of starting a moving picture house in the North End. Mr. North started the first moving picture house in Martins Ferry about eleven years ago, occupying at that time a small room in the Hobensack block on the corner of the alley between Third and Fourth streets.

WISCONSIN

Arrangements have been made whereby C. J. Deerr, a former proprietor of Beaver Dam, has secured a lease on the Grand theatre, and purchased its equipment and will reopen the place to Beaver Dam theatregoers early this month. The house is to be remodeled and newly decorated, while new and more modern machinery, scenery and seating accommodations will be installed. It is likely also that the name of the place will be changed.

ARTISTIC ELECTRIC ADVERTISING

This illustrates the front of "The Playhouse," Chicago's famous Michigan Avenue theatre. The owners of this beautiful amusement place wanted what YOU want. They wanted an advertising device that was dignified, handsome, and in keeping with the theatre luxurious appointments. On the other hand, the advertising must be striking and appealing to the passing crowd.

They had us make the rich, competing sign. We chose one of the landmarks of the famous boulevard. Its glowing, artistic letters, readable from any angle, attract the passerby day and night.

The top section is permanent, while the three lower lines have interchangeable letters for announcing any attraction.

We make many types of signs for picture theatres. Our catalog describes these. Give us a general idea of what you want, and we will gladly submit suggestions and prices. Address.

Jack Pickford has jumped to stardom in a remarkably short time by his ability to portray “youth.” He looks and acts it. He makes you and me and the whole American public dream again the dreams of our youth. The Pickford pictures are the kind that make your patrons come back for more. “The Varmint,” his latest and greatest production, is from Owen Johnson’s famous story of boyhood which created a sensation among the two million readers of the Saturday Evening Post.
The wonderful popularity of Burton Holmes is due to the fact that he has presented his pictures to the public in a different and original way. A lecture to most people has the terrors of an arithmetic lesson. Mr. Holmes has revolutionized "the great outdoor" films. Paramount-Burton Holmes Travel Pictures are "easy chair" journeys.

Mr. Holmes' costume in the illustration is that of the Bohemian peasant, worn only on gala occasions.

That Mr. Holmes' method of presentation is successful is evidenced by the fact that people have been paying—and gladly, too—$1.00 and $2.00 to see his pictures.

Master mind, genius, artist, the personification of directorship and founder of the Lasky School of Motion Picture Art. "Joan the Woman" is still in the minds of all—as an example of the heights to which the motion picture can ascend when in the hands of a master of his art. Mr. DeMille will produce a series of four great productions during the coming year for Artcraft release.
The name of Griffith is a magical one in the motion picture industry. It means super-production, limitless imagination and directorial genius. The man who conceived "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" will return soon from the European battle fronts where, under the auspices of the British War Office, he is recording for all time, the greatest struggle of the ages.
Elsie Ferguson

One of the most beautiful and talented actresses in the world. Since her earliest stage days she has always been a "box-office" attraction that could be counted on anywhere in the United States. My next production, which will be completed, early in August, bears the title of "THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS." It is a story dealing with the incidents which led up to the abdication of Nicholas, Czar of Russia. Primarily, however, it shows the power of one individual over the destiny of a nation, proving once more that genius directed toward evil will, in the end, bring forth but evil.

Rasputin, the peasant power behind the throne, was directly responsible by his misdeeds for his own death and the fall of the Romanoff Dynasty.

Iliodor, a Priest of the Greek Catholic Church, has recited to the world his version of the intrigues of the Russian court in which Rasputin played the principal role.

This strange young Priest set himself up against Rasputin in an effort to overthrow him and gain for himself the high place at court which the peasant held. Rasputin, however, was far the greater genius of the two, and Iliodor found himself entangled in a web of circumstances which ended in his being unfrocked by the Greek Catholic Church and exiled to America. Iliodor will play himself in this actual reproduction of recent Russian history.

It is hard to believe that such a disgraceful condition of affairs as we are picturing could exist in any government of today; but that the main facts in "THE FALL OF THE ROMANOFFS" are true can be verified by reading the recent books of the historians, who have set down the incidents leading up to the Russian Revolution and the formation of the present Republic.

Austin Strong and George Edwardes Hall have dramatized this remarkable story into a photoplay and, following the example of Alexandre Dumas and Sir Walter Scott, blended fact with fiction. As a result I am now producing the most extraordinary photodrama of my career.

Mr. Brennon is personally directing this production by special arrangement with Mr. Lewis J. Selznick and the Hubert Brennon Film Corporation.
Goldwyn Announces Its First Four Releases

In the news columns of the motion picture trade papers of this issue Goldwyn makes known the titles and release dates of its first four productions, beginning September 9.

Goldwyn’s period of talking and promising is ended. Pictures are taking the place of promises.

Beginning next week, in the trade press and in every section of the North American continent, we shall begin the exploitation and promotion of these remarkable Goldwyn productions by name on a scale never before attempted in this industry.

For eight months we have established a favorable and friendly atmosphere for Goldwyn Pictures. We have been fortunate enough to be believed both by the public and the exhibitors.

A world-wide audience is now ready to fill the theatres of this and other lands when Goldwyn Pictures are the featured attractions in your theatres.
Marshall Field’s Maxim
Applied to Pictures

GOLDWYN, in the motion picture industry, is willing to abide by the maxim of the greatest merchant the world has ever known that "the customer is always right."

Throughout the United States and Canada Goldwyn's representatives are under instruction to keep faith with exhibitors; to live up to every promise; to sell Goldwyn Pictures squarely and honorably and to avoid attacking a competitor's pictures as a means of selling our own productions.

We know it is possible to build a great and enduring business in the motion picture industry, by introducing the high principles and practices of other industries—and we are proceeding on the assumption that great productions linked with exhibitor friendships are the most desirable assets a producer can possess.

Proof of the soundness of these policies is found in the fact that Goldwyn Pictures are being booked under contract—without argument or debate—by the most cautious and alert exhibitors in every part of the nation.

MUTUAL EXCHANGES STOCKED WITH SUMMER BUSINESS BUILDERS

SUMMER is here. Mutual Exchanges are stocked with vast libraries of just the sort of film subjects that are sought by open air theatres, air daring, and other houses seeking summer business builders. Among them may be mentioned series of five reelers starring such celebrities as Mary Miles Minter, Nan O'Neill, Marjorie Rambeau, William Russell and others of equal note. Shorter subjects featuring other popular favorites are also on hand.

Splendid Variety Offered.

Variety of the widest sort is offered by the film obtainable at any Mutual Exchange. One can obtain five reel feature subjects as well as the subjects all featuring some famous and popular star. Among this class of offerings are the Mary Miles Minter Series, the William Russell Series, the Marjorie Rambeau Series, etc. For the exhibitor desiring a shorter series Mutual Exchanges offer a two-subject series of Nance O'Neill Mutual Pictures. One can obtain two reel comedies of snap, action and ginger like the series of Strand Comedies starring Billie Rhodes and Jay Belasco. Still another ideal summer attraction is "The Great Stanley Secret," a continuing feature in two four-reelers. This production stars William Russell, Charlotte Burton, William Tabernash and Rhea Mitchell. Edward Sloman directed it.

Look Over the List.

A visit to the nearest Mutual Exchange will enable any exhibitor to look over a list of available attractions that in quality and drawing power are second to none. He is sure to find a great number of subjects that will enable him to win and hold business no matter what the weather. To insure securing the attractions he wants when he wants them, the wise exhibitor will make his reservations without delay.

Coming Empire Pictures

Very soon the first releases of the Empire All Star Corporation studios will be announced. These are the subjects chosen from the Charles Frohman stage successes—all of them proven attractions of real drawing power. In each a famous Frohman star is featured. Among those appearing in Empire Pictures already completed may be mentioned Ann McKee, Julia Sanderson and Olive Tell. Other stars made famous by Charles Frohman are Maude Adams, William Gillette and Billie Burke. See your nearest Mutual Exchange for further particulars, and reservations.

JACKIE SAUNDERS IN "BETTY BE GOOD" HAS TOM-BOY ROLE

JACKIE SAUNDERS is the star of the Mutual five reel feature released the week of July 10th. "Betty Be Good" is the title of the attraction. Will M. Ritchey wrote the story. Sherwood Mac Donald directed it. William Beckwitt is responsible for the photographic work. It affords Miss Saunders another opportunity to play the tom-boy—to romp about in the manner which has endeared her to photoplay patrons the country over.

A Notable Cast.

A notable cast supports Miss Saunders throughout the production. Included in it are such favorites as Arthur Shirley and Captain Leslie T. Peacocke. This is Captain Peacocke's first screen appearance in a long time, though he is known everywhere as a short story writer, poet and playwright of note. He interprets the role of Jackie's millionaire father, who is always cautioning her to "be good."

Betty in this instance is the daughter of one of the city's wealthiest families—a hoi-polloi, petted little rich girl possessed with a peculiar mania for getting into trouble no matter what she does. At the time the story opens the food question is playing an important part in the lives of both rich and poor, and bread riots are a not uncommon occurrence. The poor people hold Betty's father responsible for the high cost of living, since he heads one of the largest food product concerns in the city. Betty determined to do her part in relieving the sufferings of the poor, but when she raids a corner grocery and distributes it stock among the clamoring populace she is soundly scolded by her father and warned to "be good!" One adventure follows another, till Betty at length capitulates to the little god of love and promises a "sensible big 'usband to not only "love, honor and obey," but to also "be good."

Directed By Sherwood MacDonald.

"Betty Be Good" is directed by Sherwood MacDonald, the same man who produced previous offerings starring Miss Saunders. Bookings on the entire Jackie Saunders Series can now be made at any Mutual Exchange.

Next Minter Subject

"Melissa of the Hills," a story of a mountain feud, will be the next Mary Miles Minter picture released through Mutual Exchanges. It was written by Maibelle Helkes Justice, who is known to film fans everywhere as one of the most successful scenario writers of the day—an author responsible for the stories of many current film successes.

"BETTY BE GOOD"

"Photography and settings are good throughout. The offering is a wholesome, enjoyable one which will go well in any neighborhood house and will be liked by the whole family" says Motography in reviewing "A Bit of Kindling," a recent Jackie Saunders-Mutual Picture.

The breezy, wholesome, tom-boy personality of Jackie Saunders inspires a liking in everyone who witnesses her antics on the screen. The productions in which she appears, exhibitors concede, are the kind that appeal to the most exacting type of audiences. For bigger, better business at YOUR theatre, book the entire series of Saunders pictures. Make application at your nearest Mutual Exchange.

This Much is Certain Concerning Triangle

The future of TRIANGLE was never more assured than at present. A complete reorganization of producing plants has placed the production of pictures on an accurately scientific business basis. All waste will be eliminated—the entire cost of a production going into the picture itself—a plan not hitherto followed. High quality, however, will not be sacrificed.

FIRST—TRIANGLE productions will be made by the best directors that can be secured.

SECOND—Every completed picture will be passed upon by expert critics. Any picture not meeting the TRIANGLE standard will not be released on the TRIANGLE PROGRAM. This plan assures exhibitors of consistently high quality.

THIRD—There will be stars in future TRIANGLE productions as in the past. Every exhibitor knows that TRIANGLE has made more stars than any other motion picture company.

FOURTH—TRIANGLE will offer a most efficient service to exhibitors in helping them to advertise and promote TRIANGLE productions. Exhibitors will have three valuable assets in every TRIANGLE production—the star, the production and the service.

FIFTH—The TRIANGLE PROGRAM will be sold at equitable prices—each picture to be a valuable asset to any house.

We submit this proposition to every fair minded exhibitor in the country. Our success lies in the hands of exhibitors and with their cooperation we have no fears.

MR. EXHIBITOR, if our plan of doing business in a real business-like way appeals to you, we want to hear from you.

CHARLES HOYT

Won fame and fortune as the greatest of American playwrights. Every line in his comedies cause giggles—every situation makes for laughter. His name and his works will live forever!

THE SELIG COMPANY

Has selected the very best of the Charles Hoyt Farce Comedies and, under the personal supervision of William N. Selig, these comedies have been produced each in two reels. All the Hoyt flavor, Hoyt witticisms, and Hoyt plots have been carefully retained.

AN ALL-STAR CAST

The Hoyt Comedies are being enacted by an all-star cast of fun-makers headed by Wm. Fables, James Harris and dainty Amy Leah Dennis, the 16-year-old movie star. J. A. Richmond is the director in charge.

HOYT COMEDIES READY

The K. E. S. E. announces the following Hoyt Comedies are ready and willing to cash in for the wise Exhibitor: “A Hole in the Ground,” “A Brass Monkey,” “A Day and a Night,” “A Rag Baby,” “A Runaway Colt,” “A Dog in the Manger.”

AND IN CONCLUSION

And in conclusion, it might be again asserted that the biggest need in Movieland today is comedy. Good comedy is scarce! The people wish to laugh! Reviewers have been unanimous in praising Hoyt Comedies, produced by Selig. “They’ll make your patrons laugh” is the consensus of opinion.

THE SILENT WITNESS

The play on which this Foursquare super-feature is based was pronounced by the New York critics, during its Broadway run, to be the greatest dramatic triumph since "Madame X."

The picture is as great as the play—which put Otto Hauerbach in the front rank of dramatists.

A virile story, teeming with suspense, and having a climax that lifts an audience from its seats. A cast of stars, headed by GERTRUDE McCOY.

BRODSKY'S A Trip Thru China

An art motion-picture in an Oriental setting. Unique, colorful, stirring. The photoplay that got to the New York public as well as the critics; that won unreservedly. Can be released in its entirety as one big attraction, or as a travel series of one or two reels each week. For wide-awake State-Rights buyers and direct bookings.
I am prepared to purchase the New York State Rights for any worth-while feature approved by the Exhibitors Board of Trade of New York.

Every such feature will be released to all exhibitors in New York State at a fair price to all concerned.

The plan first provides for a deduction from the gross receipts of a percentage sufficient to pay the cost of distribution.

Then it provides for reimbursement of the cost of the picture.

ALL the moneys then remaining from the gross receipts will be refunded to the Exhibitors Board of Trade—to be rebated to the members in proportion to the respective amounts paid.

P. S.—I am preparing to introduce this same plan of distribution of worth-while features in every state throughout the country. I will be at the Chicago Convention (New York State exhibitors headquarters) prepared to discuss this proposition in detail.
Here's what the "Moving Picture World" and "Motion Picture News" said about Alice Howell in "Balloonatics"

The statement made by Ben Grimm where he says—
"If every Century Comedy offered State Rights purchases is as good as "BALLOONATICS" exchanges will be busy handling bookings."

The beauty of Mr. Grimm's statement is that all Century Comedies are as good and some better than "Balloonatics," and we ask all State Rights buyers to look at—

"Automaniacs" "Neptune's Naughty Daughter" "Alice of the Sawdust"

—and make their own comparisons. Every Century Comedy offered for State Rights sale MUST be more than a comedy feature—it must be a real comedy Production. For State Rights buyers we have a highly interesting and

“THE RANGE BOSS,” taken from the famous novel by Charles Alden Seltzer, is a thrilling story of the great West; in which a cowpuncher foils a plot to rob an Eastern girl of her holdings. He wins her admiration by his pluck and daring, and then her love.

“LAND of LONG SHADOWS,” written and directed by W. S. Van Dyke, depicts the rugged life of the Canadian Northwest. A trapper, wrongly accused of crime, refuses to surrender to the mounted police. Barricaded in his cabin he holds them at bay until after “the great event” happens to his wife.
The War and the Motion Picture

An opportunity—a new and great one—faces the industry.

It is highly necessary that we appreciate just what it means—to this country and to this industry.

The motion picture is about to be called into service—into the service of the country and of humanity—to fill new functions and prove its great and untapped powers.

The President, in a letter to William A. Brady, at once recognizes fully and fundamentally the influence of the picture and earnestly asks for its aid.

Mr. Brady has responded through the industry’s organization, namely, the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. A War Cooperation Committee of about one hundred prominent representatives of the industry has been created. Affiliated with the committee and formed to extend its work into the field is a National State Committee with one representative from each state in the Union.

To centralize the work of the War Cooperation Committee an Executive Committee has been appointed, consisting of three members from each of the five branches of the National Association.

* * * *

This Executive Committee will go to Washington on Wednesday, at the invitation of George Creel, Chairman of the Committee on Public Information, to confer with the Council of National Defense, which includes as members the Officers of the Cabinet, and also with the American Red Cross, the Food Conservation Board, the Shipping Board, headed respectively by H. P. Davidson, Herbert C. Hoover and Colonel Goethals.

A plan will be drawn up and immediately put into action. The plan may involve the appointment from the industry of one or more men whose services will be constantly at the call of the above departments of the Government, the Red Cross and of other departmental activities which may be called into being by the war.

This is a huge task. None of the above committee appointments are nominal ones. They mean work—for every man. For some men they mean all or a large share of their time—the same sacrifices that many others in other fields are cheerfully making today for their country and their principles.

For the whole industry the situation calls for effort, patriotism and a due measure of self-sacrifice.

The automobile industry has hurriedly placed its plants at the disposal of the Government. Great quantities of aeroplanes are to be rushed to completion; and it is positively known today that the success of this great effort will shorten the war and save thousands, perhaps millions, of lives.

The motion picture has also a huge and fundamental task to face; and instant action is also demanded.

The war has been prolonged through misinformation. It will be greatly shortened through the dissemination of correct information spread through neutral countries, to present the true facts about America’s participation and the (Continued on next page) n exhibitor calls our attention to the fact that a Grievance Committee was formed at its Chicago Convention last year. Prominent exhibitors and experienced League members were elected as members. Its function was to be the adjustment of just such wrangling within the League as has come acutely to the surface in New York, Chicago and elsewhere.

What of the Grievance Committee?

This Committee died on the day the convention closed, just as practically all of its activities died.

It will be just as well if no committees are appointed at all this year unless a permanent organization is effected so that they be maintained.

A permanent organization demands: a just president who shall be a leader in fact as well as in name and above all a man who has no motive whatsoever to subsidize the League to any trade enterprise with which he is connected; secondly, an executive committee of power and responsibility; and thirdly, hired executives able to make and maintain an organization and to advance and protect its interests.

Better call this year's convention a social gathering and let it go at that—unless a permanent and independent and business organization is effected.

Our Country versus Funkhouser

ight in the face of President Wilson's definite call upon the motion picture and just as the picture industry is hastening to unify and lend its complete machinery to the Government to stimulate the fires of patriotism, to inform the World of America's great effort for liberty—Funkhouser of Chicago says no!

Straight in the path of a great propaganda movement, utilizing what the President styles the one "universal language" to spread the truth and shorten the war for humanity's sake and for liberty's sake Funkhouser, a local magnate, obtrudes the stupid foot and imbecile mind of censorship.

One of the first combined efforts of the Government and the industry will be to make dramatic pictures to rouse the nation's resources in men, money and materials.

"The Little American" with Mary Pickford is just such a picture. It was made for patriotism, to stimulate recruiting for the American Army and Navy. It is probably as successful a type of picture in this respect as could be made; picture enterprises foresaw the need of such a picture and it is even now released while the demand for it is at its height. The Chicago Examiner characterizes the production as "one of those instances where the stage joins pictorially in the chorus of virile Americanism with millions of other patriots in vocal or written speech, in music or the drama."

But Funkhouser, Chicago Censor, bars "The Little American" from Chicago theatres on the groundsthat there are parts of the play that might be construed as offensive to our German-American citizens.

There are many bitter things that anyone might say about Funkhouser. This is an occasion where words fail. We have not the slightest doubt that "The Little American" will be shown in Chicago to as many citizens of a free country as want to see it.

But what of censorship?

How much longer will the intelligent public tolerate this agent of intolerance and imbecility?

The Picture Theatre a Public Forum

The history of the four-minute men is, briefly, this:

A number of politicians saw an opportunity, through the war, to organize a splendid junketing trip from Coast to Coast. It was necessary, they said, for trained orators like themselves, to rouse the people. The junket would cost about $2,000,000.

The President disagreed. Perhaps he thought the people already knew more about the war than the politicians; and undoubtedly there were other needs for the large appropriation asked for. The counter-plan was evolved at Washington of having Community Speakers address the public through motion picture theatres.

These Community Speakers are already at work. Very shortly they will be talking simultaneously to several million people a day. They are giving a new dignity and usefulness to the picture theatre—namely, that of a public forum wherein the largest number of the population may be reached at once upon questions of the hour and day.

strength and preparation of the allied forces, and to offset the poisonous effect of the enemy propaganda now widespread throughout these countries—correct information sent broadcast throughout our own country telling what the Government is doing, why it is being done, and the help that must be had from every individual and every enterprise.

The motion picture is the most powerful medium today—in many most important ways—the only medium for the dissemination of these vital messages.

And the President knows this.

eneath his letter there are many concrete facts that don't appear in its lines—the pressing need today for informative films in Russia to talk to millions of its populations beyond the reach of our commissions and indeed all our avenues of constructive communication—the need of propaganda films in misinformed Scandinavia and Holland—the need of films to tell our millions how to conserve their food, what the army needs, what the navy needs, why ships must be built—the needs of the American Red Cross, with its army of ten million workers and its vital mission on the battle fields.

These are weighty problems. The motion picture can solve them, and in so doing not only fulfill its plain patriotic duty, but stamp itself forever as the one great universal language, powerful in war and in peace, necessary to the advance of civilization and altogether too great a world's factor to be hampered by outrageous censorship and ignorant legislation.

Motion pictures can solve these problems provided every man concerned with their making and their circulation does his evident duty.

Manufacturers and exchanges may be called upon, as with other industries, to lend their machinery to the critical demands of the situation.

We feel that every exhibitor will also cheerfully do his bit in seeing that the country's pressing propaganda reaches its people.

Creel Confers With N.A. M. P. I. for Giant Film Drive

Committee Appointed to Work with Every Branch of Government—Propaganda Will Stifle Efforts of Germany to Poison Minds of Neutrals—To Arouse America's Patriotism—All Government's Resources at Disposal of Picture Men

A T last the government and the motion picture theatres of the United States are to be linked together in what will probably be the greatest propaganda in history. It will be greater even than the poisonous campaign of the German government; in fact, one of its chief purposes will be to defeat the ends of the German propaganda. Equally great, it is hoped, will be its influence upon the minds of the American people, for it is intended to arouse in them real nationalism and patriotism—an actual feeling to be based upon the knowledge of the aims of their government.

The first step in this movement was the letter from President Wilson to William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, asking his help in mobilizing the picture forces of the country. The second step was the complete organization into working committees of the association, which occurred last week.

Close on the heels of this move was a visit by George Creel, chairman of the Public Committee on Information, to the association's rooms, which took place last Friday.

The meeting occupied a large portion of Friday morning. Ways and means to secure fullest co-operation between various branches of the government and the film business were discussed at length.

It was indicated that the executive committee of the national association's war-cooperation committee would go to Washington Wednesday, July 11, and discuss with Cabinet officers, the Red Cross, represented by H. F. Davidson; the Food Conse-vation Board, represented by Herbert A. Asher is chairman; and the Shipping Board, of which Col. George Goethals is chairman, the most feasible and logical plans for putting the resources of the nation at the disposal of the picture men.

Two important points yet to be thrashed out are the exact nature and the distribution of the pictures. For pictorial purposes it is essential that the films be propaganda; yet, in order that the Red Cross may benefit, it is essential that the pictures be valuable enough to the exhibitor that he will willingly pay a fair price for them. This matter is further complicated by the fact that the Red Cross, which is one of the most thoroughly organized bodies in the country, already has a motion picture department.

The executive committee which goes to Washington Wednesday for the conference with the nation's heads comprises the following men:

Representing Producers' Branch Committee—Adolph Zukor, William L. Sherrill, Arthur Greer, James F. GPU.

Representing Exhibitors' Branch Committee—Lee A. Ochs, Louis F. Blumenthal, L. L. Lewis.

Representing Supply and Equipment Branch Committee—J. E. Brulatour, Walter J. Moore, J. H. Hallberg.

Representing General Division—William A. Johnson, Motion Picture News; John Wyles of the M. P. World; Arthur James, Associated Press, Jr. W. A. Johnson's offices.

From this committee will be appointed men each of whose duty will be to co-operate with whatever governmental branch he is assigned to. Together they will represent the committee of the whole.

In addition to the war co-operation committee, which comprises one hundred motion picture executives, a national committee has been appointed, comprising one man in each state, who will work in co-operation with the executive committee.

The list of names comprising this committee is given in the accompanying chart.

Mr. Creel agreed that the plan may involve the appointment of cameramen in each governmental branch. It is likely that this will be done soon.

The army has already commissioned a number of cameramen as lieutenants in the Signal Corps Division, with a yearly salary of $1,800. The arrangements made by the navy are different. Therepermits have been given to make pictures.

In order that the news of the government, at home and in the field, could be conducted at highest speed and efficiency to the public, Mr. Creel appointed the following men as a News Reel Committee, who will take charge of this important work:

The National Association will direct the work of the "Four Minute Men," who are being selected in various communities to speak from the stage.

One of the most important tasks of the War Co-operation Committee is that of establishing the American viewpoint in neutral countries which have been and are now being poisoned by German propagandists. An unprecedented effort will be made to correct the anti-American sentiment prevailing in those countries.

A working basis is to be effected with the Red Cross motion picture bureau, which at present is in Chicago under the supervision of Mr. Evans. Mr. Evans will have complete co-operation of the committee.

Much was said at the Friday meeting of the splendid work that the Red Cross workers are doing. As an indication of this (Continued on page 374)
THESE MEN HAVE BEEN CALLED TO ARMS

War co-operation which will work in conjunction with George Creel and other heads of Government's departments to arouse America's patriotism through films, and whose second duty is to stifle the poisonous German propaganda in neutral countries.

Rosy Prospects for Record-Breaking Convention

With the Last Haul of the Red Cross

EVERYBODY is toeing the mark in Chicago to get off for a good start on the seventh national convention and exposition of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America due Mrs. Shindler to be at the Coliseum the coming Saturday and continue for one week, until July 21. Manager Shindler is making his last haul of the nets for space rentals at the exposition and judging from what is already in, in the way of contracts, things look rosy. "Mid-exposition, stacks of letters from exhibitor organizations all over the country that have come into the convention headquarters in the Masonic Building are also the assurance that the convention will be attended by a record-breaking number of delegates and should be an epochal one in the history of the league.

The list of space holders on the exposition floor given out last week shows the following assured representation: New York: Pathe Film Company; Nicholas Power Company; World Film Corporation; Selsnick Pictures Corporation; Typhon Fan Company; Pathe Fan Company; Universal Film Company; Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; Fox Film Company; and Paramount Pictures Company; Metro Pictures Service; Motion Picture News; Moving Picture World; Morning Telegraph; Exhibitor's Trade Review. Chicago shows the following: J. P. Seeburg; Arcus Ticket Company; Mr. and Mrs. Pass Theatre Supply Company; Van Dyle Amusement Company; United Theatre Equipment Company; Mutual Film Company; and National Automatic Door Check Company; Cahill Igoe Company; Enterprise Optical Company; Bohn Amusement Company; Marquette Piano Company; K. E. S. E. Film Company; Hump Hairpin Company; Sunshine Film Company; Hamburger Company; A. L. Randall & Company; Tom Phillips; Photograp; Chicago Herald; Chicago Daily Illinois Publishing Company; Reel Fellows Club; American Theatrical Hospital Association; American Red Cross and Chicago Journal. The National Carbon Company of Cleveland and the Westinghouse Electric Company of East Pittsburgh are among the outside towns to sign up.

The Red Cross booth will be a central and attractive spot next week. The male and female stars of the motion picture world are being appealed to send little articles or photographs which will be put on the "fans" for the benefit of the Cross. Many have responded and quite a few are to be heard from yet. Some of the pillars of Chicago society will be in charge of the Red Cross booth. They are: Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Ryerson; Mrs. Charles G. King, Mrs. William P. Nelson, Mrs. Fletcher Dobyns, Mrs. William P. Martin, Mrs. Orville Babcock and Mrs. George McLaughlin. Mrs. George A. McKinlock will be chairman.

In the effort to meet the demands of the thousands of the public that will visit the exposition, the presence of their favorite film stars in the flesh, Manager Shindler is rapidly getting assurances from the different companies that their particular screen luminaries will be on hand. It is rumored that several days for greeting and meeting the various stars.

The opening day will be Goldwyn Day, with Mac Marsh heading the list of stars from this company. Sunday, July 15, will be Pathe Day, with Pearl White, Florence Reed and probably Mrs. Vernon Castle. Monday will be Selsnick Day, with Lillian Walker, Anita King and the Talmadge Sisters promised. Tuesday will be Butterfly Day, with Violet Comer and other Universal stars expected. Wednesday will be World-Brady Day, with Alice Brady, June Elvidge and Ethel Clayton promised. Thursday is K. E. S. E. Day, with Bryant Washburn, Mary McAlister, Hazel Daly, Taylor Holmes, Marguerite Clayton, Shirley May, Ernest Mopin and Ellen Paule assured. Friday is to be Art Dramas Day, with Alma Hanlon and Jean Sothern. Mutual Day, it is hoped, will bring Charley Chaplin, Mary Miles Minter and Helen Holmes. Metro Day on Sunday, the last day, gives promises of Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne, Edith Storey and others.

Rose Tapley, of Vitagraph, has been selected as hostess for these different star days.

Frank R. Abram Not in Camera-graph, Says Notice

Announcement from the Camera-graph Film Manufacturing Company, Inc., of 1431 Broadway, New York, states that Frank R. Abrams has severed all connection with the company.

The statement is made that Mr. Abrams is replaced both as president and as general manager by J. P. Fitzsimmons, many years in the photographic field.

Stanley V. Mastbaum Takes Vacation

Stanley V. Mastbaum, of Philadelphia, has left for the Canadian wilds for a hunting and fishing trip. He expects to remain for the month of July. It is the first vacation Mr. Mastbaum has had since the summer of 1913.

Mr. Mastbaum is now booking 106 theatres and besides this has manifold interests in the amusement industry.

Slogan "Keep Business Going" During War

Cincinnati Exchange Man Urges "Stiff Upper Lip" Attitude—Criticizes Chicago Theatre Men Who Threaten Closing Doors During Summer

In a letter to Charles E. Moyer, head of the Paramount publicity department, J. Maurice Ridge, publicity manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Inc., distributors of Paramount pictures in Cincinnati, and vicinity, in commenting on a recent report recently published in Motion Picture News, urged that "Keep Business Going" be adopted as a watchword in these war times.

In part Mr. Ridge wrote:

"In the June 2 issue of Motion Picture News there appears a story stating that the Chicago theatres are contemplating closing their doors during the summer months. We feel like saying to Mr. Joseph Hopp, president of the Chicago Motion Picture Exhibitors League: "In your land and my land, your flag and my flag "floats over the land of the free and the brave" because your fathers "Did Their Bit." "To-day, whether the message has reached your heart and my heart, the fact remains that your land and my land may forfeit these cherished institutions, unless you and I as individuals "Do Our Bit." "Keep Business Going" is a patriotic slogan. Keep money in circulation. Keep employment for everybody. Keep wages good. Keep on making money that we may have money to spend for war sacrifices. Keep your theatres going, that people may keep their minds sweet, so as to better withstand the sacrifices war makes on all of us.

"Your duty and my duty may not be on the firing line; it may not be on the battlefields, but certainly it is to help keep this nation financially prosperous. We cannot do this by keeping our doors closed; by following the lines of least resistance and letting our employees become "driftwood," during the laggard summer days. "Our duty lies clearly before us. The worst thing that could happen to the world these days would be a business depression in this country."
SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST CHICAGO OPERATORS

Local 110 of I. A. T. S. E. and Local 157 of Operators' Union Accused of Acts of Intimidation—Injunction Granted to Bar Picketing of Film Offices

Charges were made last Wednesday in Chicago against all of the motion picture operators of that city who are affiliated with Local No. 110 of the I. A. T. S. E. and Local No. 157 of the Motion Picture Operator's Union that they have instituted a reign of terror and started incendiary fires in their efforts to coerce film exchange employees and managers to recognize their union and not to unionize. The charges were made by Lewis F. Jacobson, an attorney for six exchange offices of the city, whose managers are members of the Associated Film Producers, Manufacturers and Distributors of Chicago. The petition was filed in the Superior Court and injunction was asked to enjoin union members from picketing the film companies' offices. Judge Jesse Baldwin granted the injunction.

The film companies signing the injunction application were: World Film, K. E. S. E., Fox Film Company, General Film Company, Bluebird Company, Famous Players Film Service, Metro Pictures Service, Mutual Film Corporation, Laemmle Film Company, and Western Film Company, and the general officers of Film Players Company, Central Film Company, V. L. E. S. Company, Universal Company, Lewis J. Selznick Productions, Aircraft Corporation, and Van Dyke (Art Dramas) Service.

The local officials and officers enjoined were: Local No. 110, National Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators of the United States and Canada; Joseph P. Armstrong, president; F. Clifford, vice-president; Hall Johnston, secretary and treasurer; Herman Mintz, recording secretary; T. E. Maloy, business manager, and Fred Hamill, Ben Hennaberg, Arthur Lyons and Herbert Langenbacher, members of the executive board.

Peter Coffin, business agent of a voluntary organization known as Local Union Inspectors of Chicago; Lillian Roller, president; Elsie Lester, recording secretary. This body is affiliated with Local No. 110. Local No. 134 of International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Henry Gussenberger, Frank Gussenberger, Walter Galvin, Patrick King (alias Patty King), James Hood, assistant business agents of Local No. 157; William Finsted, Effie Tyler, Julia Franks, Elsie Stockhausen, Frank E. Miller, William Rooney and Edwin Woodward, known members of local.

All members of Local No. 137 of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers.

Affidavits are presented accusing Hall Johnston of saying that "a stick of dynamite would be a good thing for the Metro offices."

The petition asserts the petitioners' annual losses are more than $100,000; that the local investment is $5,000,000; that films are worth as much as $500,000; and that films distributed daily are valued at $200,000.

The film companies allege all their property, which they refer to as "fragile," and state that they have established a closed shop for inspectors. This is asserted would place their employees under the union control so that films could be ruined at will by unscrupulous operators.

The following theatres are mentioned as having been the objects of alleged dynamiting attempts on the part of the unions during 1915 and 1916:

Pine Grove, Boulevard, Rosewood, Corrado, Vitagraph, Biograph, Strand, Vision, Argyle, Palace, Royal.

Mack Sennett Jumps Into Harness for Paramount

Mack Sennett, under contract to produce two-reel comedies, one every two weeks, for release by Paramount, left for California July 6 to begin work at once at Endendale, his new comedies will be called Paramount-Mack Sennett productions.

As he took the train Mr. Sennett said: "I have just been talking over plans for our future productions with Mr. Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky, and Mr. Abrams, president of Paramount, and they sound good to me. With an organization like that behind me, I am going to be able to put over the best stuff that I have ever done in my life. The field of comedy has only been scratched so far, and there are a whole lot of new things up my sleeve that are going to prove startling innovations when we start work at Endendale.

"My organization out there is intact, and I know that the boys will jump into the work of producing these new comedies with unlimited enthusiasm. When one becomes part of so vast an organization as the Famous Players-Lasky concern is at the present time and finds himself associated with the biggest men in the business, it is inevitable that he should tackle his work with new enthusiasm and with a determination to surpass every previous effort. That is the spirit in which I am going back to California, and I can faithfully promise that these new comedies will be the best that I have ever done."

Branch for Variety in Syracuse

The Variety Films Corporation, New York City, will open an office in Syracuse, N. Y., for the handling of subjects in the independent field. I. J. Schmertz recently went upstate to complete arrangements for the new branch of the company.

The purpose of opening the office is to enable independent manufacturers who have one or two features and are unable to stand the overhead expenses of an office to turn their productions over to a company for booking in the upper part of New York state.

Wallace Reid to be "Opposite" Farrar for Artcraft

Wallace Reid, the Lasky film star, as was thought likely, has been selected to again appear opposite Geraldine Farrar in her forthcoming Artcraft Picture on which work will be commenced shortly.

Central Railroad of N. J. Teaches Safety by Motion Pictures

The Central Railroad of New Jersey is going into film propaganda in no uncertain way. The railroad has a working company on a picture entitled "The Rule of Reason," directed by Charles Davenport, well known as a feature producer. Marcus A. D'Arcy, general superintendent of the road, is author of the scenario.

The picture is a part of the road's campaign to teach employees to refrain from careless parties and increase the safety of the system. The Central now has two lecture cars which hold the show and the audience and travel over the lines.

Mr. Dow brings into play every department of railroad work. He carries special instructors for the benefit of the actors. C. D. Schaaf, a well-known railroad expert, showed the performers how to open and close brakes and couplings, insuring realism in their work. Felix Guyette, the road's photographic expert, was assigned to Irving Rubinstein, who used his Bell and Howell outfits.

"The Rule of Reason" has a dramatic plot of noteworthy merit, quite fit for theatre release. The Central believes as much in the entertainment value of the films as in their technical usefulness.

Paralta to Release Through Triangle Distributing Corp.

PARALTA, the picture corporation whose organization was announced through these columns a number of months ago, will release all of its pictures through the Triangle Distributing Corporation. The deal was brought about after several days' conferences between Mr. A. Lynch, president of the Triangle Distributing Corporation and Carl Anderson, president of the Paralta Plays, Inc.

The arrangement between Paralta and Triangle is purely and simply a working arrangement. Officials of both companies desire to have it made clear that the deal is in no sense an amalgamation or an absorption.

Under the contracts Paralta Plays, Inc., and the J. Warren Kerrigan and the Bessie Barriscale Feature Corporations in no way lose their identity and they are in no way amalgamated, absorbed or taken over by the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

The Triangle Distributing Company's relations with the Paralta Plays Corporations are simply and solely that of distributors of their productions on a special defined policy of distribution, which will prove very advantageous to every exhibitor showing Paralta Plays.

No changes will be made in Paralta's production plans. Eight big photodramas a year will be produced by both Mr. Kerrigan and Miss Barriscale, making sixteen a year to be sold under the Paralta Plan, which gives an exhibitor full control of the exhibition of Paralta pictures in his exclusive exhibiting district for one year.

Paralta now has in the hands of its scenario writers, eight stories written by well-known authors. A selection from these will be put in production the moment Mr. Kerrigan's "A Man's Man," and Miss Barriscale's "Rose O'Paradise" are assembled, cut and titled.

The editing of Paralta films is done by a board and not by an individual. Paralta stories are not tolled in fixed lengths. A story is given only such length of film as its interest and actual dramatic action justifies. In editing all that is vital to the telling of the story may be retained. Whatever is inconsequential may be cut out as there is no requirement of specific length to make retention necessary.

Speaking of the affiliation of the Triangle distributing interests with Paralta, a prominent Triangle official said, "We are much pleased over the establishment of our relations with Paralta. This organization is made up of business men who take picture production seriously. Their work is based on an idea which might be called reformatory of some conditions prevailing in distribution and exhibition.

"We believe that in the next few months, our booking interests will bring about a situation which will greatly improve conditions in the field of picture exhibition, but such things cannot be hurried. Reformative, or Booking Corporation, $125,000, Lynn S. revolutionary in business can be more effectively put into force by the slow process of absorption and adjustment. I regard our arrangement with Paralta as one of the most important we have made since the reorganization of the Triangle Distributing Corporation. We shall not only supply exhibitors with the regular Triangle program releases, but we shall also be able to provide them with sixteen great star Paralta productions each year, under the remarkably attractive conditions of the Paralta Plan."

Carl Anderson, president of the Paralta corporation, said that the high standard in productions and the high efficiency in distribution which Triangle had always displayed, had been the big factor in his decision to identify Paralta with the Triangle distributing interests. Together with Mr. Lynch's sympathy, with any national business plan which will give the exhibitor in future more for his dollar than he has received in the past.

Mr. Anderson further said that the aim of Triangle and Paralta would be to give the exhibitor the greatest attractions, show him how to develop their exhibiting possibilities to the utmost, and aid him in every way to cut down costs and get his profits up to a basis which will make him feel like a real factor in the fifth largest industry in the United States.

Peggy Hyland Bubbling with Praise of "Persuasive Peggy"

Peggy Hyland, Mayfair star, in an interview yesterday, spoke with enthusiasm of the near release of her first production, "Persuasive Peggy."

She explained the story had first appealed to her in book form. The cast had been chosen, she said, because of fitness to the roles created. Every detail was given the greatest attention and her every request and suggestion was put into immediate execution.

Miss Hyland feels that the correspondence she has enjoyed with her fans has given her great insight into the likes and dislikes of the public. Every scene in this picture, whether she appeared in it or not received her attention, and everyone concerned, from those in the cast to the scene shifters, worked in complete harmony.

It is her earnest hope that the friends who have been so generous in their praise of her former efforts will be pleased by this production—the realization of her her hopes and ambitions. She says it is a refreshing story, teeming with love and romance, and set against backgrounds breathing the spirit of the great out-of-doors.

The fact that it pleases Miss Hyland speaks for itself. She is described as the most severe critic imaginable—particularly when viewing her own work.

General Film's Sales Manager on Countrywide Tour

For the purpose of inspection and extension of the activities of branches, General Film's sales manager, Sidney R. Kent, has started on a tour of southern and western offices. His trip will require a month to complete, and during it a number of important matters are to be taken up with exhibitors as well as with exchange managers.

The tour is necessary because of the increase in the bulk of General Film’s production and the increase in the proportion of sales. The application of General Film’s new merchandising policies is to be completed during this visit, one of which includes improving the contact of branch officers with the exhibitor.

Mr. Kent will make these cities before he returns to New York, in the order named: Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, Omaha, Kansas City, St. Louis, Dallas, New Orleans, Atlanta, Washington, Philadelphia.

Balshofer Advocates “Fewer Pictures—Longer Runs”

Fewer pictures and longer runs, a platform that Motion Picture News has long advocated, has a strong champion in Fred J. Balshofer, president and general manager of the Yorke-Metro.

An old rule of successful advertising is that constant pounding on a subject is better than a few daily blasts,” said Mr. Balshofer last week in discussing the topic.

“This might be applied to the motion pictures in the advertising and showing of a certain picture over a long period of time, as compared with a single showing, or a run of but a few days.

“The motion picture producers are doing, or should be doing, their utmost to produce pictures which are worthy of long runs, and if sufficient pictures of this class are made, it is up to the exhibitor to profit by the opportunity of continued advertising, and cash in on the value of repeated advertising every day throughout the week.

“We have heard talk for a long time about fewer and better pictures, and the result has been that we have now plenty of good pictures available to every exhibitor, which are worthy of showing more than a few days.

“Viewing the matter from the production angle, my feelings are these: after we have spent a sum of money in preparing the story, and six or eight weeks more in staging the production, if the result is not worthy of a full run in every house in which it is shown, I should prefer to turn to digging and let Harold Lockwood join the army.

Hoover Thanks Motion Picture Industry’s Heads

William A. Brady presented a letter from Herbert Hoover, Food Administrator, at a special meeting of the executive committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry.

Mr. Hoover designated the National Association and the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., as official motion picture avenues of publicity for patriotic propaganda in behalf of the food administration during the war. The letter says:

“The offer of picture motion co-operation is accepted with thanks. The promptness with which the National Association has responded to aid its country’s needs makes its action doubly valuable. No medium is better able than the screen to undertake the work of informing the public of the country’s needs, and I assure you of my very great appreciation of your loyal service.

Arthur S. Friend, J. Robert Rubin and Frederick H. Elliott were named to confer with Lieutenant-Governor Edward Sooneck, State Senator J. Henry Walters, Colonel Wright and Chaplain Chouinard in Syracuse. This is to arrange for moving pictures for the 8,000 regular army soldiers stationed at the State Fair grounds, Syracuse.

Present at the meeting with Mr. Brady were Walter W. Irwin, Arthur S. Friend, P. A. Powers, William L. Sherrill, J. E. Brutatour, Arthur James, Louis L. Levine, Louis F. Blumenthal and Frederick H. Elliott.
Present League President Is Incompetent, Says Trigger

"Choose a Man Who Can Get His Heels in the Ground and March Forward to a Solid Position," Says Trigger—Approves Electing a Man from South or West—"Must Have a Man Who Will not Meddle with Petty Politics"

IN a stirring letter addressed to the exhibitors of America, particularly those who will attend the Chicago Convention, Samuel H. Trigger, president of Manhattan Local No. 1, of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, emphasizes the imperative need of a broad-minded, long-visioned man for national president.

Mr. Trigger points out the need of a man who will lead the league through the chaos which at present surrounds it. He hopes that the delegates will vote thoughtfully and carefully, with the especial aim of selecting a man who can be relied upon and trusted implicitly.

The most emphatic point brought out in Mr. Trigger's letter is the utter incompetency of the present incumbent.

Mr. Trigger's letter follows in full:

Editor, Motion Picture News:

Dear Sir—I have received numerous letters inquiring as to my position on the presidential election at the coming convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Can only reiterate my statement made in the trade journals two months ago, "for president of this organization we must have a clean-cut man who is not involved in any petty league politics."

He must remember that the organization is permanent, and that it does not exist solely for the good of the individual. He must have qualities for leadership; that requires strength, stability, and he must be a man of vision, one that can lead by the confidence of rightness.

This is a time when great things are to be done and we want a MAN to do them. There are too many such exhibitors who will be at the convention in Chicago. I would advise for the betterment of the league to consider the candidates carefully and, when voting, cast the vote for the man with the above qualifications.

At the present time we are suffering from too much regulation. Those that are in the field for president are Fred. Harrington, Pittsburgh; H. B. Varner, North Carolina; Lee A. Ochs, New York; Rogers, Minnesota; Frank J. Rembusch, Indiana, and one or two others.

Fellow exhibitors, kindly choose the man that is upright, generous in instincts, one that can get his heels in the ground and march forward to a solid position at the head of a bigger and better organization; and I ask the young exhibitors to help and by self-sacrifice to take up the management of the local, state and national league, for under no other condition will our organization survive.

My personal opinion is that if we can secure a man from the West or South to fill the responsible office of president, it would be most advisable to do so, AS THE PRESENT INCUMBENT HAS PROVEN HIMSELF TO BE ANYTHING BUT THE MAN REQUIRED TO MAKE THE MOTION PICTURE EXHIBITORS' LEAGUE OF AMERICA THE POWER FOR USEFULNESS TO THE EXHIBITORS OF THE COUNTRY THAT IT SHOULD BE.

Yours very truly,

SAM. H. TRIGGER.

John R. Freuler Is Again Mutual's President

John R. Freuler was re-elected president of the Mutual Film Corporation at the annual meeting of the board of directors held at the concern's offices at 220 South State street in Chicago, Tuesday, June 26. This is Mr. Freuler's third term as president of the Mutual, which now ranks as perhaps the largest of the motion picture concerns, having a total releasing output of approximately a million feet of films a week.

"The Mutual will be devoted to a policy which includes the release of two important feature productions a week, beginning in the early autumn," was Mr. Freuler's announcement.

"The Mutual is also committed absolutely to its policy of "big stars only." The star is a permanent institution in the motion picture industry and will continue to be a dominant factor in production.

"Our exhibitors declare: Dr. Elmer A. Himself of South Bend, Indiana, first vice-president; Crawford Livingston, New York, second vice-president; Samuel S. Hutchinson, Chicago, treasurer; and Samuel M. Field, Wilmette, secretary.

"Report that the Mutual Film Corporation is to remove its home offices from Chicago, returning to New York, was officially denied.

His General Film Sales Win Him Promotion

Tyson's Keep Several Irons in the War Fire

To just what extent an exhibitor can indulge in the war activities which are buzzing about all our ears is plainly shown in a letter from W. T. Tyson, manager of the Strand theatre, Valdosta, Ga. The letter follows:

Motion Picture News.

New York City.

Gentlemen:

We note that you are giving publicity to the part the moving picture industry is playing in the war.

We take pleasure in informing you that the junior member, W. T. Tyson, of Tyson Brothers, is a volunteer member of the Field Artillery of the United States Army, having enlisted last month.

We are doing our share in subscribing to Liberty bonds and Red Cross funds and placing our screen and house at the disposal of patriotic organizations and the army and navy recruiting stations.

We will open our Valdosta theatre some time in September and, pardon us, it will be a classy little house.

Art Dramas Claim Priority in Abolishing Advance Deposit

From the Art Dramas office has come the positive assertion that despite all of the credit that is being given to others, Charles Streimer was the first to discard the advance deposit.

Mr. Streimer, who is manager of Modern Feature Photoplays, Inc., New York distributors for Art Dramas subjects, claims to have abolished the deposit system as far back as February. A notice of this event, he declares, was published in one of the film trade journals on February 24, the headline being "Streimer Sets Example in Abolishing Deposits."

Almost immediately after this announcement appeared, says Mr. Streimer, K-E-S-E, Triangle and others followed with similar announcements.

"It is something," said Mr. Streimer, "to have sponsored a movement which has so clearly-and so completely worked for the good of both producer and exhibitor, and I admit that I am pleased with the results it has brought about."
Pennsylvania Censors Again Wield the Cudgel

They Deleted Are Read from Are Helpless and Indignant

The Pennsylvania live-wire board of censorship is at it again. They refuse to allow any one to "put anything over" on them.

A few weeks ago they deleted several titles from "On Trial." The exhibitor who booked the picture, not to be outdone, had an actor to read the deleted titles from the screen.

This act highly offended the censorial gentlemen.

The affair is enlightened in a letter to the Philadelphia Famous Players Exchange office.

The letter, which needs no comment, is as follows:

MOTION PICTURE NEWS,

729 Seventh Avenue,

New York City, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

We are in receipt of the following letter from the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors which we think speaks for itself:

"This is to notify you that on and after the above date the following rule will be enforced in addition to the Rules and Standards already printed:

27. When an approval seal is issued following the agreement of the applicant, to make eliminations suggested by the board, it shall be issued subject to the condition that no exhibitor of the film shall, in exhibiting the same, produce any eliminated portion thereof by act, publication, utterance, or other means of communication."

This letter is the result of a picture which was shown at the leading Philadelphia

Fairbanks Goes to Yosemite to Get Two Scenes

Douglas Fairbanks has departed for the Yosemite Valley, where he will direct himself in two scenes of his next Artcraft play, the title of which has just been changed to "Down to Earth."

While he is securing these scenes, Director John Emerson will supervise the erection of some of the interior settings. These will be ready for Fairbanks upon his return to the Westcoast Artcraft Studio, and production will then be started on an episode that deals with society life.

Fairbanks was accompanied to the Yosemite Valley by his business manager, John Fairbanks, Victor Fleming, Glen McWilliam, Joseph Henaberry and James Hogan.

The Fairbanks party motored about three hundred miles to the foot of the mountain, that lead to Yosemite Valley. Picking the camera outfit, costumes and make-up boxes on six burros, they climbed to the top of a steep mountain rise and down the other side, until they arrived in the valley.

Screen Club to Hold "First Reel" at Casino, July 29

Screen Club members are making extensive preparations for the "First Reel," which is the name given to the first annual Screen Club entertainment to be held at the Casino Theatre, New York, on Sunday night, July 29.

Edward C. White, theatrical manager, is in full charge of the arrangements, working in conjunction with the Board of Governors and the Entertainment Committee.

An elaborate program includes the personal appearance of the most celebrated stars in the screen world. The Screen Club is fully alive to the wonderful possibilities the motion picture art offers for an entertainment of unusual qualities and is preparing to make their annual "Reel" an affair that will attract wide attention each season.

The Casino theatre was selected for the "First Reel" of the Screen Club, because of the large number of seats and the large seating capacity. The prices of the boxes are $30. All reserved seats will sell at $2.50.

Special committees in charge of talent, music, programs, etc., have been appointed and are at work. The program, edited and managed by Harold Z. Levine will contain a complete history of motion pictures from their inception to the present day and promise to set a new pace for souvenir programs. The entertainment will be followed by a reception cabaret and dance tendered by the Screen Club to the large number of artists, patrons and patronesses at the club house.

Billy Quirk, president of the Screen Club, will soon make a definite announcement of the program.

Emmy Wehlen and Company at Thousand Islands

William Christy Cabanne, co-author with June Mathis, and director of the forthcoming Metro wonderplay, "Miss Robinson Crusoe," in which Emmy Wehlen is starred, left with entire company for the Thousand Islands, where the exteriors of the forthcoming Metro wonderplay will be photographed.

The difficulties that beset J. R. Hunting- ton, business manager for Mr. Cabanne when he went to the islands to make arrangements to house the entire company at a well-known summer resort were many. It is a large company that is making this Metro wonderplay and they went away just at the holiday season.

"Miss Robinson Crusoe" is one of the most entertaining Metro wonderplays in which Emmy Wehlen has appeared. It is a modern society story. Her leading man in this production is Walter Miller, whose work in "The Slicker" established him as a Metro favorite. Others in support of Miss Wehlen are John Wray, Augustus Phillips, Sue Balfour, Gertrude Seldon, Ethel Hallor and many others equally well known.

E. A. Thurston is once more assisting Director William Christy Cabanne while the camera is in the capable hands of William Fildew. The company now in the Thousand Islands will be gone for about two weeks.
The Whole World "Seeing America" on the Screen

Department of Commerce Compiles Every Quarter of the World—Majority of Films Now Exhibited Everywhere Are of American Origin

The vogue of the motion picture in its spread to the far quarters of the globe has been more than a simple means of amusement. It has brought into closer contact the races of differing languages, those of climes which have no elements in common, and the peoples of widely divergent social customs, many of the countries which have been active in their production are already familiar places and the steady gains that have been made by the United States during the past five years toward the leadership in this industry have literally made it possible for the whole world to "see America" on a large scale while sitting in their own home towns.

In the early days of the movies—and that was less than a generation ago—American audiences grew enthusiastic over the French products that were then the Atlantic to reveal the wonders of this new art of the camera. Reports received from abroad furnish the information that Europe, Asia and Africa are now showing equal enthusiasm over the perfected American films. In a single month in 1916 out of 13,800 meters of film shown 11,000 were American. A recent report from a Continental country which was received by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce stated that even among the pictures that were of European origin there were reproductions of American subjects. From far-off Australia the Bureau hears that "films from well-known American companies are in general use." A Consular report from South Africa states that "interest in American family and political life has been marked."

According to the official statistical volume called "Commerce and Navigation," published by the Bureau, the exports of exposed films from manufacturers in the United States increased from 12,102,003 feet in the fiscal year 1913, to 158,751,786 feet in the fiscal year 1916, and that their value increased from $2,276,460 in the year ended June 30, 1916, to $6,757,685 in the year ended June 30, 1916. Exports to Europe were 17,762,429 feet, valued at $1,317,531, in 1915; 126,749,653 feet, valued at $4,831,866 in 1916; to North American countries 10,846,822 feet, valued at $795,544 in 1913, and 17,603,193 feet, valued at $1,070,823 in 1916; to South America 811,259 feet, valued at $39,629 in 1913, and 2,638,828 feet, valued at $120,007 in 1916; to Asia 700,418 feet, valued at $33,052 in 1913, and 3,336,997 feet, valued at $119,189 in 1916; to Oceania 1,992,000 feet, valued at $126,040 in 1913, and 8,380,999 feet, valued at $383,054 in 1916; and to Africa 9,000 feet, valued at $651 in 1913, and 42,706 feet, valued at $67,191 in 1916.

In the last few months about 100 reports have been received from American Consular officers in all parts of the world on motion picture films and on the stories of the amusement realms of all the other nations, are not lacking in tribute to the excellence of the products of the studios of the United States. Credit has been given for the quality attained to the natural conditions that have favored the sites of various American studios. American humor is winning marked appreciation. Most important of all, the world has learned something about America, and wants to learn more.

Unconfirmed Rumor that Blackton Leaves Vita. for Paramount

An apparently well-founded rumor spread about picture circles late Monday to the effect that Commodore J. Stuart Blackton, one of Vitagraph's founders, had left the company and will henceforth be associated with Paramount.

At the Paramount offices it was stated there was nothing definite to be given out. At Commodore Blackton's office at the Vitagraph Brooklyn studio, a statement was promised later in the week.

No further version of the story could be had, although players in Vitagraph admitted they had heard some such move on Commodore Blackton's part was forthcoming.

It will be the studied aim of the editors, Harry Emie and Patrick Kearney, to give the paper a new flavor if possible. Vol. 1, No. 1, will date next week.

"Four-Minute Men" to Speak in Movies for Food Conservation

Speakers Will Have Four Minutes to Tell Audiences of Nation's Need—Food Must Be Conserved

The "Four-Minute Men" are volunteers who cooperate with the motion picture theatres to widely disseminate Government information of importance in wartime.

Each "Four-Minute Man" has a talk to take four minutes—no more, no less. Without previous announcement he walks into a theatre and presents to the manager a slide to be flashed on the screen by way of introduction. Then the speech begins, and it is a simple story of the workers or exposed films and a screen picture of the waving flag.

The method was first used in a few cities in marketing the Liberty bonds. It was so successful the plan is to spread the "Four Minute Men" movement over the whole United States to preach the necessity of food conservation.

Herbert Hoover, food administrator, has prepared outlines of argument, suggested methods of approach and furnished all available information, but it is expected that each of the volunteer speakers will use his own method of presentation.

In Milwaukee the Wisconsin Defense League has cooperated with the Committee on Public Information, headed by George Creel, at Washington. Speakers have been selected and the charge of the "Four Minute Men" will begin this week. It is said because the speeches are so short both the audience and the theatre managers welcome the plan.

Helping the Red Cross

Seattle motion picture exhibitors helped wonderfully during "Interludes Week." Speakers were allowed in all of the big picture houses during each performance, and enthusiasm was created by slides and patriotic decorations.

At each theatre just beside the box offices Red Cross girls were stationed with barrels called, "mercy barrels," and each patron was asked to deposit his change before entering the theatre. A large sum was raised in this manner.

All the theatres made big contributions to the fund.

St. John, N. B., Convention Set for September 8-9

The motion picture convention, to be held in St. John, N. B., has been fixed for September 8 and 9. It is planned to make this a meeting that will attract many members to the league.

The presence of W. Stephen Bush, Rose Tapley and perhaps, Viola Dana will prove a drawing card.

Entertainment will be arranged by the St. John Exhibitors. Exchange men will be included in the plans.
In "Skinner's Baby" They Find, After All, It's a Girl

Following reported successes of "Skinner's Dress Suit" and "Skinner's Bubble," Essanay is shortly to release a third picture of this series, the title of which will be "Skinner's Baby." "Skinner's Baby," as the title indicates, introduces a new member of the famous family. The story takes up Skinner and Honey as they were left in the Bubble picture, and in the little suburb, the bungalow. They announce the new baby as William Manning Skinner, Jr., and then find—the old joke—that it is a girl.

Filming of "Skinner's Baby" will be completed within a few days and trade showings will be run at all branch offices of the Kleine-Edison-Selig-Essanay immediately afterward. The picture will be released August 6.

"Telling It to the Marines" Helps Manager Gates

Campaigns for enlistment in the marines have been used by Manager Charles Gates of Whitehouse, Chicagos, to stimulate the Metro subjects in Los Angeles, to secure considerable publicity for the house. When he first learned the plans for the campaign he induced the managers to use the theatre as headquarters, and ran in connection with his program motion picture announcements calling attention to this and giving an argument for immediate enlistment. Later the officers of the campaign sought the aid of all motion picture stars here, and Saturday, when more than 100 with engaged in the work of inducing young men to enlist as marines, they all met at the Symphony and received their assignments from there. This gathering, as might be expected, brought many to the theatre to see their favorites.

Military Effects for Photoplay

Manager Aschmann of Pathe's Milwaukee office and Manager Meister of the Whitehouse theatre, by use of military effects, made "Our Fighting Forces" stand out over other pictures of its kind.

They arranged to march the Spanish War veterans in uniform, headed by their own fife and drum corps, through the entire house just at the beginning of the picture. Mr. Aschmann writes:
"Any thought of Milwaukee being unpatriotic was dispelled. The audience grew more and more enthusiastic as scene after scene showed them the methods of preparedness executed by our Government."

A two-thousand pound torpedo, several gatling guns and the service of naval and marine guards contributed to the lobby display.

Speeding Up in Exchanges at Omaha

Activity is manifest in the Nebraska Exchanges. Pathe has moved its shipping department nearest the door at Omaha, rearranged its pictures according to size, and increased the number of its employees from ten to twenty-three in four months.

Vitagraph has as its new manager, L. A. Getzler, formerly manager of the Mutual Exchange. H. J. Bayley has taken charge in Minneapolis.

Taylor Holmes Loaned to David Belasco as a Favor

Taylor Holmes, leading man with Essanay, has been loaned to David Belasco to take the leading part with the "Seven Chances" company in Chicago.

Frank Craven, the Belasco leading man, is leaving the company July 15. David Belasco was in a quandary as to how to fill his place, and made a request of George K. Spoor for the "loan."

Mr. Holmes has completed his first photoplay, "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship." The star's appearance on the stage will be finished early in August, when he will return to Essanay to continue his photoplay work.

Kunsky's Begun a "Sure-Enough" Film Publication

The Weekly Film News, published by John H. Kunsky, Inc., in connection with that enterprise's string of nine Detroit houses is one program and house organ that is neither. For the Weekly Film News is all that its name implies—a real fan publication. It is published monthly, for which a real demand has been created—and when you get your patrons looking anxiously for your house organ you have surely reached the height of a theatre owner's ambition.

To Harry K. Guest is given the credit for the success which has brought to the Weekly Film News a bona-fide "name and address" circulation of 35,000 copies. Printed on a good quality magazine stock, 7½ by 9 inches, the News has its feature article of the week on page one, its departments, news, notes and editorial page. The feature is usually an interview with one of the more prominent stars or directors whose productions are favorites of the Kunsky patrons. "Film Footage" and "Close-Up" are the headings used for two departments of brief gossip notes regarding the players, while "The Question Box," as may be guessed from the title, is easily the most popular feature of the magazine. The Film Tramp, a character created by Mr. Kunsky, discusses intimately and occasionally with brazen frankness the various pictures shown and other points about the Kunsky houses.

News is the paramount object of the paper. When John H. Kunsky changes programs, or makes any other radical move his reasons for so doing are explained in an interview for the Weekly Film News. During the building of the magnificent new Madison theatre, a newspaper each week told of the progress being made.

And last, but not least, the Weekly Film News carries a share of high class advertising—more could probably be had if it were wanted.

Novel Stunt for "The Whip"

A Southington, Conn., schoolboy, who owns his own horse, had vacation fun and advertised "The Whip" for B. G. Salvini's Coleman theatre, recently, when he dressed in jockey costume and rode about the factory town. Mr. Salvini says the result was the biggest day's business he has yet had, and in the evening his 800 seats were filled.

Uncle Sam Works for Carpenter

The Paramount-Empress theatre in Salt Lake, Utah, has hit upon a novel plan to advertise the theatre among the boys in uniform at Fort Douglas, near there. Manager George George has agreed with Captain Elliott, in charge of the quartermaster department at the fort and found that the Government used envelopes in which to inclose the pay of the soldiers. Then Mr. Carpenter had envelopes of this size printed with an advertisement urging Uncle Sam's boys to visit the Paramount-Empress when they go downtown. The pay was inclosed in the envelopes and Mr. Carpenter figured the stunt to be a regular ten-strike, as the uniformed audience immediately following showed a substantial increase.

McCormick's Latest

With the permission and approval of Brigadier General Edwin F. Glenn, commanding the big army post, Fort Benjamin Harrison, at Indianapolis, Ind., S. Barrett McCormick, managing director of the Circle Theatre, Fort Wayne, Ind., used in motion picture show in the open on the camp grounds, Sunday night, June 17, for 5,000 officer students of the reserve officers' corps, who are in training at the fort, and 8,000 enlisted men who are stationed at the post.

As the Circle will give these performances at frequent times throughout the summer, a crew of the Circle's stage employees spent several days in carrying out the extensive arrangements, building a huge permanent frame for the screen, projection platform and bandstand.

A special orchestra provided by the theatre, was augmented by the Tenth Infantry Band, both of which gave concerts preceding the showing of the pictures. The picture program consisted of a reel of scenes taken at the fort and training grounds, the boys in drill, athletic events and other scenes of interest to the men at the post. The assemblage cheered the pictures of General Glenn and his staff as they were flashed on the screen, as well as the popular instructors and officers. Comedies selected for their laugh qualities together with news pictures and an advance reel selected from the five recent British war pictures, "The Tanks in Action at the Battle of Ancre," were shown.

Exchange Men Join Ad. Club

Several representatives of the film industry have recently joined the Kansas City Advertising Club, and will for the first time provide in that club, a source of direct information on the business. The acute situation that has arisen in Kansas City, with the reference to the advertising of motion picture shows, has been called emphatically to the attention of the Ad Club, and it has been asked to take a hand.

The club, however, has been unable to do much, because it has lacked expert advice. Now, as it has members from the profession, the subject of motion pictures will probably be discussed more freely.

Among the film men who have joined the Ad Club are Richard Robertson, World; C. S. Edwards, Jr., Pathe, and O. R. Gooch, Vitagraph, representing the exchanges, and W. B. Tuteur, exhibitor.
F. J. REMBUSCH of Shelbyville, Ind., president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of Indiana, is an avowed candidate for president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America. His candidacy was brought about at a state meeting of the Indiana exhibitors at Indianapolis, who, besides putting Mr. Rembusch forward as a candidate, gave him the power of a majority and invited Indiana delegates to the Chicago convention who are his known supporters.

But the live Indiana exhibitors do not act by piecemeal. Not only did they put Mr. Rembusch into the field of candidates, but they raised a campaign fund to bring about his election. At the meeting which named Mr. Rembusch as a candidate the exhibitors raised $350 of a $500 fund that is to be expended in helping Rembusch’s cause. Charles Pettijohn of Indianapolis, whose effective work as attorney for the exhibitors both in the state Capitol as also at Washington is recognized, will direct Mr. Rembusch’s campaign.

The sentiment of the Indiana exhibitors is best seen by the resolution they adopted in naming Mr. Rembusch as a candidate. It follows:

Whereas, F. J. Rembusch, our state president, has always been one of the most able and best workers in our league, besides being one of the originators and organizers of the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of America and one of the fathers and foremost organizers of the motion picture industry, and

Whereas, F. J. Rembusch has always stood for the best interests of the exhibitor against censorship, against advance deposit system, for clean pictures and for a high ideal in the motion picture trade,

And whereas all of the other organizers of the league have been honored by office in the national organization except F. J. Rembusch, for knowing his fitness and ability through many years of experience as an exhibitor;

Be it resolved that the Indiana delegates to the national convention at Chicago be instructed to present his name and work for the election of F. J. Rembusch as president of the league and use their best effort to bring about his election.

Twelve state delegates and five delegates at large will form Indiana’s representation at the convention. These men will be named soon by Mr. Rembusch.

The meeting that decided on Mr. Rembusch’s candidacy also considered other important questions of the motion picture industry. The advance deposit system in particular was again the subject of the Indiana exhibitors’ wrath. The exhibitors urged that all of them in the United States fight the system stronger than ever in the past. A resolution, which also was unanimously adopted, expresses the sense of the Indiana exhibitors on this subject. It follows:

Be it resolved by the Motion Picture Exhibitors’ League of Indiana that we protest against the advance deposit system which is demanded by many exchanges, that we do everything in our power to fight against this system and for the elimination thereof.

We believe that the advance deposit system, more than anything else, has been the cause of the very unprofitable condition in the exhibiting business for the last three or four years.

We believe that any system that allows one factor in the business to finance itself with the money of another factor is wrong. We believe that producers should stand on their merits and not force an exhibitor to take service by arbitrary methods.

We also believe in strictly daily or weekly cash method of trade between the exchange and the exhibitor. We believe that it is for the best interests of both the exhibitor and producer that no film be allowed to leave an exchange without it has already been paid for by the exhibitor, no matter how great may be his financial standing.

We desire to extend our thanks and best wishes to those producers who have decided to eliminate the advance deposit system, especially the K-E-S-E., which, through George Kleine, has announced last week the entire elimination of the advance deposit system.

We believe that if exhibitors will place their business with those producers who do not ask the advance deposit, in a very short time all producers will return the moneys they are now holding of the exhibitor, and we advocate that now stronger than ever that every exhibitor in the United States fight the advance deposit system.

Be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent to every film manufacturer and exchange.

Rembusch Thanks Kleine for Abolishing Deposit

President of Indiana League, and Latest Candidate for Office of National President, Congratulates Producer for Wise Move

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, president of the Exhibitors’ Protective Association, Indiana, is in receipt of the following letter from George Kleine. It is to be noted from Mr. Kleine’s letter, that Mr. Rembusch was actively instrumental in persuading Mr. Kleine to abolish the deposit system.

June 26, 1917.

MY DEAR MR. KLEINE:

I have held before me correspondence of February 6, 21 and 23 last in connection with advance deposits.

Our advertisements in this week’s trade papers is my final answer. I have abolished the system and will refund all deposits in our hands, trusting to the method outlined in the second paragraph of your letter of February 6, namely, that all film rentals be paid before the film leaves the exchange.

If my action will be of any use to exhibitors in forcing other distributors to follow suit in the interest of the exhibitor I shall be pleased.

(Signed) Geo. Kleine

Mr. Rembusch in his reply heartily thanked Mr. Kleine, discussed the wrongs of the advance deposit at length and proceeded to discuss his next plan, which is the shorter program. He said: "I believe that ninety per cent. of the people would rather see an hour’s program than an hour and a half or two hours."
Clara K. Young Going Right Ahead with Plans

Nothing Definite Regarding Rumors of Legal Settlements; Star Back Future; More Announcements Soon

RETURNING to New York last week after an extended trip through the South and West, Clara Kimball Young reiterated her intention of making her own pictures, and proposed also to personally interest herself in the business side of her venture. I am confident that I know just where I stand, and there are many proofs available for my kind friends in the industry that I am confident of ultimate success.

Quite naturally any opposition which may be raised will have to be fought and conquered. If this opposition takes legal form, to combat it will cost money. Provision has been made for this contingency, and a very considerable sum of money has been spent in this direction already. I wouldn't spend this money if I were not sure of the result.

Another proof of confidence is the preparations which have already been made for the production of my first picture. A studio has been engaged, a director chosen and employed, an expensive story and scenario is at hand and, in short, we are ready to begin. I hope my first picture will cost many thousands of dollars.

And you know, my right to make pictures is not disputed—it is only my right to distribute them. Needless to say, I have no fondness for either negative or positive prints sealed up tightly in cans when they represent thousands of dollars of my own investment. We are making this first picture for the same wide distribution which we hope all my subsequent pictures will enjoy—and if the chances of failure in this enterprise appeared to me to be even worth considering we would scarcely risk the investment we are making until all controversies had been absolutely adjusted.

Announcement will shortly be made as to the story Clara Young will begin work on, where the filming will be done and her associates in the new company.

Battle in the Alps in "The Warrior," at the Criterion

The successor to D'Annunzio's "Cabiria," in its third year of success, is "The Warrior," a new and timely battle story of the Alps, in which the famous "Cabiria" star, Baclet, makes his reappearance. The picture is at the Criterion theatre Monday, July 16, for an engagement of four weeks.

The story of "The Warrior" is built around actual conditions of each company in front in the Alps. Two years were spent in its making, and hazards of border warfare in the mountains are shown for the first time.

The popularity of Baclet, already established throughout the world by his appearance in "Cabiria," is greatly enhanced by the fact that, in "The Warrior" he is more than an actor. He is serving at the front, and was performing military duty when the production was being made.

"The Warrior," which is a one hundred and sixty-nine minutes long, will be divided among six hundred and ten scenes. A symphony orchestra will be used for its presentation.

Harry Raver, who introduced "Cabiria" to America, will sponsor the new production.

H. M. Thomas, Omaha, Opposes Projection Room Reviews

"I am glad to see the Motion Picture News advocate the review showing of new releases before crowds, where the reviewer can get the atmosphere of the real theatre," said H. M. Thomas, manager of the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., and president of the Nebraska Motion Picture Exhibitors' League.

"Discussing with the private projection room shows for trade paper reviewers will help the exhibitor a whole lot," he said. "While I do not question the reviewer's sincerity in reviewing the pictures to his best and honest ability his work would be definitely more valuable to us if he were sitting in a theatre full of a crowd and could catch that crowd's opinion.

"I don't blame the reviewer for wanting to get out. In fairness to himself, to the trade paper and to the exhibitor it should be done at the showing of each picture.

"I hope that soon every one of the companies will be arranging pre-release theatre showings and arranging them early enough that the first-run exhibitors may see them in time to get the benefit of the reviewer's opinion."

Big Deal Closed on "Mutt and Jeff" Comedies

The Bud Fisher Films Corporation announce that they have sold the exclusive rights to the famous characters Mutt and Jeff in Animated Cartoon form for the States of North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Alabama and Florida, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Indiana Territory, Oklahoma, Texas, Southern New Mexico and Eastern Arizona to Mr. William Oldknow, general manager of the Consolidated Film Company, whose head office is in Atlanta, with branches in Memphis, New Orleans, Dallas and El Paso.

Exhibitors in any portion of this territory should get in touch with the Consolidated Film & Supply Company to book these subjects.

British Cut in Two Tax on Entertainment Tickets

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, in London, Eng., has announced concessions in the tax on entertainment tickets. It is understood the allowance is of a similar nature to that granted in the matter of the increased tax on tobaccos. The tobacco tax was cut squarely in two.

The proposed increased tax on entertainment tickets had caused heart burnings throughout the English theatre and concert world. Strong trade representations were made in protest.

Bonar Law personally made the concessions in both taxes.

James Montgomery Flagg Busy Making Comedy Series

The first two releases of a comedy series to be known as "Girls You Know," by James Montgomery Flagg, produced by Town and Country Films, Inc., are completed.

Pretty girls, humorous situations and titles in satire, make these comedies something very different.

The first is the story of "The Screen Fan," the typical small town girl who is camera struck. Her experiences as an extra and her dream as a film star make a story of honest fun.

The second, the story of "The Vacation Girl," is a humorous character study of the business girl who eats, sleeps and takes a vacation from April 1 until her week is over.

The next in line will be "The Romantic Girl," "The Blase Miss" and "The Patriotic Girl."

Mr. Flagg's reputation as an illustrator and humorous writer prompted him to turn his series of comedies. He is personally writing the scenarios, titles, and making an attractive water-color poster of the girl in each story, to be used for the exhibitor's advertising and one sheets.

James Montgomery Flagg, as writer and artist, has had his work in many magazines.

Recently he entered whole-heartedly into the recruiting campaign, making posters for the Government as a donation to the cause. These posters are now on billboards all over the country. In recognition of his patriotism and his ability as an artist, Governor Whitman recently appointed him Military Artist of the State of New York.

Vitagraph's Omaha Exchange Struggles with Contract Rush

L. A. Getzler, manager of the Vitagraph exchange, Omaha, Neb., sat at his desk one day last week scribbling out a letter in longhand.

"I have to do it," he explained. "Everystenographer in the office is busy getting out contracts and doing other work. Contracts have been coming in by phone, letter, telegraph, salesmen and representatives of the exhibitors to the exchange. Last week was a record week—forty-one contracts, and the great majority of them our new annual contract."

"Womanhood," said Mr. Getzler, "is proving a summer success.
Hot Fight on Censor Who Bars Mary Pickford's Play

To Enjoin Major Funkhouser in Chicago from Stopping Showing in That City of "The Little American"—He Defies George Creel, His Board Members and Press

Maj or FUNKHouser, head of the Censorship Board in Chicago, stands by his refusal to pass Mary Pickford's new patriotic picture, "The Little American." He holds its showing would be offensive to German-Americans. Injunction proceedings will be begun.

The Major's obstinacy would be amusing and ridiculous merely if in a less important matter. The other members of his board have not been able to move him, and the action of censors in all other cities make no impression upon him. He even makes faces at George Creel, head of the Department of Information at Washington, who has all but instructed him to approve the films and let them be shown.

Altogether it promises to be one of the most startling censorship fights ever staged in Chicago. It is charged that the Major has repudiated his agreement to let the picture be shown if satisfactory to Mr. Creel.

The latest developments in the situation indicate that the picture will be shown in Chicago despite Funkhouser's decision. Plans are now being perfected to show it at the Auditorium free of charge.

Max Goldstone, representing Arctraft in Chicago, is the one who will begin injunction proceedings against the city of Chicago immediately to restrain it from interfering with the exhibition of the film.

When "The Little American" was first shown to Mr. Funkhouser and his associates early last week the former refused to pass it on the ground that it would offend German-Americans in this country. On being approached by Carl Pierce, representing Arctraft, and in the presence of four witnesses, Mr. Funkhouser said: "If you will get George Creel and the Department of Public Information in Washington to endorse this picture, I will pass it."

Mr. Pierce thereupon promptly communicated with the Arctraft representatives in Washington and the film was shown to Mr. Creel, who immediately endorsed it as a splendid patriotic subject and sent the following wire to Funkhouser: "Have just reviewed picture 'The Little American.' Can see nothing to warrant withdrawal. Strongly favor its being shown. Will run (signed) George Creel."

When Funkhouser was again approached on the matter in view of Mr. Creel's hearty endorsement, the Major went back on his agreement to pass it, remarking caustically: "Who is Mr. Creel? His wings are already clipped."

Funkhouser's repudiation was made in the presence of the witnesses who heard his original agreement to pass the film if Mr. Creel found it satisfactory. When these witnesses reiterated his remarks, Funkhouser called them all liars.

The Chicago dailies have expressed their indignation at Funkhouser's stand in editorial and front page space. In a quarter page editorial the Chicago Examiner holds a railing article with: "If Chicago Needs a Censor It should Get One Who Is Not Both Stupid and Ridiculous." Mac Tinee, one of Chicago's most prominent film writers, in one of her many stories on the affair, said: "Let us hope that the public will run the 'clips' from the eyes in the near, near future, discover that the United States is at war with Germany and that the picture in question is not only anti-German, but it is pro-American, and as an anti-German, pro-American picture, it is something that the country is entitled to."

Every newspaper in the Windy City has taken up the fight against Funkhouser to an extent never before evidenced in the history of local filmland.

At Evanston, the Chicago suburb, the film was not only passed promptly by the censors, but highly endorsed as well. Both Mrs. W. N. Rose and Mrs. Grace Brooks, of the Evanston "movie autocrats," gave Miss Pickford's production much praise, as did several prominent business men of that city who were invited by Manager Bodkin to view the picture at the Strand theatre there.

In response to Paramount inquiries, replies were received from various cities showing that the Pickford picture was not only unobjectionable but that it was highly approved.

Strong Staff Selected for Photoplay Magazine

Alfred A. Cohn, of Los Angeles has been appointed western managing editor, of Photoplay Magazine, Frederick James Smith, of New York, has been appointed eastern managing editor, and James R. Quirk, publisher, will assume the duties of editor.

Mr. Cohn has been connected with the magazine for over a year in the capacity of associate editor, and six months ago was sent to Los Angeles to represent the magazine's interest in that district. Mr. Cohn was previously in connection with Photoplay Magazine, city editor of the Los Angeles Examiner, and won the attention of the publishers of Photoplay by his splendid articles on moving picture topics.

Mr. Smith was formerly editor of the Motion Picture Mail of New York, and made remarkable editorial success with that publication. The new appointment followed the resignation of Julian Johnson, who has joined the Selznick organization in the capacity of editor-in-chief of productions.

Paramount and Stanley Company, Philadelphia, Divorced

F. G. Nixon-Nirdlinger Contract for Arctraft and Paramount for $300,000 for First-Run Pictures—Break of Stanley and Paramount Follows Move of Exhibitors to Desert Stanley

A ccording to an announcement from Philadelphia, Paramount and Arctraft have broken with the Stanley Company.

It has been publicly announced that F. G. Nixon-Nirdlinger have signed a contract with the local Paramount Exchange for over $300,000—covering first-run Paramount and Arctraft pictures.

The negotiations between the Famous Players' Exchange, representing Paramour-Arctraft, were handled by Edgar Moss, who is a salesman in the Philadelphia territory, and by Columbus Stamper, general manager for the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests.

This means that the Stanley Theatre, which has long been the first-run Paramount house in Philadelphia, will no longer show these productions. Announcement has not as yet been made as to which house will take the first run.

In an authorized interview with John D. Clark, branch manager, he stated that the attitude of the Stanley Booking Company had become so overbearing that the Paramount Exchange was forced to search for another outlet. He said that the Stanley interests had gone so far as to try to break contracts already made between the Exchange and the exhibitors, and that as they could not allow anybody to dictate policy, it was necessary to make arrangements for some other outlet.

It is said that, until this break came, the Stanley Company had Philadelphia "sewed up so tight that the exhibitor could not move, but with the announcement of the break a number of the exhibitors who were members of the Stanley Exhibitors League—organized an organization formed of exhibitors booking through the Stanley Company, which has the allegiance, forsook this allegiance and came in to book Paramount pictures direct from the Exchange.

It will undoubtedly mean an era of prosperity, not only for the Exchange, but also for all exhibitors in Philadelphia and Eastern Pennsylvania territory.

Mr. Stamper left the Stanley booking concern several months ago, and with the four houses then under his control was able to maintain his theatres and to continue to cater to satisfied patrons.

It is probable that this move was the beginning of his present position with the Nixon-Nirdlinger interests.

Chaplin Formally Signs Contract With Circuit

Comedian Reads Contract Carefully, Signs and Returns It to New York—Resents Being Called "Slacker" for Not Appearing in Trenches

NO definite steps will be taken by Charles Chaplin in the matter of leasing a studio until the arrival of his brother, Sid Chaplin, who is now en route to the coast from New York. The contract with the First National Exhibitors' Association as presented in New York, reached Los Angeles Wednesday of this week, and after being gone over carefully by the comedian and his attorneys, was signed and returned to the executives of the Association.

It is definitely given out that John Jasper, who at present is serving as business manager of the Lone Star studio, will be manager of the plant where the eight subjects are made by Chaplin. This plant may be the one at present occupied, or a new one may be built. Whether the present organization of players will be kept intact or not, cannot be learned from Mr. Chaplin at this time.

Mr. Chaplin expressed himself as highly pleased with the contract. "It will give me a much wider range of pictures," the highest priced actor said. "Story matter and situations for all of the eight comedies will be prepared as I may see fit. The members of the Association are certain I will give them my best, for my object as a progressive comedian is to build on a firm basis. There will be a great incentive for all of us to do our best. The production will depend upon my efforts, and we will work together to make the comedies bigger drawing cards than ever before."

At the offices of the National Association, after having discussed Mr. Chaplin's contract, one of the officials said:

"We desire to clear up a point in regard to the new Chaplin contract. Unpleasant rumors have been circulated and have been given prominence in certain publications, criticizing Mr. Chaplin for not going to war—for not actually shouldering a gun and facing German bullets.

"He says his lawyers, who are publishing these scurrilous reports were aware of the extent to which Mr. Chaplin is giving his aid there would be less comments."

"Mr. Chaplin has been called by the Queen of England, 'F. M. O. E.' When she was pressed to explain what that meant, she replied, 'The Funniest Man of Earth.' Mr. Chaplin's pictures are giving the soldiers in the trenches the greatest relaxation they could find. In addition to that he is busy at work."

"Mr. Chaplin has a perfect right to be present during the trimming of the scenes of any story, a 'slacker.' He is doing a thousand times more good for the world by doing what he is than if he were in the trenches. People fail to realize that at this dynamic period of the world, who can make them smile and forget the terrible, world-wide gloom is doing a real good for humanity."

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit has issued the following confirmation of the various rumors which have been circulated regarding the signing up by them of the world-famed and highest salaried person in the universe—Charlie Chaplin!

"Chaplin has contracted to make eight pictures for the First National Circuit, the release date of the first being in October next.

"The First National Circuit comprised of twenty-five of the leading exhibitors of United States and Canada controlling some of the most houses of the country will ensure a new era for Chaplin Pictures, and will be the means of raising the standard of Chaplin to a much higher plane than his lightherto been known. Chaplin realized what the First National Exhibitors' Circuit could do for him in presenting his pictures, and he has promised to make the very finest comedies it is possible to produce.

"The first National contract with Charlie Chaplin will do more to produce quality in pictures than any other contract ever entered into in this business. Chaplin will receive the same sum for a film of 1,600 feet as he would for one of 2,300, and there will, therefore, be no excuse in the world for poor work. He is entitled to the privilege of making his pictures 3,000 feet long should he consider a scenario admits of this length, but only a fraction more will be paid by the Exhibitors' Circuit for such length than for a 2,000-foot picture. The whole idea of the contract is to do away with quantity and substitute quality. Chaplin has pledged himself to establish a reputation for perfect pictures, and fully realizes that the production of unsatisfactory comedies at this time will be a liability.

"In the First National Circuit, any picture that is found to be below the high-water mark will be destroyed and work on it commenced all over again. With this aim and determination in view, the First National Chaplin pictures should excel any thing Chaplin has previously produced.

"The twenty-five First National Exhibitors have exclusive territorial franchises covering all pictures purchased by the Circuit, entitled to release and distribute through their various offices the Chaplin Chaplin pictures. They are all elated with the prospect of the amount of money they know after investigation it is possible to make with these pictures. It is true that the First National Circuit are paying the famous comedian twice as much as he ever before received on any contract, but the pictures will cost the members of the organization a very reasonable sum, and proves how an organization of this kind dealing directly with the producer to ex-

William A. Brady Says That Program Gains

Director General of World Pictures Holds Market for Specials Will Soon Be Glutted by Those Who “Wildcat for Quick Profits”

WILLIAM A. BRADY, director general of World-Pictures, reiterated his confidence in the program system the other day.

“I derive considerable amusement from reading a statement that finds its way into print at rather regular intervals to the effect that the program system is slowly but surely dying off and that there is no hope for the future excepting through the specials. But for the future, we are assured every month or so that the whole motion picture industry would be cast up on the rocks and dashed to splinters in no time at all.

“Instead of being in a forward state of decomposition, as the disciples of the specials would have us believe, the program is gaining strength and momentum every minute."

Fox Film Men Hold Rousing Four-Day Meeting

They Listen to Speech of William R. Fox Declaring Coming Season Will Be Greatest in Whole History of the Company

THE third annual convention of the Fox Film Corporation was held at the Hotel Biltmore last week, with nearly one hundred men, representing the executive and branch offices of the company, in attendance.

The convention resulted in the adoption of a change of policy soon to be announced.

The convention convened on Monday morning, July 2, being called to order by Mr. W. R. Sheehan, the general manager of the corporation.

William Fox was presented, and after a brief speech of welcome the delegates plunged into the business at hand. Mr. Fox explained to the convention that, whereas at two previous conventions the branch managers had gathered to be instructed as to their course of action during the coming seasons, this time they had been called to report on the suggestions of the exhibitors in their districts as to a new policy of releasing Fox films.

After Monday's all-day session, the delegates were taken to Wurlitzer Hall and given a private showing of the first of William Farnum's new productions, "When a Man Sees Red."

As an additional surprise, the Fox managers were shown the first of the new series of Fox comedies, produced by Henry Lehrman, "A Milk-Fed Vamp" and "His Smashing Career."

On Tuesday, a full day’s session was held, and in the evening the delegates witnessed the screenings of the first of the widely-heralded Fox Kiddie Features—"Jack and the Beanstalk"—and another of the comedies, entitled "Damaged—No Goods."

On Wednesday morning, the delegates were shown two more of the new pictures, and R. A. Walsh production, entitled "The Innocent Sinner," and a Dustin Farnum picture, "Durand of the Bad Lands."

The conference was then called at the Biltmore, and after a general expression of opinion on the character and quality of the new pictures a unanimous vote declared that the delegates had seen the greatest pictures that had ever come to their view.

After close of this session, the delegates boarded three big sight-seeing buses, and were taken to the ball game at the Polo Grounds. In the evening, the delegates were entertained at the Cohen and Harris theatre with a performance of Raymond Hitchcock, in "Hitchy Koo."

Instead of a formal banquet, the delegates were feasted after the performance at one of the midnight cabarets, and the following morning they again assembled at Wurlitzer Hall to witness the showing of William Farnum in "The Conqueror," and "Babes in the Woods," the second Kiddie Feature.

On Thursday afternoon, the final conference was held at the Biltmore, and in the evening the delegates attended the Ziegfeld Follies and the Midnight Frolic on the stage.

Two more features were shown them on Friday morning, after which the delegates received individual instructions from Mr. Sheehan, and the convention terminated with a visit to the Fox Studios and Laboratory at Port Lee, N. J.

During the closing session of the convention, a final speech was made by Mr. Fox himself. His address was eloquent and aroused his hearers to the highest pitch of enthusiasm, and the delegates departed for their various headquarters.

WITH THE EXHIBITOR

Big Results to Follow New Orleans Convention

Exhibitors Awaken Seriously to Need of Organization and Endless Chain Plan Looked to Press Formation; Big Enthusiasm at Meeting

THE first state convention of the Louisiana Motion Picture Exhibitors League was held in New Orleans on July 4. The attendance was exceptionally large considering that the convention was held on one of the busiest days of the year for the average exhibitor. About 300 guests were seated at the tables at the luncheon. A large number of persons who had signified their intention of being present when their invitations were received, found that their theatres demanded their attention in connection with the Fourth of July crowds. Nevertheless, the convention was a most enthusiastic one and it at last appears that the exhibitors have come to consider the matter of forming a strong and a permanent state organization as a serious one.

It is an open secret that adverse legislation is being formulated for the next meeting of the legislature and there is nothing the Southern lawmaker likes so well as to get into the limelight through the medium of some drastic measure leveled at something that cannot hurt him at the polls. The exhibitors have had one or two very expensive lessons relative to the futility of endeavoring to "go it alone" and they have about concluded that organization is their only safeguard. Therefore, the business meeting on July 4 was a remarkably harmonious and enthusiastic affair. Every visitor to the city who had not yet signed the rolls became an active member of the organization and each one of the new members promised to secure another recruit. Much dependence is being placed in this endless chain method of augmenting the strength of the organization.

After the business meeting the members and their guests repaired to the Green Room of the Gramercy Hotel, where luncheon was served. A distinguished company sat at the head of the banquet board. President A. C. Gage, president of the league presided as toastmaster. Mayor Martin W. Behrmann made a distinctive address in which he paid a high tribute to the motion picture and to the marked progress that has been made through the efforts of the exhibitors in turning their theatres over to every worthy cause that has sought advancement in this section of the country.

S. I. Rothapfel, of the Rialto theatre, New York, who has been in New Orleans to assist in the opening of the new Strand theatre, gave the convention a shoulder-to-shoulder talk and told the visitors that their own salvation rested in no other hands except their own. He outlined the factors that had contributed to his wonderful success and assured every exhibitor that the achievements of the Rialto could be duplicated by every theatre in Louisiana so far as its possibilities were concerned and he pointed out the lamentable lack of progress on account of the apathy of the men who failed to take advantage of the opportunities within their grasp.

Manager Rothapfel has been the busiest man in the South since his arrival in New Orleans and he has without any doubt put a lot of ginger in the local camp. E. V. Richards, Jr., managing director of the Saenger Amusement Company, followed Mr. Rothapfel and gave the exhibitors a talk that will be of much inspiration to them if they will heed it. He pointed out the dangers of the apathy that has been the curse of the Southern exhibitors and he placed himself on record, personally and for his company, to aid the exhibitors organization of Louisiana to attain the position in the state to which they are entitled.

X. E. Thatcher, motion picture editor of the Times-Picayune told of the relations of the motion picture theatre and the press and of the interdependence of the one upon the other as the motion pictures attain the higher plane and the position in the commercial world to which they are entitled. He declared that the newspaper and the motion picture were the two greatest forces for the moulding and crystallizing public sentiment.

Nearly a score of new members were added to the membership list at the luncheon and in addition every member present promised to secure another new member.

Would You Throw It Away?

The Lyric theatre, Minneapolis, Minn., in cooperation with F. A. Wilson, manager of the American Maid Film Company, sent out the following announcing announcement to 25,000 Minneapolisians, by special messengers, when "The Deemster" came to town:

"Oh, no; you won't.

Your first impulse was to throw this away.

But you are not going to do it until you have read every word, thank you.

What's all this strange communication about?

Listen!

What are you going to do next week?

None of your business, did you say?

Well, now, don't 'lip up' until we have some little something.

Well, Hall Caine is not coming to Minneapolis, but his actor son, Dervent Hall Caine, is going to be seen all of the week of June 3 at the Lyric—the Lyric, we said, beginning June 3—in the star role of his distinguished dad's greatest masterpiece, "The Deemster." It's the biggest thing in the way of a moving picture (don't get excited, you can get in for 15¢ shown here this year and just to assure you that this is no three-cylinder announcement permit us to inform you that one night has been set aside for the attendance of Gov. J. A. Burnquist and other notables.

Down in little Old New York the Broadway crowds fell hard—at $1.00 per tumbled—for "The Deemster," and some of 'em declare positively that "The Deemster" is the most powerful photodrama ever devised by the camera of man, and the dramatic critic of the New York Herald openly opined, "It renews our faith in motion pictures."

The film follows the book closely, so among other things you'll see the Deemster and the bishop clash, the wild fight on the cliff, the burial at sea, the escape down the ivy-clad castle wall, the prison scene, open court on Tywandal Hill (2,000 persons in this), burning ship at night, return of the fugitive, curing the plague, the lovers reunited.

New and novel photographic stunts, including the actual reproduction of a storm scene in which a black and angry sky is seared by lightning, mysterious fade-outs, the faithful reproduction of the magnificent settings of the castle-dotted Isle of Man—Oh, well, oh, man! get your crew together and plan to see this worth-while photodrama—it's going to be talked about.

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

War Relics

Pathe's "Battle of the Somme" pictures were shown at the Strand in Seattle, the week of July 1. Twenty and fifty cents was charged and capacity business was the result. The pictures were shown under the auspices of the Canadian Club, of Seattle. Seventy-five reliefs of the present war, obtained from the Canadian Government from Vancouver, B. C., were used as a lobby display, and attracted much attention as well as resultant business.

Be Your Own Printer

Two Nebraska exhibitors, J. E. Spoonover of the Mazda, Aurora, and J. W. Ballenger of the Opera House, York, find it a decidedly convenient plan to have a printing-press in connection with their theatres. They get out heralds, hand-bills and other advertising matter of a decidedly attractive nature. It is cheap and makes quite a hit with the box-office accounts.

The Busy Military

Through the co-operation between Manager Aschmann of Pathe's Milwaukee office, and the Whitehouse Theatre, the two-reel special subject, "Our Fighting Forces," created a sensation.

The Whitehouse Theatre, with a fifty-foot front, has the biggest open lobby and the greatest number of lights of any theatre in Milwaukee. This afforded a splendid opportunity for display. Manager Aschmann got busy and secured from Naval and Military authorities stationed there a display for this lobby, which included a two thousand pound torpedo, several Gatling guns and the services of naval and marine guards.

In co-operation with Mr. Meister, of the theatre, Aschmann arranged to march the Spanish War Veterans in uniform, headed by their own Drum and Bugle Corps of twenty-four pieces, through the entire house just at the beginning of the picture, and it is impossible to describe the sentiment expressed by an audience which filled the entire seating capacity of two thousand. Street cars and all other traffic were blocked for nearly an hour until special police cleared a passage way.

Orchestra Becomes Brass Band

One of the most novel as well as interesting "stunts" worked during the "Red Cross Week" was "pulled off" by James Q. Clemmer, of the Clemmer theatre, Seattle, Wash.

Clemmer employs a Russian orchestra of eight men, recognized as the finest orchestra in Seattle.

On the last day of the "drive" for funds the entire orchestra played on all of the principal corners of the downtown district, and Clemmer with a nail leg tied about his neck solicited funds.

Even business houses were "raided" by the orchestra, and in one instance Clemmer found a poker game in full operation and annexed the stakes in sight.

The Superior Court was visited, and the judge stopped proceedings while a selection was rendered and everyone made to "cough up," including the defendant on trial and the judge.

The Clemmer theatre gave one day's gross receipts to the fund, nothing was taken out for expenses, and the employees gave the day's pay as well. $993 was raised in this manner.
This group of photographs is a liberal education in how to display lobbies with the main purpose of driving only one idea home. Each lobby is built around our good idea. They are intended to show the contrast between good lobby displays and the "hash" type of lobby discussed in these columns last week.

The third chapter of "The Gray Ghost" serial is all that can be expected. "The Warning," Morgen Light in her dressing room at the theatre, is visited by a stranger who is looking for a missing reel of the serial. Light is made to believe that she will not see her mother, and an appointment is made for the two to meet after the theatre at a restaurant. "The Gray Ghost" serial plans to "get" Hildreth, but through the help of Morgen Light, the ghost plans are foiled. The ghost becomes suspicious of Morgen Light, thinking that the love she holds for her is the one thing that holds her back.

The late chapter of the "Gray Ghost," titled "The Warning," will be seen on the screen of the —— theatre on —— week.

"The Crushing Walls," Second Chapter of "Fatal Ring," as Thrilling as Title Suggests

(Pathe Serial, Two Reels.)

Did you like the first episode of "The Fatal Ring," which was shown last week? Then you will not want to miss the second episode. Pathe's new mystery story was shown last week, and there wasn't a person who visited the theatre who didn't say that it was one of Pathe's best. The second chapter of "The Fatal Ring," which was shown last week, is without a doubt, the most exciting two weeks of pictures ever shown on the screen at the theatre.

PEARL WHITE WINS "DEEPENING DEPRESSION" SERIAL

“Caste,” Robertson’s Story of Class Distinction, Enacted by Peggy Hyland (Vitagraph Five Reel Production)

Class distinction and snobbery, the two most treasured attributes of the social order, are held in an important place in the social life of the United States. To live up to the standards set by those in position, a person must adhere to certain rules and ways of thinking, and the result of false pride has brought much of the unhappiness that plagues society. In T. W. Robertson’s story, “Caste,” has been adapted to the screen and produced by Vitagraph. A feature, directed by Ester, whose father, Ecello, is presented by Sir John Hare, and a leading lady, Peggy Hyland, is the heroine. The story’s theme is that people are constantly at odds and the situation becomes acute when a man or woman attempts to break down the barriers that separate them from the one he or she loves. The story of “Caste” is one of the most intense dramas this company has ever produced. It is told in a human way, with human incidents accentuating every scene. The result of democracy prevails and filament love wins over the creed of fools, snobbery and class distinction.

Peggy Hyland and Sir John Hare in T. W. Robertson’s famous drama, “Caste,” will be seen at the — theatre on — week.

William Desmond as International Crook in “Time Lock and Diamonds” (Triangle Five-Reel Production)

With a plot spinning from the “Gay White Way” to the cloisters of “The Eternal City,” and with a woman who has been open-eyed phlegm, this trade with all the cunningness of a Sherlock Holmes, will be offered to the trade. Diamond, a triangle late release, featuring William Desmond, bristles with exciting situations and clever dramatic moments. “Time Locks and Diamonds” was written by John Lynch and J. G. Huns, two unknown writers for the screen. Mr. Lynch has written several screen successes, as has Mr. Huns. Their collaboration is like a masterpiece from the pen of A. Conan Doyle. The story, every foot of it, is a reelage, and William Desmond in the role of “Silver Jim” is considered the cleverest of crooks, but when his sister, who has been to a convent, leaves to face the world, her brother resolves to love the old life behind and start anew for the happiness of his sister, whom he loves better than life itself. Before giving up the old life “Silver Jim” determines to “swing” one more deal. A series of adventures of this master crook follows which when related on the screen affords entertainment of the highest order. They give us an insight into the workings of the clever crook. He saves his happiness, his sister and manages to keep from the clutches of the devil.

Louise Cluam, the Triangle Peacock Siren, in “The Strange Transgressor” (Triangle Five Reel Production)

The element of love and the manner in which this aspect of matters are managed, is visited on his whom, thought above the woman of whom Louise Cluam, the Triangle Peacock Siren, is seen on the screen by Louise Cluam in “The Strange Transgressor,” a picturized drama with an intense and fast running story of multiple reels. West Meets East with a "Bang" when Jack Gardner Enacts "Range Boss" (K-E-E Five Reel Production)

When East meets West, or vice versa, according to J. Franklyn Spalding in the K-E-E program, which has just been released, not only does the story carry a motif from which has been constructed one of the most interesting of the period. Fairbanks and Cohan in August Artcrafts

WALTER E. GREENE, president of the Artcraft Pictures Corporation, announces that Douglas Fairbanks and George M. Cohan in special productions will be in the company's offerings for August. Mr. Greene said:

"For early August release, we will present George M. Cohan in a screen adaptation of his sensational stage hit, 'Seven Keys to Baldpate.' This photoplay was finished last week and offers to the screen something absolutely novel in the way of a mystery farce, as Mr. Cohan terms this extraordinary play which attracted such wide attention on the stage.

"We confidently feel that this production will prove one of the most notable releases of the year not only because of the fact that it shows the inimitable George M. Cohan in a characterization that is new to both the screen and stage patrons, but also because of the most unusual story presented by this photoplay, the like of which has never been seen in motion pictures."

Those who are familiar with Earl Derr Biggs' story on which Mr. Cohan's play was founded, will readily appreciate what an ideal film subject it is. Staged under the direction of Hugh Ford, producer of many Famous Players successes and directing an exceptional supporting cast headed by popular Anna Q. Nilsson, this picture of mystery, thrills and surprises, we feel, will present a revelation in film plays.

"Douglas Fairbanks will also give another big box-office attraction to the screen world in August, in 'The Optimist,' an extremely funny subject presented in his own particular style. The success of 'In Again, Out Again' and 'Wild and Woolly' has resulted in a heavy demand for Fairbanks pictures, and that 'The Optimist' will out-

Turpin Comedy Wins Place in General Film "Black Cat" Series

Ben Turpin, comedian, appears in out-and-out comedy in the Black Cat series of 25-minute features released by General Film. All of the Black Cat Pictures have been comedy-drama, but the Turpin comedy was put in for what is described as its splendid fun.

It features as principals an old man and a little boy in "Seventy and Seven," the Black Cat feature following "Two Laughs" and "A Corner in Smights." Julien Barton plays Frank Fettig, an impoverished Grand Army veteran, and "Buddie," his little grandson, is interpreted by Ellis Paul.

Walter W. Irwin Puts Special Features on Vitagraph’s Program

"The Message of the Mouse," featuring Anita Stewart, a seven-reel picture that ordinarily would be released as a special Blue Ribbon feature, has been placed on its regular weekly program by V-L-S-E. and was released on July 9.

This move on the part of the distributors of Blue Ribbon features is in keeping with the promise made to the exhibitors of the country several months ago by Walter W. Irwin, general manager of V-L-S-E. Mr. Irwin said that it would be his aim to co-operate with the exhibitors at all times and that he considered the very best co-operation was to give the exhibitors a picture that would pack their houses.

In the picture Anita Stewart was ably assisted by L. Rogers Lyttten, Julia Swayne Gordon in the dramatic parts, and by Rudolph Cameron, in the love scenes.

On August 13 V-L-S-E. will release another special Blue Ribbon feature, "Mary Jane's Pa," in seven reels, on its regular weekly program to be rented to regular V-L-S-E. patrons at the usual price of five-reel Blue Ribbon features.

Vivid Plots in Universal Release

UNIVERSAL releases for the week of July 16 include several strong tabloid dramas and some of the brightest comedies that have been offered in several weeks.

"Six-Shooter Justice," a three-part thriller with the scenes laid in the Mohave Desert, features Harry Carey and Claire Du Brey. The story tells of the almost tragic complications that arise when a young girl, traveling across the desert with her father, undertakes to rate two men by appearances only. Quite naturally, she puts her faith in a good-looking adventurer, ignoring the unkempt hero who risks his life in the climax of events, to prevent her from meeting the fate that her lack of judgment had made possible. Written by Shelley Sutton and George Hively and directed by F. A. Kelsey, this offering is released under the Gold Seal Brand.

The Nestor Comedy for Tuesday, July 17, is a rollicking tale of the misadventures that befell a pretty girl with a fond for Oriental mysticism. The story is by Jack Cunningham and F. A. Palmer, directed by L. W. Chaudet. The funmakers taking leading parts are Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran and Edith Roberts.

The eightieth issue of the Universal Animated Weekly, devoted to pictorial stories of the big news events of the day, is scheduled for Wednesday, July 18. On the same date "A Surf Scandal," a two-part L-Ko Comedy, in which Dan Russell and Gladys Varden are carried through events by the seaside, will be released. Noel Smith and J. G. Blystone are responsible for the production.

Cleo Madison in "The Web," a two-part Star Featurette, will be starred on Thursday, July 19. The plot of this vivid cross-section from life's lower stratum deals with the complications that confront a beautiful but unscrupulous woman who is forced to choose between love and the spoils of a robbery that she has been relying on to make her comfortable for life. Katherine Kingsbury and Harvey Gates wrote the story, which was directed by George Crachane. "Some Nurse," a Joker Comedy, featuring Gale Henry and Milton Simmons, will be shown on the same day.

On Friday, July 20, the twenty-eighth issue of the Universal Screen Magazine will appear, together with a new Victor Comedy, entitled "One Bride Too Many," written by Cyril Bentinck and produced by Matt Moore. Matt Moore, Howard Crampton and Jane Gall take the featured parts and put over many laughable antics.

Another Joker Comedy, "He Had 'Em Buffaloed," featuring the favorite Western comedian, William Franey, will be shown Saturday, July 21, together with the tenth issue of Universal Current Events. Franey's vehicle is a burlesque of the land of longhorns and alkali written by C. B. Hoadley and directed by William Beau- dine.

The fourth episode of "The Gray Ghost," Universal's new mystery serial, will be released during the week. This will be known as "The Fight," featuring Eddie Pollo, Priscilla Dean, Emory John- son and Harry Carter.

Valeska Suratt Gives Week's Salary to Red Cross

Valeska Suratt, William Fox star who is known as "the Empress of fashion," has given a week's salary to the Red Cross. No announcement of the amount is made, but it is said to be a sum in four figures.

The gift was in immediate response to an appeal from Mrs. August Belmont, who heads a Red Cross team. Mrs. Belmont called over the telephone.

"Certainly," said Miss Suratt. "I'll send a check on Monday."

Miss Suratt has done her "bit" for the Liberty Loan and given freely to Belgian relief work. It is said this is not the end of her generosity to Red Cross.

She has undertaken to "mother" the company of Fox Futurities organized by her director, William Nigh, at the Fort Lee studios.

Nearly a year ago she sold several thousand dollars worth of rare old laces, the last to come from the nuns of Brussels before the German occupation, and gave the entire proceeds to the relief workers.

Nor is this all: Suratt has ever allied herself with the Entente Allies, and has assured herself that she is in the right.
Two New Directors Working for Bluebird

With the opening of the regular season, two new directors will display their craftsmanship to exhibitors and their public in the Bluebird series. Harry Solter will in future direct Ella Hall and Elmer Clifton has succeeded William Worthington as screen manager for Franklyn Furnum and Brownie Vernon. Jack Conway, who has been directing Miss Hall, completed "Little Miss Fix-It" as his last production.

"The Fourth Glove," written by Jack Conway and prepared for the screen by Waldemar Young, will be Mr. Clifton's first Furnum-Vernon comedy production. In this feature a sensation will be furnished by Mr. Furnum, who drove a high-power racing machine down the Mount Wilson Trail at break-neck speed. Hayward Mack, Jean Hershold and Frank McQuarrie will be leaders in the supporting comedy company.

"Bitter Sweet" will be Mr. Solter's initial offering, with Ella Hall, the star, playing a dual role. J. Grubb Alexander furnished the story and Fred Myton supplied the scenario. Jack Nelson, George Bernage, Claire Du Brey, William Dyer, Leon Kent and Charles Mailes will lead the supporting cast. "The Fourth Glove" awaits a release date, but "Bitter Sweet" is still in the works.

Other new productions, still undated, will be furnished by Rupert Julian, Joseph De Grasse, Ida May Park and Lynn F. Reynolds. "Mr. Opp," based on Alice Heagan Rice's story of the same title, will be Mr. Reynolds' final Bluebird. In this feature Neva Gerber, star of the Universal serial, "The Voice on the Wire," will share with George Hernandez the stellar honors.

Rupert Julian's contributions will continue as especially attractive Bluebird's. Mr. Julian jointly starring with Ruth Clifford in "The Face of Prentice Teller" as an early Fall release. Mr. De Grasse and Ida May Park will continue to alternate in directing Dorothy Phillips in dramatic features.

According to the notice Tarver is eight and a half feet tall. They found him in Texas. When he began rehearsals with 1,300 children it was found to be a real problem to get the little folks used to him so they would go through their part without manifest fear or embarrassment. Special doorways were needed for Tarver and likewise a special bed in a special car.

Circus Story and Tale of Latin Quarter from Triangle

Triangle story of circus life, "The Sawdust Ring," starring Bessie Love, will be released July 15 on the same program with "The Mother Instinct," in which Enid Bennett is starred.

The charm of the story by J. V. Jefferson lies in its faithful depiction of youngster life. When the circus comes to town Bessie regards with wide-eyed ecstasy the glittering wagons, the clown band and the daring equestriennes. With a boy playmate, she sets forth for the white-topped land of adventure. She is not beaten and persecuted, as many story heroines of her type have been, but in her own way makes a discovery and returns home with a message of happiness for her mother.

Enid Bennett, who last appeared in "The Girl Glory," takes the part of a French peasant girl, the daughter of a Brittany fisherman, in "The Mother Instinct." She goes to Paris and finds romance in the Latin Quarter. Her sister Marie, played by Margery Wilson, joins her and the two enjoy the revels of studio life.

The play was pictured by Lamber, Hilyer from the story by Maude Petts, which appeared in a popular magazine. R. William Neil directed the production. Among the players who support the star are Margery Wilson, Rowland Lee, Jack Gilbert, Tod Burns, Gertrude Claire and Carl Ulman.

Hearst-Pathe Recruiting Reel Shows Artist Christy at Work

To aid recruiting the Hearst-Pathe News has just released a novel picture, showing Howard Chandler Christy drawing a recruiting poster at his studio in the Hotel des Artistes, New York. Pearl White is posing for the artist.

Mr. Christy drew the poster, "Gee, I wish I were a man," for the Navy, whereupon Major Louis Fancher, of General O'Ryan's staff, requested one like it for the Army.
Paramount Releases Sequel to "The Squaw Man"

"The Squaw Man's Son," an adaptation of the sequel to Edwin Milton Royle's "The Squaw Man," has been scheduled for release by Paramount on July 26. Wallace Reid and Anita King are the co-stars of this production which numbers in its cast such well-known players as Dorothy Davenport, Donald Bowlis, C. H. Geldert, Frank Lanning, Ernest Joy, Lucien Littlefield, Mabel Van Buren and Ray Hatton. "The Squaw Man," told the story of an Englishman of high birth who devoted his life to the American Indian and married Nat-u-rich, an Indian squaw.

"The Squaw Man's Son" relates the romantic history of their son Hal, who is in love with the Indian girl and tells her of the fact that he has a wife in England.

Upon his return home, Hal finds his wife hopelessly victimized by drugs, and is informed that only his presence can save her life. She demands that he divorce her so she can marry another, but Hal, in a tremendously dramatic scene, forces her to confess she is a drug fiend. The unfortunate romance received an abrupt termination.

Taylor Holmes in Saxophone Part in "Silent" Drama

Taylor Holmes, stage star, has one reason, at least, to be thankful for having gone into the pictures. In "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship," his first Essanay production, the scenario calls for Mr. Holmes to "play sentimental music on a saxophone."

"Thank goodness this is silent drama," the star remarked. "On the stage I would have to really learn to play the thing."

R. A. Walsh and Miriam Cooper in Play

R. A. Walsh, director of William Fox's cinemelodrama, "The Honor System," has begun another photodrama with Miriam Cooper in the leading role. This will be Mr. Walsh's third film with Miss Cooper since "The Honor System." The others were "The Silent Lie" and "The Innocent Sinner." All were made at the Fox studios in Hollywood, Cal.

Plays and Stars for Paramount's New Plan

The Paramount Pictures Corporation now issues the titles of the first productions in which each of the stars is to appear when the new plan of distribution is put into effect August 5.

For Margaret Clark's first appearance, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's great comedy "The Amazons" has been chosen. It was staged under the direction of Joseph Kaufman. "The Amazons" presents Miss Clark in the role of one of the three daughters of the Marchioness of Castlejordan, whose great regret in life is the fact that they are daughters instead of sons.

Pauline Frederick will star in "The Show Down," an exceptionally powerful story written by Hector Turnbull, former head of the Famous Players-Lasky scenario department.

Billie Burke in Gelett Burgess' "The Mysterious Miss Terry" has been chosen. Thomas Meighan appears in support of Miss Burke. It was directed by J. Searle Dawley.

"Mrs. Raffles' Career" has been selected as the medium for Julian Eltinge's photoplay debut. The story was written by Gelett Brues and Carolyn Wells.

For Mme. Petrova, the company has selected "The Law of the Land," an adaptation of George Broadhurst's sensational stage success of a few years ago. Maurice Tourneur, one of the best-known directors in the country, is in charge of this adaptation.

Vivian Martin will first appear under the direction of Robert Thornley in "Little Miss Optimist." It shows her as a little waif of the slums.

Jack Pickford and Louise Huff will make their first appearance in the "Star Series" in an adaptation of Owen Johnson's famous Lawrenceville story, "The Varmint." This picture was directed by William H. Taylor.

Susse Hayakawa, popular Japanese star, will first appear as "Hashimura Togo" in an adaptation of Wallace Irwin's inimitable stories of the adventures of the Japanese schoolboy. This version was especially written for the screen by Mr. Irwin himself and directed by W. C. De Mille.

The choice of a vehicle for Lina Cavalieri, who has just joined the Paramount stellar forces, has already been made and the final preparations of the script are already under way. The title has not yet been selected.

Wallace Reid will first appear in "The Hostage," an original story by Beulah Marie Dix.

Greater Vitagraph Has New Star in Corinne Griffith

Greater Vitagraph will present a new star in the person of Miss Corinne Griffith, a former Southern society belle, on July 16.

Miss Griffith's rise, which has been a meteoric one, started with her part in "The Last Man." After making a name for herself in short reel subjects in the west, she was transferred to the Vitagraph eastern studio to play with Earle Williams.

The play which marks her debut in a stellar role is a secret service drama of pulsating interest called "The Stolen Treaty."

Pathe's Girl Farm Laborers Are Really at Work

College girls in farm work are pictured in current Hearst-Pathe News releases. The girls are members of the Westchester County unit headed by Miss Ida Ozliffe, professor of geology at Barnard College, recruited by the Mayor's Committee of Women for National Defense. A sprinkling of milliners, dressmakers and factory girls also is in the unit.

At present the girls are making $1.50 to $2 a day hoeing, haying and weeding on Westchester County farms. Later they will be berrying, harvesting and hops-picking and indulging in all the other stunts so well known to folk endeavoring to live "close to nature."
Five Art Dramas with Strong Casts for July

Joe Welch and Paul Armstrong’s Widow Appear in One—Jean Sothern in “Miss Deception”—when You and I Were Young” Another

FIVE productions of merit are promised for release by Art Dramas, Incorporated, during the month of July.

The productions are: “The Peddler,” U. S. Amusement; “Miss Deception,” Van Dyke; “When You and I were Young,” Apollo; “The Millstone,” Erbograph, and an untitled feature from the U. S. Amusement Corporation.

“The Peddler” was originally intended to be a special, but the demand from exchanges persuaded the producers to make it a regular program release. The picture will mark Joe Welch’s first important screen appearance. He has been in vaudeville and on the legitimate stage for over thirty years, but has done practically no photoplay work.

Frederic Chapin adapted the Hal Reid story, keeping close to the original. Catherine Calvert, widow of Paul Armstrong, supports Welch, as Sarah, the housekeeper. Herbert Blache himself directs the production. In the cast are Sidney Mason, Kittens Reichert and Sally Crute.

“Miss Deception” is from the pen of Joseph Franklin Poland. Jean Sothern is the society girl who pretends to be an uneducated westerner. Edwin Stanley is leading man, others being Mary Mooerials and Jack Newton. The director is Eugene Howland.

“When You and I were Young” has a story and scenario by Frederick Rath. Alma Hanlon is starred with Harry Hammond, Robert B. Mantell, Jr., has a role. Clarence Underwood put his studio at the disposal of the author for local color.

“The Millstone” is a picturization of the Albert Payson Terhune story, in Red Book. The company, the Erbograph, paid $1,000 for the rights. Ben M. Goetz will direct the star of national reputation whose name is not announced because contracts are pending.

The fifth production of the month will come from the U. S. Amusement Corporation studios. It is as yet untitled. Further announcements regarding it will come later, when the cast is fully assembled.

Mix-up of Actor and Minister in Victor Moore Comedy

Victor Moore’s new comedy, “The Wrong Mr. Fox,” single reel, will be released on July 16, as announced by Klever Pictures, Inc. It was written by Moore himself, and has to deal with an adventure of an actor and a minister. In this picture Moore gets away from the “family series” for the time being.

This time Moore plays Jimmy Fox, a “not so good” actor, who leaves for Canada, Vt., to join a troupe. At the same time a Rev. Fox leaves for his new church appointment in Canaan, N. H. It happens that they both take wrong trains, and Jimmy Fox instead of arriving at Canaan, Vt., arrives at Canaan, N. H., and the Rev. Fox at Canaan, Vt.

In consequence, the actors of the troupe meet the minister and the deacons of the church meet the actor. The deacons think Jimmy is the new minister, and before he knows it he is hustled to the deacon’s home. The mix-up of taking Jimmy for the new minister does not stop him. He starts to play a regular “Billy Sunday,” and nearly gets away with it. He would have, if he hadn’t forgotten his trousers. They play a very important part in the end of the story.

The idea of this comedy is distinctly different from anything Moore has yet produced, and the fun that is in it comes out of the situations. It comes fast and often, and keeps Moore hopping all the way to the finish, with the results that make it a genuine laugh producer.

Two Units Released in Essanay’s “Do Children Count?”

“Weep No More” and “The Uneven Road” are the two units of Essanay’s series “Do Children Count?” which are due for current release.

This series features little Mary McAllister, the six-year-old star who recently was appointed a sergeant in the regular army in recognition by the War Department of her work for the Red Cross and in recruiting men for the army.

Charles Mortimer Peck, the author, designed the series as a cycle of problems arising out of the rearing of children, and gleaned many of his plots from records of the divorce and juvenile courts.

The first of these units presents the case of an orphaned child and was released July 18. It strikes a blow at so-called child-welfare workers who break up the little heroine’s comfortable home because they believe it is not a fit place for her to live.

These productions, twelve in number, are being released each week by General Film. All references to birth control and sex propaganda has been carefully avoided in them. Each has a screen time, approximately, of twenty-five minutes, and is a picture complete in itself.

Magic Pajamas Work Wonders in Yorke-Metro Film

Food Conservation in Paramount-Bray Picture

The seventy-sixth Paramount-Bray pictograph will include pictures of the delegation of the Woman Suffrage Party of New York State on its conservation tour.

Equipped with the necessary materials, these women are motoring from farmhouse to farmhouse all through New York and are teaching the scientific, and that means the “easy” and practical way of preserving.

The picture will serve as a splendid example and first lesson in how to carry out these methods, and should be welcomed by every woman who wants to do her share toward helping her country in this time of national crisis.

And everybody knows that in these strenuous times every good housewife is doing her level best to alleviate conditions.

Admiral Fiske Views Bray Pictures of His Torpedoplane

Admiral Bradley Fiske, U. S. N., and Allan R. Hawley, president of the Aero Club of America, were guests of honor at a special demonstration of a motion picture at the Paramount Pictures Corporation projection room Monday. Drawings showing the theory and operation of the torpedoplane were shown.

The torpedoplane is the invention of Admiral Fiske and the United States Government is seriously considering its adoption. The inventor himself had not seen one of the 19,200 drawings, which comprise the completed picture made at Bray Studios from his own drawings.

Paramount-Bray “Key to Beauty” Deferred

The subject entitled “Key to Beauty,” originally scheduled for the sixty-ninth release of Paramount-Bray Pictographs, has been deferred and will be included in the seventy-sixth release of that popular screen magazine.

This subject is sure to find favor among the gentler sex, for it is an exposition of the methods adopted by some of our famous stage beauties in preserving and developing their charms—and these methods can, if milady is ambitious, be used by her in her boudoir to her great advantage.

Universal “Scoop”

Universal’s big news feature, showing the arrival of General Pershing’s advance guard in France, is scoring a hit.

When it was released last Friday, practically every first run theatre in New York demanded a print.

A special showing was given to representatives of the press, and several of the daily newspapers carried stories telling of the pictorial scoop put over by Universal.

Enlarged prints of the exploit negatives were ordered as special pictorial features by the biggest dailies in the country, including the New York World, the Philadelphia North American, the Chicago Herald, the Atlanta Constitution and others.

At the same time a print was shipped to the company’s branch manager in Washington, and the following day was shown to government officials in the War and Navy building, under the supervision of General Weaver. Many of the high dignitaries present broke into cheers.

General Weaver and other members of the war and naval boards complimented officials of the Universal Company highly upon the patriotic zeal shown by the distribution of these historic scenes in America.

As the star attraction of the news feature, General Pershing “gets over” with all of the vim of an experienced film hero. In this connection it is interesting to note that the leader of our expeditionary forces has overcome his former aversion to motion pictures. During the recent Mexican unpleasantness the General absolutely refused to allow the film reporters to get their machines in focus in his vicinity.

H. C. Allen on New Plans of Peter Pan Film

H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, is one of the men in the motion picture industry who hold that merchandising methods in the trade must be reduced to an exact science.

In the sale of other articles of merchandise, this already has been done—it should be done with films.

“No take soap for example,” said Mr. Allen, who was in New York last week. “If a manufacturer of soap tried to maintain his market by using one channel of distribution he would fail. Soap must have nation-wide distribution—all available channels must be cultivated. Large appropriations for advertising and publicity would not keep his hold on the market until the soap were good soap.

“The sterling business methods of merchandising that have made the United States commercial leader of the world can well be applied to the sale and distribution of films.”

It was brought out by Mr. Allen that he is now planning an important consolidation to do its own producing on a big scale. It expects to develop a class of films different from and in addition to the Mo-Toy Comedies. He plans to make substantial and permanent relations with first class exchanges, supplying them with publicity and advertising along original lines.

The plan will enable the Peter Pan Film Corporation to secure choice of their own representatives in each community, but in such a way that the exchanges will find a lucrative business. It is based upon rigid protection of the interests of the exchanges.

Exchanges who handle these productions and exhibitors also, will find themselves with what is virtually a self-selling proposition.

Cleveland Magazine Makes Hit with Local Pictures

This week’s edition of the Cleveland Plain Dealer’s Motion Picture Magazine reel brought people flocking to all the theatres releasing the film.

Universal interest all through the state was exhibited for pictures of the review of the Boy Scouts of Northern Ohio held recently at League Park when the Chief Boy Scout Commissioner Dan Beard visited there.

Every Boy Scout’s mother and father wanted to see their boy on the screen, and every girl’s brother wanted to see the sights that were shot on the public square on a windy day. The sisters satisfied their longing for a sight of the men who tell them what’s what in the world of things and the women who tell what’s what in the world of clothes, when the Plain dealer picnic at Elbert Baker’s Gates Mill home was snapped.

Gaumont’s Promising List for July 14

“Mutual Tours Around the World.” Gaumont’s reel of travel, scheduled for release July 17, goes to Avignon, a beautiful and historic city in southeastern France, shows the ruined palace of Tiberius and takes the motion picture traveler to the mysterious Timbuktu, and to a city of the Sudan.

Reel Life, the weekly film magazine, released July 19, initiates the spectator into the mysteries of the construction of the incandescent lamp, shows a novel bicycle race, shows the raising of coconuts, pictures the Boy Scout Signal Corps and contains animated cartoons from Life.

Mutual Weekly, No. 133, is released July 18, and will contain pictures of the latest news. No. 131, released July 2, shows the arrival of the American Ambulance Corps on the French front, the arrival of Italy’s war envoys, the attack on suffragettes at Washington, the arrival of American army surgeons at Blackpool, Eng., and the bread line in Rome, Italy.
Mid-West Theatres Sign for Goldwyn First Runs

First run motion picture theatres are reported to be rapidly linking up with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Jones, Linick and Schaefer, owners of a Chicago chain of theatres, have signed for all the Goldwyn productions. Their first showing will be at the Colonial theatre, in the heart of the city.

Aaron J. Jones, of that theatre, in signing the contract, wrote:

"We have the utmost faith and feel that Goldwyn is making a great advance in motion picture production. I predict that Goldwyn pictures will be tremendously popular with the American public."

Jones, Linick and Schaefer are associated with Ascher Brothers, and other magnates, in the control of half a hundred theatres in Chicago.

John H. Kunsky has signed for the first run nights for Goldwyn pictures in Detroit. In an interview with a Detroit newspaper reporter Mr. Kunsky expresses his pleasure in obtaining the productions.

Goldwyn announcements state that Mr. Kunsky was among the big motion picture men who were first to demand cleanliness and quality in the dramas shown in their houses. He was one of the most assiduous seekers for clean films.

W. J. and W. Dusenbury, acting through Goldwyn's Cleveland office, have booked the features for the Grand theatre, Columbus, O.

Vitagraph Week at Los Angeles Picture Houses

Last week was Vitagraph week at three of the leading downtown Los Angeles theatres. "The Magnificent Medley," featuring Antonio Moreno and Mary Anderson, was on at Clunes Auditorium, Anita Stewart in "Clover's Rebellion," the attraction at Tally's, and Earle Williams in "The Soul Master," the principal part of the program at the Palace theatre, just off Broadway.

The contract for the bookings were made by Manager H. M. Lentz of Los Angeles Greater Vitagraph Exchange.

Wants Mary Miles Minter Every Sunday in Year

E. Stary, manager of the Overland theatre, Chicago, has written to the Mutual Film Corporation, as follows:

"We ran Mary Miles Minter in 'Annie for Spite' on Sunday, June 24, and our receipts amounted to $25 more than any previous day in the interest of the house. We believe that this is some record considering that this day was the hottest of the year up to the present. Our one regret is that we cannot get Mary Miles Minter for every Sunday in the year."

Bookings of Terry Reels

The Short Feature Exchange, distributors of the Terry Human Interest reels in New York, report they have booked the Strand theatre for the entire series.

Sidney B. Lust, distributor in Maryland, Virginia, District of Columbia and North Carolina, writes an initial release has been arranged in Washington at Moore's Garden, and in Baltimore at the Parkway theatre.

Feats of Gallant Russian Arms Aid "The Queen of Spades"

American interest in Russia as a sister republic has been so stimulated by the wonderful feats of the gallant Russian arms recently that excellent booking is expected for "The Queen of Spades."

The film version adheres closely to the book by A. S. Pushkin, who has been called "the Dickens of Russia." It was produced at studios in Moscow—the Errol MICHI studio—under the supervision of Nathan S. Kaplan, who has brought the film to America.

Distinguished artists of the Russian theatre take the various parts. One of them is I. M. Mazulkin.

The play reveals to the uttermost the powers of the novelist in probing the darkest corners of the human soul. The climax is the death of the countess.

Compliments for Mutual's "Periwinkle" Wired from Georgia

Frank Muller, of the Modjeska theatre, Augusta, Ga., has sent the following telegram to Mutual:

"'Periwinkle' another big success. Any exhibitor who overlooked this star production should be on the firing line. Give me rebooking for Wednesday, June 27. Confirm at once. Thanks."

Pathe Reports Good Booking on "The Fatal Ring"

"The Fatal Ring," Pathe's latest serial, released July 8, has broken all records in the great number of advance bookings made by the exhibitors and in the number of bookings that range from two days to a full week's showing at the various theatres.

Pearl White, the Pathe serial star supreme, with the wonderful reputation she has made for herself the three preceding summers, was partly responsible for the record-breaking business. Combined with her name and her fame was a story and a production untried in serials, and she comes strong with an overwheebling demand upon public sympathy.

From all the Pathe Exchanges comes the same report, based on the verdict of the exhibitors, that "The Fatal Ring" is the best serial Pathe has produced to date and that Pearl White will be as big a drawing card in it as she was in "The Iron Claw," "The Exploits of Elaine," and "The Perils of Pauline."

Exhibitors Demanding Bookings for First Wilbur-Art Drama

Since the announcement last week of the addition of David Horsley to the list of manufacturers producing for Art Dramas Program, letters from exhibitors all over the country have been pouring into the exchanges, demanding bookings on the features.

Many theatres which had never shown Art Dramas previously signed up for the program.

The deal is considered by officials of the company and by the picture industry at large to be of extreme significance.

The "Eye of Envy," first Wilbur-Art Drama, during the week was given a showing to the officers privately.

"Rule of Reason" Company Creating "Safety Film" for Central Railroad of New Jersey
IN THE STATE RIGHTS FIELD

Middle West Territory Open for "Crisis"

ANNOUNCEMENT was made some time ago of the change of officers in the Sherman-Elliott Company, of Minneapolis, which is handling William N. Selig's "The Crisis," a picturization of Winston Churchill's novel of the same name.

Edward Nelson, the new president, is another attorney to enter the motion picture field. Mr. Nelson has made a thorough and careful study of the motion picture business and has had practical experience with the buying and marketing of feature films. He is a live wire in every sense of the word and, since he assumed the active reins of the Sherwood-Elliott Company unusual prosperity has resulted for the company.

David H. Beecher, the vice-president of Sherman-Elliott, is an investment banker and is heavily interested in many North Dakota banks. F. H. Peterson, the treasurer, is president of the Union State Bank of Minneapolis. They have been interested in some of the important film productions of the past few years.

Last fall the Sherman-Elliott Company purchased from the Selig Polyscope Company the rights for the United States and Canada for "The Crisis." To date all the United States territory east of the Mississippi has been disposed of, including Missouri, California, Arizona and Nevada, together with the Canadian rights.

Some of the rich Middle Western territories are still open and buyers should communicate immediately with Mr. Nelson at 854 McKnight Building, Minneapolis, Minn. Long and successful runs of this film have taken place in many of the larger cities of the country and the play has proven itself a great box-office attraction. Many requests for bookings in unsold territory are on file at the company's office.

Many Bookings for Foursquare Subjects

M. H. Hoffman of the Foursquare Exchange, New York, reports a number of successful bookings for the pictures handled by the company.

The Avon theatre, Rochester, N. Y., has contracted to run "The Bar Sinister" for the week of July 8 and "Madam Sherry" for the week of July 15.

Among a few of the theatres in Greater New York that have booked "The Bar Sinister" and "The Sin Woman" during the month of July are: Olympia Theatre, Broadway, City; Bushman Theatre, Harlem; Regun Theatre, Harlem; Empire Theatre, Bronx; Cecil Spooner Theatre, Bronx; Rialto Theatre, Linden Theatre, all of Brooklyn, and Garden Theatre, Richmond Hill, and Marathon Theatre, Brooklyn.

Streimer Investigates Trade Conditions

State Righter Who Is Interested in "Whither Thou Goest" Will Tell Convention Members Result of His Observations After Eastern and Middle West Tour

In order to have fresh data for the National Convention, Moe Streimer, of Klotz and Streimer, Inc., is now on a tour of the Eastern and Middle Western territories and has arranged his itinerary so that he will close his trip at Chicago on the fourteenth of July, in time to attend the opening sessions of the convention.

Mr. Streimer has been associated with the state rights end of the industry for many years. He has been through the many vicissitudes of the business and anything that he may have to say to the film men assembled in Chicago on the subject of state rights of features will undoubtedly be of interest.

On his way West, Mr. Streimer will pay particular attention to current conditions affecting the exchanges in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Cleveland and Detroit, and in these cities he will investigate both the merchandising angles that affect the producer and the amusement conditions that are of vital importance to the exchange man as well as the exhibitor.

"There are three positive and distinct sides to this business," says Mr. Streimer, "they are the artistic, the commercial and the amusement sides. The first interests the producer, the second governs the distributor and the third concerns the exhibitor. All angles of the business, however, are controlled by the amusement side because in this the public is the all powerful factor. It is impossible therefore to tell exactly where in the business real merchandising principles exert their strongest force.

"Success therefore depends upon an intimate knowledge of all three sides of the industry and this intimate knowledge can be gained only by a personal study of the particular and peculiar demands existing in the different sections of the country.

"These conditions," says Mr. Streimer, "do not remain set; they are like the sands, constantly changing, and in order to keep abreast of the times, it is necessary to study them at regular intervals.

"We should all help toward," continued Mr. Streimer, "by exchanging our views, and when I get to Chicago I will be glad to give the results of my investigations to the trade."

While in Chicago Mr. Streimer will make his headquarters at the Hotel Sherman, he expects to remain until July 14, and will remain until the 22nd, during which time he will show the Klotz and Streimer production, "Whither Thou Goest," to the state rights buyers.

 Hirsh Buys "Submarine Eye" for New York

A deal has just been consummated between the Williamson Brothers, the producers of "The Submarine Eye" and Nathan Hirsh, president of the Civilization Pioneer Film Corporation, 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, whereby the latter concern will distribute this feature throughout New York State, including Greater New York.

Exhibitors need no introduction to this corporation which has successfully handled many of the leading box-office attractions and has recently been in the lime-light through their activities with "Civilization" and "Redemption."

Dixon Boardman Feature Disposed of by James A. Stiles

"Trooper 44," the Dixon Boardman feature in five reels, has been disposed of in the United States through the agency of James A. Stiles, 220 West Forty-second street, to M. L. Tobias, of 729 Seventh avenue.

Mr. Stiles is finishing a series of scenic productions known as "Travellettes," which are to be released through a program at the rate of two a month. The producer states that they contain sufficient novelty to keep them away from the ordinary travelogue picture heretofore used.

Clune Film at $1.00

Clune's "The Eyes of the World," broke into the Northwestern territory July 1, when it was shown for two weeks at The Metropolitan theatre in Seattle. The scale of prices was $1, 75, 50 and 25 cents.

"Call to Arms" Is Name for Lincoln Cycle
Benjamin Chapin Decides on This Title for the Series of Four Features Depicting the Great Emancipator, Because of Stirring National Events

THE Benjamin Chapin "Lincoln Cycle" continues its run at the Globe theatre, New York, and will reach its hundredth performance during the coming week. From now on the entire cycle of four features, "My Mother," "My Father," "Myself" and "The Call to Arms," will be known under the one title, "The Call to Arms," the other three features retaining their designations, however, as parts of the whole.

"I have long felt it advisable to take this step," said Mr. Chapin, in announcing the name selected for his production. "While 'The Lincoln Cycle' identifies and designates the picture, I have never intended it as a title. What to select as a name for the group of pictures has, however, presented a good deal of a problem.

The answer came to me through the stirring national events of the past few weeks. 'The Call to Arms' is the biggest thing in this country today. It is the soul of this picture—not only in its episodes now classed under that title, but all the way through. It may well include all the rest."

"Then, too, this name has to me another deep significance, particularly befitting the entire group of pictures. In the picture there is more than one 'call to arms,' which touches the heart. There is the call of the loving mother's arms to little Abe, comforting and aiding him in his efforts to learn to read, that he may guide his own footsteps by those of Washington; there is the call of the father's arms to his patient, though sorely tried, little boy, when the father finally realizes that the child's ways are wiser than his own, and they come to their understanding of one another.

"There are many such dramatic thrills that bring tears or laughter, each of which expresses a 'call to arms'; and so this series will be thus entitled for its further appearances in New York and throughout the country."

Newspaper Men Edit Two Comedies for the Whartons

THE editors of New York State took on a new role last week when they became film editors and actors in addition to their regular life of getting out newspapers. The cause of it all was their convention at Ithaca and the appointment of the Whartons to provide one of the day's entertainments.

First of all, the editors were taken to the Crescent theatre, where they were told that they would be made to work. Two comedies then were shown in their rough state, just as they are shown in the projection rooms of a studio when the film has come from the assembling room for the first time. The editors were made to get out their paper and pencils and told to make suggestions for subtitles and do other work that is necessary in the final assembling of a picture.

Following this the members of the New York Press Association were taken to the studio of the Whartons, where they were put through a little scenario arranged by John K. Holbrook, while the cameras clicked. Then, three hours later, the members of the association were called to the Crescent theatre, where they saw themselves as they appeared on the screen. The appreciation of the editors was expressed in cheers—and many a request was made for the picture to be run as a trailer in many of the houses of the cities where the various editors own newspapers.

Educational Sells Territory for "Fairy"
E. W. Hammond, of the Educational Films Corporation of America, has closed additional territory on "The Fairy and the Wolf," featuring Mary Miles Minter.

The Atlanta Film Exchange, of Atlanta, has secured the rights to the picture for Alabama, Mississippi, Georgia, South Carolina and Florida. The Reliable Feature Film Company, of Chicago, has closed for Illinois and Indiana.

"Hate" Gets Good Will of Film Men

Although no official announcement has been made regarding the disposition of its feature, "Hate," executives of the Fairmount Film Corporation were optimistic during the past week over several propositions which were under consideration by William A. Mooney and Robert Bolling, representing the producing company and Gus Mohme, who is handling the business incident to the distribution of the feature.

At various times during the week, "Hate" was shown to state rights buyers representing territories between New York and California, and it is said that the impression made by these showings was responsible in a large measure for the interest displayed by exhibitors throughout the week. It was stated by the officers of the company that an announcement regarding the disposition of the American rights would be made within a few days.

"Beware of Strangers" Books Well
A. Dreiser, manager of the Exhibitors' Film Exchange, Washington, D. C., is receiving encouraging bookings on the state rights picture, "Beware of Strangers." It has had a week's run at the Garden and Ford's in Baltimore, and will be used by Harry Crandall in that city for nearly two weeks at his chain of theatres.

It has been booked for a week at the Wells houses in Norfolk and Richmond, a week at the Victoria, in Wilmington, Del., and for three days at the Isis, at Lynchburg, Va. Other lengthy bookings are pending.

Short Features Booking Well
The Short Features Exchange of New York, organized about ten weeks ago to exploit short pictures of merit, announces its business is already successful.

All of the pictures released by the Short Features Exchange are, as the name implies, "short features." Henry Ginsberg, manager, says he is ready to "show" any exhibitor in Greater New York how to eliminate the word "flier" from his program.
Divides Mountain Territory Between Butte and Denver

Jesse J. Goldburg Recommends State Lines to Be Disregarded in High Western Plateau and Country Apportioned on Lines to Be Made With Aid of Well-Informed Railroad Men

By Jesse J. Goldburg

With respect to this territory from an exhibiting standpoint, I must again voice complaint that exhibitors are not exercising themselves to the maximum. The maximum amount of returns consistent with a legitimate expenditure. The front of houses are brilliantly lighted and plentifully plastered with lithographs, and the newspapers are generously patronized, but once in the theatre, it seems that all that is done is to throw a picture on the screen without any attempt to properly stage it.

Houses charging ten and fifteen cents admission run pictures that are anywhere from six months to a year old, and only because they can be procured exceedingly cheap. There is no attempt to give the public the best that can be had as soon as it can be had. That is, perhaps, the reason why some of our biggest and best dramatic productions have never seen the light of day here, or rather the light of the projection machine.

I shall in my next article deal with the question of censorship as a whole, as I have studied it throughout the United States. It is still one of the perplexing problems confronting the manufacturer and the exchange men, largely because of the fact that it is eating its way into the very heart of the industry, silently and insidiously.

Seng Will Sell Rights to "Parentage" After Rialto Showing

Immediately after the showings at the Rialto in New York City, and the Colonial in Chicago, when it is hoped that all of the buyers will have had an opportunity of seeing "Parentage" in the proper atmosphere, Frank J. Seng will open negotiations with those states right buyers who have called on him and those who have written to him, giving preference in their order of receipt. Mr. Seng is expected in New York for the early part of this week, from Chicago, where he has been actively engaged in cooperating with the Colonial Theatre for the showing during convention week.

Jacquies Like Mutt and Jeff

The Mutt and Jeff films, which have met with success throughout the country, were recently shown to an enthusiastic audience on board the battleship Kentucky. Officers and enlisted men alike welcomed them as a real spice to their strenuous existence. This was the war-time, according to James S. Day, chaplain of the Kentucky.

Mr. Day, in a recent letter to the Bud Fisher Film Company, New York City, acknowledging a donation of the films, says:

"You have shown real patriotism by your action and have furnished a very definite service that can't be estimated in dollars and cents. Keep them coming and we will do your fighting for you!"
Fixed Prices for State Rights, Says Sherman

Independent Operator Intends to Inaugurate a Plan Recognized as Great Aid in Stabilizing the Market and Gaining Confidence of Exchanges

THE Sherman Pictures Corporation, New York City, not only plans to buy and sell state rights subjects, but it will advance money to producers in need of funds to complete a picture, provided it comes up to the standard set by Harry Sherman for his releases. No such offer has ever been made by any state rights buyer or distributor, it is said, since the beginning of the industry.

The company will soon launch an extensive advertising campaign and campaign for "I Believe," recently purchased, and considered by Mr. Sherman to be a picture of exceptional box-office qualities.

"The producer who has a really good picture will find us ever ready to talk business with him," said Mr. Sherman. "And if the production is up to our standard we will be ready to purchase it at a figure that will allow him a good profit. We are not out to make a hundred per cent profit. We are willing to invest eighty or ninety thousand dollars in a picture back twenty-five or thirty. But every picture distributed by us must have qualities which will make it just as popular in Europe, Australia, South Africa and South America as it is here."

"We don't want sex pictures. We don't want vampire pictures, or anything that has an unsavory flavor to them. What we want are good clean pictures for those who have clean minds, and we are willing to assist the producer who is ready to give the public the best he has, and we know then we are catering to popular taste."

Novel Advertising for Century Comedies

Julius Stern and J. G. Blystone have prepared a line of special advertising novelties for their Century comedies, "Balloonatics," "Auto-Maniacs," "Neptune's Naughty Daughter," featuring Alice Howell, and her latest subject, "Alice of the Sawdust." The advertising matter consists of special paper of the most useful sizes, novel lobby displays, special slides and electrocs. Each subject is particularly adapted to novel advertising methods, automobiles, balloons, the deep blue sea and scenes with a traveling circus forming the basis of the various releases.

"State rights buyers are finding ready distribution for Century Comedies throughout the country," says Mr. Stern. "Alice Howell was an established favorite before she was made a star in her own right. For several seasons she has been principal comedienne in a popular brand of comedies that have found their way into the smallest hamlet that can boast a picture theatre. Her name is known to every lover of film laughs, and her ability to compete with male stars in comedy ways was established long before we made her a fixed star in filmdom."

Hiller Is Successful Executive

Among the successful younger executives in the state rights field is L. L. Hiller, treasurer of the King Bee Films Corporation, New York City.

Mr. Hiller's rise has been rapid. Prior to 1914 he had been identified with commercial and banking pursuits in Pittsburg, but in that year he succumbed to the 'picture lure' and engineered a simultaneous three-theatre motion picture show at the Grand Central Palace.

With Jacob Wilk he next founded the Authors' Associated Agency for handling motion picture scenarios. The growth of this enterprise led to an expansion of his film activities, and the formation of Hiller and Wilk, state rights brokers. Next, on the foundation of the King Bee Films Corporation, Mr. Hiller was unanimously chosen by his associates in that enterprise to fill the office of treasurer—never a sinecure in a film company, and demanding sound business principles in its occupant.

Mr. Hiller, being in the early thirties, has the better part of his career before him. He is very much liked by all those in daily association with him and popular in the industry, two important factors in motion picture success.

M. & R. Gets "Crisis" for Three States

The M. & R. Feature Film Exchange with branches in Los Angeles and San Francisco, has taken over the booking of the Selig production of "The Crisis" for California, Nevada and Arizona.

This company is handling the Ivan productions, "Flora Finch Comedies," and "Tommy's Romance" for the state of California. A new office was recently opened in Los Angeles, and is under the management of H. W. Stebbins, and is located at 730 S. Olive street.

Wolfberg Buys "Deemster" for Three States

Several big deals involving foreign and domestic rights to Hall Caine's "Deemster," starring David Hall Caine, were closed during the past week by W. E. Shallenberger, president of the Arrow Film Corporation.

Harris P. Wolfberg, representing a consortium of Midwest capitalists, bought the rights to Ohio, West Virginia and western Pennsylvania. Mr. Wolfberg is well known throughout his territory, having at one time or another represented some of the biggest and most important distributing companies. Recently he branched out as a state rights promoter by securing "The Crisis" from Harry Sherman and has achieved remarkable success. Mr. Wolfberg purposes establishing offices in Cincinnati and Cleveland. His present headquarters are in Pittsburg.

Rifkin Reports Good Bookings on an Ivan

Herman Rifkin, of the Eastern Feature Film Company, 57 Church street, Boston, reports that he is doing an excellent business on "One Law for Both," produced by Ivan, New York. Among the largest theatres at which he has booked this picture are those on the Poli Circuit and the Modern theatre, Boston, and the results from each of these warrants his assertion that "One Law for Both" is a winner.

Second Runs for "Barrier"

"The Barrier" is now playing second runs in the four largest Northwestern cities. James Cagney, of Seattle, has the first and second run rights for this picture and has done exceptionally well with it. The business done by this picture in Spokane, Wash., was better than that of either Seattle or Portland, Ore.
All Star Features Manager Writes of Los Angeles First Runs

Irving M. Lesser, Los Angeles manager for All Star Features Distributors, Inc., writes in regarding bookings:

"'Little Miss Fortune,' an Erbograph production, is playing this week at the Garrick theatre, one of the largest first-run houses in town, and 'The Mystic Hour,' Apollo, is being booked an entire week at the Palace theatre.

"This is a good average, for it shows that we are placing fifty per cent. of our goods first-run. In this manner we are surpassing our competitors. At the present time there is no Paramount first-run customer, no World, no Vitagraph, no Mutual, no K-E-S-E, no Pathe, and still the Art Dramas Program is being placed.

"I have not yet had the opportunity of placing 'House of Cards' in a first-run theatre, but the comments of those who have seen it have been so favorable, and my personal opinion of it is also so good, that I shall not release it until I have the opportunity of placing it in some first-run house.

"I wish you would express to the manufacturers who are contributing to our program my appreciation of pictures of the quality of 'House of Cards.'"

Must Be a Story and Capable Players, Says Moss

B. S. Moss believes that not only is "the play the thing," but that the players must have enough personality to make the play impressive. This combination of the two elements necessary for the success of a photoplay, he declares, accounts for the popularity of "One Hour," the six-reel sequel to Elmer Glyn's "One Day" and "Three Weeks."

"Everyone of the leading players in 'One Hour,' is a screen star in his or her own right," says Mr. Moss. "Starting with Zena Keefe and Alan Hale, the principal figures in the drama, the cast includes such notables as Ina Brooks, Warren Cook, William Marion, Henry W. Pemberton and D. J. Flanagan."

Paul McAllister and Edwin Hollywood directed the feature. Most of the exterior scenes were taken near Jacksonville, Fla., and at Lake Placid and Fort Montgomery, N. Y.

Shepard & Van Loan to Handle Bernstein Films

Producer Finishes "Loyalty"—"Seven Cardinal Virtues" Series to Be Issued Separately

BEFORE leaving for the Pacific Coast last week, Isadore Bernstein announced that he had made arrangements with Shepard and Van Loan whereby this company, which was incorporated for the purpose of handling the advertising, publicity and exploitation for big organizations, will act as the representative of Bernstein Film Productions.

In addition to looking after his advertising and publicity, this concern will handle the marketing of all the Bernstein productions, and will be responsible for these pictures from the moment they leave the studio in their finished state until they are disposed of either on a state rights basis or through various exchanges.

The Bernstein studios are at present working on a fourth production, called "Justice." The first picture made by this company was entitled, "Who Knows?" and following this came "Humility," which Mr. Bernstein had intended to be the first of a series of pictures to be known as "The Seven Cardinal Virtues." The second of this series was completed a few days ago, and is called "Loyalty," which is shortly to be placed upon the market.

Whether Mr. Bernstein will release the series, as first intended, under "The Seven Cardinal Virtues" has not yet been decided. It is possible that each picture will be put out as a separate feature. This could be easily done as each story is complete in itself and all sorts of publicity matter to make it independently bookable, if necessary.

While he was in New York City, Mr. Bernstein had several conferences with Harry Sherman, who organized the Sherman Pictures Corporation last week, and it was rumored in various quarters that Sherman was considering taking over the Bernstein plant, which is said to be one of the finest in the country. Sherman would neither deny nor verify this rumor. However, it is known that he is seriously considering the question of producing pictures himself or entering into an arrangement with some studio whereby he can furnish the scripts and have the productions made to his order.

Sherman is now preparing to leave for the coast within the next few days, with some of the members of his newly formed company, and it would not be at all surprising to hear later that he had made a contract with the Bernstein people.

In addition to this, Shepard and Van Loan have just completed the titling of a feature for the Export and Import Film Company. It is a story based on the Italian novel, "Malombra," by Antonia Fogazzaro. It was made by Cines of Rome, and features Lyda Borelli, the Italian actress, who has done remarkable work in a number of recent productions, especially "Christus."

Sherman Buys Rights to "Land of Rising Sun"

A NNOUCEMENT is made by Dwight Macdonald, general manager of the American-Japan Pictures Company, 15 William street, New York City, that the rights to its serial film-trip, "The Land of the Rising Sun," have been sold for the United States and Canada to Harry Sherman, 218 West Forty-second street, New York City. The rights for the rest of the world are retained under Mr. Macdonald's control, and will be disposed of by him to foreign buyers.

"The Land of the Rising Sun" was shown serially at the Rialto, New York City. There are now ten distinct titles in the series, each of which has lithographs and all sorts of publicity matter to make it independently bookable, if necessary.

As re-edited, the picture can be booked either as a ten-week serial of one reel weekly, as a five-week serial in two-reel episodes, or as a complete production. An extensive advertising campaign has been prepared by the Hesser Publicity Bureau, and will be taken over by Harry Sherman, who will offer the serial to state rights buyers.

The rights to China, Japan and Korea have been sold to the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.
California Scenery for "Garden of Eden"

For the purpose of securing locations that would best represent the beauties of the Garden of Eden for the "Garden of Eden," produced by the Corona Cinema Company, and just finished after six months' work, officers of the company and Frank Beal, the director, made trips through a great deal of the mountainous region of Southern California, as well as visiting most of the islands in the channel group off the coast of the southern port of the state.

The feminine lead in the production is played by Enid Markey, former Triangle leading woman. Miss Markey enacts the role of the modern Eve in the drama, which is introduced by a Biblical prologue. Opposite her is Ed Coxen, another well-known player, who in this picture appears as the young hero. The heavy man of the picture is Jack Standing, one of the celebrated family of actors of that name. Together with these three in the leading roles are Chrissa Schwynne, who appears as the feminine heavy; Eugene Besserer, Alphonso Warner, Elsie Greeson, William Quinn, Arthur Allard, G. Raymond Yne, Jack Lott and George Kuwa, the last named being a Japanese actor of known ability.

Star in "Queen of Spades" Enlists

Word has just been received in New York that Mozukin, the Russian actor, has joined the Moscow division of the Russian aviation corps. After an unsuccessful attempt at enlisting in the army and going so far as to disguise himself and enroll in an outpost of Moscow soldiery, Mozukin has at last persuaded the government to let him become one of the aviation corps. Mozukin is a subsidized actor of the Russian Government.

The first appearance of Mozukin in America was made in Washington on the occasion of the recent reception of the National Press Club to the special Russian Commission at the Willard, in the screen version of Pushkin's "The Queen of Spades," with music of the opera by Tchaikowsky under the direction of N. S. Kaplan and the Russian Art Film Corporation. Mozukin intends visiting America late this Fall and arrangements with the Russian Government were begun before Mr. Kaplan left Petrograd on the second Tuesday after the young Republic was declared.

"In Hands of Fate" Is Offered

Samuel Krellberg and Harry Berg, in conjunction with the Overland Film Company, New York, have secured the rights to a five-reel Russian drama entitled "In the Hands of Fate," which was made in Petrograd.

They intend offering it on a state rights basis.

E. and H. Gets Rights to West Films

The E. and H. Company, Atlanta, has obtained the right to the Billy West Comedies for Georgia, Alabama, South Carolina and Florida. The company reports heavy bookings for the release of these subjects.
Legitimate Houses Run "One Law for Both"

Many of the theatres devoted to the legitimate drama throughout the country are booking "One Law for Both" as a regular attraction, in the belief that the publicity and exploitation this feature has enjoyed will cause it to prove a drawing card for their houses. The feature has enjoyed a successful run during the week of June 24, at Ford's Opera House, Baltimore. Presented with an augmented orchestra at this theatre, "One Law for Both" established new records for this season of the year and was immediately booked by other Baltimore houses for second, third, fourth and fifth runs. Cities in the vicinity of Baltimore, also desirous of obtaining this production, contracted with the Ivan Film Productions through their traveling representative, F. J. Willis, for running the picture, with the result that at the present time three prints are working solid in the territory.

Mr. Miller of the Buffalo Times has arranged to present this feature, under the auspices of his newspaper, at one of the leading theatres in Buffalo, N. Y., giving it a presentation similar to that accorded Ivan Abramson's previous success, "Enlighten Thy Daughter," in the city of Buffalo.

Musical Score for "Alma"

Ruth MacTammany, the star of "Alma," Where Do You Live? in pictures, was left alone in pictures because the war stepped in and spoiled her foreign operatic career. She was singing in Milan, Italy, when it broke out, and though she remained in Europe for two years, she finally had to get back to America, after having been twice arrested as a spy. The Newfields Producing Corporation will present her in six productions a year.

"Alma, Where Do You Live?" was one of the most popular plays ever written. Millions know the "Alma" song, and the extensive advertising campaign devised links it up closely with the picture, to the benefit of the exhibitor. A complete musical score, from the original play, is also provided.

"The Whip" in Seattle

The Clemmer theatre of Seattle has booked "The Whip" and is making extensive preparations to put it over in big shape some time about the middle of July. Admission will be slightly advanced during the showing of this feature.

"NEWS" AIDS HIM IN PICTURE SELECTION

A. W. Walker of Robinson and Walker, Seattle, finds that the aids for state rights buyers maintained by MOTION PICTURE NEWS are a constant source of helpfulness. He said:

"I receive your frequent letters on state rights pictures and find them interesting and helpful."

Walt Mason at Last in Silent Drama

First Four Comedies Based on the Poems and Stories of Famous Kansas Editor and Poet Are About Ready for Release by Filmcraft

R. V. ROTHERMEL, president of the Filmcraft Corporation, 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, states that he is about ready to show the first four of a series of new style comedies produced from the poems and stories of Walt Mason, the famous Emporia, Kansas, editor and poet.

Mr. Rothermel terms these comedies human interest pictures, as every effort has been made to eliminate forced situations and unnatural action. The first of these, "The Dipper" was booked by Mr. Rothapfel, at the Rialto, on a special re-release arrangement, and during the week of its run there two facts were clearly demonstrated. First, that the estimate of ten million a day Walt Mason readers is no idle dream, judging from the percentage of those present at the Rialto. Second, that at every performance the public showed at once its pleasure in simple, natural and humorous, but essentially true-to-life pictures.

Lesser to Organize

Since the recent announcement of his plans for the launching of a national organization of state rights buyers, which aroused considerable conjecture in the trade, Sol L. Lesser has been continually occupied with the development of his project, and it is now authentically announced that the organization will convene in New York City on August 7.

The organization, which is the result of a careful and prolonged study of general conditions, is in a position to purchase the rights to feature productions outright, for the entire United States and Canada, and propositions will be considered at the time of the convention.

Practically all of the United States and Canada are already covered, and the men identified with the enterprise are men whose keen judgment and financial success in the film industry determine unquestionably their desirability as members of the organization.

A tentative meeting of the organization has been held in San Francisco attended by those already actively affiliated.

Netter to Attend Convention

Leon D. Netter, head of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, will return to his office at Cleveland, O., the latter part of July, after a stay in San Francisco of four weeks.

Mr. Netter will then proceed to New York to attend the convention of the National Organization of State Right Buyers to be held on August 7.
"The Lone Wolf" in Ten Cities in August

Success of the Brenon Production for Selznick Pictures at Pre-Release Showing in New York and Chicago Made Change Necessary

"THE LONE WOLF," Herbert Brenon's production for Selznick Pictures, will be given pre-release showing in ten cities early in August. The picture is now playing to good business in the Broadway theatre, New York, and the Studebaker theatre, Chicago.

The dearth of good features in summer and the triumph of the picture in New York and Chicago combined to induce the larger exhibitors to show "The Lone Wolf" in August. It will open on the same day in Philadelphia, Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Boston, St. Louis, Denver, San Francisco, Los Angeles, New Orleans and Detroit.

The New York dailies declared "The Lone Wolf" to be a Brenon triumph and even a better feature than "War Brides."

The American said:

"'The Lone Wolf' at the Broadway is dominated by its director, Mr. Herbert Brenon. Like a Belasco-made play a Brenon-made photo-play bears its own stamp. Mr. Brenon supervises with a painstaking as well as an inspired and, in this latest presentation of his there are many master strokes."

The Tribune said:

"There is never a dull moment from start to finish. Things happen in such rapid succession that it leaves one breathless. Nothing quite so exciting has appeared on the screen as the chase by the 'Pack' after 'The Lone Wolf' and 'Lucy Shannon.'"

The Sun said:

"As General Joffre might have said of 'The Lone Wolf' at the Broadway, 'Ca Marche.' In other words it travels some."

All the other New York dailies were equally enthusiastic over the feature. With three distinct punches in the Burning of the Hotel Troyan, the automobile falling from the raised jaelnitke bridge and the battle between aeroplanes in mid-air, this picture will undoubtedly prove to be one of the biggest moneymakers of the year.

A feature of the Broadway opening was the showing of important scenes in "The Fall of the Romanoffs," the Russian picture Mr. Brenon is directing, with Iliodor, the "Mad Monk" of Russia, playing the leading role.

"Ivan" Ready for Showing in Finished State

"Ivan the Terrible," in preparation for several weeks by the Export and Import Company, New York, is now ready for a showing in its finished state, with an elaborate set of titles in pictorial descriptive style.

Ben Blumenhal of the company wants to emphasize to the trade that "Ivan the Terrible" is an original production, based on Rooul Gunshorg's opera of that name which was produced before the royal court in Petrograd. At that time it was the cause of no little comment among the newspapers in Russia that in the person of Vladimir, the monk, one of the characters in the opera, there was a strong resemblance to the identity of the monk Rasputin, the man of mysterious power in Nicholas's reign, who was shot in a court intrigue.

In "Ivan the Terrible," however, the monk plays a part more creditable to his cloth. The Export and Import Company is preparing an advertising layout in "Ivan the Terrible" which includes twenty-four sheet posters and two-color heralds, as well as large photo displays of a new and striking design.

Warren Discovers Star

Edward Warren claims to have discovered an entirely new star on the motion picture firmament and he predicts a great future for her. Her name is Helen Hayes Brown, and she will appear in Mr. Warren's next production now being rapidly completed at his studios in Grantwood.

Magner Handling "Bar Sinister"

Nat A. Magner, well-known theatrical manager on the Pacific Coast, has bought from Frank Hall-Edgar Lewis' "Bar Sinister." Mr. Magner made the purchase on his recent visit to New York, where he had come to close contracts with stage attractions and artists for next season.

Although Mr. Magner is also prominent in motion picture circles and owns an exchange at 288 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco, where "Beware of Strangers," and Pavlova in "The Dumb Girl of Portie" are among the features being booked, his present visit to New York was made in connection with his theatrical ventures. But he considers "The Bar Sinister" more in the light of a big theatrical attraction than an ordinary picture, and was anxious to gain possession of it for his territory for that reason.

Full Line of Paper for "Who's Your Neighbor?"

Announcement is made by General Manager Herman Becker of the Master Dramas Features, Inc., New York City, that his company will issue a complete line of advertising accessories for "Who's Your Neighbor?"

"Several quasi-official organizations investigating social conditions in New York City have put themselves on record as approving and being in sympathy with this motion picture," says an official of the company. He then goes on to quote R. W. Helber, executive secretary of the Committee of Twelve, who says, "It is a powerful argument in its influence for good. It is absolute in its fidelity to actual conditions."

Sam Zierler New Supervisor of Universal's New York Exchange

The Universal Film Exchange of New York recently came under the direction of Sam Zierler when he was appointed supervisor. Mr. Zierler will now direct the activities of the five branches of this exchange, namely, Mecca, Twenty-third street, Newark; Springfield, Mass., and New Haven, Conn.

For three years Mr. Zierler was manager of the Twenty-third street branch. It is Mr. Zierler's intention, as soon as his extra activities permit, to visit every Universal exhibitor.
Max Asher at Universal City
Making More Comedies
Max Asher, who foresook the film world two years ago, after playing in vaudeville and traveling with his own musical comedy company, is back in Universal City, under the sign of the Big U. He is romping through the same kind of comedies that made him famous.
Craig Hutchinson, who has been associated with the Keystone and the L-Ko comedies, is directing the Asher pictures, and Gladys Tenneyson, who has also appeared in a number of Keystones, has been engaged to play the leading feminine roles.
The Asher pictures will be one-reel releases under the Joker trademark.

Goldwyn Releases Its First Four Features
Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces the names and dates of release of its first four productions. They are:
Goldwyn will inaugurate its releases throughout the world on September 9, with its most widely exploited little star, Mac Marsh, in "Polly of the Circus," Margaret Mayo's play, which made a fortune for its authors and its producers in the dramatic field.
The second Goldwyn Picture will present Madge Kennedy, comedienne, in her first screen production, "Baby Mine," also by Margaret Mayo, and a successful stage farce comedy. This production will be released on September 23.
Maxine Elliott makes her first appearance on any screen in Goldwyn's third release, "Fighting Odds," by Roi Cooper Meguire and Irvin S. Cobb. This will be released October 7.
Jane Cowl is heroine and star in "The Spreading Dawn," the fourth Goldwyn release, to be seen throughout the world on October 21.
Already, in addition to these four productions, Goldwyn has completed four other pictures, and by September 1 will have twelve or more completed pictures ready in every detail. This will mean that Goldwyn will be working six months in advance on its productions, giving its directors, stars and technical staffs ample time to make pictures slowly and carefully.
Only one or two minor delays occurred during the first six months of the company's history, and time lost on these was quickly made up under a system of efficient management.
The company is not assuming that the star alone is the big element to be taken care of.
Both of Miss Mayo's plays, "Polly of the Circus" and "Baby Mine" have had success not only in the American theatre, but in foreign lands. "Baby Mine" has been played in France, Germany and Russia in the languages of these lands, and in addition it was translated into Chinese, had enjoyed a run of 120 nights in Peking, opening for the first time with imperial patronage and indorsement. Both plays have had the additional value of book publication and editions of both exceeded 150,000.
"The Spreading Dawn," Jane Cowl's vehicle, appeared first as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post, with a circulation in excess of 2,000,000 copies weekly, and was then published in book form, with editions running in excess of 100,000.
"Fighting Odds," Maxine Elliott's play, is based upon "Under Sentence," which had a metropolitan presentation as the joint work of Roi Cooper Meguire and Irvin S. Cobb. In this play the prison element of the original story has been totally eliminated. Miss Elliott has the role of the wife of a big Detroit captain of industry, who comes into conflict with a leader in American finance.

Bryant Washburn a Fisherman
Bryant Washburn is a fisherman as well as an actor, and that's no fish story.
While the star and his company were at Essanay's summer campment at Lake Geneva, Wis., filming exteriors for his forthcoming feature, "The Golden Idiot," he practically supplied their table with fish. His biggest catch was a twenty-pound "muskie."

Madge Kennedy and Scenes from Her First Goldwyn Production
Kalem Uses Science Methods to Pick Title

Learning “The Three Musketeers” Is Most Popular Book in Fifty Series Company Chooses "The Yankee Musketeers" for Serial Name

WILLIAM WRIGHT, of the Kalem Company, tells of the selection of the title "The Yankee Musketeers" for a new serial. Mr. Wright says:

"Phil Lang, our editor and production manager, several months ago communicated with the public libraries in fifty cities, inquiring what story of literature was most frequently selected by readers, it being our belief that the replies would throw some interesting light on the public taste. And once the public taste could be summarized, we figured that a serial theme would suggest itself."

"The answers exceeded our most optimistic anticipations, for the majority replied 'The Three Musketeers' by Dumas—giving us a splendid premise. Readers young and old, it appears, are still thrilled by the d'Artagnan adventures. As for the intention trio in old France. And now that we have joined hands with the gallant sons of France, it is safe to assume that the French heroes of old—even in fiction—will be idolized.

"No, we have not taken any of Dumas' situations and given them an American coloring, but in choosing the new serial theme, we certainly have been stimulated by the Dumas' heroes and their tense situations."

Robert Welles Ritchie, author of stories in Harper's, Saturday Evening Post, Collier's and other leading magazines, having written several successful series for us, was commissioned to write 'The Yankee Musketeers.' His work is now nearly completed, and you may be assured that he has provided many novel, thrilling situations, replete with stirring action. In California Mr. Ritchie had several conferences with Mr. Lang, who is now in New York, arranging the final details.

"In a few days we will announce the cast and the director. Then we will give details regarding the serial idea. Briefly, each episode will be a complete story—a policy similar to our former series—but the interest will be cumulative, leading to tremendous situations in the final chapters. The Yankee Musketeers are three typical American types of young men we are justly proud of. Like the Musketeers of old, they are full of resource and daring and are the champions of a fair lady. The plots concern many of the big issues of the day, incident to the war, and much of the action is laid in the new West."

New Producing Company for Alice LaMont Pictures

A new motion picture company, to be known as the Sealcoct Company, Inc., has been organized to run a production and general booking business. Officers are: Clyde Colt, president and general manager; George Hansen, secretary and treasurer. Associated with them in the board of directors is William F. Bell. Charles Morgan, formerly of Edison studios, will have charge of the booking, it being the plan to furnish entire casts with the society and college type of "extras." Erving E. Goldstein, assisted by Frank B. Coigne, will handle the scenarios.

The new company has just produced for Alice LaMont and the LaMont Feature Film Company. Miss LaMont has experience with William S. Hart and was under the direction of Richard E. Garrick and Eddie Lawrence. A feature picture is on the way. It is the intention also to produce a military picture for recruiting purposes in connection with the Red Cross Society, to which a liberal portion of the proceeds will be donated.

Miss LaMont has had parts ranging from the heavier type of heroine to the so-called Pickford type. She is dark complexioned and might portray the Spanish, French or any of the Latin types. Offices are on the sixth floor, No. 119 West 42nd St.

Rita Jolivet to Film Lusitania Story

RITA JOLIVET has made a contract with Lewis J. Selznick, and under the Selznick banner will tell the film story of the sinking of the Lusitania.

Miss Jolivet, it will be recalled, was the young woman to whom Charles Frohman spoke his immortal last words—"Why fear death? It is the great adventure."

For a long time after the disaster, which proved to be the first step in a series of atrocities that brought on the war with Germany, Miss Jolivet was anxious even to talk about it. Now, however, she has come to the conclusion that the events immediately concerned with the sinking of the great ship are of such vast moment that they should be recorded in permanent form, hence her belief in putting in picture form her intense sufferings.

"In New York, London and Paris, she has appeared in a great variety of roles. She has had the leading feminine roles in 'Kismet,' "What It Means to a Woman," "The Wedding of Mrs. Bliss."

Miss Jolivet's impulse toward the stage came early in life. The great Coquelin told her, when she was only four years old, that she was born to be an actress. And she has tried to justify his prediction, with gratifying results.

Harry Tighe Leaves Vaudeville to Screen Comedies

After headlining in vaudeville for years, Harry Tighe, has cast off a lot of weight and plunged headfirst into pictures.

Armed with a neatly rolled bundle of comedies, the product of his own agile mentality, the big boy steered his new Buick roadster Flatbushward last week and is about to direct a comedy, with production manager for Vitagraph, that he had an ambition to pose for the screen. They got together quickly and inside of an hour a deal had been made for Mr. Tighe to appear in a series of his own comedies.

Archer McMackin, formerly director of the Bushman-Bayne pictures and the producer of more than 300 photoplays, was selected to direct Tighe, and the picture chosen for his first effort is "The Fixer."

Charles Giblyn, director of Selznick pictures, has been appointed on the general committee of the National Organization of the Home Furnishings Industry. His artistic scenes in "The Price She Paid" attracted the attention of the trade.

In the new Constance Talmadge picture, "The Lesson," which Mr. Giblyn is directing, the heroine becomes an interior decorator, in order to earn an independent livelihood.

Paramount Puts 156 Pictures on Open Market

Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick and Geraldine Farrar Star in Productions Included in Most Recent Offering

PARAMOUNT PICTURES CORPORATION, through its executive offices, announces that a third set of fifty-two pictures has been added to the 103 previous productions put upon the open market. This makes a list of 156 in all available to the exhibitors of the country irrespective of the franchise clause in their program contracts.

Paramount states that the success of the first offering of 102 pictures two months ago was enormous. This it was that brought about the new offering, which includes the work of the greatest stars.

The additional fifty-two pictures now offered on the open booking plan contain some of the best-known and most successful productions that were ever issued by Paramount, including such successes as "The Cheat."

In this set of fifty-two pictures will also be found the first productions in which the great Geraldine Farrar appeared, "Carmen" and "Temptation." Then, too, there are included in this list three productions starring Hazel Dawn, two in which John Barrymore is featured, three with Blanche Sweet in the leading role, and others with such stars as Marie Doro, George Fawcett, Charlotte Walker, Cyril Maude, Lou-Tellegan, Elsie Janis, Donald Brian, John Mason, Laura Hope Crews, Blanche Ring, Charles Cherry, Edna Goodrich, Victor Moore, Dustin Farnum, Theodore Roberts, Maclyn Arbuckle, Valeska Suratt, Constance Collier, Cleo Ridgley, Wallace Reid, Anna Held, and Florence Rockwell.

It is possible for all exhibitors to now give their patrons many pictures they were heretofore unable to secure. In hundreds of communities it had been impossible for more than one exhibitor to use the pictures in which these great stars appeared. This is now entirely eliminated in regards to these first 156 pictures and all exhibitors will have the opportunity of "cashing in" on these subjects.

Exceptional success, it is said, has been made by the Paramount Exchanges with the pictures that were already placed on the open market. These pictures are classified as Paramount Preferred Pictures. New prints have been supplied to the exchanges on all these subjects and new paper, additional advertising and publicity material of a particularly high class has been prepared for these open booking pictures.

L. H. Buell New Triangle Buyer at Culver City

L. H. Buell this week assumed his duties as purchasing agent of the Triangle Culver City studios, under the new management.

Mr. Buell comes to the Triangle with an enviable record as a buyer, after terminating a seventeen months' connection with the Universal Film Company.

He relieved S. S. Valentine, who resigned from the Triangle to accept a similar position with another producing corporation.
Iliodor, "Mad Monk," Narrowly Escapes Assassins

A astounding attempt to assassinate Iliodor, so-called Russian "Mad Monk," as it is believed, was made last Tuesday at two o'clock in the morning. Iliodor is acting principal role in Herbert Brenon's "The Fall of the Romanoffs."

An automobile containing George Hall, Brenon's scenario chief, and Roy Hunt, his photographer, was subjected to a fusillade of revolver shots at the corner of Tenth avenue and Forty-second street at that hour.

The studio men were returning to New Jersey after taking some night scenes on location, and had just taken Iliodor to his home in New York, so that the persons who attacked the car did not accomplish their purpose. The chauffeur and the studio men all had narrow escapes as several bullets whizzed by their heads until they could speed up the car and get out of danger.

For some time there have been vague hints dropped here and there that the picture would never be completed, and that certain persons representing the Russian officials, whom Iliodor denounced and thereby brought about their downfall, would seek revenge on the famous monk. No one took these hints seriously.

Two weeks ago, Iliodor says, a member of the Russian Secret Police came to him and told him of an agent of these officials who had called upon him. Depositing $150,000 on the table, the Russian said, "This money is yours if you will get rid of Iliodor." The Secret Agent replied, "I am a faithful servant of my masters, but with such acts I have nothing in common."

Then, according to Iliodor, the emissary offered to double the amount, but the Secret Agent still refused to undertake the assassination and dismissed the caller.

Herbert Brenon promptly took extraordinary precautions for Iliodor's safety. An armed body guard now accompanies him constantly.

Ruth Roland and Milton

Work on the first George Backer Film Corporation Foursquare Picture, to be released when completed through M. H. Hoffman, Inc., is progressing. The featured stars, Ruth Roland and Milton Sills, and the associate artists in the cast are cooperating to make this a super-feature.

Leah Baird, J. Herbert Frank, Ollie Kirby and George Larkin are appearing in the picture. They are being directed by Robert Ellis.

Miss Roland and Mr. Sills have co-star parts, playing opposite roles in pictures for the first time. In several scenes taken last week Miss Roland and Mr. Sills were applauded by their artist-associates.

The story by Pierre V. R. Key has to do with an issue pertinent at this time. M. H. Hoffman, who is watching the making, said:

Juanita Hansen Chosen as Leading Woman for Crane Wilbur

David Horsley has just announced that the leading woman for Crane Wilbur, whose features are to be released on Art Dramas Program, will be Juanita Hansen. Shirley Huxley, the well-known Australian actress, and many others of international repute have been added to the cast.

The two first named will make their first Art Dramas appearance in a western drama in which Mr. Wilbur will be starred.

Talking Machine Man Making Color Films for Red Cross

The first natural color motion picture to be made for public showing under the process invented by Leon Douglass, president of the Victor Talking Machine Company, will be donated to the Red Cross Association. Scenes for the film were taken in Los Angeles during the past week by Robert L. Carson, of San Francisco, and Leon F. Douglass, Jr.

The film will consist of intimate scenes of prominent people of the nation. The film taken at Los Angeles will show a number of the leading film players. Mr. Douglass makes his home near San Francisco, where he has a laboratory in which the process was perfected, and where the first film will be completed. Pending issuance of the final patent papers, very little information is given out concerning the Douglass process.

William Sherwood, Athlete, with Metro, Supporting Taliaferro

Mr. Sherwood is an athlete well known in the South for his work on both the diamond and gridiron. He is five feet eleven inches in height and weighs 165 pounds.

Officer in Army Reserve Corps Plays in "The Fatal Ring"

An officer in the Reserve Corps of the United States Army—Earle Foxe—has the role of Nicholas Knox in Pathe's "The Fatal Ring." He got his military training at Ohio State University. Mr. Foxe said: "The youth of America would appreciate leisure time more if a certain part of the year was given over to military manoeuvres, drill and training."
“Divine Sara” Pays Tribute to Pearl White, Pathe Star

Sara Bernhardt on her farewell tour found she was in the same city with Pearl White, then posing for the Pathé serial, “The Fatal Ring.” The Frenchwoman sent for Pearl and, according to the announcement, said to her:

“I have wanted to meet you since I first saw ‘Les Mystères de New York’ (the Parisian title of ‘The Exploits of Elaine’) in Paris. Ah, if you but knew how our poils in the trenches worship you, you would feel that you have accomplished much.”

It may not be generally known that Pearl White got her start on the stage when a tow-headed youngster by reciting “Hamlet’s Soliloquy” to an astonished theatrical man. She played “Little Eva” in “Uncle Tom’s Cabin.” Though very young, she became leading woman in a stock company and was engaged for engagements. After recovering from a long rest ordered by her physician, she applied for a position at the Pathé studios in Jersey City. The casting director liked her looks and engaged her. That was the beginning of fame and fortune. She first played in Western pictures, and because of her ability as a horsewoman was soon a featured member of the company.

Jackie Saunders to Frolic in “Betty, Be Good”

Jackie Saunders, one of the younger screen stars, is happily placed in her latest offering, “Betty, Be Good,” released by Mutual, July 16. The play that permits full display of Miss Saunders’ frolics of the tomboy type. She is supported by Captain Leslie T. Peacock.

The play is directed by Sherwood MacDonald, “The Man from Yale,” who was a successful lawyer before he entered the motion picture field, and who wrote “Just in Time,” “The Goal,” “Straws in the Wind,” “Rose Among Briars” and many other well-known screen successes.

Camera Misses Rescue of Viola Dana, Metro Star

In a scene requiring bareback riding in “The Girl Without a Soul,” Viola Dana, Metro star, lost control of her horse at Nyack, N. Y. John H. Collins, author and co-director, caught the horse and rescued the star. Unfortunately the rescue was out of range of the camera.

Milton Sills and Edmund Lawrence with Ivan

MILTON SILLS, who gained stellar honors by his characterization of the role of Joseph Stanton in “The Honor System,” is to have the leading male role in the next release of the Ivan Films Productions.

Edmund Lawrence, who directed Mme. Olga Petrova in “The Scarlet Woman,” has been added to the directorial staff. He will direct Mr. Sills in the coming feature. Mr. Lawrence has expressed his great satisfaction with the work of Mr. Sills.

As leading man in Broadway productions, Milton Sills was in “This Woman or this Man,” and “The Happy Marriage” by Clyde Fitch. He was with Blanche Bates in “The Fighting Hope,” and with Mme. Petrova in “The Law of the Land” and “Just Boys.”

Mr. Lawrence reached the height of his career in the legitimate as co-star with Raymond Hitchcock. Going to the screen he became director of the Kalem Company on leading productions, and then director for World Film and Equitable pictures.

It was with this latter company that Mr. Lawrence produced “The Warning” and “The Ransom.”

Before the screen Mr. Sills created leading male roles in such Peerless-World features as “The Deep Purple” and “The Pit.” For Universal he made big features, “Under Sunny Skies” and “The Woman Who Lied.”

Mr. Sills’ greatest success on the screen was as Joseph Stanton in the twelve-reel production, “The Honor System,” which has placed him among the foremost leading men.

Coming to the Ivan Films with such a record of successes, it is with a feeling of assured success that Director Lawrence commences filming his first Ivan play with Mr. Sills.

Lois Weber for Universal to Produce Mrs. Rinehart’s “K”

UPON completion of “The Whim,” nearing its final scenes, Lois Weber will begin a screen version of Mary Roberts Rinehart’s novel, “K,” published a season or two ago.

This will be the second of the Lois Weber productions released under the new arrangement with Universal, film rights to the story having been secured from Mrs. Rinehart during the past week.

Mrs. Rinehart paid a tribute to Lois Weber when closing the deal for the presentation of “K” in motion pictures.

“I have refused other offers for ‘K,’” she said, “because I have been loath to see my pet novel experimented with by companies who might wish to rework the story, according to their own notions. But when I learned that Lois Weber wished to put it on the screen, I just shouted with joy, because I knew that ‘K’ would receive the most artistic and truthful presentation possible at her hands.”

“For several years past I have admired the work of this unusual woman. I consider her one of the great feminine personalities at work in this country. She is a thinker and an artist, every atom of her. I would rather have Lois Weber film my book than anyone else, because I know that she will bring out every salient point in the character of ‘K’ with sympathy and vivid pictorial effect.”

“After seeing results I was more than rejoiced, for my every sentiment, my every motive, my every reasoning was so faithfully reproduced that I absolutely had no fault to find.”
Whirlwind Production by Greater Vitagraph

Ten Companies at Work in Brooklyn, Two at Hollywood, and Two More on O. Henry Features for General Film Release

GREATER VITAGRAPH is engaged in the greatest period of production in its history.

Ten companies at the big Brooklyn plant and two at the company's western studio in Hollywood now are making pictures for release through V. L. S. E., the company's distributing organization.

Two other companies are making O. Henry pictures for release through General Film. This makes twelve companies in actual operation at the Vitagraph plants. Two others will be under way within a week.

One of the contributing causes for the great increase in production on the part of Greater Vitagraph is said to be the growing number of theatres which have instituted "Vitagraph Week," during which they run nothing but Vitagraph pictures.

Under present arrangements, every star of the Vitagraph constellation is engaged in production of new features, with the exception of Earle Williams and Anita Stewart. Miss Stewart is recovering from a breakdown brought on by too steady application to work following a siege of typhoid. Mr. Williams has been suffering from blood poison, due to a wound made on his foot by a protruding nail in a new pair of shoes.

In order not to delay production, Harry Morey was put into Mr. Williams' part in "Who Goes There?" and he will finish the picture. Playing opposite to Mr. Morey is Corinne Griffith, who recently was made leading woman for Mr. Williams.

Besides the Morey-Griffith combination, the following stars are working at the eastern Vitagraph plant:

Alice Joyce and Marc MacDermott, supported by Patsy De Forest, in "An Alabaster Box." This is the first Vitagraph picture directed by Chester Withey, formerly associated with David W. Griffith.

Mildred Manning and Wallace MacDonald, in "The Princess of Park Row," under the direction of Ashley Miller.

Edward Earle and Betty Howe, in "For France," under direction of Wesley Ruggles. This is a beautiful romance of present-day France, written by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady.

Evart Overton and Miriam Fouche, in "Soldier of Chance," under the direction of Paul Scardon.

Little Bobby Connelly, in the "Bobby Series," ten one-reel pictures, each a distinct story. The first five of these pictures were directed by Wesley Ruggles and the last batch are nearing completion under the hand of Charles M. Sevy.

Harry Tighe, vaudeville headliner, is making a series of comedies under the direction of Archer McMackin. These comedies were written by Mr. Tighe, and Mr. McMackin directs.

Lawrence Semon, with Joe Simberg, Earle Montgomery and Edward Dunn as his main supports, is rapidly winding up a new series of Big V comedies, which are scheduled for release the first week of August.

At the western plant of Vitagraph, William Duncan and Carol Halloway, his leading woman, are in the final episode of "The Fighting Trail," a big Vitagraph serial. Mr. Duncan is directing and playing the lead of the picture.

Mary Anderson and Alfred Voxburgh, under the direction of William Wolbert, are establishing a record for quick work at the Hollywood plant. They have completed two five-reel subjects and are now engaged on a third.

The product of all these combinations will go on the regular program of Vitagraph-V. L. S. E., who announce that every production offered will be up to the Vitagraph standard of excellence in cast, production and story.

Jack G. Leo New Head of Foxfilm Scenario Department

Jack G. Leo, who has had a training as magazine writer and editor, becomes this week head of the Foxfilm Corporation's scenario department. He brings to his new duties a thorough training in the technical side of motion picture production, having been for the past year and a half in charge of the Fox laboratories.

In his new position, Mr. Leo promises to give every scenario submitted careful scrutiny. Independent scenario writers are assured that their manuscripts will receive conscientious consideration and prompt attention.

Mr. Leo will make his headquarters on the fourth floor offices of the Fox Film Corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Productions staged at the Fox studios in Los Angeles will also be handled under Mr. Leo's direction.

Mrs. Vernon Castle in Daring Stunt in Pathe Features

Mrs. Vernon Castle's two Pathe features so far completed are a Secret Service photoplay, directed by George Fitzmaurice, with Elliott Dexter, Suzanne Willa and T. Wigney Perceval supporting, and a murder mystery directed by Frank Crane, with a cast composed of Elliott Dexter, Ethel Grey Terry, Frank Sheridan and Helene Chadwick.

In the first play Mrs. Castle disguises herself as an East Side tough, and invades the hangout of a famous gang in New York's criminal history. The police raid occurs during her visit furnishes a thrill in the picture.

In the second, Mrs. Castle dives thirty feet into the rapids near Boontown, N. J., and rescues Helene Chadwick, who plays the other role. The pool in which she does this is said by the natives to be bottomless. She wanted to dive from a bridge forty feet high, but Pathe officials would not allow her to take such a chance.

Too Much Applause for Sunday Cancell "American Girl"

Because the pictures are so good they start applause and so disturb the Sabbath quiet a small town exhibitor in Illinois has cancelled the Kalem series, "The American Girl." The cancellation applies to Sunday night only. The protesting exhibitor's letter to General Film reads:

"My Sunday show has a large bunch of the younger folks, and most every stunt that is pulled off in "The American Girl," of course, starts the applause and I have been notified by the city officers that I will have to cut out so much noise on Sunday evenings. You know now everything is open on account of the war weather and I cannot confine the noise to the theatre once. And besides, with the performance tonight I will show in the air dome."

Leopard in Selig Film Fights Boar and Hyena

Close-ups of deadly combat between a leopard and its foes are featured in the No. 7 of the Selig World Library. The lithe, wiry animal is in two fights, one with a wild boar and the other with a hyena.

It will be new to students of jungle lore that a leopard will match itself with either of these wild animals, the boar or the hyena.

The same number pictures the convictship "Success"; the up-to-date methods of poultry raising; the military armor suit and scenes from life in Siam.

Dr. Davenport Kerrison as a Movie Producer

Dr. Davenport Kerrison, writer of the opera, "The Last of the Aztecs," and other musical plays and vaudeville, has turned his attention to the "silent drama." The past three months he has been managing the Kitty Studios in Jacksonville, Fla.

He has organized his own company, the Southern Film, to produce "The Moon Girl" and "Mollie of the Movies; or, Movie Mad."

Mae Marsh-Goldwyn Play to Rival
"Birth of a Nation"

The third and current Mae Marsh-Goldwyn production has a scenario adapted from a novel by Margaret Mayo. The Goldwyn announcement says as a photographic spectacle the play will rival "The Birth of a Nation." In that production also Mae Marsh was prominent.

The photodrama is described as the simple story of small town American life drawn from the hoop-skirt period of our existence. A village designed by Everett Shinn and erected by the Goldwyn mechanical staff; a real horse race in Ho-hokus, and a circus with 2,000 "extras" were needed in the production.

It is promised the drama will be finished the second week in July and by the night of July 13 be sent to Chicago and given first showing during the convention of motion picture exhibitors.

Lee Kids Win $200 Liberty Bond in Auto Parade

Jane and Katherine Lee, the "Lee Kids," also known as William Fox's "Baby Grand," took a first prize in an auto parade at the Automobile Fashion Show, Sheephead Bay, June 23.

Jane was garbed in khaki uniform, an almost microscopic replica of a U. S. Army officer's uniform, and Katherine was in complete army nurse's garb. Their car was a Willys-Knight with blue body, bright red trimmings and wire wheels. The car got a blue ribbon and the "Kids" a $200 Liberty bond.

Not Sid Chaplin's Picture, but John Jasper's

Too hasty examination of a cut proof, in writing a caption, is responsible for an amusing mistake in the copy of Motion Picture News for June 23rd, page 3934.

The picture shows Charlie Chaplin and John Jasper, the latter new manager of Lone Star studios. The heading described it as "The Famous Chaplin Brothers, Charlie and Sid." Few not well acquainted with Sid Chaplin would detect the error, but in justice to Mr. Jasper, who deserves recognition, the explanation is made.

Thomas H. Ince Gets Old Biograph Studio

To Produce William S. Hart
Arctcraft Releases and Charles
Ray and Paramount Subjects—Ince Hurries to Los Angeles

DEFINITE plans of Thomas H. Ince were made known by wire to his local manager, E. H. Allen, Friday. Mr. Allen immediately leased the old Biograph Studio, through the R. A. Rowan Company, in Los Angeles, and there, it is planned, production will be commenced within the next ten days of William S. Hart Arctcraft releases, and Charles Ray and Enid Bennett Paramount subjects.

Mr. Ince wired he was leaving New York on Friday and would arrive in Los Angeles Wednesday of the coming week.

Until the arrival of Mr. Ince it is impossible to secure names of those who will be affiliated with him in his new venture. It is hinted that C. Gardner Sullivan will be at the head of the Ince unit of the Arctcraft and Paramount producing organization scenario department, and that J. G. Hawkes and John Lynch will be members of the writing staff. No names of directors are mentioned, but it is the general opinion that several of his former lieutenants at Culver City will be affiliated with Mr. Ince.

It is the intention of Mr. Ince to immediately build a new studio, and work will continue at the Biograph plant only until the new plant can be constructed and equipped. Plans already in preparation by Mr. Allen provide for an institution which will be as complete in every detail as the Culver City Studio recently built under the supervision of Messrs. Ince and Allen, which is referred to as the most complete and efficient producing plant in America by all authorities of the industry.

Secretary of War Thanks Goldwyn for Its Gift

AMERICAN soldiers in France will see all Goldwyn pictures by the courtesy of the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation. Neyton D. Baker, Secretary of War, has written this acknowledgement to Samuel Goldfish:

"MY DEAR MR. GOLDISH:—Your letter of June 22 is received and I am placing it immediately in the hands of Raymond B. Fosdick, who is at the head of the commission having jurisdiction over the recreational activities of our troops in the various training camps. But before I transmit it to Mr. Fosdick I want to say this personal word of gratitude and appreciation for the offer which you make and for the spirit which animates it. Cordially yours, NEWTON D. BAKER."

The patriotic offer made by the company includes one print each of the Mae Marsh, Madge Kennedy, Jane Cowl, Maxine Elliott and Mary Garden pictures, together with a projection machine to show them. Mr. Fosdick will determine whether the pictures will be exhibited under direction of the Y. M. C. A., the Red Cross or the army authorities.

Mary Garden cabled Mr. Goldfish:

"Have learned your splendid offer to War Offices. Can't I help? After 'Thisis' I should like to do patriotic play. MARY GARDEN."

Goldwyn recognizes that no one is better fitted to star in such a patriotic play than Mary Garden, the American prima donna. It is possible that prominent American scenario writers will be especially requested to get busy on this.

Taylor Holmes Slow in Choosing
His Leading Woman

Taylor Holmes, Essanay's star, has already finished a portion of "Efficiency Edgar's Courtship" without choosing a leading woman.

His only reason for not making the announcement is that he has not yet decided.

Mr. Holmes says he has spent two weeks watching the feminine members of the Essanay stock company at work and very likely if he can discover one with the qualifications he seeks he will make his choice there.

Scenes From Anita Stewart's Latest Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Message of the Mouse" Marion Davies Finds Some

M. ARION DAVIES, star of "Oh, Boy," is now giving her undivided time to the Ardsley Art Film Corporation with excellent success. This is her vacation from the Princess theatre—the first week of it.

Before the vacation began Miss Davies filmed scenes of her own story, "Runaway Romany," in spare time available after six evenings and two matinee performances of "Oh, Boy."

"Vacation," said Miss Davies, when seen by a representative of the Motion Picture News. "Whoever said that acting in the pictures was a vacation was an optimist or a humorist or just plain insane. I've heard all about the lovely hours in the open air, the civilized working conditions in which one went to his day's toll just as the bank clerk or the shoe salesman or any of the neighbors.

"My debut is nothing at all like that. The hours have all been hours, except on the day before the Fourth, when it rained so hard we couldn't work and every one was so happy except the director, who swore something terrible.

"Yet we celebrated the Fourth by doing a surprise party in the large and ballroom of one of our best hotels. by filming scenes at the Pennsylvania Station, at a Chelsea village rooming house and in a crowded East Side street. The newspapers have been full of statements about people doing their bit and being patriotic and all that; well, we certainly were doing our bit on the Glorious Fourth. But we're getting such good results that I feel that I ought not to complain."

"In one week I have acted on Long Island, in Connecticut, New Jersey and various parts of New York state from Manhattan to the Adirondacks. Talk about one-night stands! I've been living in an automobile! My clothes have consisted of gypsy costumes, pajamas and all sorts of things that the actors of the speaking stage never wear in public. Yet I'm expected to go into a hotel restaurant at Asbury Park as a Romany heroine and appear unconcerned when the visiting firemen stare at me. The footlights may glare in one's eyes, but at the same time they do furnish an effectual barrage between the public and the artist; in the films there is no secrecy.

"Unfortunately I can't even present a respectable alibi, for I wrote "Runaway Romany" all myself, and when the editorial staff got hold of it and wanted to make a change here and a change there I stamped my foot and insisted that they let it alone. I put all the outdoor stuff I could think of and now I'm doing more one-night stands in a week than there are days in the month. But I like it just the same, deep down in my heart, and if the public likes me on the screen perhaps I'll come back and try again. If the new audiences don't like me. I shall have the consolation of knowing that I am an improvement on the old Marion Davies the other audiences knew, but I believe these audiences will understand."

Work in Posing for Pictures

Six Young Women Given Good Chance by Vitagraph

Six of the players recently engaged by Vitagraph are young women who have won large followings among the fans and are rapidly approaching the pedestals of stardom.

They are Corinne Griffin, who has been made leading woman for Earle Williams; Mildred Manning, who was featured in the first of the Q. Henry pictures; Miriam Fouche, who will be seen opposite Evart Overton; Agnes Eyer, formerly a prominent Essanay player; Betty Howe, who appeared last with Grace Darling in the Beatrice Fairfax series, and Carole Halloway, who is to be featured with William Duncan in a forthcoming Vitagraph serial, "The Fighting Train."

British View of "The Crisis" Pleases William N. Selig

WILLIAM N. SELIG has received an interesting review of "The Crisis," clipped from one of the leading newspapers in London, England. It is the first review of "The Crisis" to appear from the British Isles, and is of universal interest because it shows the importance that motion picture plays possess in a country that has been at war for several years. The review is as follows:

"For the second time I sat through 'The Crisis'—the Selig picture—a few nights ago, in company with some naval and military friends who have realized the important part pictures play, and must play, in the entertainment and, if you like, the instruction of the people.

"This is a twelve-part picture. It is stronger in characterization and better in story, and it has the merit of being splendidly produced and finely acted, especially by two men.

"The story is based upon the American Winston Churchill's well-known novel. Those who know this book will remember those two fine characters, Judie Silas Whipple and Col. Carvel, great personal friends, but bitter political enemies. The colonel with the conicalating cigar, as seen in this picture, will remain a memory along as one lives.

"I do not remember seeing such a character on the screen. The whole of the film is marked by such strong characterization, such contrasts, such little touches, revealing the souls of men, that 'The Crisis' is bound to live when hundreds of other pictures of this class have been forgotten.

"I believe this picture is to be put on next week at the Scala, exclusive to London. It is such a human story that the man who sees it once will want to see it again, if only to look upon that dear old Colonel Carvel."

Arvid E. Gillstrom, Young Director, Finishes His 50th Comedy

Arvid E. Gillstrom, who is producing the King Bee Billy West comedies, graduates in New York Motion Picture Company's studios on the coast and made his reputation with Chaplin, Arbuckle and other screen favorites of that caliber. He has made over fifty comedies of the refined and popular slap-stick kind. Gillstrom recently married Ethel Burton, a good-looking young comedienne of the films. He intends one day to specialize in big productions which shall combine both drama and comedy. For," says Mr. Gillstrom, "the humorous side of great features is neglected by producers. It is my contention that comic relief in the spectacular offerings that have been recently released has been much neglected."
Real Honest to Goodness Fist Fight for William Farnum

It is explained that when a man stands “face to face with mortal enemy, the two of them bare-handed with the lust to conquer blazing in their eyes”—then a man sees red. This tells why “When a Man Sees Red” is chosen as the title of the new Foxfilm drama in which William Farnum is starred.

In posing the picture “Husky Bill” Farnum and G. Raymond Nye, who plays the part of the enemy, agreed to make the fist-fight that is the climax of the story a real one.

“Of course you will have to get me, Bill,” said Nye. “but, believe me, you’ll know you’ve been in some battle.”

And, oh man, how they did fight! Farnum arrived at the Lamb’s Club that night with his arm in a sling, two patches of plaster on his forehead, another on his cheek, and a decoration that looked like Neapolitan ice cream under his right eye. And Nye—didn’t show up at all.

Ziegfeld Cinema Picks El Paso as Site for Studios

The newly organized Ziegfeld Cinema Corporation has selected El Paso, Texas, as its site for its film colony.

W. K. Ziegfeld, member of the theatrical family of the name, is in New York making preliminary arrangements for the erection of studio buildings, laboratories and dwellings at the foot of Mount Franklin, north of El Paso.

Mr. Ziegfeld says he was surprised at the possibilities of the section. He found wide mountain scenery and pine woods at Cloudecroft, across the border in New Mexico, and near Alamogordo fields of white sand that photographed well as snow. There is also a forty-five mile lake and cluster of islands.

Elephant Butte and its dam; the Rio Grande River; the old Mexican town of Juarez, just across the big stream from El Paso, and the modern streets, buildings and institutions of the city itself, were other phases of Southwestern scenery that impressed Mr. Ziegfeld.

Essanay to Find What Public Wants and Get It

George K. Spoor Forms Department of Investigation and Calls Weekly Office Conferences so as to Produce Pictures with Strongest Appeal

G EORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, has given immediate heed to the recent complaint of exhibitors that pictures are being made without due attention to the distributing and exhibiting ends of the industry.

The burden of complaint has seemed to be that inasmuch as audiences in Iowa are displeased with pictures that suit Florida exactly, producers ought to weigh this in making pictures.

Mr. Spoor ordered an extensive investigation, and following this it is announced that hereafter every subject will be selected and produced with the idea of ultimately suiting the audience before which it is shown.

As a first move a permanent Department of Investigation was established to determine what sales organizations and theatre managers desire, to keep a record of critics’ reviews and to get all available information from the public direct.

As soon as this mass of material had been collected and condensed, a series of weekly conferences was started in which members of every department were asked to take part. Talks were delivered by exhibitors and members of the distributing companies handling Essanay products with the result that every member of the large force now employed at this plant knows just what is expected of the department in which he works in order to produce motion pictures which will have the strongest appeal.

The conferences are still being held weekly. Two hours is devoted every Saturday to the discussion of subjects in preparation and those to be selected for future use. In taking a new scenario under advisement it is looked at from every angle. Its possibilities from the standpoint of the plot, photography, cast, advertising and public appeal are thoroughly gone over. If for any reason it does not come up to the standard set even as regards one detail, it is rejected.

One department is allowed a half hour each week to explain what co-operation from the other divisions is required in order to increase the efficiency and quality of the work it does and so the system of co-operation is effected.

Metro-Yorke Travels 50,000 Miles Getting Locations

T HE Metro-Yorke Company, under Fred J. Balshofer, has just completed three railroad trips, 20,000 miles in all, getting locations for a Harold Lockwood feature, “Under Handicap.”

Trips have been made for previous pictures to New York state and the Thousand Islands, to Florida, and all through the Pacific coast country from Washington state to the Mexican border, including picture-making journeys to Lake Tahoe, Monterey, San Francisco, San Diego, and into the mountainous country of high Sierras of northern California.

While on this special run for “Under Handicap,” Anna Little, who is playing the feminine lead in support of Lockwood, galloped after the swiftly-moving train and leaped from her horse to the platform of the observation car.

County Attorneys Against Blue Law Sunday in Iowa

Fear of Iowa exhibitors that the attorney general of the state would be successful in his effort to resurrect the seventy-year-old “blue laws” of the state and stop the showing of motion pictures on Sunday has been forever put to rest.

The county attorneys of Iowa, in convention at Council Bluffs, this week, declared “strict and literal enforcement of the Sunday closing laws in Iowa practically is impossible.” And in the end it is the county attorney who has the say-so.

These Two Letters

Letters that MEAN SOMETHING. Letters that give actual facts. Letters that carry steel bound convincing proof of the Box Office power of this thrilling serial. Read every word.

"I have just finished the first day's showing of Episode One of 'The Gray Ghost,' and am mighty pleased to tell you that in spite of the torrid day and a crippled advertising campaign, it has started bigger than any of its predecessors, and you know that is saying a lot. I have spent a lot of money and turned the town upside down in starting several serials before, but when 'The Gray Ghost' starts off bigger without any effort, I think it is speaking mighty well for the Universal's latest serial production.

"I ran the first episode of the great Saturday Evening Post Serial 'The Gray Ghost' yesterday, the first one I have had the pleasure of running in my theatre at the ten cent admission price. It is also the first Universal Serial I have ever run, and I can truthfully say that the first episode surprised me, and this serial is, in my estimation, the strongest and best that I have ever run or seen in my life.

—it is my honest opinion that it will make more money for Exhibitors than any serial they can book, and will be the means of many Exhibitors keeping open during the summer months.—W. D. Scoville, Mgr., Idle Hour Theatre, Kansas City, Mo.

THAT'S THE KIND OF EVIDENCE THAT SAFEGUARDS YOU IN BOOKING SERIALS. The words and expressions from Exhibitors in business the same as you are MUST have results. Write to any Universal Exchange for the BIG FREE Ad Campaign Book that tells you how to get the big money with "THE GRAY GHOST" and book immediately thru any of our 73 Universal Exchanges.

Three Stars in Paramount July 9 Releases

Pauline Frederick, Vivian Martin and Susse Hayakawa Share Honors—Bray Pictures British Tanks—Holmes in "High Sierras"

Pauline Frederick in "The Love That Lives" takes the part of a scrubwoman, and she does it to perfection. Vivian Martin and Susse Hayakawa in "Forbidden Paths" are given an opportunity of displaying their talents. The story has to do with the great love which a Japanese has for an American girl. He gives up his life to give her her happiness.

In the seventy-fourth edition of the Paramount-Bray Pictographs, the "magazine-on-the-screen"; the seventy-fifth of the series of weekly trips around the world, personally conducted by Burton Holmes, in which he takes his fellow-travelers "In the High Sierras," and a Black Diamond single-reel comedy entitled "Wits and Fists."

Pathe's List—Hulette, Roland and Pearl White

Gladys Hulette, Pearl White and Ruth Roland are the stars appearing in the features of Pathe's bill for the week of July 22.

Gladys Hulette is seen in "The Last of the Carnabys," a five-reel Gold Rooster Play, produced by Astra under the direction of William Parke. The original story was written by Samuel Morse, and the scenario by George B. Seitz. William Parke as the director and George B. Seitz as the author of the scenario, guarantee a splendid production.

Pearl White is seen in the third episode of "The Fatal Ring," entitled "Borrowed Identity." A thrilling succession of scenes and a great fight are features of this episode, in which Carslake traps Pearl and Knox in a diabolical manner. The way in which she outwits him will have theatre patrons on the edge of their chairs. The cast includes in addition to Pearl White, Warner Oland as Carslake, Earle Fox as Knox and Henry Gsell as Tom Carlton.

Ruth Roland is starred in the eleventh chapter of "The Neglected Wife," entitled "A Reckless Indiscretion." The scenario is the work of Will M. Ritchey, who is now one of the most important members of the writing staff of the Astra Film Corporation.

"Southeastern Texas" is the title of the sixteenth "Know America" Combitone Scenic.

An International Cartoon and Scenic, split-reel release and Hearst Pathe News, Nos. 60 and 61, complete the program.

King Bee Comedies in London

The first three King Bee Billy West Comedies were this week given a trade showing in London at the Marble Arch Pavilion. According to a cable received at the offices of the King Bee Films Corporation, they were enthusiastically received by buyers present.

Billy West, it is stated, by his peculiar style of humor appeals strongly to British taste.

William Wrigley, Jr., Films Move Scnes

William Wrigley, Jr., son of the chewing gum magnate, has suddenly developed into a movie enthusiast. He has made a private filming of the exterior scenes in Essanay’s "The Golden Idiot," in which Bryant Washburn has a leading role.

Mr. Wrigley has a mansion in Chicago’s multimillionaire colony at Lake Geneva, Wis. Washburn and his company went there to get scenes for the photoplay.

Mr. Wrigley, as a camera “fan,” recently purchased a Bell-Howell motion picture machine. By permission of Director Arthur Berthelet, he stationed his machine alongside of cameraman Smith, of Essanay, and "ground" out the scenes, simultaneously. Later he threw open his big summer mansion to the photoplayers for a veranda scene and even engaged an organist to furnish music on the big pipe organ in the music room while the scenes were being filmed.

The week’s stay of the Essanay players in Lake Geneva formed a continuous social event which greatly popularized the pictures with the society folk.

At the unanimous request of the colony, George K. Spoor, president of Essanay, has consented to give a pre-release showing of "The Golden Idiot" in Lake Geneva. A billion dollars’ worth of audience is guaranteed.

Beerbohm’s Work Immortalized

Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree, one of the most remarkable figures in the theatre in the past several decades, who died in London, July 2, created the part of John Coburn in the Triangle five-reel feature, "The Old Folks at Home," released as part of the regular program, October 15, 1916.

In this photoplay, a dramatization of a short story by the American writer, Rupert Hughes, Sir Herbert played the part of a venerable state senator.
Union Threat Suspected in Big Exchange Fires

Police and Exchanges Hint of Incendiaries in Art Dramas and Pathe Conflagrations—Organizer of Unions Arrested—Investigation Ordered

The almost complete gutting out of the Chicago branch offices of Pathe by fire early Sunday morning, July 1, when $500,000 worth of film was destroyed together with $275,000 structural damages, is suspected of being the first move of the combined forces of the Motion Picture Operator's Unions of Chicago, to intimidate the exchange managers there to recognize their recent attempt made to unionize the film inspectors and other exchange employees. The fire followed several letters received from Joseph P. Armstrong, president of Local No. 110 of the I. A. T. S. E. and No. 157 of the Motion Picture Operator's Association. These letters the exchange managers allege contained veiled threats of violence.

The Pathe offices are on the fourth floor of the Consumer's building. Other film companies in the building whose film loaded vaults were threatened by the fire were: Mutual, Universal, Bluebird, Artcraft, Greiver and Herz. The fire started about three o'clock Sunday morning, following several thunderous explosions in the Pathe film vaults. Four persons, policemen and shippers were at work in the Pathe shipping room at the time. The door of the vault was blown open and the flames fed by the inflammable film and spread by the sound of the explosions of the reels swept the whole length of the floor, between two fireproof walls in no time. The explosions of the film were heard for blocks on either side of the fire, and before the firemen had gotten the blaze under control it had latched through the front windows and communicated to several floors above.

The four employees who were at work in the Pathe offices at the time of the outbreak of the fire fled to safety at the sound of the first explosion and sight of the flames. They declared afterward to the police and C. W. Bunn, the Pathe branch manager, that just a few seconds before the first of the explosions occurred, they heard something fall heavily in the vaults. This strengthened the belief of the police and the managers that a time bomb or grenade was thrown into the vault.

Just several days before the fire one of the Pathe films sent out to a Chicago exhibitor was either lost or confiscated, it was thought at that time. On Saturday, the day before the fire the reel was sent back soaked with kerosene oil, and is said to have had a note tied to it that read: "Something is going to happen unless you unionize." The fact also that it was the second exchange fire within a few days was infuriating the attempt to unionize the film inspectors further strengthened the belief of the police and film men that the fire was incendiary.

A conference of the film managers and police and fire officials of Chicago, was held in the afternoon following the Pathe fire. As a result of the conference the arrest of Peter Cunniff, organizer and former business agent of one of the operator's locals was ordered. James Hood, an assistant business agent of Local No. 157 was arrested the next day, and orders for the arrest of several others was sent out. In the meantime the state fire marshal and his deputies, aided by the police are making a rigid examination.

Immediately after the fire Manager Bunn, of Pathe, sent out calls for help to the other exchanges in Minneapolis, Detroit, Cincinnati, Milwaukee and Cleveland. They responded so quickly that only six shows were missed last week, most of them being bookings for the Pathe news weeklies. President A. J. Berst, of Pathe, arrived in Chicago on Tuesday morning and aided Manager Bunn getting things to right again in the office.

Extra Weekly Release of the Screen News Magazine

Screen News Magazine, issued by the American Bioscope Corporation, Chicago, has met with such a response that a supplemental release each week has been necessary.

In one instance, in Chicago, three theatres in a radius of four blocks are running the magazine on its release date.

Threaten to Bar Exchanges from Loop District

The score or more film exchanges of Chicago that are centered within the busy "loop" district have been threatened with expulsion from the center of the city as a result of the dangerous fires at the Art Dramas and Pathe Exchanges that occurred within the last fortnight.

It was announced by Assistant Fire Marshal John C. McDonnell that he would prepare at once an ordinance to make this possible. At the inquiry conducted by the state fire officials and police, several witnesses testified that the films are highly explosive, and that a hazard is constantly placed on the lives of everybody else working in the office buildings that house the exchanges.

The Exchange Managers and Producers' Associations here have not yet announced what steps they will take to checkmate such a predicted bit of legislation, which will mean much expense and inconvenience to them if forced to leave the central part of the city.

Active Interest in New Exhibitors' Organization

The first meeting of members of the newly organized exhibitor's association in Chicago, the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association, of which Henry Schoenstadt is president, was held last Tuesday. Plans and discussions for the proposed constitution and by-laws to govern the new organization were discussed.

Much pleasant surprise also resulted when an application was received from Nathan Ascher, of the Ascher Brothers firm of theatre owners, for membership. C. J. Blum, another theatre owner of Chicago also filed application for membership.

Secretary Choyinski announced that he had made application to the officers of the Illinois branch of the M. P. E. L. of A. for a charter as the Chicago local. He said that G. M. Luttrell, the president of the state organization had advised him that a special meeting of the state body would have to be called.

Re-elect Mutual Officers—Deny Move from Chicago

At the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Mutual Film Company held in Chicago last week, John R. Freuler was re-elected president of that corporation. The other officers elected for the ensuing year are: Dr. George W. Hall, of Chicago, first vice-president; Crawford Livingston, of New York, second vice-president; Samuel S. Hutchinson, of Chicago, treasurer, and Samuel M. Field, of Wilmette, secretary.

An official denial was also made at this meeting of the rumor that Mutual was planning to remove their general offices from Chicago.
Work Begins on Mutual's "Lost Express"

Helen HolmesPosing in Her Entire Express Train, LadenFourth Film Series, in Which Inventions, Disappears

Primarily the story has to do with the complete disappearance of an express train. This train, it will be seen, is a most wonderful paraphernalia ever conceived—inventions which revolutionize warfare, electricity, the operation of submarines and the industry of pearl fishing, to mention only a few of the marvels—starts from one station and fails to arrive at another but eight miles away. The track between the two stations is a perfectly straight stretch, with no side-tracks, derailing switches or other cut-offs. It is all flat prairie land between one station and the other, with no bridges, culverts or branch lines—and only a single short tunnel.

The minute inspection of the roadbed, made within a few hours of the train's failure to appear at its destination, fails to reveal the slightest clue as to what happened to it. What happened to it—where it went to—will set audiences the country over to talking, guessing and figuring—until the fifteenth and final chapter of the film reveals the secret in a most astounding manner.

Sweeping Reorganization of Sun-

A reorganization and election of new officers has taken place within the Sunshine Film Corporation of Chicago. The reorganization brings a capitalization of $1,500,000. The officers elected were as follows: Edward D. Shank, president; K. M. Scoville, vice-president; S. S. Strauss, secretary and treasurer. The board of directors is composed of the above three officers and the following: Alfred Frieder, William Buckley, L. C. Whiton and Harvey T. Weeks.

K. M. Scoville, who is also general manager, announced with the reorganization that a new policy of production and output, vastly different from most companies, is to be followed.

M. F. Tobias, of the Superlative Pictures Corporation, New York, has placed an order with Sunshine for ten seven-reel productions, the first to be released on September 1. These will be sold on a state rights basis throughout the territory controlled by Mr. Tobias.

Standard Managers Plan Strong

Selling Campaign

A meeting of all the eastern west branch managers of the Standard Film Corporation was held at the Sherman Houses here last week. President R. C. Cropper, of Kansas City, and Ralph O. Proctor, manager of the Chicago office presided. The managers in attendance at the conference were: Charles W. Minneapdo; J. Erwin Dodson, of St. Louis; Marty Williams, of Des Moines; W. L. Ryan, sales manager of Kansas City; and C. W. Taylor, of Omaha.

One of the chief objects of the meeting was to arrange an intensive and widespread sales campaign for the Billy West-

King-Bee Pictures, the distribution of which the Standard Corporation has recently taken charge of.
CO-STARRING!

YES, yes, "The Fatal Ring" ought to be some sparkler. You see there's a Pearl and a Ruby in it. The censors, quick!

"WHAT I want to see, what I expect to see, is continuity of action on a rising scale; no let up for a single moment." Sounds as if some scenarioist was speaking, doesn't it. You can have two guesses.

WRONG both times. It's Marshal Jof- fire's idea of how to win the war.

It's very kind of the Research and News Department of the Board of Temperance, Methodist Episcopal Church, Washington, D. C., to send us their bulletin, but we find no picture department therein. The editors are overlooking a great news source.

TAKE it from Frank Bruner, his gru- nious nibs, the Russian Mad Monk Ildor, is being shadowed by assassins. Several of them attacked an automobile in which they believed was the Mad Monk the other evening and fired a fusilade of revolver shots. The trouble is we have to take it from Mr. Bruner whereas, you know, if it hadn't been for this war news censorship the whole thing might have been in the papers.

JEROME BEATTY has a story in the July 7 issue of the All-Story Weekly, entitled "Trixie and the 'Regular Girl,' which must be a good one for Jerry sent out postals about it, and he knows our reputation.

THE bomb-shell of joy, the cyclonic comedienne, the actress who bombards audiences with happiness, the rapid-fire girl, the forty-centimeter hit, have all been used in a vain effort to describe Eva Tanguay, but we think Randolph Bartlett hit the bull's eye when he wrote "galvanic personality."

THE whole trade, or that part of it which receives the Trade Review, breathed a sigh of relief when the Junk of Van Loan was discovered to be missing from its pages last week. Both the Review and the Junkman had come to their senses! But no. The Washington trip, unhappily, will not come every week.

LAST week Rialto patrons received as a gift from the management a booklet entitled "Songs of Patriotism," containing about twenty-seven patriotic numbers including from "The Star Spangled Banner" to "Home, Sweet Home." Patrons of the Rialto now boast of knowing the words of their national anthems.

DANIEL F. CRILLY, just to show that he is versatile and unwilling to play favorites all the time, has penned the following to an actress other than Peggy Snow:

Luring her prey
O-n and off—
U-ntil all their manhood is gone

S-uble—like Willow they bend—
E-ternal, enchanting Louise.

Glorious Pagan thou art!

Ancient Babylon's splendor—
Un-dersized eyelids tender

A Story You Will Never See From one of the many companies that put in a bid for Charlie Chaplin's services and didn't get them.

Along with some half dozen odd other companies, the O. M. C. Film Producing Corporation was bidding for the services of Charlie Chaplin, the world's greatest comedian during the last two weeks. Mr. Chaplin, however, decided in favor of the Greatest Film Company, owing to the fact that this concern offered him more money than did the O. M. C., as well as a much better channel of release.

The O. M. C. Corporation, despite this turn-down on the part of the world's greatest comedian, still believes him the world's greatest comedian, and will continue to hold him in this light, even though he is producing the world's greatest comedies for the Greatest Film Company, which all in all has something better to offer exhibitors than the O. M. C. has.

Furthermore when the O. M. C. Company retains the services of another comedian who is not equal to Mr. Chaplin in any respect, it will not announce that he is better than Mr. Chaplin, or even that he is on a par with him. In fact, the O. M. C. Company fully realizes that Mr. Chaplin is supreme, and deplores the fact that it was unable to offer him a sum of money greater than that offered by the Greatest Film Company.

The Longacre Lampoon

All the News That Fits, We Print

Longacre Square, N. Y., July 21, 1917

As every paper in the business is putting out a Convention Number, the Longacre Lampoon has decided the idea of stealing a march on its many contemporaries and herewith is the first edition of the sort turned out this year. The only trouble is the lack of convention news. However, that doesn't bother us at all. We have gazed into the crystal globe and found out just exactly what is going to happen.

The attendance will be beyond the fondest expectations. The Coliseum will be crowded every afternoon and evening with photoplay fan- eger to catch a glimpse of their favorites of the screen. Exhibitors will decide on thorough co-operation, and producing and distributing corporations will come to the conclusion that without the exhibitor they would be at a loss and consequently they will decide to co-operate to the fullest possible extent with the exhibitor.

Then there will be an election, the results of which the crystal globe told us with the stipulation that we repeat them to no one until after the election.

Also the booths of the various companies will be ranged around the main floor, will be beautifullly decorated for the occasion and handsome souvenirs will be distributed by many of those who have contracted for space.

Newark Lauds Pictures of Pershing's Arrival in France

Newark newspapers are giving considerable space to the enterprise of the Universal Film Company. The Newark Morning Ledger ran the following news story:

"Motion pictures of the landing of General Pershing's brigade in France arrived in New York on Thursday afternoon last. The pictures, which were taken by the Universal Film Company, reached New York within twenty-four hours of the time when the first official news of the arrival of Pershing's men in France was authorized for publication by the Washington authorities."

Newark Picture Houses Scorn Summer Closing

Exhibitor Says Wartime Is When the Public Must Have Open Places of Amusement—Need Money for Taxes and Must Keep Busy

RECENT rumors that a movement had been started to bring to Newark, N. J., city officials the "necessity and wisdom" of closing motion picture houses for the season find little sympathy or support from the public. In fact the suggestion has aroused so much indignation among motion picture fans and exhibitors that it may practically be taken for granted that the agitation has been abandoned. One exhibitor declared:

"War time is precisely the time when people need amusement. If the United States were to plunge itself into a riot of grief and conduct itself throughout the war period as if a gigantic and perpetual funeral was going on, it would be soundly whipped within a short time. Not only must the people keep their spirits up, but it is essential to national victory that normal conditions be preserved in every way."

"If we are going to pay the taxes, float the loans, build the ships, raise the food, and arm, equip, train and transport the armies which this war will require, we shall have no time to pull down the shades and sit behind locked doors to weep."

"Life goes on pretty much the same as in times of peace. All the theatres of Newark are doing a pretty good business. In London I see that some of their theatres are doing a smashing box-office business."

Using Motion Picture Theatres to Aid Local Recruiting

George B. Sell, License Commissioner, made speeches in various moving picture theatres in Brooklyn during the week in a campaign to stimulate recruiting.

At the conclusion of his speech in each theatre the orchestra played "The Star Spangled Banner" and patriotic slides were flashed on the screen. The Commissioner was enthusiastically applauded in all the movie places.

E. Kaufman, chief of the motion picture division in the license office; William Brandt, president of the Associated Motion Picture Exhibitors of Brooklyn, and Louis L. Levine accompanied the speaker on the tour.

Priscilla Theatre in Cleveland for Summer Movies

This week saw the installation of photo-plays at the Priscilla, East Ninth street, in Cleveland, O., where this policy will be maintained until the opening of the regular vaudeville season.

The management announces that the house is to release first-run pictures only, beginning with Bluebird and Butterfly pictures. They opened with the Bluebird star Franklin Furnace in "The Car of Chance."

First-Run Bookings at Los Angeles Theatres

The first Butterfly releases of the Universal booked for first run in Los Angeles were contracted by Manager Dave Burson, of the California Universal Exchange this week.

"The Flame of Youth," starring Jack Mulhall, will be on at H. P. Caulfield's Garrick theatre the coming week, and following that the Mary MacLaren subject, "The Plow Woman," will be shown.

"Man and the Beast" has been booked for first run exhibition at the Burbank.

Travel Club Wants Motion Picture Men

The Travel Club, which is co-operating with the Government in the matter of National Defense, is making a special appeal for members. Many traveling men in the motion picture industry are already members.

Good roads, conservation of national resources, preservation of historical sites and the fostering of a spirit of brotherhood among travelers are objects of the organization. There is an insurance feature also. E. C. Turner, Seventeenth street and Union Square, New York, is corresponding secretary.

Sunday Movies in Chattanooga Bring Out 11,000 Patrons

CHATTANOOGA, TENN.—City Commissioners last week agreed that motion picture theatres should be run on Sunday as a special dispensation for the soldiers at Fort Oglethorpe. Not a little pressure has been brought to bear from many sources on this particular matter, and the Commissioners, at a conference that followed their regular session, took action favoring Sunday motion pictures.

Prominent men have come out in support of picture shows on the Sabbath. It is realized that this day is the only time for recreation that the thousands of soldiers at Fort Oglethorpe have.

Consequently, on last Sunday the Alcazar, Fine Arts, Bonita and Royal motion picture theatres opened at 1:30 p. m., and continued in operation until 7 that night, then closed until church services were over at 9 p.m., when they reopened and remained in operation until 10:30.

Special films were shown, and it was estimated that 11,000 people attended the performances during the hours that the film houses were open. Three of the houses were packed.

Hundreds of soldiers took advantage of the opportunity for recreation and amusement, and greatly helped to swell the attendance. When asked about the opening of the theatres, Attorney-General M. N. Whitaker made no comment, other than that he would be heard from later.

Officers of the Signal Amusement Company, which operates a string of film houses, believe they are justified in opening the shows because of the insistent demand from military authorities, labor unions and various commercial and industrial bodies and individuals.

Speculation is rife as to what the Attorney General's attitude will be.

Mutual Changes Its Manager at Dallas

W. T. Knapp, of Dallas, Texas, has been promoted to manager of the Mutual exchange at that point. His assistant will be L. M. Golds, of Amarillo. C. A. Clegg has resigned.

Hard Knocks Killed

Censorship in Illinois

THE statewide censorship bill in Illinois did not die at the end of the session of the Legislature unassisted, it seems. George L. Reker, former corporation counsel in Chicago, who went to Springfield for Essanay and K-E-S-E, tells the story:

"When I arrived in Springfield the bill had already come up in the House and been referred to the judiciary committee. I did not believe the committee would approve it. However, the following day the bill came back to the house with the full approval of the judiciary committee. There was no chance for a fight to be made there, and the bill went up to the Senate with the House's O.K.

"The Senate referred the bill to its judiciary committee, and for several days I watched the proceedings of that body. When I became assured that the committee would approve the measure, I launched into my fight with both fists. Going before the committee, I pointed out that to approve such a bill and create a state board of censorship would be to usurp Chicago's legal right to home rule.

"On such an argument I induced the committee to add an amendment to the measure, excluding Chicago from supervision of the proposed state board of censors. This gave the entire proceedings a new complexion, and it became necessary to send the amended bill back to the House for reconsideration which, of course, occasioned a delay.

"However, I had acted only two days before adjournment, and of course there was no opportunity for the House to consider the bill in the rush to complete other unfinished business. Thus the measure died a natural death and Illinois exhibitors were saved from state censorship."

Mabelle Heikes Justice Praises Selig Courtesy

MABELLE HEIKES JUSTICE has returned to New York to resume her literary work after several weeks spent in Chicago, where she has been in conference with the Selig Polyscope Company. Before she left for the east Miss Justice spoke interestingly of her work.

She said:

"There is a feeling of satisfaction and pride on the part of an author in viewing a finished production after having had the close cooperation in the work of both producer and director. The making of 'Who Shall Take My Life?' has been a pleasure to me rather than a work.

"From its very beginning I have watched and worked with the production step by step. Under the personal supervision of William N. Selig and the fine production of Colin Campbell, the picture was brought to a point where the author was called in, and after several weeks of cooperation in cutting and assembling the picture is now ready for release."

"Many of the final and important decisions in assembling the film were left entirely to the judgment of the author. This courtesy on the part of the Selig Polyscope Company is one that should be accented by every earnest working photodramatist by every film company. By such cooperation there must be unquestionably the production of greater stories and better films.

"The usual plan of taking a photodrama from the hands of the author and not giving him a glimpse of his brain child again until it has been pruned and often distorted by everyone else down the line and becomes to the originator an unrecognizable screen product is all wrong."

"'Who Shall Take My Life?' was written for an object—the abolishment of capital punishment in circumstantial evidence. But with no attempt at propaganda, the story itself was left to teach the lesson. And now since the film has been completed and exhibited at private showings to many great prison reformers, it has been a great gift to the author to sit back and watch the impression of the story on these men and on law makers who would no longer tolerate capital punishment."
Harry Lustig, Metro, in Los Angeles

Harry Lustig, special representative of the Metro for mountain and coast states, spent a portion of the past week in Los Angeles with Manager Harry Ballance of the local exchange. Mr. Lustig was just completing a tour over the entire territory, and was on his way to his headquarters at Denver.

George Kleine Says Bookings Are Good on Conquest Films

George Kleine, distributor of Conquest Pictures, produced by the Edison studio, announces that his branch offices throughout the K-E-S-E organization report unusual interest by exhibitors in these pictures, especially the program feature of seven reels, which Mr. Kleine is offering with the privilege allowed exhibitors of selecting any one subject from it.

The feature program scheduled for publication, July 14, embraces a four-reel feature, "Chris and the Wonderful Lamp," written by Albert Stearns; "The Luck of Roaring Camp" and "Skylarking on Skis," two reels; "He Couldn't Get Up in the Morning" and "Captains of Tomorrow," one reel.

A recent folder sent out by Mr. Kleine says:

"Conquest Pictures were not made to evade censorship, but rather to invite it, knowing they would stand the acid test. Cameramen, scientists, explorers and adventurers circled the globe seeking subject-matter for these Conquest Pictures. Lives have been risked and fortunes expended, unheard of experiences encountered to obtain some of the scenes in Conquest Pictures."

New Exchange and Other Moves in St. Louis

Several of the St. Louis exchanges have made changes in office staff, and one new exchange has been opened. S. J. Mr. Baker says only big features like "The Bar Sinister" and "The Sin Woman" will be distributed.

H. E. Elder, former manager of the Fourth avenue branch of the General Film Company, in New York, is now at the head of the General offices in St. Louis, at 3610 Olive street.

R. K. Evans has been appointed manager of the Pathe Exchange, at 3210 Locust street. Mr. Evans comes from Chicago.

Live News of Los Angeles Exchanges

B. H. COLLIER, who has been manager of the Superba theatre in Los Angeles for the past year, has accepted a position as salesman with the California Universal Exchange, and last week brought home the big contract by booking the "Gray Ghost" serial, for showing at the Symphony theatre, beginning early in July. Manager Charles Gates, of the Symphony, recently ran the Metro-Bushman-Bayne serial, and the business fell off materially at the end of the subject, causing them to add this attraction to his program, which at present consists of a local news weekly of 500 feet, and the current Metro release.

Manager C. L. Theuerkauf, manager of the Bluebird Exchange in Los Angeles, has booked the Lois Weber production, "The Hand That Rocks the Cradle," for two weeks at Clune's Auditorium, early in July. Mr. Theuerkauf is shortly to be transferred to the San Francisco California Universal Exchange, where he will be in charge of booking the Bluebird subjects. His work will be taken up here by B. H. Collier, who was recently added to the California Universal staff.

Manager B. E. Loper, of the Los Angeles Pathé Exchange, is making an extensive tour to Southern California points in the interest of booking the coming Pathé serial, "The Fatal Ring." He will go as far on the coast as San Diego, and return by the inland route to the Imperial Valley.

Harry C. Cohen, who has been affiliated with the L. J. Selznick Exchange at San Francisco, has been transferred to the Los Angeles office where he will serve as assistant to Manager H. H. Hicks, and look after the booking.

Dave Burshon, manager of the Los Angeles California Universal Exchange, is taking a short vacation, owing to the condition of his health, and is spending the time at Great Bear Valley. Mr. Burshon expects to be gone one week, and upon his return all exchanges are working on fish stories of the year.

The many Los Angeles friends of George Faris, manager of the Greater Vitagraph Seattle Exchange, were shocked to learn of an accident in which he nearly lost his life. Faris was shot down on horseback in the San Fernando Valley, at the home of his former chief, and was later taken to a hospital for treatment.

Two Leading Detroit Theatres Run "O. Henry" All Week

For the third time the O. Henry two-reel features from General Film have been run in the two biggest houses in Detroit during the same week.

The pictures in this instance are "No Story," which played the week of June 29 and repeated the week of July 2, and "The Love Philtre of Hey Schoenstein," which played all of the week of July 2 instead of the half week for which it had been billed.

At the same time the new releases were being introduced, making four reels of O. Henry being shown in the extra time. The same thing had been done twice before in these houses.

Harry Leonhardt, in West, Steps from Fox to Goldwyn

Harry Leonhardt has taken the position of general western manager for the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation. He leaves a similar position with William Fox. He will go first to Denver. His territory will include Seattle, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Goldwyn's branches in the four zones are organized under these heads:

Denver, W. S. Rand; Los Angeles, G. C. Parsons; San Francisco, C. M. Simmons and Seattle, F. E. Hill.

For twenty-five years Mr. Leonhardt managed everything from Shakespearean dramas to tableaux vivants and modern vaudeville with the Keith and Proctor interests. He has been four years with William Fox.

He is well and favorably known to all branches of the trade and the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation is to be congratulated on its acquisition.
THE EASTERN STUDIOS

THE "fastest boat that ever breastesd Lake Cayuga"—to use the maker's own terms—is being built at the studios of the Whartons, for use in their next feature. LeRoy Baker is building the speedster, and when it is finished it is to have more power than any other boat on the big lake. A converted automobile engine is to be used as the driving power, and Mr. Baker intends to make the tests of the boat in a bathing suit and a life preserver.

NORMA TALMADGE delights in odd and exquisite old fans. She uses them in her pictures wherever possible. Her latest Selznick production is "The Moth," which will rival "Poppy" as a screen triumph, if predictions come true. Miss Talmadge appears under the business management of Joseph M. Schenck.

OSCOE ("FATTY") ARBUCKLE asserts that at least one good joke should be perpetrated at the family breakfast table every morning. This is more essential to starting the day right than the inevitable newspaper or coffee and rolls in the opinion of the funniest man on the picture screen, who is now engaged in making Paramount-Aruckle comedy two-reelers.

OUIDA BERGERE, when she isn't placing a new discovery or arranging for an established star to set new records for salary in the motion picture profession, writes scenarios and casts pictures. Outside of business hours Ouida Berger is spending the heated term in the country. There is not a telephone or an electric light on her premises.

"As I haven't had a vacation in three years," Miss Berger declares, "I want to rest my ears and my eyes a little this summer, when the Broadway day is done.

Marguerite Marsh, sister of Mae, who was operated upon several weeks ago for appendicitis, is recovering rapidly and last week was able to visit the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee and meet the American Press Humorists, who spent the day there.

On Friday, July 13, she will accompany her sister to Chicago for the opening of the Exhibitors' convention, which is to be known as Mae Marsh-Goldwyn Day. Sister Marguerite will resume her work in an early Goldwyn production.

SONIA MARCELLE, who played the part of an Italian mother in Madge Kennedy's first Goldwyn production, plans a trip to Russia this fall to reclaim her library and furniture.

Her identification with the party that has lately come into power at Petrograd caused her to depart from that country hastily two years ago. In so doing she was forced to leave much of her personal property behind her.

OLDWYIN PICTURES will send the first motion picture man into the United States Aviation Corps. George Hill, Mae Marsh's cameraman, has presented his resignation to the Goldwyn Company and will depart shortly for the Mineola Aviation Field on Long Island, where he is to learn the science of aviation.

It is not as a flier but as an air photographer that Hill wishes to serve his country. Photography, in the air, in the machines occupying the third line of aerial defence and classified as the observation corps, is playing a major part in the battles along the Western front.

LITTLE Mary McAllister, Essanay's six-year-old star, who was recently made a sergeant in the regular army, is one of the most active members of Uncle Sam's fighting force in the present recruiting rally.

Attired in her official uniform, with an automatic pistol almost as big as she is swinging at her side, this winsome little girl is a familiar figure around recruiting offices in Chicago. It is estimated her work has netted more than 1,000 recruits for the army.

The part taken by Evart Overton, Vitagraph star, in "The Enemy," which tells the story of a man cursed by drink, called for him to do a great deal of drinking. He, of course, used ginger ale instead of whisky, but he drank so much of the stuff that his stomach was seriously affected, and during his long lay-off he has been under constant treatment for the trouble.

Mr. Overton has begun work with Miriam Fouché, a newcomer to Vitagraph, in "Soldiers of Chance."

A NEW outdoors stage for World-Pictures Brady-Made program late in August, will have an all-star cast, embracing June Elvidge, Montago Love and Arthur Ashley. Mr. Love is the guardian, Miss Elvidge the beautiful ward, and Mr. Ashley the villain double dyed.

DE JALMA WEST, who plays the part of Captain Keen in the forthcoming Metro play, "The Trail of the Shadow," is a graduate of the government Secret Service. He is a veteran of the Spanish-American war and has seen service in the Philippines.

West has an honorable discharge from the army, in which he served in Cuba and at San Juan Hill. After five seasons on the stage under the management of Klaw & Erlanger, he joined the Secret Service. Mr. West was in Trieste, Austria, when the war broke out.

MOTHER" MARY MAURICE of Vitagraph was the recipient of an ovation last week when, during a three-day rest, she accepted an invitation and went to the country place of George Peck, near Hudson, N. Y.

During a matinee Mother Mary was recognized and compelled to make a speech, in which she urged co-operation to help the country win the war.

The Vitagraph player worked ceaselessly during the Liberty Bond campaign and has now inaugurated a movement to collect old kid gloves to be sewed together and made into linings for the coats of soldiers who are in the trenches.

Marguerite Clark, who possesses among other distinctions the honor of being the only motion picture star who does not drive her own car, is now busily at work mastering the intricacies of the gear shaft. The Famous Players-Paramount star is going to drive a taxi cab in her next picture, and Director J. Searle Dawley insisted that she practice with her own car rather than saddle the company with indemnities for seven or eight hundred wrecked flivvers.

Doris Kenyon. Pathes Star
A DECIDEDLY western picture titled "The Desire of a Moth" is to be made by Universal Company with a big cast which includes Ruth Clifford, Monroe Salisbury, W. H. Bainbridge, G. Raymond Nye, Arthur Mackley, E. A. Warren, and about fifty cowboys. Consent has been secured for the use of mountain locations in the vicinity of Forest Home, about eighty miles northeast of Los Angeles. The company left Saturday for the location and will be there probably one week.

Director George Cochrane, who recently returned to Universal City, is to direct Ben Wilson and Neva Gerber in a series of five-reel subjects, the first of which is at present known as "Gladsome." Hayward Mack has been cast for an important role.

Baby Zoe Rae is to be featured in a five-reel subject, "The Cruise of The Jolly Roger," which was put in production this week. Gretchen Lederer, Lilian Peacock, Charles West, and Brownlee make up the cast, which will be made by a new director, Elsie Jane Wilson, the fourth woman to take up the making of films at Universal. Miss Wilson has played in a great number of Universal subjects.

A new picture, "A Gentle Ill Wind," a light comedy drama with Ruth Stonehouse as star, is being made by Louis Chaudet, who has Lloyd Whitlock as lead, and J. Webster Dill and Harry Donkinson, as supporting members.

"EMBARRASSMENT OF RICHES," with Neil Hart in the featured part, is a two-reel subject directed by George Marshall in the Universal filmmg. Caroline Vaughn is new leading woman for this producing unit, and Joe Rickson will appear as the heavy.

Eileen Sedgwick and Fred Church will be the leads of "Phantom Gold," now in the making by W. B. Pearson. The story was written by Shelly Sutton and G. Ady, both of the Universal scenario staff.

Three Universal serial companies are progressing successfully. Director Jack Wells is on the tenth episode of "Perils of the Secret Service." Stuart Paton is working on the "Gray Ghost" Company working on the eighth release, and Jacques Jaccard, with the "Quest of Virginia" unit, is at Bear Lake Valley for a number of scenes.

A new plan is to be tried out by the producing company under the direction of Elmer Clifton. Two cameramen will work with the producing unit, one taking unimportant scenes under the direction of Clifton's assistant, Henry Murray, while Mr. Clifton directs the making of the more important scenes. This company is now filming "Sky High," a comedy drama written by Waldemar Young and featuring Brownie Vernon and Herbert Rawlinson. This is a story of circus life, and Universal production department has finished the organization with a complete circus outfit. Rawlinson appears as the daredevil balloon rider and stunt man of the circus, and Miss Vernon has the role of the sweet young thing of the village where the circus is stranded.

MASON HOPPER, who directed scores of subjects for the Essanay Company in Chicago, and since coming to the coast has been affiliated with the Lasky and Morosco organization, is to direct alternating subjects of a light comedy nature which feature Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran, with Edith Roberts, who is to remain with this organization. Roy Clements will direct the Nestor Company on every other picture. Fred Palmer, who has written the past thirty scenarios for this company is to continue as writer.

Director James Young, of the Paralta, last week learned of the death of his father at Baltimore, Md. The father was state senator and very prominent in affairs pertaining to Baltimore, where he had served as mayor and chief of police. The funeral was attended by the governor and staff, police force, city council and other prominent men of Baltimore.

Complete cast for the first Bessie Bariscale production, "Rose O' Paradise," to be marketed by Paralta, was given out at the studio this week. Norman Kaiser, who has appeared in Famous Player releases, is playing the lead opposite the star. David Hartford will be seen as heavy; Howard Hickman in the character role; LuCille Young, feminine heavy, and Edith Chapman, feminine character.

The Glendale Feature Film Company, organized by businees men of Glendale, has completed its first picture, a western, titled "The Lone Bandit," which is to be marketed by the Mutual Film Corporation. Edward Alexander directed and played the lead, supported by Charles Pearle, Gloria Payton, and others. Walter Newman, former scenario writer at Vogue and Universal, is to be co-director.

THERE was a thrilling railroad accident staged by accident at the Signal Studio this week when a passing train hurled a baggage truck through the walls of the station and into a set where the Helen Holmes Company was working. Carelessness on the part of some one is the cause of the accident, which resulted in the partial wrecking of the station, and the injury of one man, Virgil Hart. The truck had been left too close to the track, and the passenger train sideloaded it, throwing it from the track. Hart suffered a fracture of a bone in the forearm. It is considered miraculous that other members of the company were not injured because of the force with which the baggage truck passed through the station walls and airlifted in the center of the playing area.

The Helen Holmes Company is now working on the second episode of the "Lost Express" serial. This deals with the mysterious disappearance of an important document to a number of men. It disappears from a table witnessed by the men who are in the smoking compartment of a pullman train. No one enters or leaves the compartment, nor is there a window or door opened. The explanation is said to be very simple but is beyond the men to fathom.

John MacKinnon, character player, was this week added to the Helen Holmes Signal Company to take an important part in the forthcoming serial.

JESSE L. LASKY, accompanied by Charles Moosher, general manager of the Morosco Company in the east, arrived in Los Angeles Tuesday of this week after an automobile trip across the country. Mr. Lasky by completing the trip won a bet of $500 from Mack Sennett, and immediately turned the sum over to the Red Cross. Mr. Lasky will, spend some time at the studio arranging details for coming productions in association with Cecil B. deMille. He advises that Lina Cavalieri and Madame Petrova will in all probability come to the coast for picture making early in August.

All of the Lasky producing organization members who could get away went to Jack Doyle's arena at Vernon, Saturday, there to witness a fight in which Jack Pickford battled Leo Hux for scenes in the coming Paramount production, "Jack and Jill." Pickford is very popular with all members of the Lasky Company, and they sought to cheer him in his first encounter with a professional fighter. Wm. D. Taylor is director in charge of the making of scenes, and he had perhaps the highest salaried audience that ever sat before a motion picture camera for fight scenes.
D. DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS, to make sure releases are completed on time, added another director to the staff in the person of Joseph Henaberry, formerly affiliated with Fine Arts, where he was associated with Griffith in the making of "Intolerance" and also the filming of several other productions. John Emerson will remain as director in chief of the company, supervising the filming of all productions, but will only direct every other picture, thus having time between filming the productions to edit one subject and prepare scenario for the next while Mr. Henaberry is filming another subject. Director Henaberry is now at work with a company filming what is termed "The Optimist," a story by Fairbanks, adapted for the screen by Anita Loos. This is spoken of as a close to nature story with the greater portion laid in New York city. Fairbanks takes the role of a sunshine and an open air propagandist. The picture will be finished within two weeks. Supporting Fairbanks are Eileen Percy, Herbert Standing, character actor, Charles Girard, heavy, Charles McHugh, Ruth Allen, Miss Mayo and Bull Montana.

Bennie Ziedman has returned from a trip to San Francisco made in the interest of Douglas Fairbanks, where he attended the opening of the Fairbanks subject, "Wild and Woolly," at the Strand theatre. He reports the first day's business totalled more than $1,500, and that Manager Sid Grauman had an attractive advertisement that brought results in the employment of a number of cowboys who rode through the principal streets of the city, announcing the attraction at the Strand.

THE first steps for the enlargement of the Triangle Culver City Studios were taken this week when General Manager E. G. Patterson purchased from the Harry Culver Company fifteen acres immediately south of the present studio grounds. With this additional real estate, the studio will cover an area of twenty-three acres.

"The enlargement of the producing organization for the Triangle planned by Mr. H. O. Davis," Mr. Patterson said in discussing the enlargement of the producing forces, "provides for at least six more producing organizations to be added at the Culver City plant. Present plans provide that this studio shall be the principal one of the organization, and without a doubt all dramatic units will work from there.

"No definite plans have been made with respect to comedies for the program, but it is probable these will be made at the Hollywood Studio, formerly occupied by the Fine Arts organization. Who will be in charge of this department cannot be stated at this time."

Many rumors have been heard on the coast in the past few days concerning negotiations being carried on with stars for appearance on the Triangle program, but advice at the studio is that these negotiations are being conducted by the New York office of the Triangle, and no information can be given here concerning the success of the executives with players.

Inceville, the original studio of the New York Motion Picture Company, located in the Santa Ynez canyon, has a new name. The big sign bearing the name Inceville was hauled down this week, and in its place appears "Hartville," it being the intention of the Triangle that this shall be the studio of William S. Hart, if they are successful in keeping him with their organization.

VICTOR SCHERTZINGER has made the final scenes for "Sudden Jim," starring Charles Ray, with Sylvia Bremer as leading woman. While directing the production of this, Schertzing, by the aid of the troupe, composed three pieces of music, "The Irish Hula," "Girl Dwar," and a nameless one-step for Charlotte Greenwood, all of which are now being published by Leo Fiest, members of the company acting as critics during waiting minutes on sets, and the music will bear the line, "Lyric and Music by Victor Schertzinger and Troupe." Prior to becoming a director, Schertzing gave all his time to orchestra leading and the composition of music, and has to his credit thirty odd scores of incidental music for photoplays and many orchestra numbers.

Reginald Barker, having completed the Triangle western subject with Louise Glaum as star, has been granted a two weeks' vacation, and is spending the time at Catalina Island, where he hopes to meet his pet Tuna. Miss Glaum will next play under the direction of Walter Edwards in a subject which gives her a part similar to the one in "The Wolf Woman." The photoplay for this is by Monte M. Katterjohn, and from preparations now being made it is not idle prophecy to say the gowns to be worn by Miss Glaum will be even more attractive than those seen in the above mentioned photoplay.

"The Beloved Adventuress" (World Film—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS is probably the best feature in which Kitty Gordon has appeared since her entrance into motion pictures. That is, taking it from the standpoint of production and her own work in the role of Juliette La Monde. Perhaps this is directly traceable to William A. Brady, as it was he who directed "The Beloved Adventuress." At any rate Miss Gordon seems to have increased her range of expression since her last appearance. The role of Juliette was written specially for her and as a result the impression she creates is at once favorable and realistic.

The story of "The Beloved Adventuress" is full of action, a little too full perhaps, while in common with many other World pictures it deals with domestic complications and entanglements that don't seem to say the least, and not always open to discussion in the best regulated families. However, of its type, it is a very good example. It is generally well put together and, with the exception of one or two minor inconsistencies, is convincing from every viewpoint.

Madge Evans and Lilian Cook as the young and the old Francine, and Frank Truesdell prominent in the supporting cast, give excellent performances.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Juliette La Monde (Kitty Gordon), musical comedy actress, loves only Morgan Grant (Frederick Truesdell). Grant deserts his wife (Pinna Nesbit) for the other woman. Years later Juliette's sister, Francine (Lilian Cook) comes to visit her fresh from an English convent. Juliette leads an altogether different life after this, for in her is awakened the feeling of mother love. When Grant, tiring of Juliette, begins to pay court to Francine and when Francine accepts his attentions knowing full well the probable consequences, Juliette goes to Grant's apartment to plead. They quarrel, a gun is drawn, and Grant is mortally wounded. Before dying he exonerates Juliette. She, seeing Francine happy with Stewart (William Sherwood), returns to Europe, where as a Red Cross nurse she meets her death.

"The Message of the Mouse"
(Vitagraph—Seven Parts)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"The Message of the Mouse" portrays the manner in which a young girl proved the means of refuting the plot of five foreign ambassadors to gain possession of the United States billions. It is supposed to take place after the present war. With Anita Stewart in the leading role and with plenty of spying and plotting, enough to supply material for a fifteen-red serial, it seems destined to please that portion of the public that takes to the other work of its authors with a relish. George Randolph Chester and Lilian Chester wrote the story and it is neither very dramatic nor as unified as could be desired, its wealth of incident, in this case the constant plotting and counterplotting of all the characters, keeps the action ever entertaining.

There are secret panels, false ceilings, messages written in code and invisible ink, messages conveyed to their destination in the stems of flowers, even a mouse carries an important scrap of paper to the young lady who eventually solves the great mystery. The reader can readily appreciate the character of the picture by the foregoing. The Chesters seem to have stretched their imaginations to the very limit in the contriving of new stunts of this sort. And in so doing they have very often neglected the story. When one finally gets down to it after having gone through the maze of incidental trickery it turns out to be very inconsequential and loose jointed. But, it is a supposition practically safe, that the audience who appreciates the picture will forget all about the vials of the story. In fact, it won't have time to even think about them.

Miss Stewart is as winsome and charming as ever in her role of Wynn Winthrop, although her part supplies her no real opportunities. Julia Swayne Gordon and L. Rogers Lyttle make a pair of typical motion picture spies of J. Stuart Blackton directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Henry Winthrop (Franklyn Hanna), financier, through the influence of Varrie (L. Rogers Lyttle), a spy, agrees to allow his vast fortune to pass into the hands of foreign powers, believing his own country will gain thereby. Varrie and Marcia Elmore (Julia Swayne Gordon) work on the job together. Henry Winthrop (Anita Stewart) working in hand with Concord (Robert Gaillard), chief of detectives, obtains a clue and following it up is finally responsible for the round-up of the conspirators and the awakening of her father to a sense of what is right. Adams (Rudolph Cameron), whom she loves and believes to be one of the spies, turns out to be a member of the secret service.

"The Little American"
(Arcade—Six Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TIME was when one could say "Mary Pickford, That's All—And Enough" in reviewing her features but even though the older order hadn't changed before this, the course of a review would be radically different in the case of "The Little American." For here one has the marvelous power of the American flag to reinforce with and the spectacle of the Allies fighting the common enemy. Little Mary by herself, creates such a rumpus in the vicinity of the box office that one thinks seriously of taking out accident insurance, so just what the effect will be with these valuable supports it is rather difficult to estimate. Managers, however, would do well to reinforce the props of the balcony and get in pocket to hold extra tickets.

As a patriotic spectacle and as an ideal Pickford vehicle, "The Little American" is superb. When the German hero denounces the Emperor and the system that once was his with a ferocious "damn" in order to protect Angela Moore, the Little American, and when Angela announces that she has quit being neutral and has turned human; then are the times for loud applause. But there is more than stirring speeches and patriotic flag waving to "The Little American."

For thrills we will go a long way before seeing anything to equal the sinking of the ocean liner. The tilting of the ballroom, the passengers falling and leaping from the slanting deck while the submarine commander looks on with a smile of triumph, form a series of scenes that awe one with their faithful reproduction of the actual sea disasters of which the world has heard so often since the beginning of the war. The sinking, taking place at night, is mainly suggested by a series of flashes and yet it has all the power and more of such a sensation staged in broad daylight.

Then comes the France of today, with its blasts of battle, its wounded, its German deeds of hate, and its immortal resistance of the French. None of the details that are incidental to the confusion of war are neglected. And most of all, practically every incident of the European episode is merely a reproduction of actual accounts of the war.

Three times is the little American menaced by death, and each time it is so close that suspense runs at a record clip. There may be something impossible in her miraculous escape from the German firing squad when a shell from a French gun lands in its midst, but in picture such as the one this is very likely to forget such a minor thing. The whole is knit together with a workmanship that bespeaks of a real artist. Every episode is dramatic to the last scene, each one teems with action scenes following logically upon one another. When the trade has so often seen the emotions of a writer get the better of his judgment as an author, it can readily appreciate the pictorial perfection of "The Little American." It combines the emotional appeal with a logical story.

The support selected for the star is of a superb order throughout. Jack Holt fares excellently with the role of Karl, Hobart Bosworth is a typical German commander, typical because of his makeup, which closely resembles the features of the unpopular Emperor, and Raymond Hatton as Count Jules, lover of France and Angela, was never better. And a word must be said for Walter Long, who as a brutish German captain does an admirable piece of work.

The picture is another triumph for its author, Jeanne Macpherson, another for its director, Cecil De Mille, naturally it is another for Mary Pickford.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Karl Von Austreim (Jack Holt), a German-American, living in the United States receives word to join his regiment in Germany. He leaves Angela Moore (Mary Pickford), his American sweetheart, wondering what it’s all about. Shortly afterwards Count Jules de Destin (Raymond Hatton), an unsuccessful suitor, also leaves. Later Angela has an opportunity to go to France. The vessel is sunk by a German submarine. She reaches France to find her aunt dead, the chateau transformed into a hospital. The retreat from French desert left the heroine in the dark about her brother, who is left behind the lines. Mary is given Karl's freedom as a reward for her services, and they prepare to depart for America.

“THE FATAL RING”

(Pathe-Third Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

MORE complications that give promise of providing plenty of material for the remainder of the serial are introduced in this number, released under the separate title of “Borrowed Identity.” Pearl and Knox still continue to strive for possession of the diamond and its setting and finally secure both pieces from Carlske, but in the last reel the villain reveals the fact that he has a duplicate diamond of glass, and many more of the same sort, and it is one of these that Pearl that strives so valiantly for.

The story is also given a peculiar twist in the third episode. Knox, first introduced as the masked bandit, and who displayed only heroic traits in the opening chapters now develops into more or less of a two-sided character. Although aiding Pearl in her pursuit of the valuable stone, he shows marked dislike to Carlton, the reporter, who has also enlisted on the side of the heroine.

So with such many and varied complications “The Fatal Ring” seems to have settled for a role that will be as exciting as the most hopeful could have expected.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Carlton (Henry Gsell) releases Pearl (Pearl White), Knox (Earle Fox) and the Priestess (Ruby Hoffman) from the closing room. Through a trick Pearl and Knox are brought in the power of Carlske (Warner Oland), who shanghaies them after securing the diamond. Pearl, however, strikes back with another trick, refuting Carlske's game while Knox is later rescued by Pearl and Carlton.

“The Neglected Wife”

(Balboa-Pathes-Eleventh Episode)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE mysterious character, the veiled woman, gains prominence in this number, entitling it “A Reckless Indiscretion.” Twice in notes to the neglected wife does the threat of Kennedy saying that she has been foiled in her attempt to harm him through Margaret, she will strike him himself.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Doyle (Neil Hardin) commissions one of his henchmen to procure his letters to Margaret (Ruth Roland) to use against him as he is threatened with the line of the police. This man succeeds and Margaret realizes when he grows fearful for his own future that he cares more about himself than he does about her. Norwood (Philo McCullough) gets a clue as to the whereabouts of the letters and accompanied by Margaret attempts to retrieve them, but instead he is overcome and left in a burning house while Margaret goes for assistance.

“The Last of the Carnabys”

(Astra-Pathes-Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

GLADYS HULETTE claims further honors in “The Last of the Carnabys,” her latest Pathe picture. As Lucy, the last of a long line of respected Carnabys, who goes so far as to besmirch her own innocence before the public in vain effort to save the name of her brother, she played a part in which her appealing personality and innocent style fit to excellent advantage.

The story, from the pen of Sam Morse, also takes much of its charm from the unusual number of original and sympathetic touches introduced throughout its length. The prominent part in the actual working out of the plot which the collie dog plays is not the least of these. A charming piece of character work is due to the efforts of J. H. Gilmour in the role of the old butler of the Carnabys, while Eileen Chadwick as the “daughter of Broadway” is given bits of true comedy relief to inject as incidental to the main purpose of her role.

The setting of the picture is excellent in every respect. The subtitle speaks of valuable scenes of the Carnaby home and the fact that the pictures do justice to the claim is a most praiseworthy point. There are a number of exteriors photographed in the environs of New York's Washington Square with one of the old residences serving as the Carnaby home and in the opening reel one is treated to the spectacle of a battle ship launching.

George B. Seitz prepared the scenario from Mr. Morse's story while the direction was in charge of William Parke, a man whose past successes have proved him a director of the first class.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Lucy (Gladys Hulette) and Gordon Carnaby (William Parke, Jr.) find themselves on the verge of ruin with the death of their mother (Eugenie Woodward). Lucy is unable to check the wild career of her brother, who before long runs heavily into debt to Etheredge (Paul Everton), a worthless character. Etheredge, realizing his advantage, makes advances toward Lucy. Angered at this Gordon kills him. Lucy urges his flight and subsequently takes the blame, giving, on the stand, a story of violated virtue as her cause for the death of her brother, his death. Finally asserting itself, hastens to the trial. He meets with an accident and arriving in the court room is only able to exonerate Lucy with his last breath. Lucy, though crushed in spirit, accepts the proposal of Rand (Harry Benham) and there is a promise of better days to come.

“When True Love Dawns”

(Ady-International Service-World Films-Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

EXCELLENT treatment has made “When True Love Dawns” an excellent picture. With a story taught as old as the business itself, Louis Mercanton, the French director, has made an entertaining, even gripping production. Mr. Mercanton is an artist in his work. He knows the value of every scene he "shoots," and by skilful handling of a few powerful situations he has made his whole story as good as its strongest point. The same wonderful exterior photography prevails in the picture as has been seen in the four previous of the same brand.

Featured is Susan Grandaise, whose work attracted so much comment in “The Naked Soul.” Her freshness and charm, the nicety with which she handles both light and heavy scenes stamp her an actress of real ability. Without being played up to undue advantage, Miss Grandaise quietly dominates the entire picture. Albert Signer as Drayson, with opposite lead, performs with admirable restraint and the remainder of the cast maintains an unusually high standard.

“When True Love Dawns” can be well recommended for exhibitors at large. It is one of those rare pictures that will probably please all audiences, from the most exacting down.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Susan Breville (Susan Grandaise), because of the debts contracted by her brother (Brenton Marchville) marries Drayson (Albert Signer), a wealthy business man, although her affections are centered on Paul (Paul Guide), an artist. As time goes on Drayson discovers that sacrifice made by Susan, and to make her happy plans to put himself out of her life. Knowing a blast is to be set off at a quarry, he places himself just where the loosened rock will crush him. Susan divines what is to happen and rushes to save him. Afterward she realizes that Drayson is much the better man.

Marie Jalabert as the Duchess of Breville completes the cast.
TIME LOCKS AND DIAMONDS," an ince picture, is a crook melodrama of unusual interest when its few surface flaws are relegated to some obscure spot in the head. The action which is fast and full of cleverly conceived situations has the power of disposing of the inconsistencies. William Desmond, in his role as Silver Jim Farrel, works in his characteristic way and receives competent support from the remainder of the cast.

The story is by John Lynch and J. G. Hawks, and the many complications that have been injected into a rather conventional theme give the entire picture a look of freshness. The situation prevailing at the wedding and the theft is one of great suspense, and as the trick worked by the crooks in robbing the necklace from the jewelry store.

All in all, "Time Locks and Diamonds" is considerably better than the average crook melodrama. Despite the fact that it relies largely on coincidence and basically mechanical situations, it is so well handled both in the writing and producing, that it fully entertains over its entire length. Walter Edwards directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Silver Jim Farrel (William Desmond) reforms from his thieving ways for the sake of his sister, Marjory (Gloria Hope), but when one of his old pals calls for assistance he decides to turn one more trick. With the aid of his right hand pal, Crabbe (Robert McKim), he engineers a daring robbery of a jewelry store. The prize is a necklace. Mendoza (George Benanger), in love with Marjory, enlists the services of Seymour (Rowland Lee), son of the owner of the jewelry store, for best man. Seymour, recognizing the crook, is forced to remain silent until after the wedding and the departure of the couple. Then Farrel tells him of the manner in which his (Seymour's) father cheated him years ago, although he doesn't reveal the identity of the old man. With this Seymour assists him in escaping from detectives. The necklace is restored, while Farrel and Crabbe leave the country.

Mildred Harris, Thomas Guits and Milton Ross are others.

“The Flame of the Yukon”

(ALASKA in the days of the gold rush is the setting of “The Flame of the Yukon,” a seven reel Ince production starring Dorothy Dalton. It is a lavishly invested picture and its feature is a long and bloody fight to the death, staged in a dance hall. Miss Dalton in her role of Ethel “The Flame” has a most appealing character to play, and does some of the best work in her career in bringing it to life on the screen. In fact, her character is so dominant throughout the picture that it is Miss Dalton who is generally in prominence and who is responsible for the greater portion of the interest.

Monz S. Katterjohn, the author, when he created this part, thought of others somewhat. The hero, by no means, commands either sympathy or admiration, and the big part in the fight is given to a comparatively minor character. On the other hand, "Black Jack" Hovey, the typical owner of the dance and gambling hall while villainous enough in part, was not created to give the proper impression of strength. Mr. Katterjohn has also reverted to rather trite means in straightening out his story at the finish, in introducing another man with the same name as the hero.

However, "The Flame of the Yukon," with its appealing titular character, has enough to its credit to place it on a very high plane. Those who like the wild and daring stuff will glory in it, for the huge setting and the realistic Alaskan atmosphere brought about by the erection of entire street sets are ever teeming with action. The incidental business in the dance hall is alternately entertaining and humorous.

Melbourne MacDowell carries the part of "Black Jack" to good advantage, while Kenneth Harlan is the hero. Carl Ullman, as the miner, George Fowler, executes his share of the fight with great skill, while MacDowell enters into the fray as realistically as could be desired. The fight, by the way, is a terrific one. It must occupy at least five hundred feet and is filled with thrilling incidents. Charles Miller directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Ethel, The Flame (Dorothy Dalton), queen of the Midas dance hall in Alaska, becomes acquainted with George Fowler (Kenneth Harlan), who has come from the states in search of gold. He has been unsuccessful and, the good in Ethel awakened by him, she procures money to help him. Later she leaves his place in the cafe and lends a more respectable life. There comes a Mrs. George Fowler (Mary Palmer) to Alaska in search of her husband. Ethel's heart is broken, believing she has lost the only man she ever loved. But matters are straightened out by the appearance of a second George Fowler (Carl Ullman) who proves to be the missing husband.

“The Little Boy Scout”

(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"THE LITTLE BOY SCOUT," starring Ann Pennington, is somewhat too slight to hold an audience's attention undivided for an hour or more. Charles Sarver, the author, was possessed of an idea that might be termed "cute," and no doubt it appeared to be before actually visualized. However, as pictured the cuteness seems to vanish in a maze of action that is "just action" and little else. The punch that even a comedy-drama like this requires within itself at one time. She takes never puts in an appearance, and although there is complication upon complication during the course of the plot's development none of them is sufficiently strong enough to evoke more than passing interest.

The boy scout stuff, while it will doubtless appear vastly entertaining to the youngsters, is overworked. The producers evidently fell back on subtitles manufactured specially for the occasion when they discovered that the picture could hardly stand on its own legs. These put a little pep in the action in the way of laughs. But when all is said and done "The Little Boy Scout" is lacking in real substance. It might pass well at a children's matinee, but it is not adequate to hold the featured place on a bill directed to adults.

Miss Pennington is given her usual opportunity to dance and appears to average advantage in the title role. Owen Moore, opposite her, is a little nervous in his acting—he gesticulates too much for the nerves of the spectator. The support embraces a regiment of soldiers, a troop of boy scouts and the American flag.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Justina Howland (Ann Pennington) flees from her Mexican guardian (Fraunie Frauenholz) when he plans marrying her to his son. In order to gain control of her fortune, she takes refuge with a regiment from Massachusetts on the other side of the border and immediately makes friends with the Lieutenant (Owen Moore). The boys collect enough money to send her to her aunt in Lowell, Mass., and here she later renews her acquaintance with the Lieutenant. However, they must have to do with the manner in which she outwits her guardian who comes in pursuit of her and close with her marriage to the Lieutenant.

“Patsy”

(Fox-Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

TYPICAL is a word used to excess, but it may well be employed in describing this latest effort of June Caprice. It is a typical vehicle for such as she and she is just as typical as ever before. Miss Caprice, though she seems to have a following, ought really to increase it, and to do this she must take her work a little more seriously. She has a very good time, it seems, in her pictures. She laughs profusely when there is nothing particular to laugh about and she rushes hither and yon animated to her very finger tips. But the secret of the success of a capricious maid is not in laughing all the time. Look pleasant, yes, but a laugh when the point is all obscure from the audience is rather boring when employed constantly.

The story by Joseph F. Poland takes up the case of the breezy girl from the west who wins her guardian's love on the quiet and then tells him about it in the end. It has a number of good twists and has been ably constructed. John G. Adolph is in charge of the production and has done a very satisfactory piece of work.

Harry Hillard appears opposite the star and Little Jane Lee has a bit which she does with her usual skill.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Patsy Prim (June Caprice) is sent by her father (John Smiley) to an old friend. The old friend has died and instead Patsy finds herself in charge of his son Dick (Harry Hillard) and his butler Griggs (Fred Hearn). Dick, after a night's revel, has married Héléne (Edna Munsey), an adventuress. Patsy, not knowing this and in love with Dick herself, learns from the French maid ( Alma Muller) that a man must marry a girl if he remains out late with her. She engineers a trick that bears these results. The adventuress shows up, but she turns out to be the wife of Griggs, and so Dick's marriage with her counts for naught.

“The Car of Chance”
(Bluebird—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

FINANCE and romance are the dominant qualities in this comedy-drama featuring Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon. The story, written by Waldemar Young, starts off very well, indeed, with an original situation the full possibilities of which are realized in the subsequent complications in which the principals find themselves. The leads, already well known through their team work in previous Bluebird releases, handle their roles to good advantage and the members of the supporting cast are well fitted to their respective parts.

Although the element of comedy is usually uppermost throughout the five reels, there is a good supply of melodrama to keep things ever on the jump. The twist supplied by the strike and the discovery that Mott-Smith is a man in more ways than one bring things to a climax that generally satisfies. The various threads of the story have been handled capably by the scenarioists, Mr. Young and Eugene B. Lewis.

William Worthington has given the picture a production that fills the bill excellently.

The Story and Players

Arnold Baird (Franklyn Farnum), society man, receives a seven-passenger automobile and a hundred dollars to be used for its repair as a legacy from his late father. He institutes a jitney bus transit company with the assistance of his friends and starts in business just at the time when William Mott-Smith (H. J. Bennett), head of the trolley company has refused the demands of his employees for more money. They declare a strike. Baird starts to clean up and finally brings Mott-Smith to his knees. His terms are a high position in the transit company, a good salary, and plenty of time for a honeymoon with Ruth (Brownie Vernon), a girl Mott-Smith thought he was going to marry.

Helen Wright, Molly Malone, Mark Fenton, Walter Belasco and Harry De More complete the cast.

“A Study of the Eye”
(A Kay Film—Terry Human Interest Subject, No. 2)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

“STUDY of the Eye,” the second Terry Human Interest subject, released by A Kay Film, is a novel bit of reelage showing the eyes in their different shapes, sizes and colors with a descriptive paragraph running with the drawings, telling what the different eyes indicate—vision's characteristics—imagination, and manner. Sketches of the eyes of President Wilson, ex-President Taft, Lincoln and General Pershing are shown, with a descriptive paragraph inserted, bearing out the story which the eye is said to tell.

The subject is shown in a short reel. The sketches as presented are clear and distinct and offer an interesting history of the different formed and colored eyes of man.

Educational

(Third Number of “China and Chinese” Series—“The Stag’s Biography,” Ditmar Subject)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

INTIMATE views of China and its people are given in the third number of the interesting series, titled “China and Chinese.” In this number is shown the manner in which the Orientals deal with their criminals, an interesting phase of which is the information that the criminal's family is made to suffer with the criminal. A scene shows a crowd of woman and children, members of the family of which one has been convicted of a crime, being huddled into a box-car preparatory to banishment into exile.

Results of the opium habit are shown, the examples given portraying beggars, criminals and poverty stricken Chinese who have fallen victims of the drug habit. An opium store is shown and the den where the drug is smoked. A sub-title announces that the advertising of opium was prohibited by law in April of the present year. The third number of “China and Chinese,” has a new interest in every foot of its short reelage.

THE Stag's Biography,” the late Ditmar subject, can be ranked, justly, with the best of these subjects. The different stages in the life of the stag's sweeping antlers are shown. The animal entrails one and then the other. A few weeks later the new growth begins and from this time to full maturity, which covers approximately the space of a year, the different stages in growth of the antlers are shown.

“Aladdin's Other Lamp”
(Metro—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

VIOLA DANA is featured in this picture, which is full of pretty little episodes, hung together well enough to maintain a mild degree of interest from start to finish. June Mathis prepared her scenario from William Mack’s playlet, “The Dream Girl,” and the direction was in charge of John Collins.

Episodic to a considerable degree those who prefer a lighter form of entertainment cannot help but appreciate such passages as that in which little Patsy dreams of being a modern Aladdin. The genie which emerges from her old lamp and who leads her to the gorgeous costume hall is a figure full of romance. The pathetic plight in which Patsy finds herself after she has clipped her hands in sheer delight at her surroundings, to suddenly discover herself in raggs and tatters, very much like the familiar Cinderella, is full of appeal because Miss Dana performs with a sweetness and unassuming manner that is most realistic.

Miss Dana’s performance throughout is something of a petticoat one. In playing the part of a young girl Miss Dana, it may safely be said, has few equals and no superiors. And in “Aladdin’s Other Lamp” she is given plenty of opportunities to demonstrate her ability along these lines. The picture without her, would show to poor advantage. As it is, her excellent sense of her role has brought most attractive results.

The Story and Players

Patsy Smith (Viola Dana), drudge in the boarding house of Mrs. Duff (Ricca Allen), who caters to seamen, has ambitions much higher than her sordid surroundings. Her two best companions are old Captain Barnaby (Henry Hallam), and Harry Hardy (Robert Walker), a butcher boy who studies law at night.

Patsy meets an old hag who leaves her in her trunk and like Aladdin she rubs it and wishes. She dreams of being with her mother (Nellie Grant), but it is only a dream and she awakes to throw the lamp from her window. But later she discovers in it papers that reveal the whereabouts of her mother, and at last she is transported to a real home and Hardy is given a better opportunity to study.

Augustus Phillips, Edward Elkas and Louis B. Folly complete the cast.

“Light in Darkness”
(K-E-S-E (Edison)—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

“Light in Darkness,” produced by Edison for the K-E-S-E program, has for its theme the injustice that is sometimes visited upon a person because that person is placed in the wrong light before the tribunal of justice. The story also emphasizes the point that even though a man or woman has experienced the degrading life within prison walls, there is the opportunity to “come back.”

Peter B. Kyne, who is responsible for the story succeeded in putting plenty of action in his plot and makes it possible for his characters to move with a meaning in every gesture. Alan Crossland adapted it to the screen. The action moves fast and with a naturalness that could not be much improved upon. Miss Alexander, who plays Ms. Crossland's female role, interprets the part with a nice consideration for its finer qualities and the lesson which it is meant to impart. Frank Morgan enacts a very human role and at no time does he permit the acting to enter into his impersonation. The scenes of prison life are depicted without the usual melodramatic incidents which some directors are prompted to take for granted without any apparent reason, in presenting a picture of this nature. Little of the criminal side and more of the human is shown, which fact places “Light in Darkness” in first place with the screen dramas presenting subjects dealing with prison and reform life. The later scenes of the picture show a life in the far West and these, too, have been depicted with thoughtfulness for our sense of scenic beauty. William Tooker, J. Frank Glendon, George Trimble, Bigelow Cooper and William Wadsworth make a strong supporting cast. A touch of the improbable enters the plot at points, presumably to preserve the continuity, but taken as a whole it is a picture that will be well received by any audience.

TABLOYD REVIEWS FOR BUSY EXHIBITERS

Pathé Exchange

"South Eastern Texas." (Combione.)—Another in this interesting series of Texas pictures. It shows the raising of fox terriers in the oil wells and the residential section of Beaumont, and the lumber industry of Orange. All views most entertaining.

"Nippon's Natural Glories." (International. Split reel.)—Average scenic showing gardens of Japan, split with the animated cartoon "Der Captain Discovers Der North Pole."

"Der Captain Discovers Der North Pole." (International. Split reel.)—Highly laughable animated creation featuring the famous Kasten- hammer Kids. The captain flies to the Arctic Circle and there looks about for the north pole but as usual he comes to grief at the hands of the kids. Smooth animation and unusually laughable antics performed by the characters. On the same reel with "Nippon's Natural Gardens."

Universal Program

"Six-Shooter Justice." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Week of July 15.)—Real old-time Western with killings and a barroom fight in prominence. The girl tendertoot makes a mistake, and judging by the bad man good and the good man bad, and until the latter proves his worth suspense runs high. Harry Carey, Claire Du Brey, Bill Gittinger and Arthur Witting are the principals. "F. Shelley Sutton wrote and Fred Kelsey directed.

"A Dark Deed." (Nestor. Week of July 15.)—Good comedy burlesque; the Swami (after with a second fakir along the line. Written by Jack Cunningham, and containing enough complications to make it lively all the way through. Eddie Lyons, Lee Moran, Edith Roberts and Fred Gamble do excellent work.

MOE STREIMER OF KLOTZ & STREIMER, Inc. 126 West 46th St., N. Y. City Will be at the SHERMAN HOTEL CHICAGO July 14th to 22nd inc.

THE MOTIOGRAPH

DOES ANY PROJECTOR AT ANY PRICE GIVE MORE?

—Be sure to satisfy yourself by thorough investigation;
—Study the units that enter into the MOTIOGRAPH;
—Contrast them with similar parts in other projectors;
—Find how the machine is put together.
—Get right down to the fundamentals.

FRAME—High grade gray iron castings, not a composition of lead and zinc.
GEARS—All steel, known as the "No-wear" gears.
LAMPHOUSE—Large, well-made and well ventilated.
ARC LAMP—To take 8" lower and 12" upper carbons. Has 8 different adjustments.
STAR AND CAM—Accurately ground from high grade steel and run in oil bath.
SLIDING DISC-CONNECTION—Made of high grade steel, hardened and ground, is taking the place of the ball arbor used in former models and insures a steady picture at a high rate of speed.
CONDENSER MOUNT—So arranged that either condenser can be removed separately when desired; one of the latest MOTIOGRAPH improvements.

See the MOTIOGRAPH demonstrated at the National Convention, Chicago, Ill., July 14th to 22nd.

Back of every RESULT there is a REASON

For instance,
last week we told you of the loyalty of the Exhibitor and the Distributor to the Simplex.

But figs
don’t grow on thistles, and level-headed men can’t be kept enthusiastic about a Machine that doesn’t deserve it.

So you
naturally look back of these results for the cause; for you know that there’s a reason for all things.

THE REASON IS that the Simplex is designed and built right in every detail

We wish you could see that well-conducted, well-equipped, well-manned factory of ours. At every machine, at every bench, in every man you’d find the causes that lie back of that loyalty we spoke of last week.

But we are in New York, and "YOU" are everywhere

So you can’t see all these things with your own eyes. However, that doesn’t matter much, for is not a tree known by its fruit?

Take any Simplex anywhere, remove the Intermittent (done in a few seconds); feel the fit of the bearings; see the finish of the surfaces; and, if the Machine is an old one, notice how little the vital parts are worn. Do that to any part of the Machine and you’ll be able to see with your mind’s eye the things we would like to show you at the factory.

Have you a copy of Catalog "N."
If not, what is your address?

SIMPLEX in the Projection Room means Profitable Projection on the Screen

Co-operation Necessary

THE members of the Anti Misframe League as well as those operators who have not yet joined but who are alive to conditions and wish to help the industry are called upon to do certain things which must be done if the industry is to progress as it should.

The members of the League have started by guaranteeing to handle film which comes into their theatres as it should be handled and sending it out to the next house or back to the exchange in better condition than it was when it was received by them. This is right and should be done, for it is only in this way that the public interest can be kept up in motion pictures. Film in good condition makes business, those in poor condition kills business.

However, and here is where cooperation applies, the exchanges no matter of what classification must not, under any consideration, lean upon the operator. They must not put work on his shoulders which he has assumed merely out of the kindness of his heart for the good of the business.

Each exchange, whether state rights or the branch office of one of the large distributors, MUST support an inspection room and MUST see to it that the footage is there on every reel in order that the entire story may be told in every film. They MUST also test all patches and see that every film which goes out at least starts in proper condition. At the present time this DUTY is being shirked. We receive complaints from houses supposed to be receiving "first run" film which, it is stated, would be a disgrace to run in a "ninety day house"—4,000 feet of film when there should be 5,000 feet, in order to tell the story, and other conditions equally unpardonable.

This is one factor which will kill the business.

Here is one answer—I had lunch the other day with a prominent man in one of the distributing organizations. I was telling him of these conditions. He made the statement that in each one of their exchanges and, as far as he knew, in all first class exchanges the organizations are supporting what he considered to be departments which should be able to take care of this condition. When I told him that he was wrong in this and that his film had been complained of along with that of other distributors he was most emphatic in condemning any exchange manager who would allow these conditions to exist. Why?

Because it is one of the factors which is to-day driving the public away from picture houses. The story of the film is not there as it should be.

* * * *

After talking further the man in question congratulated the members of the Anti Misframe League on their stand and the help they are giving, but he said that the industry needed more. He said that it is the duty of each exhibitor and each operator who found film in this condition to sit down and write a letter to the manufacturer, the president of the company if possible, complaining and calling attention every time film in bad condition is received direct from the exchange.

Do it now—Don't wait—everybody do his bit and conditions will be improved. Because film is old is no excuse for incomplete stories or poorly patched reels.

* * * *

Film is meant to entertain the public, whether first run or last run, therefore just as much care should be taken in one instance as in the other, otherwise patronage will be killed.

If the film companies receive one kick to-day and another in six months, nothing is accomplished. It is the continuous in-flow of complaints which will bring about an improvement in this deplorable condition.

Get behind and push. Let the Anti Misframe League be the nucleus for the movement, but let all exhibitors and operators do their part. It is a movement for greater prosperity to all.

E. K. Gillett
New Departure Screen

CHARLES E. BENSON, of the Benson Hopley Screen Company, Sacramento, Cal., is the inventor of the Duplex Screen, a radical departure from any projection surface now in use. It is built on the principle of the well known half-tone or photogravure, the only difference being that while the half-tone is photographed on copper plate through a screen, and the interstices etched out with acid, thus preserving the fine gradations of shadow between the opaque and the high lights, the Benson-Hopley screen is a half-tone screen of which the half-tone points or dots are bright and highly reflecting while the interstices are white and impregnated with chemicals which are highly absorbent to different light rays, thereby preserving all film values when a picture is projected upon it. This screen also has the advantages of a bright, reflecting surface, or a plain white surface with none of the objectionable features of either, for in the projected picture viewed from front or any angle the illumination is the same, true perspective being maintained as close as ten feet and perfect definition as far away as three hundred feet. The side distortion or elongation of the picture, when viewed from a side seat, is eliminated, screen sense, or "fade away" of the picture is entirely done away with, every particle of shadow in the film being reproduced on the screen, greater definition is claimed for this screen than has ever been produced on a uniform surface, in fact all the film value is reproduced on the screen minus the loss in throw.

Heretofore all curtain surfaces have been a one unit surface and a ray of light striking a uniform or one unit surface diffuses in exactly the same way a jet of water splatters when striking a wall; this diffusion illuminates the finer shadow values between the high lights and black, dissolving them out, this producing a picture in which a large portion of the detail is lost. The Duplex preserves this detail, a much greater perspective is thereby presented, producing a stereoscopic effect and presenting all the third dimensional value possible in present day photography.

While white screens do not, as we know, expose a reflective surface high enough to bring out all the film values, bright screens dissolve out the finer shadow values, some of them even destroy values to a still greater extent by excessive absorption, which cannot be said of the Duplex, as this screen combines the good features of all other screen surfaces.

Over two years have been spent in developing the Benson-Hopley screen before presenting it to the trade. The process of manufacture is both mechanical and chemical; the raw cloth being treated with a certain salt forming a rapidly absorbing white base upon which is developed a half-tone screen with highly reflecting points, these points when a picture is projected upon a screen bring up the high lights and whites, while the fifty per cent absorbing surface absorbs the diffused rays, thereby preserving the half-tones. Every thread is kept at right angles through the entire process so that when the finished product is ready it can be installed in any way without stretching and without wrinkles or puckers. It is also made in any degree of intensity, thus meeting any requirements of the individual theatre. Much annoyance has been caused in the past by oxidation of metallic surfaces and discoloration of white surfaces, which the Benson-Hopley company claim is impossible when their screen is used. This guarantees the Duplex for the life of the cloth against tarnishing, discoloration or oxidization, and as it can be cleaned with soap and water, gasoline, kerosene, or any cleansing compound that does not contain grit, and can also be handled, rolled or rubbed with impunity it has these points to recommend it. Truly, the screen is "the heart of the house" and has been a source of much trouble owing to the unscientific structure of a one unit surface. The curtain, the lenses, the condensers, the light beam are multiple, while the screen has been single. In the Benson-Hopley screen, however, the surface is multiple thereby connecting the link in scientific and correct projection.

It is hoped the Duplex Screen will be able to fulfill the claims made for it by its inventor, and while the Department is not in a position at this time to prove or disprove the above claims, we are awaiting samples of the various screen surfaces for a try-out before passing upon them.

Aiming at Perfection in Projection

MOTION picture theatre owners are giving far more attention to the matter of perfect projection, according to statements by W. L. Loudy, the sales manager of Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company of Chicago, who is now in Los Angeles on a tour of the country. Mr. Loudy has now covered half of his trip, and in every section he has visited he has found the exhibitor is keen for anything that will benefit "his picture." This is particularly true in the smaller cities and towns, regardless of whether there is much competition or not. Mr. Loudy has found the exhibitor has come to see the need of giving the people the best picture possible, and have found that poor operating room equipment is the greatest liability a theatre can have. He reports the number of sales of Mottographs this year far in excess to those of the same period in 1916.

Requiescat in Pace

ONE of the saddest events in the history of Local 384, Moving Picture Machine Operators Union of Hudson County, New Jersey, was the sudden demise of Charles Murphy, whose funeral was held on Tuesday, July 3rd.

On June 30, Brother Murphy, who had complained of not feeling well for the past two days, was taken to the West Side Hospital, New York City, operated upon, and died four hours later.

Brother Murphy, a member of Local 384 since its inception, had at the last meeting of that local been elected vice-president, and was to have received the oath of office on July 14. He had been employed at the Franklin theatre, Union Hill, for quite some time. The deceased is survived by his widow, Mrs. Louisa Murphy, one son, Charles, who is a chemist in the employ of the Swiss Color Works, Harrison, N. J.

The writer having known and been associated with the late Brother Murphy, can only say that the loss sustained by the family is only equal to the loss the local feels in losing one who by his great personality endeared himself to all. Our heartfelt sympathy goes out to those who in their hour of sorrow are in need of sympathy and we can but express the hope that the Master will greet our friend and brother with the words, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

You Will Burn It Out

Indiana writes: "What would happen if I were to use a choke coil where the cycles are higher than the rated capacity of the coil? Would there be any danger in doing this?"

ANSWER: You understand, of course, that you have given me but little information to work on, but such as it is I will try and answer the question to your satisfaction. If the choke coil is made for 60 cycles and should be used on a higher frequency, that is, 120 cycles, there would be no damage to the coil, but you would be unable to obtain sufficient amperage for the proper burning of

Handy Lubricants

THE Climax Lubricating Company, Philadelphia, Pa., has submitted to this department samples of their lubricants especially adapted for use on motion picture projectors. We have had these samples thoroughly tested out and can heartily endorse them.

Their No. 1 lubricant is for intermittent movements; a medium grade of oil, neither too light or too heavy, and will not gum. The No. 2 lubricant is for use on the working parts of the lamp and is several degrees heavier than the number one.

As they are put up in collapsible tubes of convenient size, and the price depends upon the size tube ordered, there is no doubt these lubricants will meet with the approval of operators who are ever in search of something that will do all the makers claim for it, as well as being a handy addition to their tool kit.

Rewinding Motor

H. J. A., New Jersey, writes: "Have a small ½ h.p. motor, induction type, that has been through a fire, and I would like to know if it is necessary to take apart the stator for the purpose of reinsulating the laminations? Also, wish you would explain the purpose of the collector rings on the rotors of large induction motors."

Answer: Unless the fire your motor has "been through" was intensely hot I do not think it will be necessary to reinsulate. The motor is ordinarily safed with brass brush and, this not affected by even a high degree of heat. Answering your second question: In order to limit the current drawn from the line at starting, yet giving a strong torque, the rotor must have a definite winding, quite like that on the stator, though conveniently for a low voltage, and in its circuits there must be put an ohmic resistance in the brushes are to provide for this exterior starting device, which in a way resemble a direct current starting rheostat. Resistances rather than reactances are imperative, otherwise the rotor currents will lag by such an amount as to be ineffective.

Wonderful Projection

ONE evening recently, in answer to the insistent invitation of Brother Tony Guglielmo, operator of the Pastime Theatre, Union Hill, N. J., I wended my way to that part of the Palisades where the Pastime Theatre is located. The theatre was dark, and there was only a faint light shining from the outside, the interior was illuminated by the projection of the film. The operator did not know I was in the house, although he had anticipated my coming and left tickets for me at the box office, I had the advantage over him from the fact that I came unheralded and paid cash for my ticket.

The Pastime Theatre, seating approximately 1100 people and containing one balcony, is owned and operated by the Pastime Theatre Company of Union Hill, N. J., whose president is C. William Jones. The management of the theatre devolves upon Irving Rose and his assistant, William Jacquish. The projection room in charge of Brother Guglielmo is equipped with two Simplex projectors with Speeddeo Arc Controllers, and the picture is projected upon a Gold Fibre screen. The operator did not know I was in the house, although he had anticipated my coming and left tickets for me at the box office, I had the advantage over him from the fact that I came unheralded and paid cash for my ticket.

An Old-Timer Writes

P. H. BROWN, Springfield, Mo., writes: Please enter my name on the Honor Roll of the A.M.F.L. I am heartily in favor of it, and believe it will be a boon to all operators, as well as cleaner and better projection, for certainly misframes do spoil a picture. I have been cutting out misframes for the last seventeen years, and there has never yet been a reel leaving my operating room with a misframe in it. I would like to say also if operators would leave their little punches in their tool box the projector would look much better on the screen.

I am enclosing a piece of film which I amputated from today's picture. Note the punch marks. This is a sample of what I find every day. As I said before, I have been in the business for some little time, commencing in the days of the old spool bank machine, when we only had film from fifty to a hundred feet in length, and there were no projection departments then. Everything was by rule of thumb.

Comment: You certainly have spent the best part of your life at the craft, and if, as you say, you have been cutting out misframes for the past seventeen years, you have certainly had your work "cut out" for you. It is some statement to make that during all that time there never has been a reel leave your operating room with a misframe in it. I agree with you regarding the punches, for the specimen of film you enclose is but a fair sample of that which I receive from operators every day. But I much prefer Brother Pastre's method of disposing of that little "weapon of mutilation" and that is, bury it deep where it never can be resurrected. True, in the old days there were no projection departments, everything being by rule of thumb, and operators then were hungry for information which would enable them to do better work as well as make them more familiar with the apparatus in their charge. While many of the "old school" of operators, who worked solely by rule of thumb, were able and did produce excellent screen results, they were unable to explain how they did so, their training being entirely practical and lacking of technical instruction. I hardly think, with all due respect to the old time operators, they could today with the added improvements that have been made in projectors and the introduction of the various motor generators and rectifying outfits produce the results they were enabled to attain at that time were it not for the instruction obtained from and suggestions made in the projection departments. The developments in the past few years in equipment, etc., have kept the operators "up on their toes" to be not left in the rear in the march of progress. As you will note, your name has been placed upon the Roll of Honor and membership card and card will be mailed you in due time. I thank you sincerely for your offer made in the closing paragraph of your letter wherein you say if you can be of any assistance to me I have but to command you, and you can rest assured I will avail myself of your offer.

Paper Prepared by the Committee on Electrical Devices of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers

PART II

6. Relation to Alternating Current of Frequency Flicker and Its Synchronization with the Shutter.

6. The electric arc, when operating on alternating current is known to possess the peculiarity of varying in intensity to a marked degree with the peak and zero points of the alternations, being clearly visible to the eye on frequencies under 40 cycles. At commercial frequencies higher than 40 cycles this may be visibly demonstrated by moving under the arc a light colored pencil or other object against a dark background. When moved rapidly under direct sunlight or direct current arc, the pencil would naturally appear blurred, owing to the rapid change of position. Under the alternating current arc, the rapidly moving pencil would seem to be a number of pencils, each one clearly visible, with dark intermediate spaces. This is precisely the same affect as is obtained by moving the pencil in the light beam of a projector with the shutter revolving.

In reality, we are therefore dealing with two intermittent periods in the light source when operating a film projector with an alternating current arc; namely, the light interruption of the shutter and the rise and fall of the light intensity of the arc. The former depends for its frequency upon the speed of rotation of the shutter and the number of wings therein, while the latter depends upon the frequency of the current.

In determining the relation between current frequency and shutter movement, we might for example imagine a shutter with three 60° openings and revolving at 40 revolutions per second.

This would give us 120 dark spots per second. An arc lamp on 60-cycle current would also have 120 dark spots per second. It is therefore evident that under these conditions, if the shutter opening occurred at the same instant at the zero point of the cycle, practically no light would be obtainable on the screen, as the shutter wings would block out the light each time it occurred.

If now the shutter be moved 60° on its shaft the maximum light would be obtained; as then shutter openings would register with the peaks of the current alternations. These conditions, of course, would prevail only if the shutter and current were perfectly synchronized. If the speed of the shutter were reduced to 20 revolutions per second, 4 peaks at each opening.

While the 60-cycle current prevails in practice, the aforementioned speed and shutter openings do not; consequently, at the normal shutter speed of 15 revolutions per second, the shutter openings would be out of step with the current frequency, with the result that some of the shutter openings would receive one, some two and some three impulses of light, causing a visible variation of light on the screen.

Since each projected image is illuminated for a time period, equal to the sum of all the shutter openings during one revolution, the light impinged on each image would be the same if the light source were constant. With the alternating current arc, the light would vary with the number of peaks to each respective image, the variation and resulting flicker depending upon actual difference in frequency of shutter, or, in other words, depending on how much they are out of step. The following diagrams show these variations under the normal conditions of a projection speed of 16 images per second, with a 60-cycle arc, and using a commercial shutter of two 80° wings with two 100° openings.

It is obvious from the above that a current flicker can be avoided in alternating arc projection only by occasional accidental synchronizing for short periods of time, or by a carefully planned mechanical synchronization, together with special shutter design.

It is evident that current flicker is an inherent objection to alternating current arc projection. There are other faults better known, such as the bluish color of the light, the poor concentration of light at the light source focus of condenser, and the noisy buzz of the arc.

Without entering into details of these other objections, which are apart from the subject matter of this paper, the mention of them seems permissible, as it completes the evidence against alternating current projection and proves its use poor practice.

Since the direct current arc possesses none of these objections and since a large variety of thoroughly satisfactory and practical apparatus is on the market for converting alternating current to direct current, there seems to be no excuse for faulty projection, resulting from the use of alternating current.

7. For alternating current, cored carbons in both upper and lower are always used and these are the same size. This is essential, of course, since the rate of consumption is practically the same for both the upper and lower carbon. On direct current some operators use cored carbons, both upper and lower, and also use the same size carbon for the positive as well as the negative.

While it is sometimes desirable to use cored carbons, both positive and negative, it is the wrong principle to use the same size—the negative carbon should always be smaller than the positive.

For all around service the most advisable ratios will be such that the cross-section of the positive carbon would be twice that of the negative carbon, but in actual practice we find that a negative carbon would not have the carrying capacity for the current required for the positive, if the latter were operated at maximum current capacity. Therefore, the following combinations are a compromise which have been standardized for various current densities. These are as follows:

In the table of direct current capacities, the 3/4" size up, the next smallest sized solid carbon is used as the negative.

Cored negative carbons give steadiness at the cost of the candle power of the arc. Under certain conditions it is possible to operate carbons at somewhat higher current densities than here given, and still obtain satisfactory service. It is, however, essential, in order to operate these higher current densities, that special small diameter metal coated negative carbons be used, the reason being as already mentioned that such combinations can be operated at high current densities, with short and steady arcs free from noise, whereas, for the same current density and the use of ordinary negatives, the arcs would be unsteady.

8. Since the light from the direct current arc is omitted from the crater of the positive carbon, it is desirable that the carbon be tilted at such an angle as to point the crater directly at the lens, and still prevent the lower carbon from cutting off the light. An angle of about 25 degrees has become standard for this service. With an alternating current arc the light is given by both carbons, which means that it is desirable to use the carbons more nearly vertical. A slight angle is, however, necessary in order to make the conditions correct.

9. With alternating current the carrying capacity is limited by the ability of the carbon to carry the current, whereas on direct current, it is limited by the ability of the crater to stand up under high current densities; that is, the 3/4" carbon can carry 60 amperes alternating current without undue heating, but on direct current, 50 amperes would be the limit, since a higher current value would tend to break down the crater formation with subsequent unsteady operation.

From a Manager

S. V. WALLACE, Cambridge Springs, Pa., writes: There are a lot of fellows like myself that devour the Projection Department and yet you never hear of them until some idea crops into their heads that seems good enough to hand around. One of these is the Anti-Misframe League, and while Mr. Pastre's idea is the best thing that has come through in years, I don't understand why every operator in the country does not pledge himself AT ONCE to do this. Why, if there was a day set (by the locals and published in every paper so that those outside of the organization would learn about it) on which every operator would take out misframes, the result would be WONDERFUL. And two or three more such days would mean the elimination of millions of the annoying evils that reflect upon his profession. But they will appear again is the cry I have heard, for the cause still exists, and operators are only human beings (although they accomplish wonders to the average fan), and eventually will tire of a good resolve so an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure. And here goes for a little experiment I have tried and found to be good. I have a small piece of looking glass fastened to the table between the rewinding apparatus (meaning between the two reels on the rewinder), and on the wall directly above it is an electric light which reflects up through the film, so that when one is rewinding he can see whether the picture is free from misframes or not, in fact, you cannot go wrong at all without knowing it. (Unless you happen to look away from the work you are doing for a moment or two and one slips by.—Ed.) The table is just a foot wide, and the light on the wall is just even with my eyes, and back far enough to reflect in the right angle when I stand there to make a patch. Too large a glass will not give as good results as a smaller one, and, my boy, the operator claims it is a wonder in helping to locate misframes and match sprocket holes properly. I am of the opinion that all the misframes are not going to be eliminated, but if a person knows what they are to do and can see when they are doing it the chance for error will be reduced considerably, so I pass this along.

In Reply.—I agree with you. There are any number of operators of whom you never hear until some idea takes root in their brain and they pass it along. But, of course, you know there are thousands of good ideas that never see the light of day, for the reason that the one in whose brain it originates does not feel that it is of any value. And that is why we welcome any and all suggestions, and separate, as it were, the wheat from the chaff, and in this way we find things that are of value to many of our readers who are in insulated places. WONDERFUL! Would indeed be the answer if a day were to be set apart where each and every operator would remove every misframe from the film which he was that day using. But that is a little too much to hope for, although we do believe that the League is making some of the exchange managers sit up and take notice. Your reflecting mirror stunt is a good one. It could, however, be so located as to perform the same duties without causing any undue strain to the eye, which is probably the case with you, if you were to cut out a square opening about three inches in diameter and fitting in the opening a piece of ground glass such as used by photographers, and under the glass placing an incandescent lamp of low candle power, which could be controlled by either a separate switch, or simply by reaching under the table and loosening the bulb to extinguish the light or tightening the bulb to light it.

S. L. Nicholson Wins Westinghouse Promotion

SAMUEL LINDSEY NICHOLSON, who has been sales manager of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company since 1909, has been promoted to the position of assistant to vice-president, with headquarters at East Pittsburgh.

Mr. Nicholson is unusually well known throughout the electrical profession, his varied activities bringing him in contact with its numerous branches.

He was born in Philadelphia, received his education in the William Penn Charter School of that city, and began his business career in 1887.

In 1898 Mr. Nicholson became sales representative of the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company in New York City, subsequently having charge of the city and industrial division of the New York office. On the reorganization of the sales department in 1904 he was made manager of the industrial department, which position he successfully filled until his selection as sales manager of the company in 1909.

A Bibliography on Color Photography

As a logical successor to the bibliography on "Color," which appeared in the Camera Department last week, we have now to present a summary of the more useful and instructive books and articles on the subject of "Color Photography."

Up to the present there have not been published a very great number of systematic treatises, upon Color Photography; but even though the list of such works is a limited one, and well within the scope of complete classification, we shall here consider only such books and articles as will prove instructive and interesting to the practical worker upon color photography or cinematography.

There are, without doubt, many actual workers who have experimented on an extensive scale upon the various processes of color cinematography, with but little recourse to the literature of the subject, but when the enormous cost of experimental work is considered, and the very limited returns which are secured, in proportion to the financial outlay, it really seems as though all experimenters should, in justice to themselves, become familiar with the work along similar lines which has already been accomplished by others. This knowledge can only be acquired by a painstaking analysis of the literature upon the subject under experiment, and in view of this undoubted fact we need offer no apology for presenting the following list of reference works upon the subject of "Color Photography."

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Price: $1.50.

As is generally known, practically every process of color photography that has materialized to date was foreshadowed in 1869 by the publication of Louis Ducos Du Hauron's booklet "Les Couleurs en Photographie," and as a result of this anticipation, of so many subsequent color processes, Du Hauron has always been considered a pioneer in color photography.

The book now being considered was compiled by L. Ducos Du Hauron's brother, Alcide, and is a collection of the more important papers of Louis, the actual worker upon color photography.

Like most works of similar nature, this book, which is somewhat historical in its treatment of the subject, is strongly partisan in tone; Alcide would have it that practically all fundamental discoveries in color photography originated with Louis Ducos Du Hauron. There is no doubt whatever that the last named inventor has done much good work of a practical nature upon color photography, but, upon studying his earlier writings, it becomes apparent that he was not always correct in his theoretical assumptions.

In his long career as a color photographer Du Hauron produced many original and effective results, however, and these are all intimately treated in his brother's compilation, along with much other valuable information upon the color processes. Du Hauron's stereoscopic system the Anaglyph is thoroughly treated, as well as some phases of three-color printing. This work is valuable in a documentary sense.

Out of Print—Consult at Libraries.

This interesting booklet was issued just after the commercial introduction of the "Photochromoscope," and gives a clear account of Mr. Ives' method of three-color photography. Illustrations and operating instructions are given, covering all models of viewing Kromskopes and also the lantern Kromskop, while an important feature is the inclusion of a list of Mr. Ives' numerous patents (up to 1898) on this apparatus, and on three-color taking-cameras.

The most important item in this little treatise is a reprint of Ives' lecture "The Perfected Photochromoscope," which was given before the Society of Arts (London) on April 22, 1896. This lecture sets forth in lucid manner Mr. Ives' principle of securing his trichromatic negative records through a set of filters constructed in accordance with the Maxwell curves, which are color-mixture curves. While it is generally contended that tricolor taking-filters should be constructed to approximate color-sensation curves, instead of color-mixture curves, Mr. Ives' result have always been of such quality as to prove that his method is entirely practical, though possibly not so tenable theoretically as the pronouncements of other workers upon the same subject.

Pages 758-766, 769-776, 781-788 and 793-797, respectively.

Out of print—May be consulted at large libraries.

The name of Sanger Shepherd is a prominent one in the realm of practical color photography, and, as might be expected, this series of lectures is a clear and comprehensive presentation of the theory and practice of color photography.

Starting with the subject of light, the reader is led through the details of wave-motion, refraction, and photometry, and then to the consideration of color-sensitized photographic emulsions, and the adjustment of taking-filters for orthochromatic work.

From these considerations it is but a step to the study of the fundamental color-sensations, and the preparation of tricolor taking-filters. Here we have for comparison the Maxwell mixture-curves and the Abney sensation-curves (normal spectrum), which latter were utilized by Shepherd at one time as the basis for tricolor filter construction.

After filter preparation comes the study of color synthesis by projection and subtractive print making. Tricolor taking-cameras are also discussed. This series of lectures ends with the subject of three-color printing by photo-mechanical methods, and is an interesting elementary course of instruction in the various problems of color photography.

Price: $1.50.

In point of size this is, perhaps, the most complete treatise upon color photography that has been published to date in English. It is divided roughly into three parts—a historical section by Mr. Bolas; a section on tricolor photography by A. A. K. Tallent; and a section on Lippmann interference heliochromy by Edgar Senior.

Mr. Bolas' historical chapters could be read with profit by some of the muddling photographic and technical writers of the present time, who always preface an article on color photography with a pitifully inaccurate attempt at historical introduction; while Tallent's chapters upon three-color photography will provide the material for plenty of experimentation on the part of the practical reader.

Although the section on interference heliochromy, by Edgar Senior, will not prove of great value to the practical color photographer, the production of natural color photographs by stationary light-waves is a subject of immense scientific interest, and is well treated by Senior who has been an extensive worker upon the interference method.

Although the "Handbook of Photography In Colours" was first issued quite some time ago, we understand that Messrs. Marion & Co. published another edition a few years since, and copies of this treatise are no doubt still obtainable.

This was the second Hurter Memorial Lecture, before the Liverpool section of the Society of Chemical Industry, and is a most instructive treatment of the theoretical considerations of tricolor photography.

The Abney "color-patch" apparatus is described, and its use, as applied to the determination of the fundamental color-sensations and their luminosities, is explained. For comparison there are reproduced the curves of Maxwell and König, and Abney's own determinations, along with numerous other sets of curves and equations, bearing upon the preparation of tricolor filters from measurements of the spectrum.

The transmission-bands of several sets of tricolor and viewing-filters are reproduced, and Sir William's methods of adjusting the filters to color sensitive emulsions are also elucidated.

The subject of three-color printing and print making is covered, as well as the additive methods, and the clear descriptions and numerous illustrations make this article of Abney's a valuable contribution to the literature of color photography.

No list of works upon color photography would be complete which did not include some item upon the subject by Dr. Miethe, of Charlottenburg, who has been for years an experimentalist upon the subject of practical tricolor photography and three-color printing.

In his little book "Dreifarbenphotographie nach der Natur," Miethe describes in comprehensive fashion the results of his numerous experiments upon tricolor practice, and also the apparatus which he has used. His chapter upon color-sensitizing is of historical interest, for it will be recalled by readers that Miethe, and his assistant Traube, were the first to make practical use of the Isocyanine dyes as color-sensitizers.

Of special interest are the descriptions and illustrations of Miethe's bathing and drying apparatus, and also his tricolor camera and triple projecting lantern. These latter, along with other particulars of Miethe's procedure were described in English a few years ago.

We consider that anyone who can negotiate German text will be well repaid by a thorough perusal of Miethe's treatise.

This is a translation of Dr. König's popular treatise, "Die Farbenphotographie," to which considerable data has been added by the translator.

The theory of color photography is not dealt with at length in this book, which was primarily intended for the amateur and the practical experimenter.

Accordingly, the major portion of the text is devoted to working instructions and formulae, covering the operations of filter making, color-sensitizing, etc., as applied to a variety of well-known color processes.

Dr. König's name is the guarantee of an instructive treatise, and E. J. Wall's name assures a faithful translation, and it is certain that everyone can find something of value in this work.

Here is a book which is different from all others that have so far appeared on the subject of color photography. Donath's work is a philosophical treatise, devoted to the theoretical basis of color photography, instead of to the practical manipulation required by the various systems.

As we pointed out on a previous occasion, the theoretical aspects of color photography are generally subordinated to the practical considerations by writers of text-books; but here is an almost

Popular Music for Pictures

BY GEORGE H. MAPES

THERE are still left a few places in the motion picture world where the ragtime or popular song music reigns supreme. These are mostly in the larger cities. And the argument advanced is that the audience demands it. Is this really true? If the musicians who think it is would try to experiment a little by playing the picture, perhaps they would soon find out that the majority of the audiences do not want the so-called popular music.

What most people desire is to have a musical accompaniment to the picture. This cannot be done with popular music, and there can be no argument on that score. The places where ragtime music can be used to advantage are comparatively limited, and I am emphatically against the use of the popular song unless there is a direct cue for it. Why I shall state further in this letter.

The musician who strives to make the music fit the picture is going to make the greatest success. If the picture calls for popular music, it should be used, but not otherwise. To illustrate: It would be just as ridiculous to play Bach or Beethoven in cabaret and saloon scenes as it would be to play Irving Berlin for a church or death-bed scene. The average audience is intelligent enough to know if the music and the picture fit each other. Play the picture to your best ability and you will suit most of the audience.

The so-called demand for popular music is not as great as it seems to appear. The part of the audience which desires popular songs played is mostly the young crowd, and they themselves are the ones who played that they know. If the song is new, they do not recognize it; you might as well be playing something else. When directly asked most of these people will admit popular songs do not fit the picture, but that they like to hear them.

You cannot play the picture and use these popular songs. The minute popular tunes are started those in the audience who recognize them immediately associate them with the words of the particular song, and unless it is a direct cue how can the words harmonize with the picture on the screen. Popular songs for use in playing motion pictures are useless, and if you must use light music play instrumental tunes which have no words. Better still, use music with character to it unless the screen scene positively forbids it.

Music for Indian Pictures

Years ago when film manufacturing was in its infancy, Indian pictures were an every-day feature, but today the short subject, the one and two-reel picture, is not the main part of the performance; it is booked in most cases to simply fill the program.

A topical review, a five-reel feature, a short one or two-reel subject and a comedy is the most popular theatre program today. The five-reel picture is always the feature of the day and the theatre management as well as the musicians always concentrate their best efforts on that subject. Indian features, five or six-reel pictures of Indian character, are a rarity in these days, but when one is made, when it reaches your theatre, then don't forget—it is the most important part of the program; it is the feature of the day and the first thing you will be looking for is Indian music. You cannot fake the American in this field; every American knows the sound of Indian music. You cannot possibly fake your way through a five-reel or full-hour performance, and it is to your advantage to note or obtain the following Indian compositions:

1. Four Indian Love Lyrics, by Amy Woodforde, Finden. No. 1, "The Temple Bells" (4/4 Allegretto); No. 2, "Less Than The Dust" (3/4 Agitato); No. 3, "Kashmiri Song" (4/4 Moderato); No. 4, "Till I Wake" (4/4 Lento).
4. Indian War Dance, by George Smith. The title of this composition sufficiently explains its purpose.
5. Indian War Dance, by Bellstedt. Positively the most popular Indian composition written; it is a 2/4 Allegretto with real effects of an Indian war dance.
8. Indian Serenade, by L. King. A 4/4 Movement of exceptional tonal beauty; a composition most appropriate for love themes or scenes.
12. Indian Summer Suite, by M. L. Lake. No. 1, "Dawn" (4/4 Andante); No. 2, "Dance of the Pumpkins" (2/4 Allegretto Grazioso); No. 3, "Love Song" (6/8 Andante con moto); No. 4, "At Twilight" (4/4 Andante). This suite represents one of the finest musical thoughts conceived in years, and is absolutely indispensable for the conscientious musician.
13. Desert Suite, by Homer Grunn. A suite of five tone pictures which every musician should possess. No. 1, "At Sunrise" (4/4 Tranquillo); No. 2, "Choya Dance" (2/4 Movement); No. 3, "On the Mesa" (2/4 Slowly); No. 4, "Mirage" (3/4 Scherzando); No. 5, "Oasis (3/4 Allegro commodo).

The above mentioned compositions can be bought wherever music is sold.

We will pass over the chapters upon orthochromatic photography as they are outside the scope of the present review, but three-color photography is comprehensively considered in the last chapter. In this we have the characteristic statement of the scientific basis of three-color photography it would be hard to surpass Mees’s explanation in Chapter 8 of his treatise.

Our remarks upon this book may seem in the nature of extravagant praise, but will be found to be fully justified upon a thorough perusal of the work in question.

Price $2.00.

This work contains half-tone reproductions of the photographed spectra of a large number of organic dyes, such as are employed in the preparation of photographic color-filters. Inasmuch as the "Atlas was prepared in the Research Laboratory of a practical photographic manufacturer, it follows that the dyes chosen for analysis are such as find employment in practical work.

The spectograms were taken through a so-called "neutral tint" black glass wedge and show the absorptions of the various dye solutions in the form of a curve which may be said to some-what resemble the true spectrophotometric absorption curve.

In the hands of a spectroscopic expert or an accurate physiologist this "Atlas of Absorption Spectra" will prove useful to some extent, for by referring to its spectograms an experienced worker can select a dye, for some specific purpose, without having to prepare and examine a whole lot of dye solutions. In the case of experienced workers, therefore, this book will prove helpful, but the average worker or worker upon color photography will not be able to derive more than a very elementary knowledge of dyes from it.

One of the most amusing incidents which occurred at a recent meeting of the executive board of Local 306 was when a manager (?) from the lower East Side appeared and demanded an explanation why he should pay the salary of his operator when the operator was working any job.

The facts of the case are as follows: A union operator had been in the employ of this so-called manager for many months, when, owing to a violation of the city regulations, the house was ordered closed by the officials of the department whose rules had been violated. This occurred during the latter part of the week; I think Friday, and the manager could not understand why he should pay the operator his salary for the remaining two days, when the house was not open for business. The laugh is contained in the ensuing conversation between the manager and the president of the Operators' Union:

The manager: "I want to find out why I should pay an operator for two days' pay when he didn't work."

The president: "What do you mean, pay the operator when he doesn't work? Give me the facts, and if there is any ground for your appeal it will be taken care of."

The manager: "Well, my house was closed for two days and the operator claims that he should get paid for a full week."

The president: "Was the house closed owing to any violation on the part of the operator?"

The manager: "No, I had a goat operator. De violation was standing, and ven de house was closed de operator told me that he was sorry for me, and wouldn't charge me anything for the two days left in de week."

The president: "You understand, of course, that operators are employed by the week, not by the day or hour. You admit you have a good operator, and yet you would haggle over the few cents involved. The operator might have said that he would make no charge for the remaining two days, which he could have done, that being a matter entirely up to him, and if he was willing to make you to pay a present of two days' salary we could do nothing. But the fact of the matter is that he has entered a claim to this local for two days' salary, and we intend to collect it. The only redress you might have had would have been the violation caused by any act of the operator, and as you say it was through no fault of the operator that the house was closed, it is only justice that he should receive his entire week's salary. You don't pay your rent by the day or week, and that is paid in advance, and yet should a fire occur, destroying your home, what redress would you have from your landlord? Would he return you any money for time unexpired? Yes, he would, as much as we intend to let you get away with something because you think the operator is without protection."

The manager: "Well, I'll pay it, but it ain't right."

BUILDING AND FURNISHING

Disappearing Orchestra in Baltimore House

Realizing the necessity of enlarging the theatre at Charles street and North avenue, the Parkway Theatre Company has decided to start work immediately. The officers are:

Thomas R. Lamb, New York architect, has plans by which the reconstruction can be accomplished without marring the exquisite and delicate effects of the interior.

Among innovations will be a disappearing orchestra. After the last scene of the feature flashes off, and the curtains are drawn across the screen, suddenly a diffused, mellow glow of scarlet and ochre covers the stage causing the plants and flowers arranged there to take on fantastic hues.

While these lights are gradually brightening, the music grows stronger, and the musicians eventually appear on the stage as if by magic. They have been lifted to the plane of the stage by an enormous elevator. The selection is played, the encore rendered and the lights dim. While the musicians fade from sight the pictures begin again.

The seating capacity of the entire first floor is to be rearranged in order to make more room. Large, comfortable chairs measuring twenty-two inches across will be installed. The standing room provided for the late comers will also be enlarged.

Another feature will be the construction of a row of loggia boxes. In this row seats will be provided for the accommodation of eighty people. The entrance to the boxes will be through the tea room on the mezzanine floor.

No interruption to the regular schedule of performances will be necessary, as the workmen and artisans will accomplish their tasks when the audience is away. Later in the season, preparatory to cool weather, the lobby is to be enlarged. Revolving storm doors will take the place of the swinging doors now in use.

Minusa Gold Fibre in Knoxville

The Signal Amusement Company of Chattanooga, Tenn., which has just purchased the Strand theatre at Knoxville, as a first move for betterment has placed a Minusa Gold Fibre screen in it. The company uses this screen throughout their string of theatres. Projection of the very best quality is their hobby.

Real Fire Resisting Construction

A demonstration of the value of using fire resisting building materials the equipment of the Motion Picture theatre and Apartment Building at Uhrichsville, Ohio, which was partially destroyed by fire, is cited.

The first floor of this building was constructed with wood and the second floor with Berger's metal lumber. The building, after the fire, showed the comparative strength and fire resisting qualities of the two constructions.

The wooden floor burned freely and sagged, being practically destroyed. On the other hand the metal lumber on the floor above was unharmed and prevented the fire from spreading beyond the first floor.

Fires like this prove the importance of building fireproof buildings throughout. Metal lumber can be worked as easily as wood and takes the place of wood piece for piece. It gives an economical fireproof construction and is adapted to any size or type of building.
Butter-Kist Popcorn Machine Is Operated by Steam

The Holcomb and Hoke Manufacturing Company, Indianapolis, makers of the Butter-Kist Popcorn machine, announce a new model operated by steam. This model is almost identical in appearance with the company’s other models and the heating and popping elements are exactly the same.

A five-eighths horsepower steam engine is located on the top of the machine, no larger than the motor on the electric model, and is fully as efficient. The engine works with practically no more noise than the purring motor of the other models. The boiler is located in the base below. Considering the amount of work necessary in perfecting it, the machine is almost absurdly simple. It is so simple, it is practically “fool proof.”

MINNESOTA

The general nature of the business of this company shall be the owning, holding, leasing, managing, and operating of theatres and places of amusement for the presentation of theatrical attractions of every character, including photo and picture plays, vaudeville and other kinds of amusement, and that, incidental to the said business, the company may acquire, own, hold, lease, mortgage, sell, or otherwise dispose of, all necessary real estate, buildings and other property necessary, convenient or proper for the carrying on and conducting of said theatrical business, and in addition thereto said company may and shall do everything necessary and essential to be done to enable it to carry out and fulfill the general purposes of its organization. George H. Miner, Charles F. Ladner, Joseph B. Rosenberger, Peter N. Fittner and Joseph P. Buenuis comprise the first board of directors. Fuller details of their plans will be announced later.

OKLAHOMA

The Stock Amusement Company of Oklahoma City has issued plans for the erection of a $93,000 motion picture theatre to be built on Lorain avenue and West Eighty-fifth street. S. H. Weis, Schofield building, is the architect.

PENNSYLVANIA

WASHINGTON

The contract for the construction of a moving picture theatre building for the Oxnur Amusement Company at Bremerton has been awarded by Architects Umbrich, Arcade building, to the I. J. Rounds Construction Company, Collins building, Seattle, for about $40,000. The structure will be 100 feet, of semi-fireproof construction. The walls will be of Densison hollow tile.

Mr. Watson Vernon, Aberdeen, has been commissioned to prepare plans for the construction of a theatre building at Centralia three stories high, 80 x 130 feet, of concrete construction, for Field, Fitzgerald & Smith, at the Field & Lease Bank. Wrecking of the buildings on the site has been started.

New Film Shipping Case

Mr. A. B. CARTER of Brattleboro, Vermont, has just brought to our attention one of the most unique and practical film shipping cases which has ever been devised. The accompanying illustration will serve to bring out the various points.

The case is round and is made to contain from two to seven reels, or more if specially ordered. This in every way avoids the criticism which is so often leveled against the average shipping case, in that it is absolutely fireproof and 100 per cent. safe in every way.

The case itself is made of heavy stamped metal with a fireproof fiber lining. Each reel and reel case is in itself fireproof, for, as is shown in the accompanying cut, the reel as indicated by "A" is solid, and not built as most reels are, with holes in the sides. About the reel runs a metal band, the edges of which are turned about a heavy piece of wire, behind which fits tightly the outer edges of the reel, which are flanged. This is shown at point "G." This band is drawn tightly around the reel and is held by a strong catch, "F." Between the outer edge of the cam and the flange of the reel is sufficient space to enclose lobby display cards and one sheets.

Each reel fits over a central rod indicated by "D." This is firmly fastened in the bottom of the container, extending up through the various reels and out through the cover of the container as at "C." The end of this is threaded so that the finger screw "B" is screwed down and holds the cover on so that it is absolutely impossible for it to be moved. This, in turn, fastened with a seal, so that when it arrives at the theatre it is in the same condition as when shipped.

The hub of the reels is made of wood, the hole through the center being lined with metal. The hub of the reel as shown at "X" has a fasten at one side, into which is fastened a tape which cannot be pulled out. At the end of this tape is a little clamp which fastens to the end of the film, so that the occasional trouble which operators find in having the film become detached and piling up in the machine is absolutely done away with.

The Industry’s Year Book

A trade annual that contains valuable information that lasts—not merely a reflection of the day’s activities—is something that few trade papers ever achieve.

That is why the Motion Picture News Trade Annual, published as a part of the Motion Picture News next week, is remarkable.

It contains tables and statistics that you can apply during the forthcoming twelve months.

The Motion Picture News Trade Annual has been compiled thoughtfully, with the constant end in view of economy to the reader.

It represents months of unflagging work, of considerable research, and the results are presented in a way that makes understanding quick and easy.

IT CONTAINS—

An understandable, down-to-the-minute chart, mirroring the conditions of the film business in all territories—

Detailed reports by reliable men—who know their business—from all film districts—

A boiled down résumé, bristling with vital, valuable facts—of the progress of the film industry during the past seven years—

A “Who's Who” of producing and distributing organizations—listing all officials, directors, etc.—

A chronological record of the activities of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry since its inception—

Complete lists of officers of exhibitor organizations throughout the country—

A legal digest, compactly listing the laws appertaining to motion pictures in every state in the Union—

A brief history of the F.I.L.M. Club movement, with lists of names of officers in all sections—

Shipping films by express. The war has caused hundreds of express trains to be withdrawn from the railroads. A chart and summary explain the fastest and most economical use of express services—

A six months’ index of feature films released, with index to reviews, music charts, Ad-Talks—

The State Rights field as it actually exists—information of the most important sort—never before published—

And countless maps, charts, tabulations and boiled down articles, containing information that you dare not neglect.

Immediately after the now famous “Parentage” trade showing at the Rialto Theatre, New York, Mr. Seng Western Unioned his appreciation of our work and service as follows:

When The Whartons trade-showed their “The Great White Trail” at the Broadway Theatre, our developing and printing, and especially our color work, came in for a generous slice of well deserved praise. The Whartons are too old in the game to gamble with valuable negatives. We do their work and are proud of it.

BILLIE BURKE

Her piquant beauty, her appealing femininity, and the gentleness of her impersonations have made her name a household word throughout the land. Miss Burke has attained an enviable position as a screen favorite.

Paramount is privileged to announce, by arrangement with F. Ziegfeld, Jr., three of her productions during the ensuing year.

The first of these will be "The Mysterious Miss Terry" by Gelett Burgess, followed by a visualization of W. Somerset Maugham's great drama of the Northwest, "The Land of Promise," in which Miss Burke appeared on the dramatic stage.

The greatest authors, directors and players will contribute their genius to her new Paramount productions.
ONE of the greatest character actors to-day is George Beban. His character delineations on both stage and screen are famous. Comedy and pathos are intermingled in such pleasing proportions as to make his pictures marvels of dramatic skill. Beban's next picture will be "Lost in Transit," a human interest story of love and sacrifice. Directed by Donald Crisp.
MME. PETROVA'S many screen successes, in which sheer dramatic power and histrionic force have carried her forward to personal triumphs, have created for her a host of followers. Mme. Petrova's first Paramount picture was by long odds her greatest photoplay. Her next production, "The Law of the Land," from the great stage success by George Broadhurst, directed by Maurice Tourneur, will increase the large patronage that her pictures have won.
No one who witnessed it will forget Pauline Frederick's last appearance on the stage in "Joseph and His Brethren." This was the climax of a successful stage career which gave her the enviable position of the leading emotional actress of the day. At the height of her career she deserted the stage for the screen and from the beginning she became one of the biggest drawing cards in Paramount Pictures. Her next picture, "Her Double Cross," directed by Robt. G. Vignola, written by Hector Turnbull, scenario by Eve Unsell, will rank with the greatest screen creations.
Marguerite Clark

Long will "Miss George Washington" and "Snow White" live in the minds of exhibitors as direct return boosters. Each of Miss Clark's pictures seems to "out-draw" her last. Her next picture, directed by Joseph Kaufman, is "The Amazons," Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's great play, which met with such unusual success on Broadway, is without doubt, her greatest triumph up to now.

Mary Pickford

Known as "The World's Sweetheart," Mary Pickford has been a more potent power for increasing patronage than any other single agency in motion pictures. Her "Little American," of which the N. Y. Sun says, "Cecil B. De Mille has never done a finer picture, not even excluding his 'Joan the Woman,' and no producer has excelled his war scenes," shows that her pictures are more vital to the success of a motion picture theatre than the seats to sit in. Mary Pickford's next production, directed by Marshall Neilan, will be a picture version of the most successful play of girlhood in a generation, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," Kate Douglas Viggin's famous story.

George M. Cohan

GEORGE M. COHAN is the man who made "Broadway" famous—the author and actor who has closely touched the hearts of the great American public and reaped the tremendous benefit of his joyous nature and "drawing power" both for himself and exhibitors showing Artcraft Pictures. "Seven Keys to Bald-pate," George Cohan's next picture, shows the star in his own most successful mystery play, founded on Earl Derr Bigger's popular novel. The picture was personally directed by Hugh Ford.
DOUGLAS FAIRBANKS is admittedly one of the greatest of men screen stars. His tireless vitality, teeming with good humor, has won inestimable popularity. His name has been synonymous with capacity houses. "Wild and Woolly" proved to be a typical Fairbanks photoplay, which means that wherever this picture played, there were never enough seats. Now comes "Down to Earth," another box office wonder, revealing this unrivalled star in a picture of unparalleled punch, thrills and smiles. Story by Douglas Fairbanks, Scenario by Anita Loos, and directed by John Emerson, photographed by Victor Fleming.

A mighty empire stood powerless under one man's evil influence. The tattered exiles in the Siberian mines had ceased to hope for freedom. An enslaved nation, a people doomed to servitude through one man's villainy!

That man was Rasputin, the unspeakable.

Up from the seething whirlpool of the submerged Russian people rose a man who strove to free his native land from the reprobate's grasp. A young priest, a mystic, a friend to all, he was finally driven from Russia a hunted fugitive.

This man was Ilidor, the "Mad Monk."

This amazing story, moving onward with the sweep of a mighty symphony and tracing step by step Russia's grasp of freedom, is authentically told in "The Fall of the Romanoffs."
THE FINAL TEST OF CRITICISM IS EXEMPLIFIED IN THE NEW YORK DAILY PAPERS

"Master Melodramatist is what Herbert Brenon might well be called."

“Polly of the Circus,” Its Author and Mae Marsh

GOLDWYN selected “Polly of the Circus” as its first release because it is a beautiful, romantic story that gives a company like Goldwyn a splendid opportunity to show its skill in production.

And also, because “Polly of the Circus” is one of the most remarkable money-making plays in the history of the modern theatre. It is an international play—known in all lands—and has been presented in every large and small city in North America.

Mae Marsh, its star, is a world-wide favorite and here again achieves the same kind of brilliant success that came to her as the heroine of “The Birth of a Nation” and other classics of the screen. Miss Marsh is hailed by the New York Times as “the Maude Adams of the screen” and by the Chicago Daily News as “the Bernhardt of the films.”

Margaret Mayo, the author of “Polly of the Circus,” is the most skilled and successful woman playwright in the world. She has given months of her time to the filming of this “Classic of the Big Tops.”

And, added to this unusual trinity of big story, world-known star and big author, Goldwyn, with its organization of specialists, contributes a production that establishes a new and hitherto unattained standard in motion pictures.

"Baby Mine" Introduces Madge Kennedy

MADGE KENNEDY, the most brilliant comedienne on the American stage, makes her first screen appearance in "Baby Mine," a huge stage success which was chosen as the second Goldwyn release to introduce a new star.

"Baby Mine" is the most successful money-making farce ever written by an American author. Besides enjoying long runs in all the larger American cities and playing in every section of the country, it has been produced throughout the English-speaking world and had runs in France, Germany, Russia, including a run of 120 performances in Pekin in Chinese.

Madge Kennedy, the star, is known to hundreds of thousands of theatergoers through her work in "Fair and Warmer," "Twin Beds," "Over Night" and "Little Miss Brown," comedies and farces that made fortunes in the theater.
Goldwyn predicts that she will be the next star to gain world-wide popularity through the medium of the screen.

Margaret Mayo, whose knowledge of stagecraft and farce comedy situation is unrivaled, has personally watched every phase of the making of this picture and titled it in person to give the exhibitors of America the benefit of her skill and abilities.

Goldwyn, giving "Baby Mine" the advantages of splendid production and direction, ventures to predict that it will be acclaimed as one of the swiftest and most appealing farces ever made for the screen.

Maxine Elliott Makes Her Screen Debut

GOLDWYN succeeded in bringing Maxine Elliott to the screen where many other big companies had failed. This international favorite and famous beauty achieves in her screen debut the greatest success of her entire career.

Miss Elliott's first Goldwyn production is "Fighting Odds," a play worthy of this distinguished artist. Her debut on the screen will be eagerly awaited by millions of people. She is one of the world's most widely exploited personalities and the pictorial publications have carried her fame and beauty to every country on earth.

Irvin S. Cobb, America's greatest humorist and successor to Mark Twain, and Roi Cooper Megrue are the authors of "Fighting Odds." Mr. Megrue's reputation as the author of "It Pays to Advertise," "Under Cover," "Under Fire," "Potash and Perlmutter in Society," and other plays, is a tremendous box office asset for all exhibitors.

Goldwyn applied all of its efforts to make this a brilliant and unusual production and now expresses the belief that no other noted player ever came to the screen from the stage in an abler dramatic vehicle.

In "Fighting Odds" the American public will see the many refinements and improvements that Goldwyn is introducing into film production.

FIGHTING ODDS
By Roi Cooper MeGrue and Irvin S. Cobb

A tremendously vital drama of a beautiful and loyal wife's fight against one of America's millionaire masters of Big Business.
A World-Famed Story for Jane Cowl

WHEN Goldwyn persuaded the greatest emotional actress of the American stage to become one of its stars, it was only fair to provide her with a story of great dramatic and box-office value.

So we obtained for Jane Cowl "The Spreading Dawn," a story that had 2,000,000 a week circulation as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post for many weeks. Millions of Americans know this story and will hasten to see this splendid artist bring it to the screen.

Basil King, the author, wrote "The Inner Shrine," "Wild Olive," "The Street Called Straight," and "The High Heart," now running as a serial in the Post, and the power of his name will bring millions of people into the motion picture theaters of the country.

In Miss Cowl you have the heroine of "Within the Law," "Common Clay," and "Lilac Time," three plays that were the sensations of their period; plays that she did much to make by the sheer power of her personality. The fame and beauty of this star have been spread into the world's far corners by pictorial publications published in many languages.

"The Spreading Dawn" bears all of the Goldwyn marks of distinction in production—richness, good taste and refinement.

is the praise-note of every trade paper criticism, exhibitors' comment and exchange report we receive. General Manager Berst, of Pathe, recently made the proud boast that there wasn't a Thanhouser-Pathe production that ever had to be "submitted for arbitration"—meaning that the batting average of our pictures was exactly 100 per cent! And Florence La Badie, Frederick Warde and Gladys Leslie, "the Smile Girl," have batted 100 per cent for box offices all over the land.

"DID YOU EVER SEE SUCH NOTICES?"
is well fitted to be our advertising slogan, for the fact remains that you HAVEN'T seen such notices as the reviewers accord our productions. No other single producer receives them and the reason is simply that we have the stories, stars and EXPERIENCE that are necessary to yield quality all the time.

THE WOMAN IN WHITE—"A gripping drama throughout, capably directed and ably acted, and reaches a high water mark in Thanhouser productions." Exhibitors' Trade Review

FIRES OF YOUTH—"A typical Thanhouser effort and one that will win on any program, having a special interest for every age." Sunday Telegraph

AN AMATEUR ORPHAN—"The success of "The Candy Girl" and its predecessors will be repeated by "An Amateur Orphan." Motion Picture World

THE CANDY GIRL—"Another Gladys Hulette picture, reversing the usual order of the Hulette pictures, but entertains quite as fully as did its predecessors." Motion Picture News

IRENE CASTLE

With remarkable unanimity they declare her to be a box office attraction superior to any other on the screen!

Here are just a few opinions from exhibitors culled at random:

We can highly recommend Mrs. Vernon Castle as a great box office attraction. Each night we have played her to capacity-with a big crowd outside waiting for the second show. If there is any other star who will draw the business she does we would like to know her."—Carlisle and Bedard, Bellevue Theatre, St. Albans, Vt.

"On every occasion I have shown Mrs. Vernon Castle on my screen I have had capacity houses. I consider her one of the best box office stars in the business."—Sam Newton, Jr., Broadway Theatre, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

"I want to get a booking on the new five reelers you are going to have featuring Mrs. Vernon Castle. I am so well pleased with her drawing power that I am anxious to get all your releases featuring her."—Al. J. Bedford, mgr. Family Theatre Co., Port Huron, Mich.

"I have played Mrs. Castle to the best box office receipts in the history of both of my theatres and can recommend her as a box office attraction to any exhibitor."—Benj. Apple, mgr. Arbor Theatre, Albany, N. Y.

Who doesn't know him? He is one of the most famous comic conceptions that has ever caused the American public to explode in merriment. He was invented by Frederick Opper the celebrated cartoonist, who is one of the great humorists who make the International Animated Cartoons an unequalled feature of the Pathé program.

Over arid deserts, through forbidding canyons, in many instances where no tourist has ever been, the Pathé-Combitone Know America expedition is travelling to secure unique, fascinating and exclusive pictures showing every phase of America and her resources. The Policy Seven FOURSQUARE pictures are now ready for release. To get one of these pictures means satisfied patrons—satisfactory profits. To get all seven insures satisfaction sevenfold.

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., is not confining itself exclusively to the distribution of features of its own make. It is consulting the exhibitor, and therefore the public, concerning other pictures in the market that meet the FOURSQUARE standard; pictures which M. H. Hoffman, Inc., should purchase. Moreover, if the exhibitor wants such pictures M. H. Hoffman, Inc., will get them for him.

That emphasizes the Hoffman-FOURSQUARE policy of giving both exhibitors and the public what they want.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT THING!

M. H. Hoffman, Inc., is holding the door open for all reputable producers who have confidence enough in their products to prefer a percentage arrangement for their distribution to selling outright for a sum smaller than can be had on a percentage basis—when such basis is governed by efficient, dignified and profitable merchandising, which is FOURSQUARE.

The keynote of the entire proposition is co-operation with the exhibitor—both as an individual and as a group.

OURS will be a business, pure and simple.

The Beloved Characters of "O. Henry"

Nellie Spencer and Carleton King in "Little Speck of Garnered Fruit."

THE BRIDE AND "KID" McGARRY

"The bride waited in the rosy glow of the pink lamp shade. The miracles were not all passed away. By breathing a desire for some slight thing—a flower—a pomegranate—oh, yes, a peach—she could send forth her man into the night, the world which could not withstand him, and he would do her bidding."

Reverently, as upon a celestial vision, "Kid" McGarry had gazed at her. Then had drawn on his coat and stepped from their new, warm flat into the glaze of a February street, and there had pondered. Now where fell was he to get her a peach?

You, Benedick of slipping tresses and nuptial glamour dulled by years, would have discounted craftily the feminine element and taken her an orange back. And snickered in secret at the flush of pleasure your clairvoyance earned.

But "Kid" McGarry burned with a holier fire. In deadly seriousness he charged into the frozen crevasses of winter to fetch HE—" in the rocker with her feet resting upon the world—her desire.

And how he did fetch it, at the cost of the most Herculean labor and of mental ordeals untold—and what happened when he gave it to her—is expressed with crashing effect by O. Henry's pen—and upon the screen—in "Little Speck in Garnered Fruit."

DISTRIBUTING INCORPORATION

announces the policy of

Big Pictures for Big Exhibitors

The Picture's the Thing! If you have the goods, you'll fill your house. That's what every big exhibitor knows. But how to get it?

The program system won't do it. It's an antique.

The star system is better. But there are only half a dozen real stars—perhaps thirty sure-fire pictures a year, at a big price. But that's no year's service. Is it?

The States Rights Producers have the right idea. But their supply is uncertain, the quality uneven, and the prices often absurd. The game needs stabilizing.

The Exhibitor's Circuit is best of all. Cooperative buying. Pooling issues for the common good. Buying the picture you want at a fair price—getting the money back with profit.

The Big Exhibitor is the States Rights Buyer of the future. There's one circuit now. There'll be others soon. It may not be the ideal way to distribute pictures, but it's the best in sight. We'll help!

We'll Make Big Pictures—
Or buy them or finance them. We'll help the game along, because we believe in it.

That's why we came into the film business. "For the purpose of encouraging, financing and distributing motion pictures of quality."

So—

We're going to put our money—just as much as is needed—into Big Pictures for Big Exhibitors.

To the Producer of Big Pictures
If you have a picture, ready or in the works, or an idea for a picture that is big and strong and human—and want a market that is strong enough to finance your operations—

Bring what you have to us.

If we believe in it, we'll finance it. We'll pay you a fair profit on the one production and enable you to start on the next.

We'll act as the Clearing House between you and the big houses in which you want to have your pictures run. We'll help!

To the Big Exhibitor and States Rights Buyer
We'll perform for you a Clearing House service for a Clearing House profit.

We'll deal with you direct—for all the rights to all the pictures we handle—not more than twelve the first year.

We'll put our money into the pictures you and we believe in. We'll spend our money in publicity. We'll get behind the picture with all the strength our organization can command.

We'll call it, and make it, a Superpicture!

"GOD'S MAN" IS SURE TO PLEASE AND CHARM

By "ZIT,"

"Is this 045 Bryant?"

"Yes."

"Is 'Zit' in?"

"On the phone. Who is this?"

"This is William L. Sherrill."

"Hello, William L. What can I do for you?"

"I wish you would do me a personal favor."

"Go to it."

"My new feature picture, "God's Man," features H. B. Warner, directed by George Irving, is playing on the Loew Circuit. Would you mind running over and seeing the picture, and giving me a review on it? I would appreciate it greatly. You know my office is in the Times Building, and I wish you would come down and see me some time."

"I'll do that."

Well, when a big man like William L. Sherrill takes the pains to ask a poor "think-he's critic to go and review his latest effort, as Lillian Lorraine sings at the Palace this week, "Says I to Myself, Says I, I'll go to Loew's midnight serial roof garden, with movies "as you like it," and take myself all alone."

The only seat I could find in that vast roof garden was one little chair by the mute, the place was so crowded. At 8:30 appeared the sign, "William L. Sherrill presents "God's Man," with H. B. Warner," and the "God's Man" picture was on. It's seven reels, 11 minutes to a reel, and 11 times 7 are 77 minutes, or one hour and 17 minutes.

What Mr. Sherrill wants me to criticize in this picture I don't know, for there is nothing to criticize. All you can do is to admit its praises. I was held spellbound. It scared me, it pleased me, thrilled me, made me sad, made me glad; and if it did that to me it's going to do twice as much for anyone else, for surely I am convinced of being probably more pictures than the average picture fan. My only regret was that the picture took three hours and forty-five minutes.

Marcus Loew charges his staple price for admission, and if he had doubled the price, as he does when he plays a pincushion hand in spades, no one would be sorry for what he paid after witnessing "God's Man." It is a moral lesson beyond a doubt. It takes you from the church to race track and gambling house, woman and song. It shows you the good side of character, the bad side all the tricks in the underworld, and the good things in the overworld. It shows you what craving for money will do. It is full of love, hate, death, sacrifice. It brings you right back home.

There is only one thing in the picture I did not like. The author, George Bronson Howard, has made New York City the city of vice, the city that corrupts, the city that ruins men and women. George Bronson Howard is a great author, and has probably traveled all over the world, and why he should land on New York as being the only place where a man or woman can be ruined is quite beyond me. Every little town has its Broadway, and if the musical director, Mr. Leeds, who forms the orchestrations for the pictures that play the Low. theatre, had been really smart and had any kind of wit after the slide appeared followed by Broadway and its white lights, the orchestra would have played George M. Cohan's famous song, "Don't Blame It All on Broadway." That would have been a "get back" at the picture which would have caused a storm of applause. If orchestrations were sometimes select an appropriate melody to accompany a slide or picture, they could cause as much of a laugh as some of the title slides.

The slides in "God's Man" are exceptionally good, witty and up-to-date. It has always been, and I have said many and many a time before, that it is the policy of this department not to divulge the story of a picture. H. B. Warner, "God's Man" goes through heaven and hell to try to do what's right, and when his entire ordeal is over he really gives himself to God, the Great Judge and Jury of us all. Don't fail to see "God's Man." The acting is superb, the cast is remarkable, the story intense. It will make a better man of you and give you food for thought when it's all over.

Thank you, Mr. Sherrill, for asking me to go and see it.

X Exhibitor writes us that the program booking policy has proved absolutely sound with him.

He also says that fully 65 per cent of Exhibitors have come to a like conclusion as the result of long experience;

Only they ask that programs be held up to a standard that will constantly command the respect of patrons.

And that contracts between exchanges and Exhibitors be made more equitable and certain.

If the Exhibitor could get a real “even-break” he would always remain a program-policy man.

This is very good as far as it goes—but it does not go far enough.

CERTAIN stars, because of their distinctive ability, and certain plays, because of their cost in authors’ fees and production charges, are entitled to more money.

These special feature plays cost the producer much more than a program release and the Exhibitor must pay more for them. His patrons demand them and he must play them.

The only way the Exhibitor can pay more is to get more money into his box office without additional expense. He must reduce his operating charges and increase his receipts.

The Paralta Plan shows him how to do this and that is why every Exhibitor should read the Paralta Plan book.

It will be sent free to any exhibitor on application. Write today.

"THE RANGE BOSS," taken from the famous novel by Charles Alden Seltzer, is a thrilling story of the great West; in which a cow-puncher foils a plot to rob an Eastern girl of her holdings. He wins her admiration by his pluck and daring, and then her love.

"LAND of LONG SHADOWS," written and directed by W. S. Van Dyke, depicts the rugged life of the Canadian Northwest. A trapper, wrongly accused of crime, refuses to surrender to the mounted police. Barricaded in his cabin he holds them at bay until after "the great event" happens to his wife.

The First National Exhibitors Circuit stretches forth its arm of protection to every exhibitor against any manufacturer who tries to use "Steamroller methods."

We can offer to the stars more money than they have ever received before because they are worth it if they bring the results to the exhibitor. We will not put in their contract that their pictures are rented independently and then use them as a club to compel the exhibitor to rent an inferior product as is being done today.

We are not burdened with any enormous home office overhead expense. We are not burdened with an enormous local exchange expense nor enormous salaries left in the wake of an amalgamation to obtain control and throttle the exhibitor.

Every exhibitor in the United States should be part of an organization in his particular locality. As a unit you are helpless against everything and will be forced into the quicksands of failure. As an organization, if the principles of the organization are right and fair, you will be supreme above everything, and no manufacturer, regardless of the amount of money he can command, will be able to compete with your organization, which later on will become affiliated with this big, grand, gigantic organization, formed for the benefit and economic protection of the millions and millions of dollars invested in theatres exhibiting motion pictures.

THIS is the day the Exhibitor begins to buy Supreme Attractions at a price he can afford to pay.
A high class attraction with a Star of box office value at a price the exhibitor can afford to pay

SHOWMANSHIP in motion pictures began with feature productions about three years ago. The industry has been divided in its judgment on the box office value of the production versus the star. METRO'S solution of the problem based on experience and proven by legitimate solid business methods, is that the box office star in the high class production made at a minimum cost, without sacrificing quality, and marketed with the highest efficiency, enables the Metro and the Exhibitor to make money, because we can offer these stars at prices you can afford to pay

The program system was entirely fair until individual stars created a greater drawing value. The system then became unfair because stars of drawing value were compelled to carry the program. Therefore, putting each star on individual merit, the showman soon eliminates those who fail to yield a profit to him.

STAR VALUE is based on DRAWING QUALITY and Metro believes this solves the Exhibitor's problem.

In accord with this policy, METRO proposes to offer to the exhibitor, beginning August 27th the star series to be selected according to the drawing power of each star in any particular territory.

Prices will not be arbitrarily set but based on local conditions in each territory at a price the Exhibitor can afford to pay.

METRO will present a minimum of sixty productions the first year and will only add stars that have box office value to this already powerful list.

SAFE FOR THE EYES

Cooper Hewitt Electric Co.,
Hoboken, N.J.

Gentlemen,

Attention: Mr. G. Haberd, General Sales Agent.

Now that I have formed my own company and will have under my personal supervision the production of a variety of Quality pictures which will be superior in every respect to any thing hereafter attempted by me, I am planning to have all my equipment of the latest model and design. Because of the superior quality of the Cooper Hewitt light and the results obtained by me in the past through its use, I have determined to have my own studio and will have it fully equipped with a complete set of the latest model Cooper Hewitt Apparatus.

To this end, please arrange to meet my representative that final details may be decided, and contract entered into.

Very sincerely,

Clara Kimball Young

July 10, 1917.

Five Reasons Why Cooper Hewitts Are Best

I. They possess high actinic value—the peculiar rays of light indispensable to the best photography.

II. The light is soft and perfectly diffused, penetrating every corner, giving fine modeling, and blends well with and resembles daylight lighting.

III. They are cool, and safe for the eyes. They have no glare; no heat.

IV. They are an absolutely steady light. There is no flicker. They do not drop out in the middle of a set. They do not have to be trimmed.

V. They are cheap to operate—low in current consumption—low in maintenance, and produce wonderful photography.

"The Golden Idiot" is another masterpiece so distinctive of Bryant Washburn's inimitable work. It is punctuated with all the subtlety and charm of his personality; is full of quaint humor and laughable situations.

A rich old man tells his two nephews he will leave his money to the one who possesses the most worldly goods when he dies. One nephew is a successful broker, the other a carefree ne'er-do-well.

Which do you think won the fortune? As the story unfolds it amazes and delights all, showing the vicissitudes of life that make rich men poor, and poor men rich.

The Plain Duty of this Convention

I WISH that every exhibitor at this Chicago Convention and every exhibitor in this country had been in Washington last week when the Government and the Motion Picture joined hands in what ought to be—what must be—the greatest propaganda campaign in the history of the world.

I wish this for the sake of the Motion Picture and for the sake of exhibitor organization.

For I sincerely believe that every exhibitor who could have been at Washington and have stood face to face with the Government and its requirements, heard of the stupendous undertakings we have assumed in the war and listened to the Government's earnest appeal to the Motion Picture, would have come to Chicago with an entirely new slant upon exhibitor organization and in particular upon the grave responsibilities facing this convention.

He would, I believe, put completely aside all personal and political ambitions and pledges and stand shoulder to shoulder with every other delegate in an effort to effect an active, permanent and comprehensive exhibitor organization, one able to play its full part in the greatest crisis this country has ever faced and in the greatest opportunity the motion picture theatre has ever found thumping at its doors.

Two Great War Agents

TO put this situation in a nutshell:
A man high in authority at Washington said to the writer:
"There are two main agents through which America will win this war."
"One is patriotic propaganda and the other is aeroplanes."

"For patriotic propaganda we rely mainly upon motion pictures."

In the writer's humble opinion this appraisement of the situation is absolutely and positively true and comprehensive.

To gain an idea of the parallel importance of the motion picture it is only necessary to indicate the definite and tremendous work of the Government's Aircraft Board.

Details were told the writer in confidence. However, it may be stated broadly that within a few days the huge appropriation of three-quarters of a billion dollars will back up the brains of the country's ablest business men and the country's great manufacturing resources to send what is now acknowledged to be the world's greatest war machine "through the air to Berlin."

War and the Picture

AND now for motion pictures.
One hundred millions of people in this country must be told continuously the many-sided story of what the President characterizes as "the stupendous undertaking of this war."

Patriotism must be aroused and constantly stimulated; the definite duty of every man, woman and child must be told plainly to them.

These duties are many and positive. Food must be conserved to feed the world; famines at home must be averted through price control and stopping wastage; armies must be raised; ships built; great loans floated; Red Cross funds raised. And the one medium today that can carry these messages to the millions, to the homes simultaneously, tellingly and without editorial garbling, is the motion picture.

The Plain Duty of this

The President and the Government heads know the power of the picture.

They ask for its fullest power; and the appeal is made seriously and solemnly. It comes in definite and telling words from the President himself and from Secretaries Baker, Daniels, McAdoo, Lane, Redfield, Houston and Wilson; from Herbert Hoover, H. P. Davidson, Howard Coffin, Colonel Goethals and Raymond D. Fos-dick.

Secretary Lane summed up the situation when he said: "Upon no single institution do we rely more than upon the motion picture."

What Will We Do?

What is the industry to do?

We assume that every one of us appreciates clearly not only what the motion picture can do in this great opportunity, but also what this great opportunity can do for the motion picture.

We may take this perhaps selfish view of the situation, since the reward is not to be a matter of commercial profits.

The motion picture will be invested with a dignity that will lift it high above the censorship efforts of the crooks and cranks. It will be permitted a usefulness which should forever stamp it as the world's greatest humanizing and instructional force. It will pass through a swifter era of development than has ever been accorded it. The fabric of its industry will be organized at last through the organization necessary to this immediate end.

What will the industry do?

The Answer Is Plain

The Executive Committee of fifteen, representing at Washington the National Association of the industry, did what every individual of the industry would have done had he been in their place: they pledged to the Government the industry's undivided support.

And now the big task must be undertaken.

It is a big task. And it can be successfully undertaken only in one way—through organization.

And now we come to the point of this editorial. We have never written one more sincerely nor, in our opinion, of greater moment.

Will the exhibitors, at this Convention, furnish an organization, such an organization of their branch of the industry as is necessary to meet the industry's opportunity. Will they seize this remarkable opportunity to accomplish permanent organization through an immediate demand for organization to meet the pressing needs of the Government of the United States?

Down with Politics!

Conventions in the past have been downright failures, so far as organization is concerned. So will this Convention be, if it follows the foot tracks of preceding ones. It will be necessary, first of all, to throw politics out of the window. Stop the trading of votes, the promises of jobs and convention cities. Lay personalities and personal controversies aside.

Get down to business—the business of effecting an active, self-supporting, permanent organization fully representative of the exhibitors of the United States.

Out of the work you do men will arise able to fill the Presidency and your important committees. Elect them spontaneously from the Convention floor—not through votes swapped in the hotel lobbies.

The point is this, gentlemen: If you don't effect this kind of an organization, and do it right now, some other men will. If you don't get down to your job there won't be a job to get down to.

We are talking now to the League politicians.

This industry is getting too big to continue to have an organization of exhibitors that exists for a week only and wastes even this one week in political jobbery and indefinite oratory. As the most important branch of the fifth industry of the United States you have got to organize or else step aside.

The M. P. E. L. of America

The demand now made upon you by this Government is too great and too critical to be evaded and its opportunity lost because you have no organization to meet it. Exhibitors individually, the substantial, intelligent, patriotic exhibitors of this country, are going to meet their country's appeal to them. They are going to meet it through their organization. It is up to you to make this organization the M. P. E. L. of America.

Motion Picture News has no issue in this matter nor upon the floor of the convention save one—the success of Exhibitor Organization. We have no personal controversies, no preference for any political candidate. We have been invited to prefer charges against one of the candidates and indulge in a personal debate. We decline—out of respect to the exhibitors assembled, the grave and solid work facing the convention, and also out of respect to ourselves.
"Motion Pictures and Aeroplanes Will Win the War"

Executive Committee of War Co-operation Committee, on Washington Visit, Impressed with Enormity of Task and Responsibility That Is Placed on Industry’s Shoulders—Meets Departments’ Heads—Washington to Send Officials to Convention

President Wilson has picked the motion picture to bear half the burden of winning the war. The aeroplane will take care of the other half. The vital task that is before motion picture men during the forthcoming months is shown nakedly in that statement.

The members of the executive committee of the War-Co-operation branch of the National Association went to Washington last Wednesday and were accorded a reception which impressed upon each one of them the enormity of the task which the President has asked them to perform.

The film men met practically every departmental head, with the exception of Baker and Daniels, who were closeted in an all day session with the steel kings of the country, to fix war prices on steel. Both Cabinet members repeatedly sent out word to the picture men, urging them to wait.

The results of the whole day’s activities, boiled down to a single sentence, was this: The motion picture and the aeroplane will win this war.

Herbert Hoover emphasized the supreme importance of linking up the government to the motion picture. The problem confronting the food board—which is a problem to be met by the efforts of picture men working with the food commissioners—is split into two parts:

1. Conservation of food at home so that our own people will not suffer.
2. Selection of foods which we must eat in order that the seven million men in the trenches and their families at home will have nourishment.

Mr. Hoover in a stirring address said:

"There is no publicity organ in the world like the motion picture. We look upon it as a godsend."

"What we want from you, gentlemen, is ingenuity and imagination. We want your imagination to put life and vitality into our messages to the people. We want your ingenuity in the use of your machinery, so that these messages may be carried to every home."

The film men first visited George Creel, in charge of the Committee on Public Information. Mr. Creel tended, who, with Mr. Sherrill, represented the Producers’ Branch Committee: W. W. Irwin and P. A. Powe, representing the Distributors’ Branch Committee: Louis P. Blumenthal and L. L. Levine, representing the Exhibitors’ Branch Committee; Jules Brulatour, Walter J. Moore and J. H. Hallberg, representing the Supply and Equipment Committee, and William A. Johnston, J. Wylie, with Arthur James, representing the general division.

The committee men were the guests of Henry P. Davidson, chairman of the Red Cross war council, at a luncheon at the Metropolitan Club. The speakers were Edward S. Hurley, Evan S. Evans, Wm. A. Brady, Marcus Loew and I. V. Lee.

In the afternoon, the committee men were addressed by Raymond D. Fosdick, who spoke of the immediate need of control over irresponsible exhibitors in the vicinity of training camps. Mr. Fosdick said that one of the most difficult tasks on his hands is to keep wine and women out of the training camps and away from the cantonments.

"One of the hardest parts of that task," said Mr. Fosdick, "is in keeping the troops in good spirit. To do this, we want them to have good, clean, red blooded entertainment. Contrary to some exhibitors’ notions, we do not want our soldiers to see sex and morbid pictures. Many exhibitors have been giving the troops that sort of entertainment."

John R. Freuler, president of Mutual, made the suggestion that four-minute films be made for use in sections where four-minute men for some reason are not available.

Mr. Blair, who has charge of the four-minute men, said that the four-minute men are now organized in twenty-four states. He will instruct his organization to work with the motion picture theatres to their fullest ability in an earnest endeavor to still further augment this branch.
Nation's Heads Consent to Visit Chicago Convention

All Cabinet Officials, Whose Duties Can Be Constructured to Come Within Scope of Motion Picture Propaganda, Will Go or Send Representatives—Thursday Selected Tentatively as Day by Cabinet Members and War Board Heads

E VERY cabinet officer in Washing- ton whose duties in any way fringe the film propaganda movement will be in Chicago Thursday if possible. This resolution followed the suggestion which was made by members of the National Association who were in Washington Wednesday.

Herbert Hoover, Chairman of the Food Conservation Board, declared that the idea appealed to him so strongly that he would make every effort to be on the Convention floor Thursday. If he cannot attend personally, he will send a man well qualified to represent him.

In speaking of this, Mr. Hoover said: "I want to thank you for extending to me the invitation to talk before the exhibitors at Chicago. It is an opportunity I am going to make every effort to take advantage of. Please do not think I am making this statement to you in any formal way.

"I need the help of exhibitors who will see that the messages we prepare for the public are delivered in the most convincing way possible.

"I need that co-operation perhaps more than any other. To be frank with you, gentlemen, we admit freely that without your help our cause will surely fail."

Other members of the War Council spoke in terms quite as emphatic as Mr. Hoover.

Georg Creeel, who visited the National Association a few days ago in order to start the ball rolling, will also make every effort to visit Chicago.

Other members of the War Council who will either go to Chicago or be represented there are H. P. Davidson, Chairman of the Red Cross War Council; Howard Coffin, Chairman, Aircraft Production Board, and Raymond Fosdick, Chairman of the Training Camp Commission.

Mr. Fosdick was assured by the National Association representatives that his efforts to enforce systematic control over exhibition in training camp regions will have their full co-operation. This work will be taken up shortly by the National Association.

Herbert Hoover has appointed a food commissioner in each state who will co-operate with the appointed member of the National war co-opera-

PUT YOUR SHOULDER TO THE WHEEL!

The task before the men who are making their living in the film business is serious. The Call to Arms at Washington should not be taken as idle flattery. The Nation's heads have singled out the steel trust—and other great branches of industry—and said, "You must do your part."

The Nation's heads have singled out the picture business and imposed a task just as serious—just as important.

Motion picture machines won't hurl high explosive shells into German trenches. But they will exert a force as powerful on the minds of nations.

Take an inventory of yourself. What can you do towards the fulfillment of this giant task—and opportunity?

A motion for an appeal was granted the counsel representing Alfred Warman, the producer.
Shubert-Hammerstein-Ince Launch New Company

"Advanced Motion Picture Corporation" They Call the New Baby—
"The Co-respondent," with Elaine Hammerstein, Is to Be First Play

ADVANCED MOTION PICTURE CORPORATION is the name chosen for a new producing organization launched by Lee Shubert, Arthur Hammerstein and Ralph W. Ince. The title hints at the aims of the company, which are announced in details by the members of the trio.

Elaine Hammerstein is to be the star of the first picture, to be called "The Co-respondent." It proves to be a screen adaptation of the drama playing at Booth theatre last season with Irene Penwick in the part described by the title.

The photoplay is to be released some time next month and preparations are under way already for its successor. The second play will be "Fate's Honeymoon," a picturization of a novel to commence in Munsey's next month. Lucille Lee Stuart is to star.

Six big features will follow, it is stated, one after the other. Some plays from the Shubert shops, and some serials, with big advertising possibilities, are to be screened. One of these subsequent productions will be "The Battle Cry," made by the Shuberts two seasons ago, and to be put out under another name, for what the trio describes as "obvious reasons." Another will be "the Fire in the Forest," with May Thompson as star. She recently was the lyric ingenue of "You're in Love" and is now with "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath."

Lee Shubert said of the new enterprise: "I have entered the film feature producing field not to institute any great reform or show anyone how to do anything. The opportunity offered to combine with Mr. Hammerstein and Mr. Ince and I seized it. "I have been an observer at first hand of the box office 'take' of many film productions put in theatres as 'shows.' I know revolutionary changes are imminent in the producing and distributing field. But whether these changes are made or are not, I am certain pictures can be made with the same common sense direction as is used in producing regular plays for regular theatres. I feel perhaps I know enough about that end of the market to be a real support to my two confreres.

Mr. Shubert says he will in a measure assume a considerable part of the responsibility of furnishing the new producing company with big plays and big players—both box office items in pictures. Mr. Hammerstein spoke of the forming of the triangular partnership. He said: "When we discovered we could make a combination with Mr. Ince we jumped at it. We propose to produce as many big pictures a year as Mr. Ince can turn out, maybe twelve, maybe more—scarcely in any event less than six. He will only produce big pictures. We have agreed to make no picture that is not big enough to put down in any theatre at a dollar, top price. If we get the right sort of offers we will sell our product to the highest bidder and he can exhibit at any price he chooses. Some of our pictures may be state rights."

Mr. Ince talked with enthusiasm of the prospects of production. He said:

"I was never so happily situated since I entered the film field. I am teamed up with men whose experience is just what it should be for a successful combination. We each of us know rather more about plays than the average film man, and we are going to capitalize that knowledge. I am told to go ahead regardless of expense to give the public stirring pictures, and to pick my casts of the unsigned material on the regular and film stage.

"We are going to try to give the public a uniformly stimulating series of big plays in film, with a tradesman's eye on the kind of feature the exhibitor can sell without excessive overhead. We are going to try to help sell the pictures for the exhibitor, not only in selecting self-advertising material in the first place, but in reinforcing that factor with a fairly liberal advertising campaign for each of our issues."

Edward Davison, long an important executive of the Shubert enterprises, will act as general manager of the new concern.

Vita's New Business Manager

Ronald A. Reader, for more than twenty years a friend and business associate of Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, has been appointed business manager of the Vitagraph Company, with headquarters at the company's administration building in Brooklyn.

Long before Albert E. Smith thought of motion pictures he and Mr. Reader were partners in various theatrical ventures, in which both served as actors and promoters, and they also shared equally in the disasters which befell their efforts.

Promoted to Purchasing Agent

Following the resignation of J. G. Rohlf's as purchasing agent, a promotion has been made by General Film to fill his place.

Thomas J. McDermott, for five years with the company in the purchasing and auditing offices, is the new appointee. He is in charge at the General headquarters, 440 Fourth avenue, New York City.

Screen Club Benefit at Casino Theatre July 29

The "First Reel" of the Screen Club at the Casino theatre on Sunday, evening, July 29, will introduce to the public what will amount practically to a Lamb's Gambol and a Friars' Frolic combined, magnified by an overwhelming array of the stars of the film industry.

In addition to Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Ethel Barrymore and Clara Kimball Young, many stars of the legitimate and vaudeville stages will appear, this through the courtesy of the theatrical managers and the United booking office. Mayor Mitchel will make a brief address, and it is thought that President Wilson will reply favorably to the invitation extended to him to be present.

The "First Reel" is being given for the purpose of establishing a fund of $30,000 with which the Screen Club intends erecting a clubhouse that will be its permanent home. Twice since its inception the club has been compelled to seek larger quarters, and now that its membership has grown to 1,500 the decision to obtain adequate headquarters has been reached.

In November the board of governors plans to give a ball at the Waldorf-Astoria at which there will be screened a film production, the cast of which will include the best obtainable talent.

Seats at the Casino are $2.50 each in orchestra and balcony.

Samwick Books Loew Chain

Harry A. Samwick, who bought the New York state rights to "Whither Thou Goest" from Klotz and Streimer, Inc., has booked the picture for the Marcus Loew chain of theatres for showings that total over sixty-six continuous days.

The fact that the Loew houses have given this production bookings that include all of the theatres in the chain speaks well for the quality of the picture, says Mr. Samwick. He purchased the rights before the feature had been assembled in its finished form, and embellished by artistic titles.

New Modern House Open

The Lincoln Square Theatre at Decatur, Illinois, threw open its doors for the first time on July 4. It is showing motion pictures exclusively and is owned and directed by Nate Erber, one of the former owners of the Fischer at Danville, Ill. It is an absolutely fireproof building with a most complete wash air ventilating system installed.
New Pennsylvania Censor Not a Lily-White Reformer

Frank R. Shattuck, now Head of Board, Says Eight-Foot-Kiss Rule and Other Such Draastic Measures Mean Little to Him—Wants to Better Pictures, Not Put Them Out of Business

FRANK R. SHATTUCK, new head of the censorship board in Pennsylvania, announces he has no intention of "reforming motion pictures out of business." It is apparent his attitude will be liberal rather than czarlike and oppressive, as was that of his predecessor.

Mr. Shattuck is a high-class Philadelphia lawyer, appointed to the board by Governor Elmo R. Zumwalt, the man who makes the law.

This is the post from which, owing to politics, J. Louis Breitinger was forced to resign last January.

Mr. Shattuck has just given a comprehensive interview outlining his ideas on what a censor ought to do. He frankly admits he has no special knowledge of the motion picture industry, and declares he enters on his new duties with an open mind.

"But I have my own ideas on the subject as well as the most ardent motion picture fan," he declared. "Hard and fast rules, such as the rule permitting only the 'eight-foot kiss,' and other rules attempting to define exactly the limits of propriety, might be little to the point. I will judge every picture on its merits, and am personally disposed to guard against features that might incite to crime more than against alleged improprieties."

"There will be breakers ahead, of course, for it is hard to find two persons agreed on just what is fit matter for screen portrayal, and in the position I have assumed criticism will come as a matter of course. I will be better able to define a policy when I have been initiated more thoroughly into the mysteries of the motion picture game."

Mr. Shattuck said he has made up his mind that he will "have to be the target for all persons who have been suddenly averted with a wild desire to perform in the mysteries of the motion picture game," and that he already has received letters urging him to cut out all erotic love scenes, scenes of accident or disaster, murders, executions, elopements and "goodness knows what besides."

"However," Mr. Shattuck added, "if I needed each request there would be little left of the average thousand feet of film. The fact that the portrayal of some of the greatest works of fiction would necessitate the inclusion of many or all these things makes little difference to the busy reformer."

"Well, we must work in relays. That is one comfort. No one man could witness every film that is turned out in this or any other state. It is only doubtful or disputed films that come under the eye of the censor, anyhow."

"As soon as I am sworn in I expect to call a meeting of the board, when we will go over the ground, and I will gain some idea of my new duties. Beyond saying that a liberal policy will be pursued at all times, and the experienced representatives of the moving picture business consulted whenever possible, I can formulate no definite policy. It will prove an interesting job, I know."

It will take $108,080.08 of the Pennsylvania taxpayers' good money to maintain the State Board of Motion Picture Censors for the next two years, unless Governor Brumbaugh pares down that tidy sum, which is one of the items of the $37,000,000 general appropriation budget passed by the Legislature for the next two-year period, until the Legislature meets again.

While the Governor has to lop off about $4,000,000 from the total somewhere, so the state can keep within the estimated revenues, it is not likely that the pruning hook will sink into the censorship appropriation, inasmuch as all the three members of the board are now practically the Governor's personal selections.

Needless and burdensome as censorship is from the viewpoint of the Pennsylvania exhibitors, there is, therefore, every prospect the people of the state will continue to pay a big price for the hobby of the reformers, and, of course, if the board should chance to run beyond the $108,000 in the next two years a sympathetic Legislature would come to the rescue in 1919 with an additional appropriation to make up the deficit.

The items of $20,000 for "contingent" expenses and $369.08 for "other incidents" constitute amounts that will be used for travelling expenses of the members of the board or their subordinates, maintenance of the projection rooms, and the expenses incident to prosecution of violators of the censorship law.

Varner Approved at Texas Annual Convention

Enthusiastic Meeting of Texas Theatre Managers—Lively Interest in Chicago Convention—Varner Heartily Approved.

THE Texas annual convention was called to order by E. H. Hulsey, president. The following telegram was received from Chicago by E. H. Hulsey:

"Only unusual conditions prevented my being present in Galveston, Texas. I deeply regret this, realizing how essential and important it is to the amusement business of Texas that we perfect a live active organization. The amusement business of Texas can only expand along proper lines, and can only be properly safeguarded by a thorough state organization. Present my regrets to the members attending, and urge upon them the importance of thoroughly organizing, for there are going to be vital questions that must be met, and can only be adequately met by active organization. Best wishes."

"(Signed) Karl Hoblitzell."

Hulsey spoke of the necessity of thorough organization to handle all matters affecting the amusement business in Texas. He said that there are big matters of statewide interest, and the association should direct its efforts toward a general betterment of conditions, the most immediate subjects being consideration of the censorship question and Sunday showing.

A letter was read from National Exhibitors' Circuit, reciting the activity and accomplishments of H. B. Varner before the Senate Tax Committee, and asking that the association indorse him for president of the National Exhibitors' League. Motion made and carried to indorse Varner, and a telegram was sent to Varner informing him of this action.

"Texas Amusement Managers' Association, in session here to-day with approximately one hundred members present, unanimously passed resolution indorsing you for president of National League, and pledging your future activities in connection with war tax measures."

"(Signed) Texas Amusement Managers' Association, by E. H. Hulsey, president."
Hoffman Offers Profit-Sharing to Exhibitors

Prominent State Rights Man Launches Forth with Plan to Reimburse Exhibitor—Plan Similar to One Followed by Commercial Houses

M. H. HOFFMAN is branching out into the state rights field with a new idea in respect to the manner in which he meets the exhibitor. The idea is an old one in the general commercial field, but it has never been given a trial by the state rights man in disposing of his picture. It is the profit-sharing plan, which has brought such good results in the commercial field. Mr. Hoffman explains his plan as follows:

"I am not in the motion picture business with the intention of making a million dollars over night, I shall be satisfied with a reasonable profit, and in making this profit I desire to work hand-in-hand with the exhibitor, so that he shall not only get a good picture but he will share in all the gross receipts from the picture over and above the cost of production and distribution, the cost of distribution including a reasonable and fair profit for myself."

"To obviate all doubt in the minds of any concern as to the cost of the production I stand ready, always, to show to the exhibitors or anyone interested, the written contract setting forth the amount which I paid the producer for the picture."

"This plan is, at present, only in its infancy, but eventually I hope to have it on a practical footing as in every state rights territory which I control for one or more productions. Since my plan is based upon whether or no the exhibitors' board of trade, where it exists, places its stamp of approval upon the production to be handled in this way by me, it cannot extend to all territories at present. My plan, at this time, applies only to the New York state territory and any picture which the Exhibitors' Board of New York City, in any one of its boroughs, approves; I stand ready to purchase the New York territory rights to it and all exhibitors in New York state who use this picture so approved by the board will receive, pro rata, all moneys over and above the amount represented by the cost of production, distribution and my expenses, which will be fair and reasonable. This money will be deposited with the Exhibitors' Board of Trade and given by them to the exhibitor. In this way it is not only possible but probable for an exhibitor to obtain one of my pictures, and after his result has been refunded to find that the moneys received in this way represent the amount he originally paid for the privilege to run the picture in his theatre."

"Under this plan the heavy expense incident to the distribution of a product is eliminated and the money represented by this expense goes back to the exhibitor. He is the one who profits under my plan. Not only does he profit in terms of money but he has the assurance that the time he is using my product, I am working with him, for his interests and in the interests of his patrons."

"I do not hold with some, that the day my picture is disposed of is the day on which all my enterprise and the time he is using my product, I am working with him, for his interests and in the interests of his patrons."

Sol Lesser Buys Rights to King Bee

Sol Lesser, of San Francisco, has acquired the Californian rights of the King Bee Billy West Comedies. He expresses himself as delighted with the humorous qualities of the productions which he says are among the funniest he has ever seen.

Their money-making possibilities, in Mr. Lesser's opinion, are enormous as the ability and popularity of the star, the excellence of the supporting company, and the cleverness of the acting and production have been established by the releases so far available.

Office Changes in Notable Feature Office in West

As a result of the consolidation of the distribution plans of Paramount and Artcraft organizations, changes have been effected in the office forces of the Notable Feature Film Company, distributors of Paramount and Artcraft in Utah, Colorado, Wyoming, Montana and Idaho, which will give greater efficiency to that exchange's various departments, and will make it ready for increase of business.

Further Organize Sterling Film Corporation

At a meeting of the stockholders of the Sterling Film Manufacturing Corporation, of Baltimore, a few days ago, the following directors were elected: H. C. Kohler, president; E. Sarbach, first vice-president; L. Frederick, second vice-president; F. Mitchell, secretary; N. Wyman, treasurer, and F. Headenger and H. Galt. Arrangements are now being perfected by each of the directors and it is expected that a contract will be made with Hawkins & Haney, Inc., for the leasing of the Baltimore company's productions.

Screenwrite Club Desires to Advance the Art

All persons engaged in writing photo-plays intended for production may be eligible to membership in the Screenwrite Club, which has premises at No. 110 East Nineteenth-street, New York. An announcement says:

"The aim of the Screenwrite Club is to bring together congenial people who have similar desires and ambitions, so that the principles of the new art may be fully developed and advanced through such organization. In other words, the Screenwrite Club proposes to bring together the photo-play writers in one body and in such a manner that the author may see the results of his labors, as the Authors' League of America serves the fiction author."

An official board recently elected includes: Albert Gehly Schwartz, president; James A. Dunby, treasurer; W. J. Quinlan, secretary; Harold Eyre, Lelila M. Ellefon, Theresa Schwartz, Malvina C. Slonin, publicity committee; and Sari Gehly, J. J. Swanton, Mrs. M. A. Belilios and Miss Haviland, entertainment committee.

Randolph Bartlett, Selznick, Develops the "Trailer"

Randolph Bartlett, publicity man for the Selznick Enterprises, is elaborating the "trailer" into a series of "Little Journeys" to furnish upon the screen personal glimpses of the Selznick stars.

The first of the series shows Herbert Brenon at work on "The Lone Wolf." Mr. Bartlett himself directed the scene. He remarks that he is the only director who can direct Mr. Brenon, and adds that he screens well and takes kindly to suggestions. Close-ups show Mr. Brenon dramatically describing a scene before photographing it. The camera was placed just behind the one photographing the picture.

"I believe the average trailer, so far from being good advertising, is merely an annoyance to the audience," says Mr. Bartlett, and, moreover, the grit of mail received by stars, and by moving picture 'fan' publications, shows that the public has an intense interest in and curiosity about the favorite stars and their studio work, aside from the results. The next "Little Journey" show Constance Talmadge as Selznick star and reproduce scenes from "The Moth," with Norma Talmadge as star.

Rapf Has Two More Features in the Making

Harry Rapf, the sale of whose "Today" and "The Mad Lover" to Pathe is announced this week, has received an early in September he is to offer Florence Reed in another big feature, and Robert Warwicxk also in yet another production.

While the two pictures enumerated above, are in the preparatory stage, Mr. Rapf has to himself directed the "Exhibitors' Convention," and expects while there to study the market and to crucify his future activities so as best to meet market conditions.

"I am going to make each picture more substantial than its predecessor," he told a writer several days ago. "The industry is generally healthy now and will readily absorb any number of high-class productions, and I am going to put back into each succeeding feature the original capital."
CONFIRMING news exclusively in last week's issue of Motion Picture News, Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky, announces that J. Stuart Blackton, vice-president of Vitagraph, will become an independent producer for the Paramount Pictures Corporation.

Mr. Zukor personally authorized the statement, just as he left New York for the Chicago Convention.

While retaining his financial interest in Vitagraph, Mr. Blackton ceases all active connection with the concern and will form his own organization for the purpose of producing new pictures which are to be known as the J. Stuart Blackton Series of Photoplays. There are to be four productions during the first year, all to be equal in power and scope to "The Battle Cry of Peace," which won Mr. Blackton an international reputation as a director and producer.

Active work upon production is to be begun at once and the first picture is to be released about October 1. The remaining photoplays are to be ready for distribution at intervals of two or three months.

Coincidental with Mr. Zukor's announcement there comes a statement signed by Mr. Blackton relative to his future plans, which reads as follows:

"I have devoted twenty years of my life to the art of motion pictures, and I am beginning to learn how little anyone knows of its marvelous possibilities. I am quite convinced that great pictures cannot be produced commercially. David Belasco could not produce fifty-two plays a year and keep them up to the Belasco standard. Great pictures cannot be painted, great books cannot be written, nor any great works of art or literature accomplished in a hurry or on scheduled time by routine work.

"I am going to apply my experience of long years of practical work added to my vision of future possibilities to the making of perhaps four artistic productions a year. They will be produced independently, and from scenarios to finished product every detail will be under my personal direction. Every production will be built upon the firm foundation of a literary masterpiece. It is literature that changed the moving photographs of twenty years ago from a nine-days' wonder into the biggest combination of allied art, science, education and entertainment that the world has ever known.

"The play's the thing' and I have given careful consideration to the vehicles from which my pictures will be adapted. I believe that the writings of Sir Gilbert Parker offer a greater opportunity for picturization than almost any other fiction of to-day through their vital, virile action, their unfailing deep theme of sentiment and mysticism, and above all their high quality of that necessary attribute, imagination.

"I have been fortunate in securing practically all of Sir Gilbert Parker's important available works, and my association with him and his keen personal interest in the screen picturization of his stories will prove an inspiration that will undoubtedly affect favorably the final result.

"I am to retain a large part of my stock interest and all of my sentimental interest in the Vitagraph Company. I am severing my connection with it because, I believe, that only by individualized productions can certain results be accomplished.

"My affection and esteem for my lifelong friend and business partner, Albert E. Smith, is undiminished, and I shall miss my continual association with him and all of the great army of faithful Vitagraphers more perhaps than I realize at present.

"I feel that this is the most important move that I have ever made in my picture career, but I know that it is a move in the right direction for the best interests of the highest ideals of filmdom.

"My productions will be distributed through Paramount Pictures Corporation, because I believe their system best adapted to handle the class of productions I will make, and frankly, their contract was so flattering and so generous I could not consistently consider any other offers.

"My initial production will start immediately, and the release date will be about October 1.

"Mr. Blackton refused to discuss figures, but it was learned from reliable sources that he has given an option on his Vitagraph stock of over $1,500,000 to the Vitagraph Company to be purchased by payments approximating up to $250,000 a year during a period of years.

Mme. Olga Petrova to Star in Own Productions

Herbert Lubin Verifies Report Current That Russian Emotional Actress Will Head Her Own Organization and Produce Eight Notable Super-Figures

MME. OLGA PETROVA, according to reports which seem to have substance, will organize her own producing company. Herbert Lubin, who is associated with A. H. Sawyer, is said to have plans for the organization to be headed by Mme. Petrova herself. It is proposed to make eight super-features starring the Russian emotional actress.

Previous rumors that Mme. Petrova would go with William Fox and with Triangle seem to have been started without authority and were not verified. Mr. Lubin was seen at his offices at No. 1600 Broadway. He said:

"Everything connected with the new organization, when completed, will be on a practical business basis, but definite announcements will not be made until after the convention. It is, of course, impossible to get out people together at this time.

"While the scope of the organization, artistically, will be the highest ever attempted, it will not ramble off into impossible plans and expenditures. Everything will be done in a way to benefit both the producing company and the exhibitor. As Petrova pictures are different from any other pictures produced to-day, it is important that they should be handled in an intelligent manner.

"The publicity will be a new departure in the film industry—a system of active co-operation between exhibitor and producer has been planned. It is hoped some of the present day difficulties of distribution have been avoided. Publicity will be handled in a direct-to-public manner, and this can be afforded, as the ultimate income from Petrova productions will be great.

"Mme. Petrova is resting after two years of steady work. Offers have been made to her—one or two of them as great as were ever made to a motion picture star. But she feels she should head her own organization. She is herself dramatist and critic."

Film Inspector Strike Ends

The threatened trouble and strike of the film inspectors of the Chicago exchanges has been ended. Early last week, following the injunction proceedings brought against the two operator's unions here by the exchange managers' association, word was received from President Armstrong of Local No. 110 that the attempt to organize the inspectors had been abandoned and that the partial organization effected had been disbanded.

The news was received with much satisfaction by the managers, and the police and managers that had been placed in all the "Loop" exchanges following the disastrous Pathe and Artodramas fire have been taken off duty.
Vitagraph’s Case Against Ford Put on Calendar

No Further Action Before Trial—Auto Manufacturer Says He Had no Malicious Intent in Stating “Battle Cry of Peace” Was “Ad.” for Maxim

The case brought by the Vitagraph Company of America against Henry Ford, automobile manufacturer, an action in which libel is alleged and damages in $1,000,000 asked, has been put on the full calendar of the Federal District Court. No further action will be taken before trial.

The company’s bill alleged that Ford libeled it by publishing an advertisement in which “The Battle Cry of Peace” was branded as a picture produced in the interests of Hudson Maxim and other munition manufacturers.

In the Ford answer, filed July 9, publication is admitted, but malicious intent against the Vitagraph Company is denied. A sentence in the answer says:

“The defendant did not believe this country was in danger of an attack from an alien enemy (none being at that time threatened) or that it was necessary for the country to expend large sums of money in connection therewith.”

In his decision dismissing a demurrer Judge Mayer said that Ford, in his article “was somewhat lacking in prophetic vision in view of later events.”

The Vitagraph announcement states:

“Mr. Ford’s answer is simply a plea in confession and avoidance.”

It is further asserted for the company that by reason of the publication of the Ford advertisement the Vitagraph Company has been greatly injured in its good name, fame and credit, and “brought into public obloquy and disrepute throughout the United States and Canada.”

The Vitagraph statement says:

“Neither the Vitagraph Company nor its officers or executives had any financial connection with Mr. Maxim or any other manufacturer of munitions, and ‘The Battle Cry of Peace’ was produced as a piece of patriotic propaganda, and for the purpose of communicating a great and important message to the American people with the patriotic end in view of promoting the best interests of the nation.”

General Film’s “Variety Day” Idea Taking Well

A leading exhibitor in the San Joaquin Valley, California, writes to General Film urging four “Variety Days” instead of one. At present the house has booked eighteen reels a week to use on two such days. A letter says:

“These are the only two days we have at present. We will have one or two more full days as soon as we can get rid of the ‘big stuff.’ No more expensive features for yours truly, not unless it spells suicide. Can’t get ruled off for trying.”

General Film says in Philadelphia several houses have switched from the big feature as the “piece de resistance” to a selection of its two-reel and one-reel pictures—making, as an official of the company expresses it, a show that is all “piece de resistance.”

New Mary MacLaren Picture

A new story for Mary MacLaren, now under contract with David Horsley, is in the scenario department, and will soon be under production. Miss MacLaren’s first picture at the Horsley Studios has been completed under the direction of Thomas Ricketts. It is now undergoing its finishing touches prior to release.

Miss MacLaren, whose screen success is described as interest in the life of the daughter of a poor but socially ambitious mother, bent upon seeing her child in the “swim.” Just what the effect of wearing fine clothes has upon the child who has been brought up to look down upon her for being yanked around, is the interest through her troubles to the end.

Kansas Motion Picture Men Lose Fees They Paid

Moving picture exhibitors will not get back their money for censoring of their film prior to the enactment of the new law passed by the Kansas 1917 Legislature. This was the ruling of the Supreme Court of Topeka July 7 in a suit by the Attorney-General to compel repayment of fees collected into the state treasury by the Superintendent of Public Instructions.

Patriotic Plays for West Hoboken’s Civic Week

Stirring photoplays, “The Call to Arms,” now being presented at the Globe theatre, Manhattan, and consisting of four parts, “My Mother,” “My Father,” “Myself,” and “The Call to Arms” will be the principal feature of a community festival at West Hoboken, N. J.

Mayor Eckert and Father Conrad of St. Joseph’s Church arranged the “civic and patriotic week” to begin July 16. The plays were booked for the Passion Play theatre, Central avenue, by arrangement with Benjamin Chapin.

First Commonwealth Eastern Comedy is Started

The first of the Commonwealth Comedies, featuring Lou Marles, late Keystone comedian, entitled “His Watery Waterloo,” was started last week by Director Frank P. Donovan, for early release on one of the standard programs who have contracted for the company’s output of one reels.

Many well-known screen players will star in the film star in its first Eastern-made picture, among them George Humbert, one of the principal players in “The Lone Wolf”; Leo Daley, Pauline Taylor, Betty Rhodes, Leon Miller, Eddie Kelly and others as well known to picturegoers.

Geraldine Farrar’s New Play Requires Large Settings

Geraldine Farrar is progressing rapidly with her work on her first Artcraft picture. She is under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille. The screening is at the Lasky studio at Hollywood, California.

The Artcraft announcement does not give the name of the story or disclose the nature of the play, but says several of the largest scenes ever staged there have been erected for it.

Many of those in the east for the new production appeared with Miss Farrar in “Jean the Woman,” one of these being her leading man, Wallace Reid.

First Crystal Play Ready

The Crystal Photoplays Company, whose office and studio are at Peoria, are ready to launch their first feature, entitled “The Peoria and the Stirling House.” It has been made at the Peoria studio and directed by George Seigmann, former associate of D. W. Griffith. Dolly Ledgerwood Matters is the leading woman in the production and O. A. C. Lind built the scenario.

It is to be advertised extensively and put on the State rights market.
Favors New York Business Office of League

William Brandt, President of Brooklyn Branch of M. P. E. L. A., to Introduce Resolution at Convention in Chicago for Such an Office

A RESOLUTION for the establishment of permanent business headquarters in New York of the M. P. E. L. A. will be introduced during the Chicago convention by William Brandt, president of the Brooklyn league.

"Sudden Jim" and "Successful Failure"—Triangle Program

The long-heralded Triangle production of "Sudden Jim," the Saturday Evening Post story by Clarence Benedict Kelland, starring Charles Ray, will be released on the program for July 22. "A Successful Failure," produced under the supervision of Alan Dwan and featuring Winifred Allen and Jack Devereaux, is the other feature for the week.

The story of "Sudden Jim" has been read by millions since it appeared as a serial in the Saturday Evening Post and as one of the best sellers on the book market.

The hero is the son of Clothespin Jimmy, a pioneer manufacturer of the article which has lost its nickname. The old gentleman tests the character of young Jim by giving him $30,000 and telling him to play or work, just as he chooses. The boy takes over his father's clothespin factory in northern Michigan and puts up a fight against the trust.

The scenes were filmed in the big woods of California. One of the most spectacular is that showing a burning trestle,

Educat ors at Variance with Censor—He Remains Firm

Scathing editorials, personal importunings, mandamus proceedings and all sorts of other kinds of pressure brought to bear upon Major Funkhouser, the censor chief of Chicago, have failed thus far to bring the issuance of a permit to show "The Little American," which Funkhouser barred from Chicago a fortnight ago on the grounds that it was antagonistic to the Germans.

The newspapers have denounced his action, all sorts of fun has been poked at him, and even though prominent citizens, business people and George C. Creel, head of the National Bureau of Information, has passed on the film favorably, Funkhouser has remained obdurate, stubborn and impertinent. The Artcraft Company started proceedings against his decision last week. The major followed it up by refusing to let the picture be shown in the courts even. He insisted that it be viewed by the judge in his own (Funkhouser's) projection room.

A hundred representative business men and women made up an informal indignation meeting and viewed the picture last week at the Artcraft's projection room. Words were not minced in expressing their views of Funkhouser's decision and the value and timeliness of "The Little American" at this time. Among those who saw the picture, praised it and decried Funkhouser's action in banning it were Paul Shorey, professor of Greek at the University of Chicago; Bishop Samuel Fallows, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, Mrs. A. C. Tenney, Miss Florence Temple, Alderman George Iliff and others.

New Owners Association Asks to Join National Body

Thirty-four members were in attendance at the first regular meeting of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association last Tuesday, held at No. 19 West Adams street. The constitution and by-laws to govern the new organization were adopted and the following officers elected to serve officially for the ensuing year: Henry Schoenstadt, president; A. J. Krug, vice president; Louis H. Frank, treasurer; Max Jessen, secretary; Anna Keisner, financial secretary. The executive committee consists of Edward Beatty, Maurice Choynski, A. Zilligen and G. P. Morris.

Three new members were added to the roster of names at this meeting. They were Max Cooper, Fred Bolton and John Kubelik. "Judge" Tugwell, vice president of the national body of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, was present at the meeting. It was announced afterward that a delegation will be selected to attend the national convention here this week.

LEAKS IN THE LOOP

Aaron J. Jones, president of Jones, Linick and Schaefer, received a wire from William A. Brady last week which read as follows: "At the request of the President of the United States, I invite you to serve as a member of the War Co-operation Committee of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry." Mr. Jones accepted and will represent Illinois on the committee.

On Monday, July 9, a delegation of students from the School of Commerce and Administration of the University of Chicago visited and inspected the Rohracker Film Company's plant under the direction of Professor N. W. Barnes, of that institution. They were shown all the details of film manufacturing from the "shooting" to the shipping department.

Sam Katz, of the Balaban-Katz Company, returned last week from his honeymoon trip spent at Yellowstone Park.

The National Welfare and Educational Association of this city has gotten out a special propaganda film entitled "Uncle Sam's Babies."

H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation of New York, is in Chicago for the purpose of consolidating the Peter Pan and Toyland Corporations.

The Chicago Herald and Daily News have both manifested much interest in the convention. Their booth on the exposition floor are lively spots and very attractive.

Early last week, the convention headquarters in the Masonic Building received a check for $500 from Colonel Selig for the exposition.

Lew Fields is at work in the Selig studios, on Western avenue, on a feature that is being directed by J. A. Richmond.

Harry Leonhardt, formerly of Fox and now signed up with Goldwyn to act as general western manager for that company, arrived back in Chicago from New York on last Wednesday. Accompanied by Mrs. Leonhardt, he left Friday for Los Angeles, where he will make his permanent home.

Greiser and Herz, that hustling young exchange and state rights firm that have joined the others in the "Loop," have secured a large number of new specialty and feature films for distribution in this territory. Among them is the bi-weekly Screen News Magazine, issued by American Bioscope, and a seven-reel feature entitled "The Slackers Heart."

Jack O'Toole, Fox's Chicago manager arrived back in town late last week from the Fox Convention in New York. He looks and declares that he had the time of his life.

A letter received by me from the Texas Amusement Managers' Association announces that their state convention was held there Monday and Tuesday last week. It was said to be very successful and aroused great spirit for progress and profit during the coming year.

The local K-E-S-E office also announces that there is a big local booking for the Conquest-Edison pictures, whose releases began last Saturday.

Dimples Star Attends Meeting of Exhibitors' Body

Lillian Walker was a guest at the meeting of the Chicago Branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League on July 6, at which final plans were worked out for the entertainment features for convention week. Miss Walker, after being introduced by President Hopp, spoke briefly and left with the expressed hope that she would see everyone again on July 16, which will be Lillian Walker Day at the exposition.

The league received a telegram from Lewis J. Selznick, in which he promised to be in Chicago, July 21, with a number of his prominent picture players.

Nelson, in Chicago, Offers Remaining States on "The Crisis"

Edward Nelson, president of Sherman-Elliott, Inc., now in Chicago, announces that he has been decided to relinquish certain plans and offer the remaining territory for William N. Selig's play, "The Crisis," for sale. The states are:

Wisconsin, Iowa, Arkansas, Montana, New Mexico, Minnesota, Nebraska, Texas, Idaho, North Dakota, Kansas, Oregon, Colorado, South Dakota, Oklahoma, Washington, Utah and Wyoming.

B. W. Bedell with Allen Co.

Ben W. Bedell, a veteran, has been appointed special representative for the Edmund M. Allen Film Corporation of Chicago. Fred C. Alkin, general manager of the Allen company, announces the appointment.

Mr. Bedell expects to become active immediately in behalf of Wm. N. Selig's "The Garden of Allah."

The Edmund M. Allen Company owns territorial rights for eight states for the Selig pictureplay, which opens at the Colonial, Chicago, July 22.
Just a little over three years ago—in February, 1914, to be exact—a group of Chicago film men, eleven in number, met at the Hotel Sherman in the Union Restaurant on Randolph street, Chicago, for a social evening. Such was the humble beginning of the Reel Fellows Club of Chicago. Among those present at this first meeting were Charles VerHalen, Richard R. Nehls, Don McMeany, Walter R. Early, Don J. Bell, John Rock, A. K. Greenland, Warren Patrick, Neil G. Caward and Louis A. Boening.

Little did these men think, when they first "got together," that they were to form the nucleus of an organization destined to grow and become the leading social factor in the lives of all Chicago film men. A month later these same men met in the same way and at the same place, with eleven more in attendance. The number had been doubled. Warren Patrick was made a temporary chairman, and such enthusiasm was displayed that a permanent organization was formed immediately. The election of officers resulted in Richard R. Nehls being elected president; Oscar Eagle, vice-president; Charles J. VerHalen, secretary, and L. A. Boening, treasurer, with Warren Patrick heading the board of governors, composed of five men. From that time until August, 1914, monthly dinners were held in the Hotel Sherman. On Van Buren street, when the meeting place was changed to the Hotel Sherman. During this time the membership jumped to more than eighty, and enthusiasm never waned. Prominent speakers were secured to address the members at the various meetings on subjects near and dear to the hearts of film men. Mr. Blair, of the Eastman Company, and Mr. Zeck, of Essanay, may be mentioned among those who spoke at the club. On February 22, 1915, the Reel Fellows Club gave its first informal affair, open to the public. This was a grand ball and "Cafe Chantant" at the Hotel Sherman, and proved a huge success. It was attended by many playback celebrities and city officials of Chicago, including Mayor Carter H. Harrison. The second election of officers, in March, 1915, brought with it the re-election of Richard R. Nehls as president and L. A. Boening as treasurer; also the election of Ralph Bradford as vice-president and W. D. Hildreth as secretary. The next few meetings were held monthly at the Advertisers Club on Madison street, following which the organization secured its own quarters at the Movie Inn, 17 North Wabash avenue.

The club gave several stag and beefsteak dinners, with varied success, and although the membership had increased to more than 165, interest lagged slightly. The third election of officers was held in the election of R. R. Nehls as president for the third successive term, and the election of R. C. Travers and Frank J. Flaherty as vice-presidents; M. G. Watkins, secretary, and Wm. J. Sweeney as treasurer.

The year 1916 saw many activities, and during the latter part a marked growth in membership. The second annual ball was held at the Hotel LaSalle, a stag at the K. P. Hall. The members did not patronize the LaSalle, but as well as might have been desired, and a change was made to the Bandbox Theatre Building after a short stay with the Hotel Morrison.

During the 1916 National Convention of the Exhibitors League, the Reel Fellows, then at the Morrison, did the chief honors at entertaining. Letters of congratulations on its success in this respect were received later from all sections of the country.

In December, 1916, the members and board decided to change the fiscal year of the Club to begin with January 1st. Hence an election was called for officers and board of governors for the year 1917. An exceptional amount of enthusiasm over the election prevailed and three tickets were put into the field, the "Progressive," "Radicals" and "Members." The month of December was a live one for the club, with the "election excitement" at fever pitch. After a strenuous campaign for all concerned the Progressive ticket won out, and Ralph O. Proctor was made president; Richard C. Travers and M. G. Watkins, vice-presidents; H. C. Miller, treasurer; E. A. Hamburg, secretary, and A. E. Curtis, assistant secretary, with a board of governors composed of R. R. Nehls, Wm. J. Sweeney, Don J. Bell, Fred W. Wild, Jr., Dave Russakoff, F. J. Flaherty and John A. O'Toole.

A big booster meeting was held, and arrangements made with Geo. K. Spoor to hold a studio ball at the Essanay plant. The affair, held in January, 1917, was supervised by H. C. Miller, Wm. Proctor and David T. Alexander, and was the greatest success ever achieved by the organization. The financial gain was figured in thousands and resulted in the Club securing its present lavishly furnished quarters at 207 South Wabash avenue—in the heart of the film district of Chicago. Only one change has been made in the list of officers, namely, the special election of Jack Haag as secretary, to succeed E. A. Hamburg, re- signer.

William J. Sweeney, the present treasurer of the Chicago Branch, has held that office since the first organization meeting. He is one of the best known veterans of the film business and is also the national secretary of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, with whom the Chicago Branch has been affiliated since organization.

The Genesis of Chicago Branch of the Illinois League

Six men, with the interests of the Chicago motion picture exhibitors at heart and in mind, formed the nucleus of what is today the Chicago branch of the Illinois League, with a roster of more than three hundred members. All this was back in 1911, and the six men, who were: C. A. Anderson, Julius A. Alcock, F. O. Nielsen, F. J. Flaherty, L. Raver and W. S. Atland, belonged to what was called the "Noonday Club." Interested in various ways with the motion picture industry in Chicago, a part of the time with competing the showing exchange interests, they met informally and daily at the lunch table in a Loop restaurant at the noon hour. Through their discussions of the needs and necessities of the exhibitor of the city, came the idea that resulted in the formation of the League.

On January 16, 1911, the first regular meeting of exhibitors was held in the Chemical Building. Throughout the remainder of January and during February and March meetings were held with the number of exhibitors present increasing at each successive meeting. The time seemed ripe for the formation of a permanent organization. At the solicitation of Joseph Hopp, a meeting was held at his office in the Standard Film Exchange early in April and plans were started for the formation of the permanent organization. At this meeting Mr. Hopp was made chairman; F. J. Flaherty, secretary. The following exhibitors were present: C. A. Anderson, S. C. C. Clark, William Hassett, Jr., W. W. Anderson and M. Moritz. Before the meeting adjourned it was decided to send out a call to all the motion picture men in Chicago.

At the Great Northern Hotel on April 25, 1911, this meeting was held with thirty-eight exhibitors present. C. A. Anderson presided as chairman; F. J. Flaherty, secretary, and William J. Sweeney, treasurer.

On May 8 the next meeting was held, and at this time seventy-two exhibitors were in attendance. On May 15, at the next meeting, the exhibitors presented number 100. Here at this meeting the constitution and by-laws was adopted and the first regular board of officers was elected. They were: George Henry, president; C. A. Anderson, vice-president; William J. Sweeney, treasurer; S. Katz, financial secretary, and John Bell, recording secretary.

A little later a charter was granted them by the State organization of Illinois, with headquarters in Chicago. This is the charter under which the Chicago League is conducted today, they representing the State and local exhibitors' interests. Their aim throughout the entire period of organization up until today has been to foster the cause of the Chicago and State exhibitors. During the entire seven years of organization they have continued to grow in strength.
HARRY SHERMAN’s dinner to the trade press, held at the McAlpin last Tuesday, was the best little party of the season. Food, wine and taxi cab windows were dispersed freely, so that nothing of speeches which were generally impromptu. All but one of the speakers worked in “I believe Sherman is right” at one time or another, but no one seemed to mind, as no one thought he was the least bit wrong.

B Y the way, a waiter was the first one to break glasses at the affair, thereby establishing a most popular precedent.

JIM BRECROFT came away from the dinner with a fountain pen that he didn’t possess at the start of festivities. Jim claims that he has called up or seen every one since Tuesday, and that none has laid claim to it. But we “heard different” to be Mr. Sherman’s pen, and Jim is holding it for ransom — i.e., a little advertising.

I T is reported that H. M. Horkheimer has several large and epoch-producing plans up his two sleeves. Announcements will be made in the trade papers only. Send the cigars in care of us, H. M.

TWO of the bunch who review pictures and tear copy to pieces have answered the call of Uncle Sam, and are, by this time, in the confines of training camp or fort. They are Tom Kennedy and Frank Brady, who are members of the Coast Defense Artillery, and their places will be hard to fill, in more ways than one. Its best wishes for them on their new and highly-advertised enterprise.

T HE fact that Fritz Firsch, the well-known collector of the News, is conducting a picture column in the weekly pages of the Rutherford Republican has caused a tremendous upset in all branches of the trade.

I T was neglected to put the flags at half-mast with the abolishment of the free lunch, but a movement is on foot to advance pay day from Saturday to Friday, when the order goes into effect.

A PASSAGE from a synopsis on one of “The Neglected Wife” episodes ran, “Struggling, Kennedy overpowers her. Seeing that she will be caught she escapes.” If P. A. Parsons wrote this, we have to know where his mind was at the time. Personally, we are of the opinion that it was conjuring visions of large, fat and tasty trout, but this is merely a guess.

DOUG FAIRBANKS is almost as original as we are. “Every American should help support the Red Cross Society,” is the latest product of his fertile brain.

T his not being a page for poetry we reprint the following, entitled “Her Accomplishments”:

“Hey, how I do on swimming,” cried the Picture’s Pretty Pet,

“I never really happy till from head to toe I’m wet.”

Then she donned her dainty costume, twas not silk, but old silk, too.

And gave the boys a treat and dipped her ankles, that was all!

“I am quite a famous rider, and I love my horse and crop,

And when I ride a horseback, well I never want to stop.”

So she wore her riding habit, took some close-ups by a horse,

But was doubled in the riding stunts by extra girls of course!

“I am very fond of flying, and must buy an aeroplane,

I consider flights below two thousand feet to be injurious.

Her skill was the cutest thing they ever filmed, but Bo!

Her “double” had one like it when on flying trips she’d go.

The Picture Pet had frocks which covered every kind of sport.

But never swam or rode or flew because she’d ne’er been taught.

Her double did the reckless deeds but press and posters blurred

The Public’s Picture Pet’s renown as “She who did and dared!”

When Funkauser, of Chicago, inferred that “The Little American” might offend German-Americans, he slipped and fell badly. He seems to have overlooked the fact that the hero of the picture is a German, for the greater part of the picture serving in the ranks of the German army. Finally he chuck’s the army and the Kaiser because he doesn’t believe exactly they do.

If Jeanie MacPherson had painted all Germans as bad, then the marvelous Majority might have had just cause for complaint. But German-Americans are supposed to be more or less pro-American. If they are not they are enemy aliens. Perhaps the Major is afraid of offending them, too!

A good formula to follow in producing a picture to suit Chicago censors would be as follows: One German hero; one German heroine; one American serving in the interests of the United States, and so a villain; several sympathetically drawn German soldiers; the Omnipotent as impersonated by the Kaiser; a fade-out showing the Stars and Stripes turning into the German flag; and several local color touches such as the violation of women and the shooting and killing of innocent bystanders.

Exhibitors Roast Fly-by-Night Production

EXHIBITORS still complain of the lack of permanency in producing organizations and the constant shifting of stars and companies that results.

A recent letter to the editor of the Motion Picture News from F. R. Newman of Greenville, Texas, urges the turmoil that results causes actual money loss to the exhibitor, taking away the value of the asset he himself has created through local advertising of companies, plays and stars. Mr. Newman's letter says:

"I move you, as chairman of the Society for the Prevention of Destruction of the Motion Picture Industry, that application be made to the highest court in the land for a permanent injunction to be issued against those producers who by reason of internal factional disagreements and petty quarrels (the result of temperament, I presume) can only hold together their organizations a sufficient length of time (and indeed, hardly, that) for the exhibitor to build his business on their product to a point where it begins to show a profit; restraining said producers from the continuance of such methods and compelling them to take into consideration the rights and just claims of those who have made them financially, but, thank the good Lord, not mentally.

"This tirade is, I am frank to state, aimed particularly at one of the big organizations that is at present on the verge of dissolution or relegation to the realms of innocuous demetude from no other apparent reason than that the men fail to make up the organization either don't like the way each other parts his hair, or if you like, are afraid that the distribution of the spoils (from the poor exhibitor, of course), are not being made in a manner that suits each individual's idea of his importance to the industry.

"I don't care — whether you publish this or not but it is enough to make any man in the business lose his religion.

"We go ahead, spend our money and energy in advertising a star or producing organization and just when we begin to get back some of the money we have spent, the star switches to a rival producer or the producing organization disintegrates and we who have made them reputation and money, are left to hold the bag.

"Let us have producing organizations that show some signs of stability, organizations whose members are business men, far-sighted enough to formulate a policy that is permanent, fair, just and intelligent, on which the exhibitor can depend to continue and improve, instead of the present assinine policy of every man for himself and to — with the other fellow, of course, which means no one but the exhibitor."

ON THE FIRING LINE

Fatty Arbuckle in "The Butcher Boy" and George Cohan in "Broadway Jones," are reported by Manager M. C. Eckhardt, of the Grand, Crookston, Minn., as his biggest recent hits. The Grand, one of the finest houses in the Northwest, is owned by A. J. Kavanagh, owner of seven other houses in the territory.

A. J. Gleason, of the Ideal, Denver, Col., is bucking a tough proposition. He has just purchased a house in the Italian section, which he reports has been taking down. He finds his patrons hard to please, as many cannot read. "The Last Days of Pompeii," "The Battle Cry of Peace," and the "Fall of the Nation," got the money, however.

Chaplin, Fairbanks and Hart ring the bell for C. W. Eckhardt, of the Orpheum and Princess Theatres, Butte, Montana. Manager Eckhardt is off on a pleasure trip for the summer that will girdle the country.

Widenor Bros., running the Opera House, Belvidere, N. J., are showing Fox and Artcraft releases. "We are having tough sledding making our pictures pay," is the report. Have any exhibitor readers any suggestions to offer?

"Marguerite Clark, Mary Pickford and Blanche Sweet get the money here," writes Frank Stanley, of the Opera House, Dixfield, Maine. Paramount and Mutual programs are shown.

Six weeks' run of revival meetings haven't done a thing to Marshe Miroon and his White Way Theatre, Dunn, N. C. But the outlook is better now. Universal and Pathe are the offerings with the stars setting an equal pace.

"We believe we have as nice a house as in any town of this size," writes Robert Landery, of the Strand, Odesburg, N. Y. Vitagraph and World programs are shown, with occasional specials. Anita Stewart heads the Vitagraph list and Alice Brady the World. "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" was the biggest recent hit.

"The Pride of the Clan" is rated as the best money-maker among his recent attractions by John F. Lewis, of the Orpheum, Danielson, Conn.

"Pearl White, Marguerite Clark, Billie Burke and Mary Pickford," there's the favorite quartette with my patrons," declares C. W. Brown, of the Globe, Franklinton, N. C. "Business is very good," he adds.

No Chance to Draw Crowds with "Big Bertha"

Efficient Theatre Management Means Careful Use of Small Campaigning Forces, for Instance, the Program, Which Should Spare Adjectives and Tell About the Stars

By Paul G. Smith, Cahill-Igoe Company, Chicago

A S is usual in an article of this nature, I will open with a bromide, the one where we speak of a chain being as strong as its weakest link. It may be aged and well worn with use, but it is still in good working order and as true as ever. Now to apply this to the program. Let us consider the theatre problem from every angle, leading up step by step to the question: "Is the weekly program a help or merely a chronic nuisance?"

Take, for example, an imaginary Mr. Wilson, who has decided that he will open a High Class theatre, devoted to pictures that will be a source of entertainment for the public at large. He has his plans drawn up for an elegant playhouse. He will have a wonderful stage. The latest and best in screens. There will be marble staircases and a mezzanine floor; a grand lobby decorated with handsomely framed portraits of famous stars. Ushers will be in radiant uniforms and nothing less than a symphony orchestra will provide the music. Last, but not least, he will make arrangements for a First Class and best pictures—and first runs at that.

Now, he figures, everything is ready for the Grand Opening. The world has been informed through the medium of newspaper advertising and publicity, dodgers have been distributed—three sheets and six-sheets posted, and so on. A special program is arranged and everybody invited. At the opening performance the house is packed. Mr. Wilson, eying the throng, smiles a happy and contended smile and sees the pleasant vista of a prosperous future. We will now inject a subtitle:

A MONTH HAS PASSED

Mr. Wilson is once more standing in the lobby of the High Class theatre. A few people are buying tickets and entering the house. The ushers, however, are not suffering from overwork. Three blocks down the street there is a small theatre scarcely to be mentioned in the same breath with the High Class. But, for some unguessed reason, the people, the fickle public as Mr. Wilson calls them, have deserted him and his mausoleum. They have lined up as patrons of the small theatre. Mr. Wilson is surprised and vexed. He can't figure it out. His competitor is showing the same pictures as he, true, but showing them at a later date. The opposition theatre is neither large or gorgeously appointed, yet it is nearly filled each night, while Mr. Wilson's elegant house goes along with many of its seats unseated.

How long it will take Mr. Wilson to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion does not matter to us. The answer is plain. He has tried to conquer public approval with one shot from a 42-centimeter gun. He has fired his Big Bertha and it has failed. The thought of using the lesser campaigning forces at his disposal has never occurred to him. He has been trying to ride along on the success of his Grand Opening. He has neglected to keep the people of his neighborhood informed as to the activities of his theatre.

In the meantime Mr. Competitor, who is not probably as spectacular a showman, but who knows something of human nature, has gone along letting the people know what is taking place at his Little theatre. He has had his arrangements made and has educated the public to look to him for their entertainment. He is not a "once-in-a-while-splurge" advertiser; he keeps constantly plugging, and the people never had a chance to forget that he was on earth. Mr. Wilson has been too busy calling it all out, merely says, "lucky stiff." Maybe we have distorted matters a trifle in the foregoing paragraphs. Nevertheless, the lesson is here.

The successful exhibitor, he be large or small, must always go out after his audience. How can he "go after them" and get best returns? Newspaper advertising, I hear you say, Good—but not good enough. Special stunts? Perhaps, but he should also bear in mind that the people are always trained to look for the "con" man in the wake of the circus. What he needs is dignified advertising concentrated on the people right around his theatre. The Weekly Programme is the key. What Mr. Wilson is after is information, and they are grateful for the information. Perhaps you don't realize the message the program conveys to the reader. It represents your spoken word, and like your spoken word, can be either insult or compliment. Happily, the picture exhibitor has begun to realize the value of his program.

NEW BRUNSWICK—St. John: F. G. Spencer, of the Gem theatre at Fredericton and is enlarging and improving the facility.

F. G. Spencer, who operates several theatres in the Maritime Provinces, was in Montreal recently. He has two theatres at present under construction; the Strand, in St. John, when completed will be one of the finest houses in the Dominion. The other, the Strathallan, N. S., which was destroyed last winter by fire, is being rebuilt and will be opened in the fall.

The Gem theatre being under the control of F. G. Spencer, of St. John, N. B., Mr. Spencer has signed a lease for the Gem theatre in Fredericton, owned and formerly managed by the Provincial Theatre Co., of Fredericton.

Theatres in St. John, Amherst, N. S.; Truro, N. S.; Charlottetown, Prince Edward Island, are controlled by him. The theatre at Charlottetown is the only one on the Maritimes that is being rebuilt and will be ready for opening early in the fall. The Strand, in St. John, will be remodeled to make quite a function of the reopening of the Empress, and Mr. Spencer is making great plans for it.

The Gem theatre at Fredericton is to be improved by the installing of new chairs and later it may be enlarged quite materially.

The house is situated on the same street as the Gaiety and Unique theatres, owned by W. G. Fencott, but it is not known what disposition will be made of these theatres when the new house being built for Mr. Pe- ron in Queen street is opened.

ARKANSAS—Searcy: D. E. Fitch has bought the lease on the Grand theatre from Frank Headlee and is making extensive changes tending to the improvement of the house as a Motion picture theatre.

Hamburg; J. I. Jones has leased the Grand theatre from W. W. Govre and will operate it under the management ofT.

CALIFORNIA—Bakersfield; Charles Gregg, the well-known theatre director, has just taken over the management of the Hippodrome theatre, thus bringing the list of management changes in that city in this man- agement to three; the others being the Orange and the picnic theatres. Located on a street, the theatre is well equipped and ready for the public.

ILLINOIS—Champaign: G. A. Applegate has purchased the Varsity theatre from R. W. Bishop.

Flora; Stanford & Son have again taken charge of a theatre in this city, which they abandoned some months ago.

INDIANA—Elkhart: Darnell has sold his half interest in the Elkhart theatre to his partner, Ira Stevens, who has already booked some of the best pictures ever shown on the road.

Lafayette: The Lyric motion picture theatre, which was originally built for a four theatre, was sold recently to J. W. Boes, of Lafayette, and will be renamed the Lafayette.

Fort Wayne: Announcement has been made by the owner of the Theatres, Robert F. Vesey, that Al. J. McCabe, formerly advertising manager of the Orpheum theatre, has taken charge of the theatre, having gone into effect last week. Mr. McCabe will devote all his time to the improvement and will establish policies which will soon make his establishment the greatest little theatre in Fort Wayne." A new programme is presented at the theatre already, and when it is completely it will increase the seating capacity to approximately 350 seats. Arranger- ments have also been made to remodel the interior of the theatre altogether, and a grand over- awning over the entrance.

IOWA—Alexander: A. A. Williams will open a new moving picture theatre soon. A. O. Davis has purchased the Ontario theatre, and John Keeling has leased the Opera house; Charles Griffith has purchased the Pastime theatre and has leased the opera house; The Newton Theatre Company has purchased the St. Louis theatre; The Des Moines: The sisters Jennie and Mabel Di Salvo have taken over the management of the V & I Theatre in East Des Moines, and purpose to run it plans of their own without advertising.

MICHIGAN—St. Louis: Jake Klein has suc- ceeded W. G. West as manager of the Opera house here.

NEBRASKA—Valentine: J. B. Read recently sold his interest in the Gem theatre here, to C. G. Utsey, and is retiring from the motion picture business.

ONTARIO—Toronto: The Bijou theatre in Preston, Ont., has changed ownership. It is understood that Mr. Harris of Waterloo is the new owner.

Following close upon the announcement that early this fall, Paramount Open Book- ing or Star Series plan would go into effect, J. J. and J. W. B. Hold Paramount Franchise of Canada have commenced re-organizing their company.

Ottawa: Both the Dominion and the Flower theatres in Ottawa are dark, having closed down.

TENNESSEE—Kingsport: Carl De Sear has purchased the Sun theatre, has closed down, and contemplating making vast improvements, the theatre will be open again soon.

TEXAS—Weimar: F. P. Ketchum, manager of the Dixie theatre, has announced that the moving picture show at Weimar from M. A. Kene—Manager Kene, will be suspended until further notice. There will be an up to date moving picture show.

Waco: E. S. Smith, manager of the New improvements on the Hippodrome theatre at Waco, has closed down, to make a marine garden, new electrical effects, a complete set of stage scenery, etc. and will be open again with a new programme. The ushers will wear uniforms, portraits will be supplied with ice water while remaining in their seats, and the house force will have fire drills.
Make Your Program Pay for Its Upkeep

How a House Organ May Be Designed, Printed and Maintained, with Table of Approximate Costs

IN TWO PARTS—PART ONE

IN the current issue of the Triangle magazine, a specimen program for the use of exhibitors in a most effective and economical way. The subject is one which merits considerable discussion.

In the course of the week's mail a vast number of theatre programs reach the editor's desk. Many of them are of the stock variety—the kind that is prepared by some large metropolitan concern with blanks for the theatre manager to fill in as his booking demands; but here and there one finds a distinctive sheet, printed frequently with utter disregard for typographical good taste, but showing genuine originality and advertising power.

THAT STILLMAN PROGRAM

Probably the best theatre program, from the standpoint of typography as well as from every other angle, that has ever reached the desk, was that of the Stillman theatre of Cleveland. The Stillman theatre is said to be one of the most beautiful motion picture houses of the country; and the program, as originally prepared by Mr. Madden, for some time publicity representative to the management, was admirably adapted to the playhouse and its policy. Of late they have elaborated the publication, so it is not as convenient for the present discussion as it once was; but the original form remains as a conspicuous example of what may be done with a house organ.

It was originally printed in two colors, orange and black or buff and black—varying from week to week—with a good clean face of type selected for its readable qualities, plenty of white space and no ads. The only illustration was a good portrait of some well-known player on the back cover.

The size was about 5 x 7 inches, and there were eight pages. The two middle pages named the various features of the bill, giving a concise description of and an interesting fact concerning each; and the remaining pages were devoted to some pertinent editorial opinion, newsy paragraphs and advance notices.

Now every theatre manager would like to emulate the Stillman theatre in this regard—if he could. But it happens that in smaller institutions the program appropriation is negligible if it exists at all. The program must be there, of course; but it must be self-supporting.

In large cities it is a common thing for printers to pay theatres for the privilege of preparing and circulating their programs. So there must be money in program work. Further than that, it may be said from an actual, first-hand knowledge of the practice, that there is money in the work. Only it must be borne in mind that the metropolitan concerns mentioned print substantially the same program for a large number of theatres, and therefore have a much better proposition to offer advertisers than if they had but one house.

It is not to the purpose here to attempt to give approximate costs of the various items in making up a serviceable paper because of the wide variance in printing costs over the country. However, just as a line on reasonable margin of printers' profits, there will be found an estimate for printing the four-page program illustrated on this and the preceding pages, at the close of this article.

COVER PREPARATION

There are many sound reasons for keeping the cover of a program, however small, free from extraneous advertising. For its best effect, the cover should bear just the name of the theatre, the date of the engagement described inside, and perhaps a slogan used by the management. This affords room for the use of some decorative treatment; and that, too, has been indicated in an accompanying illustration. Probably the chief value of an attractive front cover on a program is the dignity it lends the theatre and the management. Beside that, it aids materially in securing advertisements.

As to advertisements themselves, it will be to the interest of the management to prevent them from outage in lurid appeal. There is nothing that makes a printed program look worse. Indeed, the advertisers themselves will soon appreciate the fact that they do not have to carry on breakneck effort to make the given space for which they have contracted, count.

To accomplish this desirable condition, make up a form which will give the advertiser opportunity to express his name, his business and his address, with perhaps a trade-mark line he uses in all his advertising. Do not permit the use of cuts in the advertising, but make all uniform, much like dignified business cards. You will find that your printer will charge you less for setting up matter of this kind; and the effect will be infinitely better than that of the old plan.

ADVERTISING CHARGES

In preparing the scale of advertising charges, reduce the rate as the space is increased as an inducement to advertisers to take larger places. That is, if an eighth of a page is $4, an entire page would not have to be $24, but, for the reason already given, perhaps $20, the reduction being sufficient inducement to the advertiser to assume the increased cost of larger space. Also, a scale should be worked out whereby those who sign contracts for repeated insertions should pay at a slightly reduced rate.

Fairbanks Red Cross Club

While the Douglas Fairbanks picture, "Wild and Woolly," was being shown at Cline's theatres in Los Angeles during the past two weeks, a Douglas Fairbanks chapter of the Red Cross was inaugurated. Membership to this club is but ten cents, and the dimes may be dropped in the box in charge of a member of the Red Cross in front of the theatre. An attempt is being made to introduce the Fairbanks chapter idea throughout the country, and the appeals sent out from the studio brought many ready responses from exhibitors and exchange men. "Wild and Woolly" was released in Los Angeles one week prior to the national release date to accommodate W. H. Cline, and the picture has had a very successful run, being shown one week at the Auditorium and has just closed the second week at the Broadway. Both houses are owned by the Cline interests.

Hart and the Pennies

A later day public appearance of William S. Hart was last Monday night at the Liberty theatre of Long Beach. Manager O. Hoyt, securing a promise from the popular Western actor that he would visit the theatre, started a penny fund to buy a Western hat to be presented Hart when he was there. The fund grew rapidly and it was possible to secure enough to buy the best beaver Stetson manufactured at a cost of fifty dollars. Hoyt had the Liberty Theatre Red-Head Club serve as a reception committee.

Of Course We Believe You!

Manager H. M. Thomas, of the Strand theatre, Omaha, Neb., has "pulled another one" that is making his home city sit up and take notice. He sent out 10,000 postal cards, put up twenty-four sheets all over the city, ran repeated advertisements, large and small, in the newspapers, all reading simply: "Do you believe in me? H. M. Thomas, manager, Strand."

"My idea was to establish that saying. Now, when I advertise a picture I will put down in the corner of the ad—Do you believe in me?—and I believe the motion picture patrons will come to believe in me.

Molly King in "The On-the-Square Girl"—A Girl's Sacrifice for Her Mother

(Pathe Five-Reel Production.)

Regardless of the nature of the sacrifice, if it be made to bring sunshine into the life of your mother, you can feel assured that few will condemn it. The few who take it upon themselves to do so are fools who do not see the obvious reasons of what they do. Pathé presents Molly King, the heroine of the "Mystery of the Double Cross" series, in a five-part drama, titled "The On-the-Square Girl." Molly King, as Anne Blair, is a model in a fifth avenue modiste shop. A wealthy business man is attentive to her and she accepts his favors that she might give her mother all that spells happiness. Her mother dies and Anne is summoned to the hospital. The region where she has been confined is an invalid. Her mother taken from her, she becomes disconsolate and wanders listlessly in the open country. (Blueday Five-Reel Production.) The ground. Richard Steel (Donald Hall), an artist, finds her in the snow and takes her in his carriage to where she recovers. He wants her to stay, but she refuses and he allows her to return to Brockton, the business man, to whom she is engaged. Brockton comes to demand why Steel has taken her to the Dickinson. (Blueday Five-Reel Production.) He is told that the marriage is annulled and that Anne Blair is no longer his wife. Brockton learns that Anne is there. The climax which follows is a revelation and you will feel like applauding "The On-the-Square Girl." Theatre on—of—week.

"The Innocent Sinner," with Miriam Cooper
Story of a Girl's Fight to Come Back

( Foo Five- Reel Production.)

Miriam Cooper, prominently cast in "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Honor System," is seen in "The Innocent Sinner." Cooper is Miss Mary. K. A. Walsh, "The Innocent Sinner," tells one of the most remarkable stories of the century. Miss Mary consults the part of Mary Ellen, whose young life has been spent in a small town. Walter Benton (Jas O'Grady) a morose, loathsome and unnatural life. Ms. Cooper cooperates with her and the pretense of marrying her, induces her to go to the city. Once in the city Mary Ellen is placed under the care of a respectable woman of the community. The gay life is followed by Benton, and he meets with an untimely death and Mary Ellen is left alone. Three years later, the case and Mary are free. From this time on the story deals with a girl's fight to live down the circumstances of her early life, to succeed in the world, and to win the love of a good man. The story is a magnificent one and Miss Cooper does a splendid work. Many actresses could. In support of her are attractive acting in the part of the young woman, William E. Parsons, Johnny Reese and Jennie Lee. The story was written by Mary Symon. At a production under the direction of K. A. Walsh.

Mr. Cooper will be seen at the theatre in "The Innocent Sinner" on—of—week.

a town in the Klondyke region would not be complete. In this hall you will see the strong, human side of life. The boys, who make their own laws, brutal men devoid of all humanities. To this country comes Barbara Henri- dson (Myrtle Griffith) to find her brother. She is told that he has been killed. She plans to find all the lawless men due to the striking gold news. The climax will thrill with every action registered on the screen in the presence of the audience.

"The Greater Lover," with Myrtle Griffith and George Nelson in the principal roles, will be shown at the Palace on—of—week. It is something different.

Famous Impersonator of Character Parts

Joe Welch, Seen in "The Peddler"

( Art Dramas Five- Reel Production.)

Joe Welch, the famous impersonator of Jewish character roles, will be seen on the screen of the Palace in "The Peddler," adapted from the play by Hal Reid and produced by the Art Dramas' program. Mr. Welch is known for his portrayal of the character. The East Side Jew is presented in the screen drama with such naturalness of life. Abraham Jacobs, known as the Peddler has saved his money and opened a clothing store. His son in law is a lawyer and the gay life gets him into serious trouble. To pay his debts and start a business the Peddler, Sammy, the son, robs his father's home. Abraham inherits his famous fortune but he is unsatisfied and lonely. He has not seen his son since the night that he robbed the safe. There is a pathetic touch given the character of the Peddler in this photodrama which will reach the hearts of all. A human story told in a most human way, it finds its way to the hearts of the most unimpassioned.

Abraham Jacobs has been characteized on the stage for years and the role always pleases. You have the opportunity of seeing the drama on the screen with the principal character impersonated by none better than Joe Welch. In support of Mr. Welch are Sidney Mason, Catherine Cailet, Kittie Ketchin and Sally Crute. Joe Welch in "The Peddler," at the Palace on—of—week.

Bryant Washburn, with Hazel Daly, in Another "Skinny" Laugh—"Skinny's Baby"

( K-B-S Five- Reel Production.)

A boy with a good name "Skinny," "Skinny's Baby," gives rise to great expectations and then the truth is a girl. Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly are in another comedy drama dealing with the life of Skinny, the character Mr. Welch used in his "The Peddler." Famous in his "Skinner's Dress Suit," which was pronounced the highest fashion by the Brussels fashion dramas ever shown on the screen. This time Skinny has been a boy and a girl who has been dressed up to be a man, and, like all fathers, his mind is firmly set on a boy. When Honey, his baby girl, is born the new baby he alas has his happiness to "run wild" and great preparations are made for the arrival of the boy. The bookkeeper is shown visiting his daughter and him that he is the proud father of a boy. Skinny returns to his minister and one day looks forward to the happy event. He is at the house when he is informed by a phone that "William," Skinner Jr., has arrived. He rushes out to the aid of his son and finds the baby boy has known toy-guns, hobby horses and everything a baby could wish and rushes home to greet his son. The audience is pleased to know that Skinner is a good sport, however, and he decides to take care that the boys of the town, under the flowers in May," and together they prepare to make the baby girl's existence one round of happiness and their own lives are filled brimful of the same.

Bryant Washburn and Hazel Daly in another of the famous Skinny dramas, "Skinny's Baby," will be seen at the—of— of—week.

Earle Williams in Clever Mystery Drama,
"The Stolen Treaty"—Corinne Griffith in Support

( Vitagraph Five- Reel Production.)

If you enjoy mystery in all its fascinating turns you will enjoy "The Stolen Treaty," a Vitagraph production featuring Earle Williams as Mr. Griffith, Mr. Williams enacts the role of a service man who is set upon by the Prince who has been a favorite of the State. He is the favorite of the State's office. He attends a brilliant reception at the palace and through the door of the great avenue, in a colonial costume and there meets Prince Xat, the honored guest. While there he is shown the Stolen Treaty and is invited to meet the Princess, a gateway to the court and appointment with a lieutenant of the Prince and is taken home by the Princess, the daughter of the city, where he is confronted by three men in plain clothes. He refuses to sign the request made by the men and from that time on there is enacted a mystery drama which literally sweeps fast and complexly. Miss Griffith, in the role of Miss MacBeth, is taken into the scheme to capture the one who had stolen the bonds. She acts with such cleverness that the Prince, who is di- guised, thereby keeping his real identity from her, is lead into a cleverly conceived trap. The Prince is made to deliver the papers and Wayne, the detective and furry are handed together with other intentions than to ferret out mystery.

Earle Williams and Corinne Griffith, his new leading lady, are seen in an interesting mystery story, "The Stolen Treaty," at the theatre on—of—week.

with the confidence born of experience and enact a story on the screen with thoroughness for their role. For this, we demand the co-operation of actors to duplicate. They are visiting at a summer season with those of the most angelic children in the world in the eyes of their mothers. But they are not idolized. They are not these "angelic children" are mischievous "kids" of the world of the stage and screen. Of events at the hotel at which they are staying are described in the report. But a solid tone of the "bucket" full. The boys (Lancaster, Bebe Daniels, Nina sandy, and Mark) are a group of "bad men" enter the hotel bent upon robbery. Jane and Catherine Lee, the Fox Kids, are the two immature and there is much excitement and there is trouble in "buckets" full. Black Bart (Leland Churchill) is a man, according to a victim of the "love at first sight "microbe" and his "bad" girl "wish" innocent little one around the room of pleasure—for the kids. Douglas Fairbanks Plans a New Production Schedule

Douglas Fairbanks and his director, John Emerson, have decided on a production schedule to include four distinct types of screen plays. Joseph Henaberry is to alternate with Emerson in staging the Fairbanks-Arctarca plays.

Fairbanks gives considerable thought to what is commonly termed "the pulse of the public." He believes by combining a good story with a striking characterization, it will be more to the advantage of the Douglas Fairbanks Pictures Corporation than simply exploiting his personality and sacrificing the story and production.

It is Fairbanks's intention to start with a farce of the "In Again—Out Again" variety, followed by a light comedy, an essay and a romantic comedy-drama.

In this manner it is believed the public will not have a chance to tire of any one of his selected kinds of stories, because each release, it is promised, will be different and spaced at such intervals that they are bound to prove great success.

Metro-Yorke Retakes "The Hidden Spring"

The Metro-Yorke picturization of Clarence B. Kelland's novel, "The Hidden Spring," is the next picture in which Harold Lockwood will be seen on the Metro Program, the release date being July 16.

This picture, originally filmed at the Metro-Yorke Studio in California several months ago, while Fred J. Balshofer, the president and producing director, was in New York, had been scheduled for release before "The Haunted Pajama," but it was found on Balshofer's return to California that the picture did not measure up to the usual Metro-Yorke standard.

Three-quarters of the picture was therefore retaken, and while the additional outlay of money may represent a total loss from a financial standpoint, this course was deemed better than releasing a film of mediocre quality. It is now described as equal in quality to other Metro-Yorke productions.

Supporting role are Vera Sisson, Lester Cuncio, Harry F. Crane, Arthur Millette and William Chifford.

Romaine Fielding Stars in "For Liberty"

Romaine Fielding, two years a director, and before that with Lubin and World Film, is filmed in "For Liberty," E. K. Lincoln is co-star. Most of the scenes were filmed in Canada. Mr. Fielding also looked after the staging.

Captain Edward Bower Hesser, who wrote the story, was in the American Legion. Mr. Fielding who is interested in "For Liberty," was in Canada.

Five Special Productions on Selznick Fall Program

"The Lone Wolf," "Poppy," "The Lesson" and two other special productions are Selznick pictures for Fall release. The added productions will include "Firebly," the vehicle for Eva Tanguay's debut on the screen, and a Rita Jolivet feature to show the sinking of the Lusitania.

It is announced by Selznick that the offering as a whole forms the most imposing array of attractions that have come from this organization.

"The Lone Wolf," now running at the Broadway, is described as a heart-and-soul melodrama and "equal to several pictures rolled into one." It is a Herbert Brenon production. As he is now busy on "The Fall of the Romanoffs," he will have no other Selznick picture until late in the Fall.

Norma Talmadge has finished "The Moth"—in fact, it was ready, with cutting and titles complete, before "Poppy" was released. Selznick states that "Poppy" is breaking the records of "Panther" and "The Law of Compensation," and on this account "The Moth" was deliberately held back.

"In the Moth" Miss Talmadge appears for the first time since she joined the Selznick forces as a comrade Hatton, Waywoman, and the gowns which she wears in the production will establish her as one of the best dressed women on the screen or stage.

Constance Talmadge in "The Lesson," directed by Charles Gilby, has youth, beauty and vivacity on her side. The Selznick prediction is she will leap into popularity.

The five attractions will be distributed to the Selznick exchanges in September, the only exception being "The Lone Wolf," which is being specially booked for ten pre-release runs simultaneously in August.

Paramount Lists Its First Plays for Selective Booking

"The Varmint," "Hashimuro Togo" and "Little Miss Optimist" are first productions under the new Paramount "Star Series" selective booking plan.

Owen Johnson's Lawrenceville stories included "The Varmint," adaptation being by Gardner Hunting. Theodore Roberts is "The Roman," an important role, and Jack Pickford the effervescent and "too fresh young man" is married to Louise Huff, a pretty and vivacious daughter of the Roman, nothing more terrible than a Latin teacher with an uncanny ability to forestall boyish strategies.

One of the famous schools of the country was used for a setting.

The production was staged at the Mexican Studios and directed by William H. Taylor.

The Japanese play is, of course, adapted from one of Wallace Irwin's Japanese schoolboy stories. William C. DeMille took up the direction in person. Sessue Hayakawa stars in the semi-dramatic skit, while Mr. Irwin's Nipponese adorn the titles. Margaret Loomis in the cast proves to be Luluwa Waipahu, who supported Hayakawa in "The Bottle Imp." Others are Tom Forman, Raymond Hatton, Walter Long, Ernest Joy, Mabel Van Buren and Florence Vidor.

Marian Fairfax prepared the script for the screen.

Gardner Hunting wrote "Little Miss Optimist," especially for Vivian Martin. In a part of the story she is a little waif, as she was in "The Right Direction." In other respects her role is entirely different from anything she has done. Robert Thoburn supervised the staging of the picture to be released late in August.

Tom Moore, who recently appeared opposite Mac Murray in "The Primrose Ring"; Charles West, Ernest Joy and Helen Bray, also in previous releases of Paramount Pictures, are in the cast with Miss Martin.

Crane Wilbur in "Eye of Envy" on Art Dramas Release Soon

EXHIBITORS using the Art Dramas program will get release of the "Eye of Envy," with Crane Wilbur, a David Horley production, immediately following "When You and I Were Young," starring Alma Hahon.

It was at first planned to start the Crane Wilbur features late in Summer or in the Fall.

The story is allegorical, with Ambition taken by Mr. Wilbur, Avarice by Jode Mullahly and Innocence depicted by Gene Crosby. Harrish Ingraham directs the production. The story is by J. Francis Dunbar.

Almost every mode of existence is touched by the hero of the story, from the lowest to the highest, and in each environment he is forced to adapt himself to conditions around him, so that the task of the actor is an extremely difficult one.

Some remarkable night photography is said to have been introduced into the picture by the director, adding scenic beauty to dramatic worth. One scene shows a dense wood at midnight, during a storm, when the lightning is doing its wholesale work of destruction. Those who have seen the picture say that this scene is a masterpiece of atmosphere and realistic to a surprising degree.

The supporting role is well taken by Mr. Wilbur in "Eye of Envy," was selected with care. Among the players are Lillian Webster, Edgar Sherrod, Julia Jackson and F. A. Thompson.
William Farnum to Star in Foxfilm Play, "The Conqueror"

William Farnum, Foxfilm star, it is announced, will have the leading role in "The Conqueror," for release in September. It is described as a massive and thrilling photo-dramatic romance, based on the life of one of America's frontier heroes—General Sam Houston, of Texas.

R. A. Walsh, producer of "The Honor System," directed the production. Several thousand Indians and Mexicans and herds of cattle were used. The battle scenes required a hundred cannon.

The love story in the play is described as of infinite charm. The Fox announcement says the dramatic action builds to a big climax.

Two Dramas, Two Comedies and "Cub" on Mutual Program

Mary Miles Minter leads Mutual's schedule for the week of July 23 in "Melissa of the Hills," a five-reel drama laid in the feudal belt of Tennessee. Mary plays the role of the "angel daughter" of the circuit rider.

On the same date Mutual will release the first chapter of "The Great Stanley Secret," a two-chapter drama. William Russell plays the leading role with Charlotte Burton as his leading woman. The chapter is entitled "The Gypsy's Trust" and is in four reels.

Mary Miles Minter's box-office value is said to have risen rapidly as the result of a series of productions and under the influence of Mutual's aggressive advertising and publicity policy.

"Melissa of the Hills" follows "Periwinkle," which was laid in a life-saving station on the Pacific coast, a decided contrast from her new release. The production was made by the American Film Company, Inc., under the direction of James Kirkwood.

"The Great Stanley Secret" is in eight reels—two-four-reel chapters. It is a drama of intrigue and love, with "Big Bill" Russell in the leading role. The first episode opens with a railroad wreck scene, said to be of great realism and pretentious proportions. The action is fast and snappy.

Two comedies will be released on the schedule of July 23, "A Match in Quarantine," a one-reel LaSalle on July 24 and "Red, White and Blew," a one-reel "cub" featuring George Ovey, scheduled for the screen on July 26.

Mutual Tours Around the World, Gaumont's one-reel travel picture, is released July 24.

Hurrying Work on Vitagraph Serial, "The Fighting Trail"

The finishing touches are being put on the last episodes of "The Fighting Trail," a new serial, at the Vitagraph plant in Hollywood. Artists at the company's studio in Brooklyn are rushing work on the titles, for the earlier episodes, at the same time.

The story was written by Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady and J. Stuart Blackton, and centers around the hunt for a lost mine which is known to contain an ingredient almost priceless in the manufacture of explosives.

The mine is the property of a girl, portrayed by Carol Holloway, and she is aided in its recovery by a young mining engineer, played by William Duncan.

Duncan, former professional athlete and wrestling partner of Sandow, will become known as the greatest athlete and fighting man on the screen, so Vitagraph says.

Signal Films First Episode of "The Lost Express"

The entire first episode of the new Signal Film Corporation serial, "The Lost Express," with Helen Holmes, to be released through Mutual Exchanges has been completed. J. P. McGowan numbers among his players Leo Maloney, Thomas Lingham, William Brunton, Will Chapman, W. A. Behrens, Andrew Waldron, Al Smith and Edward Hearn.

The first episode of the story lays before the public the mysterious disappearance of an entire express train while passing from one station to the next on a single track line, with no switches or cut-offs en route.

The express train, loaded with most astounding inventions, pulls out of one station, and fails to arrive at the next, but eight miles distant.

The date for release will be in September.

First Independent Production of Irving Cummings Ready

The first Irving Cummings picture in which the star appears under his own banner is now being cut by Director A. O. Huhn, and will probably be ready for a trade showing this week. Mr. Huhn is greatly pleased with the feature and says it is satisfactory to the degree of fulfilling his expectations.

The story, told in five reels, is laid in the Canadian North Woods, and has Mr. Cummings in the part of a trapper. Ruth Sinclair appears opposite the star. A second picture will be begun.

Bryant Washburn's Three Plays Reported Booking Well

Bryant Washburn's three Essanay features are reported by K-E-S-E. to be going well. They are:

"Filling His Own Shoes," which shows an American shoe clerk in a Turkish harem, and is now invading small towns;

Marion Davies and Scenes from Her First Feature, "Runaway Romany" (Lederer)
Interesting Mutual Scenes

Mutual's current release of "Tours Around the World," its Gaumont one-reel feature, is set for July 24. It takes the audience to Kairawan, sacred city of Tunisia, first.

Next, Prague, ancient capital of Bohemia, and "The Dauphines," in southeastern France, are visited by the tourist. View the screen route.

Mutual Weekly, the news reel, is released July 25. It contains current events up to within a few hours of release date.

McGraw of Giants in "One Touch of Nature"

John J. McGraw of the Giants has a rather important role in "One Touch of Nature," released through George Kleine's K-E-S-E organization July 30. This, it is said, will be an asset to exhibitors who book the picture.

"One Touch of Nature" was written by Peter B. Kyne for the Saturday Evening Post. The picture was made at the Edison studios.

John Drew Bennett, a godson of John Drew, the famous actor, is the star, and the feminine lead is by Violet Cain.

Pathe Releases Several Gladys Hulette Pictures

Pathe released "The Cigarette Girl," with Gladys Hulette, on July 8, and is to release "The Last of the Carnabys," July 22, and "The Streets of Illusion," August 12. The last-named play is by Philip Bartholomae as was "The Cigarette Girl." Besides Gladys Hulette in the cast of "The Streets of Illusion" are William Parke, Jr., J. H. Gilmour, Richard Barthelmes, who was Marguerite Clarke's leading man, Doris Grey, Kathryn Adams and the child actor, Gerald Budgley.

Pathe's Drama, Two Serials and Scenics—July 29

OLLIE KING in a feature directed by George Fitzmaurice, Pearl White in an episode of her "Fatal Ring" serial and Ruth Roland in a chapter of "The Neglected Wife" are features of Pathe's program for July 29, in addition to two issues of the Hearst-Pathe News which at the present time is claimed by exhibitors to outrace any five-reel feature.

"The On-the-Square Girl" is the title of Mollie King's five-reel Gold Rooster play, produced by the Astra Film Corporation under the direction of George Fitzmaurice and written by Ouida Bergere. The supporting cast includes L. Rogers Lytton, Aimee Dalmores, Donald Hall and Ernest Lawford.

Pearl White appears in "The Warning on the Ring," the fourth chapter of "The Fatal Ring" serial. Carslake determines to secure the Violet Diamond, but Pearl with the aid of her pet dog cleverly eludes him. The end of the episode has "carry-over" interest to the next. "The Fatal Ring" is called "another 'Iron Claw.'"

"Emibittered Love" is the title of the twelfth episode of "The Neglected Wife" serial, in which Ruth Roland is starred. This chapter is marked by the attempt of the veiled woman to kill Horace Kennedy after she has sent to Mary Kennedy the following note: "Your husband visited the other woman's apartment this afternoon. Remember he ruined my life and I am going to punish him."

The seventeenth release of the "Know America" Combitone scencis is entitled "Eastern Texas." The release shows scenes of Galveston, the immense sea wall that protects the city from the ravages of storms, scenes in Dallas, the largest cotton gin in the world and views of the state fairgrounds.

An International cartoon and scenic split-reel release and Hearst-Pathe News No. 62 and No. 63 complete the program.

Ince Will Direct, and Arctraft Release, W. S. Hart Plays

Preparations are well under way for the production of the initial Hart-Arctraft photoplay on the West Coast. Studio arrangements have been completed, so actual screening can be commenced promptly. William S. Hart, to set at rest certain rumors, as he says, has issued this statement:

"I expect to start work within a week on the first production to be released by the William S. Hart Producing Company. The story was written especially for me by C. Gardner Sullivan and will be supervised by the distinguished producer, Thomas H. Ince, and released by him through the Arctraft Pictures Corporation.

"All of my future productions will be released in this manner, contradictory reports notwithstanding. It has taken me some time to effect my present happy alliance, and I am sure that under Mr. Ince's supervision and on the Arctraft program the greater portion of the public will have an opportunity to see my productions."

Arctraft adds another big film celebrity to its roster, which includes Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Geraldine Farrar, Elsie Ferguson, D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Cecil B. De Mille.

Fox Release, "The Innocent Sinner," With Miriam Cooper

"The Innocent Sinner," R. A. Walsh production, is the next release on the Fox program. It follows "To Honor and Obey," and is said to somewhat resemble "The Regeneration."

Miss Cooper's pictures for William Fox, all of which have been produced under Mr. Walsh's direction, have proved unsual attractions.

Scenes in New George Backer, Foursquare Production and the Stars, Ruth Roland and Milton Sils through the medium of its exchanges, Triangle during the past month has been feeling the pulse of the public in regard to how the various players, directors and stories were valued. By the reports the company has been able to set a fair valuation on its component parts. For the most part, it is said, gratifying words have been received, and whatever few changes will be made will be merely to further improve the producing organization.

An official of Triangle last week said: "We have issued no boasts as to what we intended to do in the future. We prefer to deal in concrete terms rather than visions and prophecies. At the present time we have all our August productions on the shelves ready to be issued at prescribed dates, and virtually every player, director and cameraman who has contributed distinguished service in the past is now at work on productions to be released in September and October. Each of these artists will be given greater scope for expression and will not be stinted the funds for perfecting the output."

"The month of July has been one of the most notable in the history of Triangle. We point to 'The Flame of the Yukon,' produced under the sole direction of Charles Miller from an original story by Monte M. Katterjohn. All concerned in creating this masterpiece are now engaged on others which will prove quite as meritorious."

"Sudden Jim,' not only one of the most widely read stories of the day, but also one of the most convincing pictures of American life, will be released on July 22, with Charles Ray in the title-role. We guarantee the box-office value of this picture. It was produced under the sole direction of Victor L. Schertzinger, to whom credit is due for a large share of the success of 'The Pinch Hitter,' 'The Millionaire Vagrant' and 'The Clodhopper.'"

"A Sawdust Ring,' a story of circus life by L. V. Jefferson, has just been passed on by our executive board, and we are urging exhibitors to view it in advance that they may advertise it to the full extent justified. Bessie Love in this picture proves a revelation, and the work of the supporting players is scarcely less noteworthy."

"In Slumberland,' a kiddie feature starring little Theda Saltz, will be released on the program of July 29. Every assistance has been given Director Irvin Willatt in staging the play with elaborate scenic effects.

"Borrowed Plumeage,' starring Bessie Barriscale, has already been reviewed by the critics in our projection room. Thus we do not need to waste any recommendations upon it. We are willing to refer exhibitors and fans to these reviews.

"The stars on the Triangle Program for August include Olive Thomas, Louise Glau, Bessie Barriscale, Bessie Love, William Desmond, Enid Bennett, Wilfred Lytell, Elda Millar, Jack Devereaux and Veta Searl."

U.S. Military Aeroplane Pictures by Universal

Universal Screen Magazine has obtained government permission to make films of the preparations in progress to enable Uncle Sam to assume an air-supreme role. The pictures are in early release.

It has come to be realized by military experts, and in fact every one who has followed the developments in the war, that the national which assumes air supremacy will win the war, and at the rate Uncle Sam is constructing them, we soon shall be supreme in this branch! The subject is presented exhaustively, very detail, from the roughing out of the struts to the varnishing of the propeller, is shown and comprehensively explained in the following illustrations.

Eddie Polo Signs Two-Year Universal Contract

Eddie Polo has signed a new two years' contract with Universal. He has been in "Graft," "The Broken Coin," "Liberty" and "The Gray Ghost," Universal's latest serial, now being released.

Polo joined the stock company at Universal City two seasons ago and is rated by them one of the favorite "strong men" of the screen. An Italian by birth, he has appeared before the public continuously from babyhood. At two years of age he drew a regular salary for walking on his hands and at seven he was an accomplished acrobat and high diver. He was with Barmum and Bailey for seventeen years.

Mutual Has Comedy-Drama,

JACKIE SAUNDERS heads Mutual's schedule for the week of July 16 in "Betty Be Good," a five reel comedy-drama. "Betty Be Good" was produced by E. D. Horkheimer. It marks the re-
Foxhounds, Props and Cartoon in Bray Pictograph

Aristocratic foxhounds from the finest kennels in America are shown in training in the current Paramount-Bray Pictograph No. 77. Fox-hunting with dogs is a historic sport, dating back almost to the time the first wild dog was tamed.

An allegorical cartoon shows a little girl playing with a doll called "Carelessness," while a rat named "Waste" runs away with the piece of cake the child lays in a chair and forgets. Finally a cat, "Food Control," kills the rat. Mr. Hoover, food administrator, is said to like the picture.

In "The Land of Make Believe" picture patrons will see intimate views of the actual constructions of stage settings and the use of "props" and "effects."

Gaumont Weekly Shows Our "Sammies" at the Front

Gaumont Mutual Weekly, No. 133, has pictures of a regiment of Americans reaching the front in France. That they are close to first line trenches is plain from their care in adjusting gas masks. In every theatre where the reel is shown cheers may be expected. The tri-color goes up side by side with the stars and stripes.

Another picture shows the use of carrier pigeons from the front. Even new electrical devices have not displaced the birds. Other pictures show the Russian mission in New York, the canal opening at Seattle, the fire department carnival, New York and California beauties in bathing suits.

Bray-Pictograph Drafted by the Government

To Carry War Propaganda of Federal Departments Through the Animated Picture Form to Millions—Production Speed Doubled

The Bray Studios, Inc., at the outset of the present war were among the first to tender their services to President Wilson. As a result the Paramount-Bray Pictograph will serve as a means toward assisting many of the important governmental departments in carrying their stories in pictures to the millions who comprise the weekly audiences of this release.

Probably no single line of motion picture production has advanced during the past year so rapidly in possible magnitude as the "screen magazine." It is hardly two years since the initial issue of the Paramount-Pictograph first screen magazine was released. While at first it met with but little encouragement, yet to-day it stands as one of the most sought-for and widely circulated single reels distributed in this country.

The animated cartoon was exactly the thing to lend humor and in January of this year the production of the Paramount Pictograph was turned over to the Bray Studios, Inc., who are now producing it. No little credit for the decidedly greater circulation now enjoyed is due to the fact that one of the famous Bray Cartoons forms a part of each weekly release.

The difficulty imposed on the producer is apparent when it is realized that in the course of a year no less than 208 separate subjects must be conceived, put into scenario form, edited, photographed, titled and assembled. For the purpose of carrying on this enterprise the Bray Studios, Inc., have established a staff of editors, directors and cameramen under the direct charge of William O. Hurst, whose experience dates back to the early days of the Pictograph, and he has been a prominent figure in screendom ever since.

Educational Films Are Coming Into Their Own—E. W. Hammons

The new scenic or educational reel is coming into its own, according to E. W. Hammons, vice-president of the Educational Films Corporation of America. Mr. Hammons discussed the history and progress of these special reels. He said:

"You ask me if I am seeing daylight. I answer that I am not seeing it yet, but I can take a field glass and see it just over the hill. We have spared neither time nor money in making pictures, and have often spent more money on a one-reel subject than is spent on a five-reel production. We have spent money that we knew it would be impossible to get back, but we have done so to 'educate' the public and exhibitor to what really could be done with a one-reel educational picture, when the company producing it was specializing in this class of productions.

"Two years ago our pictures could only be seen in New York state, while today they are being shown in every state in the Union, as well as a great many foreign countries. It won't be long before the educational field will pay any one who goes into it in the right way, and will produce the kind of pictures that will not be known as 'chasers,' and is willing to spend thousands upon thousands of dollars for a few years without any immediate returns—and can stand this expense to produce a library of films worth while.

"A few years ago, the educational or scenic picture was used only by the exhibitor as a 'chaser.' This was due to the fact that the scenic were of buildings, etc., over and over again. A hundred feet of film was shown that should have been ten feet. They were called scenes or educational, depending upon which was preferred, while the audiences called them 'boring' and the exhibitors 'chasers.' "The new scenic or educational is coming into its own. They have a connected story and a reason. We now put in as much thought and study on a one-reel scenic or educational as the average company puts in on a five-reel feature. They are carefully thought out and planned. And they are carefully cut and edited in the projection room."

Universal Cameraman Gets Snap of Falling Car

Several topics of unusual news and pictorial effect are covered in the 80th issue of the Universal Animated Weekly, which has recently doubled its circulation among first-run exhibitors.

One of the most striking scenes shows the recent elevated railway wreck in Brooklyn in which twenty-nine people were injured, while forty more miraculously escaped.

The camera-reporter of the Animated Weekly happened to be near at hand when the accident occurred, and succeeded in getting a picture of one of the cars falling to the street.

This sensational incident has aroused much interest on the part of the city officials of Greater New York; and it is said that the Public Service Commission has been given private showings of the reel in the course of their inquiry into the causes of the wreck.

A series of remarkable views taken at an American aviation camp shows one of our new scout aeroplanes in action. This is the smallest and fastest air-motor that has yet been made.
Des Moines Exchangemen Disagree with Goldburg—Naturally
Look Upon Their City as a Center

A s would probably be expected, state rights dealers of Omaha, Neb., do not agree with Jesse J. Goldburg, Motion Picture News contributor, in his report that a realignment of this territory is necessary, making Des Moines the state rights headquarters for Iowa and Nebraska. The dealers agree, however, that something is radically wrong in the business.

Manager Max Winthrop of the Fontenelle Feature Film Company, owner of a long string of high-class state rights pictures, did not hesitate to give his opinion of what is wrong.

"The theatres are not fair," was his complaint. "There is not a big downtown house in Omaha, Lincoln or the Iowa cities that will pay a reasonable price for a super-picture, enabling us to put on the advertising campaign that will win us business with the smaller houses throughout the state. Iowa cities are better than those in Nebraska. I go to a big downtown house in Omaha and am offered $75 for three nights.

"A state rights dealer must expect to make enough in the first ten or twelve big towns and cities to pay for his picture for that state. Then what he makes by hard work in the smaller towns is his profit. This profit, even on our best pictures, is nothing near what it should be.

"We need theatre competition. I would like to see some big new houses in all these Iowa and Nebraska cities. More than that, I would like to see some of these Eastern state rights men come into these states, where there is a big chance to make money, and teach these exhibitors what it is to show a state rights picture and do it properly.

"I was in Dubuque, Ia., one of the big motion picture cities of the state, and found the biggest house charging 5 and 10 cents for a program including Charley Chaplin and "Patricia." That is hard on the business.

"The downtown exhibitor in Omaha will show the picture, but he won't pay for it. We got Exhibitor Shirley of the Muse, a suburban house in Omaha, to show 'The Witching Hour.' He made a big thing of it; it was well advertised, but the exhibitor out in the state wondered why we didn't show it at the principal downtown houses. They wouldn't pay enough to make it worth while, as was the reason."

Manager Winthrop is confident of the future of Nebraska and Iowa as state rights fields. He also owns Missouri and Kansas rights to some of his larger pictures. "The Witching Hour" and "The Unwritten Law" are working solid, he said.

He has another complaint: Just before the United States went into the war his company bought a certain war picture, which, he says, is one of the best pictures out. Only it pictures a terrible side of war, and would be bitterly censored just now as an argument against war—therefore it lies on the shelves, a loss, he says.

"The Warrior." With "Maciste," is Ready for Showing

Memories of the first "two-dollar motion picture" and Cabiria's memorable six months' run at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York City, will be revived when, through Harry Raver, who so successfully launched the famous D'Annunzio-Itala production, its successor, "The Warrior," by the same maker, makes its initial bow to America. The star in the picture is "Maciste," the herculean marvel of "Cabiria."

When it is remembered that in 1910 Itala produced the first great spectacle, "The Fall of Troy," and that three years later "Cabiria," with an actual quarter of a million dollars represented in its production cost, gave encouragement to American producers to make expensive pictures, it is natural to assume that "The Warrior" will prove another Itala success.

Produced under the sanction and with the co-operation of the Italian Government "The Warrior" reveals the difficulties of the Italian front as a background for a story dealing with the present war, "Maciste" as an Alpine soldier being the central figure, surrounded by a large cast, prominent among whom are many well-known stars of "Cabiria."

Zambreno Secures Three Subjects for Illinois

Frank Zambreno, who has spent the last two weeks in New York purchasing state rights for his territory, has concluded an agreement by which the Unity Photoplays Company becomes exclusive distributor of the Ivan features, "Her Surrender," "Two Men and a Woman," and the new Ivan feature, "Babbling Tongues," in the State of Illinois.

Mr. Zambreno remarked that in his opinion Ivan Pictures were among the most remarkable box-office attractions he had ever seen. His visits to the various theatres in New York City where Ivan productions are shown, convinced him of this fact.

Mr. Zambreno was especially impressed with "Babbling Tongues," directed by William Humphrey. Mr. Zambreno stated that he contemplates exploiting this feature on an elaborate scale. He proposes to give it an extended run at one of the best downtown theatres of Chicago.

Piedmont Closes Deals for 10 Foreign Countries

The Piedmont Pictures Corporation, which recently absorbed the Hawk Film Company, has moved from 1600 Broadway, to Room 1002, the Godfrey building, 729 Seventh avenue, New York City.

The activities of the company have been extended over considerable foreign territory. The company recently closed contracts for the "Jimmy Dale" series, made by the Monmouth Film Corporation, and will market the subject in Spain, Portugal, India, Burma, Ceylon, Porto Rico and the Dutch East Indies.

The Piedmont Company has also closed with the Fox Film Corporation for its subjects, to be sold in Chile, Peru and Bolivia.

Oregon, Washington and Western Montana, Inclusive of Butte, Northern Idaho, Exclusive of Boise, Should be Grouped as One Division—California Should be Split

Jesse J. Goldburg, special exploitation and service manager of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, in a recent report, on the state rights situation, appearing exclusively in Motion Picture News, have attracted wide attention, giving his views in this issue on the conditions in the North-west and in California. His next and last article in the series will cover the state rights field in the South.—ED. NOTE.

A THOROUGH investigation as to the number of cities and towns, inhabitants, railway passenger and freight services, and conditions of booking and exploitation of photoplays, justifies my stating that the final geographical division of the state rights territory in the North-west should be the states of Oregon and Washington, with western Montana, inclusive of Butte; northern Idaho, exclusive of Boise. And although Seattle, Washington, is but six hours from Portland, Oregon, nevertheless, a branch exchange in one city, with the main exchange in another, is justified.

The exchanges hereabout seem to have anticipated my investigation of conditions largely because of the wide interest taken in the full detail of proper territorial division of state rights territory from the propaganda instituted by Motion Picture News.

This is, indeed, an ideal picture territory. The people are devoted photoplay patrons. The exchanges work in a thorough spirit of cooperation, with no antagonism or cut-throat competition. This applies particularly to the independent or state rights exchanges.

The theatres in Portland and Seattle are houses of ideal entertainment. The exteriors are quaintly ornamented and attractively decorated. Emphasis seems to have been made by the managers of the houses to present an inviting exterior and comfortable interior, and a home-like auditorium. Pictures are put on with care and everybody from the ticket seller to the ushers greet you with a smile, and your comfort is immediately taken care of.

The newspapers are intelliengently patronized with advertising, with due amount of publicity, newsy in its form. There is no attempt to make a garish display, but everything is done with an eye toward psychological effect, and it all works like a charm, with the result that afternoon performances are patronized almost as extensively as the evening shows.

There is little or no attempt to belittle the worth of this territory on the part of the state rights buyers, but there are proper endeavors exercised to eradicate the exaggeration of the financial worth of these four states on any particular production.

And there is more showmanship evidenced and a greater knowledge of films and film conditions possessed by state rights buyers, and even motion picture theatre managers, than is apparent in a good many of the other states in the Union. But from my previous visit to the Pacific Coast, I look forward to a continuance of this optimistic situation in California.

If we were permitted to set forth a resume of state rights conditions throughout the country, to California, Arizona and Nevada, I should say that conditions generally as and as a whole leave the impression that the state rights disposition of extraordinary attractions is firmly founded for permanency and this territory merely accentuates the impressions gathered in my visits to the states up to California.

Here, the territorial lines of demarcation leave no room for doubt or cavil. While heretofore producers and state rights men have set the entire state of California with Arizona and Nevada as one territorial allotment, the honest expression of opinion of exchange men is that the territory should be divided as follows:

Northern California, north of Bakersfield, with the State of Nevada as one, and southern California, inclusive of Bakers-field, with the State of Arizona as another separate state rights entity. And this is confirmed by population, express rates, number of theatres, time for shipment, climatic conditions, and even the temperament of the people.

A producer, who has any evil forebodings as to the future of the motion picture industry, would do well to visit San Francisco, or Los Angeles, where optimism born of real endeavor and true showmanship is the order of the day. While, to be sure, we have the "gloomy dispensers" and those who, even though the sun were to shine twenty-four hours out of the day, would see nothing but Stygian darkness, the exchangers who are doing things in this territory do not engage in false discouragement or seek to belittle the state rights value of this territory in order to strike a sharp bargain.

I feel that the columns of Motion Picture News might well contain a brief reference to one or two exchangers who are contributing so much toward the permanent establishment of the exchange end of the industry on a sound basis.

It is indeed a pleasure for a producer and one exploiting state rights attractions to meet such men as Messrs. Mayer and Rosenthal, Ephraim Asher and Mr. Johnston of Turner and Dahnken, all operating from San Francisco, men who are experienced picture men and who contribute ideas of true showmanship to the exploitation of their attractions, and who conduct their business along strict business lines, obeying ethical dictates, and who take the pains to study conditions in their own territory.

All of this contributes to ease and success in which a state rights exploiter so much appreciates and which tends to more satisfactory negotiations all around. Yet there is one or two concerns who still pursue the method of damping a production regardless of its merits and fate, on the theory, only to strike a sharp bargain.

The theatres here are models of efficiency. Every legitimate device is employed to bring the attention of the public to the attraction. Transient trade is not depended upon, but rather a consistent steady patronage of a photoplay loving public. Photoplays are given a longer run on the coast than in other cities of states further east and a week's run is the rule here and not the exception.

In my feeble capacity as service manager for the Frohman Amusement Corporation, I do confess that there is less room here for the employment of any ideas originate with me, looking toward the proper exploitation of a picture, than elsewhere in the territory visited by me.

Producers releasing on a state rights basis have dug deep into this territory and prices have been realized that were unconscionable, but a sane readjustment has taken place, so that to-day there can be no extended barter. A production worth while will find ready release here at a fair and profitable figure.

My next article and the last connected with this tour will deal with the Southern States.

Gersten, Exhibitor, in State Rights Field
Frank Gersten, long identified as an exhibitor, has launched out in the state rights end, and has opened an exchange in the Times building, New York City. He has bought "Redemption," with Evelyn Nesbit and the great Russell and Lucas, for Northern New Jersey. A few days after making the purchase he bought for the same territory George Loane Tucker's, "I Believe." Mr. Gersten is now negotiating for a number of other attractions.
Twenty-Three States Sold for "Sinister"

Hoffman, Who Gets Control from Hall, Disposes of More Territory for "Her Fighting Chance"

Through the acquiring of another large block of territory for "The Bar Sinister," by M. H. Hoffman, it became known that twenty-three states have now been sold by Frank Hall, who controls the world rights for the first Edgar Lewis's special production.

The territory disposed of includes New York, New England, New Jersey, and the Middle South, including Delaware, Virginia, Maryland and District of Columbia in the East, while Illinois, Michigan, Indiana, Kentucky, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, California, Nevada, and Arizona are also among the states that have been taken. This leaves open Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, Louisiana, Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, and Utah.

State rights for Jane Grey in "Her Fighting Chance" have also been disposed of rapidly. M. H. Hoffman again being prominent among the men who have acquired the rights to this subject. While negotiations are now pending for additional states, New England, New York, New Jersey, the Middle South, and the Middle West have all been sold in a remarkably short time.

The rapidity with which territory for these two features is being bought, in spite of the summer season, is, according to Frank Hall, conclusive proof of the excellent condition of the market. "My experience while dealing with exchange men regarding the rights for 'The Bar Sinister' and 'Her Fighting Chance' added to the daily reports coming into my office from my other enterprises such as the Civilization Film Corporation, booking special pictures in New Jersey, the U. S. theatre, Hoboken; the Criterion theatre, Atlantic City, lead me to believe we are entering upon an exceptionally prosperous season, and I am laying my plans accordingly," said Mr. Hall. "The state rights buying exchanges are justified in preparing for a banner year and producers with special pictures of real merit well produced and with good, strong stories, are making no trouble disposing of them at a legitimate profit."

Advertising Helps for "Who's Your Neighbor?"

Herman Becker, general manager of the Master Drama Features, Inc., New York City, announces the preparation of a complete line of advertising extras and money-drawing magnets for "Who's Your Neighbor?"

The Otis Lithograph Company has been contracted with for the printing of a large number of one-sheet, three-sheet, six-sheet and twenty-four sheet lithographs in four colors, four subjects to each size. In addition there will be two styles of window cards and half-sheets.

The lobby display photos come twenty to a set, and the size is 8 by 10. Other photos are four subjects 22 by 28 hand colored; thirty subjects 8 by 10 for publicity purposes; and four subjects 11 by 14, all of which can be accommodated in special display frames beautifully veneered and emulated in imitation of genuine Florentine marble.

Several subjects in slides announcing the coming of this feature, and 3 by 10 banners printed in four colors on extra heavy three-ply canvas are among the accessories. Other aids to exhibitors who desire to use newspaper advertising in connection with the exploitation of "Who's Your Neighbor?" are advertising mats from fourteen lines single column to a half-page newspaper cuts ranging from one column to three columns in size, showing thrilling scenes, and the individual actors are also included in the exploitation helps.

Handling Large Features

H. E. Reddish, formerly Baltimore representative for the Metro Film Corporation, has opened a film exchange in Baltimore. Mr. Reddish will operate under the title of the H. E. Reddish Film Exchange. Among the features he will handle will be "The Call of Her People," and "The Deemster."

"Submarine Eye" Passes Expense Point

The Williamson Brothers and members of their Submarine Film Corporation, Longacre Building, New York City, are celebrating the fact that their first independent picture, "The Submarine Eye," has successfully passed the expense point, says Ernest Shipman, manager of the company.

With less than twenty per cent. of domestic and foreign territory disposed of, eighty per cent. remains from which to declare dividends, which are now estimated to surpass the sum of $200,000.

West and South Buy King-Bee Comedies

King-Bee is selling more and more territory for its Billy West Comedies. The Standard Film Corporation of 1305 Walnut street, Kansas City, has contracted for the output of these pictures for the middle Western States. R. C. Cropper, of the Standard Company, is projecting a tremendous advertising campaign for the comedies in the territory.

The comedies have also been sold for the States of Louisiana; Mississippi and Tennessee by the Southern Metro Pictures Corporation of New Orleans.

"Defense or Tribute?" for Japan

Samuel Cummins, film broker, Longacre building, 1476 Broadway, New York City, has sold for Hiler and Wilk the rights to Japan, for "Defense or Tribute?" to Kisaburo Kabayashi, of Tokio, Japan.

Mr. Cummins has been specializing recently in the foreign field and has met with considerable success.

“Parentage” Draws Crowds at Rialto

The runs of “Parentage” in Chicago and at the Rialto, New York City last week were successful. Managing Director Rothspiel of the Rialto was obliged to open the doors at ten o’clock each morning, and the picture made a record attendance for the house.

Mr. Seng, who controls the Holart Henley subject, said:

“The unprecedented success of our opening vindicates absolutely my faith in such pictures as “Parentage,” pictures that are inherently clean, that entertain and at the same time drive home a splendid moral lesson. I know that every exhibitor (and I am one, you know) will make a lot of money with “Parentage” when it reaches him through the state rights buyer in his locality.”

 Territory for “Redemption”
 All Nearly Sold

Little territory remains unsold in the United States and Canada for “Redemption,” featuring Evelyn Nesbit and her son, Russell Thaw, and produced by Julius Steger and John A. Golden.

Contracts were signed this week for the showing of the film in all the Loew theatres, also the Proctor houses, New York City, at an early date. Shen’s theatre, Buffalo, N. Y., will run it, commencing July 23.

Billy West Comedies on Broadway

The King-Bee Billy West Comedies, “Back Stage,” “The Hero” and “Dough Nuts” were shown at Loew’s New York theatre, Seventh avenue, New York, all last week, and went well with the audience. These comedies are just being released.

Busy Week for “Idle Wives” in Cleveland

E. J. Schmidt, manager of the Cleveland office of the Idle Wives Company, said that Cleveland is no exception in its unanimous approval of the picture, as their four prints have been in constant demand since the opening of “Idle Wives” in Indianapolis on May 6. Three prints of “Idle Wives” have been in use in Ohio for the past six weeks, and are booked solid until the first of July.

Inter-Ocean Specializes in Foreign Markets

The Inter-Ocean Film Corporation, New York City, of which Henry J. Brock and Paul H. Cromelin are the heads, has extended its operations until now its foreign affiliations cover practically all countries of the globe. The organization specializes in the distribution abroad of domestic film products.

Before launching into its chosen field the company made all preparations necessary for a successful entry into the foreign markets. It arranged to obtain the services of translation bureaus that were familiar with not only the language of the people to be sold but their temperament; became familiar with the transportation facilities and peculiar shipping laws enacted during the war, with the intricacies of insurance arrangements, and the value of almost every known brand and type of film in every country.

“The World Film Corporation’s fifty-two features a year have been disposed of for the coming year in England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, France, Spain, Portugal, Norway, Sweden, Russia, Denmark, India, Ceylon, Burma, Australia, New Zealand, Brazil, Argentina, Chile, Uruguay, Paraguay, Venezuela, Mexico and the West Indies,” says Mr. Brock. “And so small has been the loss of films through shipments to these far quarters that hardly any mention is made of it. And because of the insurance department and its finished work no loss has been sustained in any instance by the Inter-Ocean or the consignee.

“Every day the Inter-Ocean offices are the gathering places of the foremost foreign buyers. The first important Japanese buyer to really visit this country with serious intentions in regard to securing a permanent and definite allotment of film plays was last week the guest of the Inter-Ocean concern and several members of the Russian Mission were in attendance at the Inter-Ocean offices in behalf of prominent Russian buyers with which the Inter-Ocean have been negotiating for the past year.”

Mr. Brock states that owing to the demand upon his concern from many foreign points for meritorious film, he is now jittering the entire trade to treat with him looking forward to hundred per cent results in the foreign markets. Fifty-two productions a year, or one, or twelve are all of like importance. Any quantity so long as the productions have merit, said Mr. Brock. They are in demand in certain quarters of the globe and the Inter-Ocean is in touch with those quarters at all times.

Mr. Brock and Mr. Cromelin share the executive work. They are in personal touch with all buyers and permit no subordinates to treat with their clients.

“We make it a practice to transact all business personally with the buyers,” said Mr. Brock, “and not only that, but we have our own interpreting, translating and title-making resources so that the literal translations which have made so many good films unattractive abroad have no place in our shipments.

“We are equipped to handle a thousand features, or a few features, just as the market turns them out, and have set propositions to make to those producers, who will find by looking over their books that a universe of foreign territory is as yet virgin to their features.”

Publicity for “Parentage” from State Righters

Frank J. Seng announces that the entire campaign of advertising for “Parentage,” which proved so successful in both New York and Chicago, has been whirled into shape for use by local exhibitors, and may be obtained from the various state rights buyers. The names of these buyers will be given out as the various territories are sold.

Mr. Seng, himself an exhibitor of broad experience in the handling of feature productions, personally supervised the preparation of the campaign.

Generous mortise spaces for the local theatres to insert their names and trade marks have been provided. These add materially to the local sales value of the advertisements. They can be had in both mat and electro form.

It is Mr. Seng’s belief that the exhibitors of the country will appreciate this campaign, because they can use it locally, secure in their knowledge that it has been tried out with the greatest of success by two of the finest theatres we have that show pictures exclusively.

All-Star Cast in First Backer Picture
Ruth Roland, Milton Sills, Leah Baird, Ollie Kirky and George Larkin Will Appear in the Picture, Directed by Robert Ellis

WELL known screen stars will appear in the first George Backer Four-square feature, now in production for release through M. H. Hoffman, Inc., New York City. Ruth Roland and Milton Sills have been cast to star in the picture, which will be produced by them as Leah Baird, J. Herbert Frank, Ollie Kirky and George Larkin.

Miss Roland, star of many important productions, has in the Backer picture an opportunity to display her emotional talents. Milton Sills, the star of "The Honor System," takes the part of a virile American confronted by an unusual situation.

"The character assumed by Leah Baird is one for which this splendid young artist is admirably fitted," says Mr. Backer. "Her many thousands of admirers will be delighted with her handling of the stirring situations provided in the story." J. Herbert Frank, who plays the role opposite Miss Baird and who was the former leading man for Mr. Petrova, is destined to command unqualified endorsement for his performance of a big part which is one of the pivotal centers in the picture.

"In Ollie Kirky and George Larkin, the other members of this sextette, the exhibitor and public will find two artists who will enlist strong sympathy and affection. These young people, by their individual performances, will invite applause for what they do, and, now and again, prompt a smile for the touches of humor which they know so well how to employ.

"The direction of this feature is in the hands of Robert Ellis, one of the most successful members of the profession. Ellis will be remembered as a director who worked with the same organization that included Marshall Neilan, and in this production his expert knowledge of unique lighting effects and stage groupings is likely to cause wide commendation."

Pierre V. R. Key, production manager for the George Backer Film Corporation, in discussing the picture, says:

"Each Backer production will have a strong story with a theme of unquestioned importance, and the story, first of all, must be essentially human and free from any undesirable element of any sort. Thereafter the production will proceed with due deliberation, but only under the supervision of the most competent director obtainable, with a cast of principals offering strength in every role, and settings, properties and costumes appropriate to the last detail."

"In brief, Backer photoplays will be built as are Backer buildings—from the best materials to be had and with the ablest workmanship."

Service and Co-operation Are Necessary
Manufacturers Must Continue to Help the Exhibitor as Long as the Picture is Booked, Says Sherrill

SERVICE for the exhibitor, not only when the picture is released but as long as it is booked, is the plan of William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, New York City. Mr. Sherrill in outlining his views on the subject says:

"Service with a great big capital S is, to my mind, the subject which needs the immediate and serious attention of every manufacturer of motion pictures who hopes to be selling his product, particularly on the territorial basis of sale, a year from date. I feel as sure of this as I do that the continuation of the practice of making motion picture productions aiming toward a five hundred or one thousand per cent profit can result ultimately in only absolute failure, and I am borne out in no small measure in this view by the recollection of motion picture manufacturing failures during the past year.

"Without service and co-operation with the exhibitor, manufacturers cannot hope to conduct their business with success. I do not mean that service and co-operation will overshadow technical excellence of presentation; they are different but they are essential, and they are the factors which will decide whether or not the deserved success is to be earned and maintained.

"In full realization of what these aids mean to a buying clientele, the Frohman Amusement Corporation has actively begun its endeavors in that direction. We have organized a Service Department, the representative of which is already in the field visiting exchanges and exhibitors throughout the United States and Canada, getting close to them and their businesses and learning from them what's what, what's wanted and what's right or what's wrong with the way they are handling their productions.

"This representative goes as a missionary to carry the message of how the other fellow has put it over and to take every aid from the older and stronger organizations to those who are new and perhaps weaker. His work has been proven a thousand times since the beginning of his first trip less than two months ago. He is building and cementing the relationship between this office and our buying clientele, which has laid immovably the cornerstone of to-morrow's pillar of success.

"Another all-important duty which has been sadly neglected in the past has been the matter of advertising. Manufacturers have been wont to profusely advertise their product for several weeks in advance of its release, securing the necessary amount of space, and then drop abruptly in their advertising campaign. It is a glaring error of misplaced endeavor. It is almost inconceivable that state rights buyers have stood for such lack of co-operation through all these months. Could such a method of merchandising succeed in any other manufacturing industry?"

McInerny in Charge of Sherman Publicity

All copy, advertising and publicity dealing with the operations of the Sherman Pictures Corporation, New York City, will be handled by Frank A. McInerny, Mr. Sherman announced last week before leaving New York for Chicago to show prospective state rights purchasers "I Believe" and "The Land of the Rising Sun."

Mr. McInerny, who has had eleven years' newspaper experience in Chicago, Minneapolis and St. Paul, handled the publicity and advertising for Mr. Sherman in Minneapolis, and was brought from the office of Sherman-Elliot in that city to join the New York forces of the western state rights man.

Overland in Market for Pictures Suitable for Foreign Territory

The Overland Film Company, New York City, handling "Who's Your Neighbor?" "In the Hands of Fate," and "The World Scourge," is in the market for productions to be sold abroad and in this country.

The growing success of this concern is indicated by its quick disposal of "Who's Your Neighbor?" shortly after purchasing the picture from the Master Dramas, Inc. Within two weeks the Overland placed the subject with a syndicate for twelve Western states and the northern section of New Jersey.

THE Standard Film Service Company, Cleveland, H. Charnas, general manager, has been releasing special novelties for the last two years, and the most representative theatres in the territory covered by the company have shown appreciation of the value of the pictures it exploits.

The exhibitor is able to make selections from a comprehensive list of novelties in the same manner he has been able to pick worth-while feature productions.
PARAMOUNT Revolution in Methods in Effect August 5
Adolph Zukor Calls Coming New Era of Production and Distribution One Without Parallel in Screen History—To Get in Close Contact with Exhibitor and Work in Sympathy with Him

PARAMOUNT announces it inaugurates on August 5 a new era of distribution and production. New methods of marketing Famous Players-Lasky productions go into effect that day. Adolph Zukor, to whose genius the development is attributed, said:

"With the coming of August 5 we embark upon a new era of production and distribution never equaled. We are coming into closer contact with the exhibitor than we have ever been, even in the past, and we are working in closer sympathy with him than before. By this I mean that we are capitalizing the knowledge of the needs of the exhibitor which we have been accumulating.

"We are going to place before him, in the form of our 'star series' selective booking plans of distribution, the system which has been tried and proved to be most beneficial to the exhibitor and one which he himself realizes to be the solution of his problems, because it enables him to choose from our great stellar array only the stars who are most popular among his own patrons.

"We are thus rearranging our whole releasing system in reference to the exhibitor and are at the same time immeasurably improving the quality of our productions. Furthermore, we are making many changes and additions in our stellar force in order to give the exhibitor only the best and the biggest stars.

"This is true co-operation! But co-operation carries with it the idea of mutual consideration. We anticipate from the exhibitor his whole-hearted support in this great undertaking if he expects us to continue to give him the very best in photoplays.

"Plans which are being formulated and developed by Mr. Zukor and his organization provide for the creation of a series of artistic productions that will demand attention from the trade, not only for their excellence but also because of their number and consistency.

"Realizing the big value of organization, Mr. Zukor, preparing for this great new era, has surrounded himself with strong men in every department.

"As a nucleus for the newer and vaster organization Mr. Zukor had the long established pioneer concerns, which constituted the Paramount program, the Famous Players, Jesse L. Lasky, Morosco and Pallas companies, which had already been consolidated into the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. To these productive forces under the guidance of Jesse L. Lasky and Cecil B. De Mille, on the Pacific Coast, and Hugh Ford in the East, Mr. Zukor has now added the creative genius of David W. Griffith.

"The talent of Thomas H. Ince has more recently become a producing factor of the Famous Players-Lasky. Mack Sennett, creator of the Keystone comedies, will in the future be aligned with Paramount. Paramount's comedy product will include in addition to the Sennett comedies the Fatty Arbuckle comedies.

"The other noted directors active in the various studios under the control of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation are J. Searle Dawley, Frank Reicher, Robert Vignola, Joseph Kaufman, Maurice Tourneur, George Melford, William C. De Mille, William H. Taylor, Donald Crisp, Marshall Neilan.

"These are the creative forces into whose hands there will be placed an array of stars. The productions to be starred in and directed by these well known persons are to be distributed by men who know the complex problems connected with this important end of the business. Hiram Abrams, president of Paramount, and Walter E. Greene, president of Artcraft, represent types of film men who have risen from the ranks of the exhibitor and the exchange man. With their experience and their subsidiary organizations working on a co-ordinated plan under the guidance of Mr. Zukor, the head of this enterprise stands ready to produce and deliver to the exhibitor the fine productions he has promised exhibitors.

"Speaking of his organization, Mr. Zukor said:

"'From every possible source we have called the stars and producers who have proved themselves to be the most valuable from the exhibitor's box office standpoint. We have placed ourselves in a position to supply any artistic demand which might be made upon us from any quarter.

"'It is up to the exhibitor to avow himself of these opportunities which have been created for him. Though we have left the selection of the stars solely in his hands, we have endeavored to select our stars as to make it almost impossible for the exhibitor to neglect any of them without materially injuring his profits. It is our belief that every exhibitor will find that he needs all of our productions in order to complete his program.'

Elusive Mystery Play is "Seven Keys to Baldpate"

"Seven Keys to Baldpate," George M. Cohan production, although originally scheduled for later release, will be shown publicly early in August. It has just been completed under the direction of Hugh Ford. Walter E. Greene, discussing the picture at Artcraft headquarters, said:

"One of our studio executives perhaps most effectively expressed the idea of the subject when he said 'It is a photoplay, within a photoplay within a photoplay, with characters in each separate photoplay laughing at those in all the other photoplays.'

Elsie Ferguson, Famous Players-Lasky Star and Stage Favorite, in a Series of New Poses
Mrs. Vernon Castle, Pathe, Delights in Thrills

Woman Described as Best-Dressed, Best-Known in America, Says it is an Insult When They Offer Her a Double—She Wants to Face Peril

MRS. VERNON CASTLE, described as the best-dressed, best-known woman in America, talked entertainingly recently of the real delight she takes in her stunts. She said:

"There is nothing I like better than taking thrill scenes, but I absolutely refuse to have a double. I consider it an insult when they offer to let some one else do the stunts for me.

"I think that one of the best fights I have ever taken part in occurs in the first picture to be completed, the story of the secret service, in which I surprise a crook in the act of burning a hole through the back wall of a safe with an oxy-acetylene flame. The police raid, which comes later in the picture, when, disguised as an east side tough, I go to investigate the crooks' headquarters, is also a striking example of the manner in which Mr. Fitzmaurice handles this type of fiction.

"In the second picture, directed by Frank Craven, I have a new little dive of about thirty feet into the rapids of a stream in which Helene Chadwick was being carried in a canoe toward the falls and later had to scale the side of a twelve-story apartment building on a rope ladder about a foot wide which swung to and fro in the wind in a manner that entirely satisfied my longing for thrills."

It is stated that Mrs. Castle's third Pathe feature, produced under the direction of George Fitzmaurice and adopted from one of Carolyn Wells' most successful novels, is practically completed, with Antonio Moreno as the leading man. It has this thrilling situation:

"The man whom Mrs. Castle loves is arrested for murder. The counsel for the defense is an influential lawyer named in the murdered man's will as the one whom the young girl should marry. The heroine is, of course, determined to prove the innocence of the hero, and an amazing twist at the end is developed in a thrilling trial scene when it is discovered that the lawyer was the murdereder.

"With a secret service melodrama, a drama of finance and society, a murder mystery and a wonderful story of the north woods, I think that the company is taking pretty good care of me on my first four pictures," says Mrs. Castle. "I have never enjoyed my work as I have under the direction of Mr. Fitzmaurice and Mr. Crane. They are clever, efficient and courteous. There is never a moment's disagreeableness and everything goes as nearly like clockwork as is possible in a picture studio."

"Mrs. Castle's opinion is corroborated by the directors. "I have never enjoyed working with a star any more than I have with Mrs. Castle," says Mr. Fitzmaurice.

"She is always willing, always on time and can always be depended upon," says Mr. Crane.

In "Slumberland," Triangle Kiddie Feature, is Spectacular

A kiddie feature, "In Slumberland," which is said to surpass in elaborate development of scenic and lighting effects any picture ever produced by Triangle, has been completed for release the last week of this month.

Thelma Salter, seven-year-old actress, is presented as star. She is supported by Georgie Stone, leader of the Triangle Kiddies in several Fine Arts plays. Several hundred children and a large company of professional dancers appear as elves, fairies and gnomes in the fairyland scenes.

Virtually every animal species of Noah's ark is represented. A snail has one of the most important parts, that of steering for the fairy queen, Gloria Hope.

O'Brien Opposite Pickford

Mary Pickford's leading man in her newest Artcraft picture is Eugene O'Brien. On the speaking stage, Mr. O'Brien appeared with Elsie Janis, Ethel Barrymore, Margaret Illington and Fritzi Scheff.

H. C. Allen Moves Motoy Studios to New York

H. C. Allen, president of the Peter Pan Film Corporation, who is back from Chicago, announces the Motoy Comedies have been taken over by the Peter Pan Film Corporation, which will move its studio from Chicago to New York. The comedies will be made in New York in future.

Ever since these doll pictures made their appearance on the market they have been produced by Chicago manufacturers who released through the Peter Pan Film Corporation. The demand has been such that Mr. Allen finally decided it would be advantageous to take over the producing plant of the Motoy Company and move the organization to New York City.

The publicity and distribution plans which Mr. Allen has in mind is expected to place Motoy Comedies at the very top of popularity and create a demand all over the country.

The plan includes a system of building direct and substantial as well as permanent relations with first-class exchanges and providing them with a complement of publicity and advertising matter upon original lines.

Johnny Ray Adds "Muggsy" to His Characters

In the current Johnny and Emma Ray comedies, announced by General Film, Helen Milholland has been added as ingenue. They present Johnny as "Muggsy." Among the new releases are "Muggsy in Society," "Muggsy in Bad" and "The Candy Jar." These follow "Casey the Bandmaster" and "Casey the Fireman." They are described as preserving the spirit and individuality of the stage performances of the Rays.

Unique Heralds for "Alma, Where Do You Live?"

Something new in heralds has been provided by the Newfields Producing Corporation for their six-reel feature, "Alma, Where Do You Live?" starring Ruth MacTammany. A few years ago the song hit from the original stage presentation had wide popularity. So, as an advertising stunt, Newfields have reproduced words and music of the song on their heralds—so that everybody can "try it on their pianos."

The musical phase of the advertising has been carried out in every particular, and the original score adapted to the film.

Thanhouser To Go In For "Americanism and Sunshine"

In Declaring Its Courageous and Patriotic Policy Edwin Thanhouser Declares the Producing Company's Definite Aim to Get Squarely Into Touch With Sentiments of Picture-Going Public

THANHAUSHER FILM CORPORATION is going in for "Americanism and Sunshine" in its forthcoming productions. Its aim, to be maintained at all hazards, is to go straight ahead with the sentiment of the picture-going public. In announcing the courageous and patriotic policy Edwin Thanhouser says:

"We are going in for Americanism and Sunshine in the forthcoming productions, because we want to be, and we are, we think, in touch with the sentiment of the picture-going public. Indeed, it was this fact that made our productions of the past year liked—a firm touch on the public pulse. This was only possible through exhibitor co-operation, and I can ask nothing better than that our exhibitor friends stand by us, with comment and criticism, during the current year as they have in the past.

"The past year has been large with achievement for the Thanhouser Film Corporation, and one fact carried special gratification to Thanhouser fans everywhere—the pioneer producers went back to first love, the making of features. A matter of program policy confined us mainly to short length subjects until the middle of last year, when program policy allowed us free rein in the feature field.

"I think the Gold Rooster Plays we have been producing since last August with such stars as Florence La Badie, Frederick Warde, Charlotte Walker, Jeanne Eagels, Gladys Leslie, Gladys Hulette, Vincent Serrano, and others of like artistic calibre, have demonstrated the meaning of Thanhouser methods when applied to features. "Our first feature was made for Pathe for August release last year and the title was 'The Fugitive,' by Philip Lonergan. The players were Florence La Badie, Ethyle Cooke, J. H. Gilmour, Robert Vaughn, Hector Dion, George Marlo and Samuel Niblack. Later in August we issued 'The Shine Girl,' by Agnes C. Johnson with Gladys Hulette, Wayne Arey, Kathryn Adams, Ethelmary Oakland and J. H. Gilmour.

"Many more Gold Roosters were released during the late months of 1916.

"In January, 1917, we released 'Her New York,' by Agnes C. Johnston, and 'The Image Maker,' by Emmet Mixx.

"In February we released 'A Modern Monte Cristo,' by Lloyd Lonergan, and 'Her Life and His,' by Philip Lonergan.

"In March we released 'Her Beloved Enemy,' by Lloyd Lonergan, and 'Pot's-and-Pans Peggy,' by Agnes C. Johnston.

"In April we released 'Mary Lawson's Secret,' by Lloyd Lonergan, and 'When Love Was Blind,' by Agnes C. Johnston.

"In May we released 'Hinton's Double,' by Lloyd Lonergan, and 'The Candy Girl,' by Philip Lonergan. The former had the cast Frederick Warde, Kathryn Adams, Eldine Steuart, Wayne Arey, Arthur Bauer, Charles Mussett and J. H. Gilmour. The 'Candy Girl' was played by Gladys Hulette, Helen Badgley, William Bowers, Carey Hastings and Justus D. Barnes.

"In June we released 'An Amateur Orphan,' by Agnes C. Johnston, and 'Fires of Youth,' by the same author. The former had in the cast Gladys Leslie, Isabel Vernon, Thomas A. Curran, Jean Armour, Chester Morris, Dorothy Conroy, Ray Halor, Carey Hastings, Justus D. Barnes and Grace De Carolion. 'Fires of Youth' was played by Frederick Jeanne Eagels, Helen Badgley, Ernest Howard, Robert Vaughn, Carey Hastings and James Ewens.

"It may not appear an over-modest statement, but our productions this year have been so successful that it would be hard to say which was the most successful of them all. It is true that 'The Vicar of Wakefield,' produced by our Mr. Ernest C. Warde, has made a particular impression. Tons of editorial and news notices have been given it, and now it is being taken up by the leading public librarians of the country. Some of them are so enthused over it that they want to link up the libraries in a co-operative advertising chain with the better class of motion picture theatres. I do not know of a more revolutionary action, and yet it is directly traceable to 'The Vicar of Wakefield.'"

PATHES Output 27,000,000 Feet in Six Months

This Is Positive Film Printed and Published in Two Pathé Plants, at Jersey City and Bound Brook—J. A. Berst Thirteen Years in Pathé Service

JUST 27,000,000 feet of positive film was printed and published in Pathé's two factories in Bound Brook and Jersey City in the first six months of 1917.

This statement is made officially by J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., on the occasion of the thirteenth anniversary of the company. It is the first time there has been any authorized statement of the colossal output of the Pathé American plants.

It is the thirteenth anniversary also of Mr. Berst's connection with the Pathé American enterprise.

No film company in this or any other country in the world, it is stated, has ever equaled or approached these figures in factory production. It constitutes a record for achievement which will undoubtedly amaze the entire industry, and is one of which the Pathé Exchange, Inc., is justly proud.

On July 18, 1904, Mr. Berst arrived in New York from Paris and established the American house of Pathé. From the small beginnings of a tiny office on Twenty-third street have sprung the fine offices on Forty-fifth street, occupying two floors of a modern office building, the thirty branch offices in the United States, the big factory at Bound Brook, N. J., and the studios in Jersey City.

At the start Mr. Berst comprised the entire staff of his office. Today there are several thousands of persons on the payrolls of the Pathé Exchange and as many more depend upon the big house for their living, although not on the Pathé salary list.

Of the thirteen years only two were not spent in advancing Pathé's interests—1914 and 1915—in which years Mr. Berst held the office of president of the General Film Company, and later that of vice-president and general manager of Selig. His entire business career of twenty-one years has been in the film business and of the twenty-one years have been with the one concern—Pathé.

The first six months of 1917 have shown a wider activity, a larger business and a healthier condition than any previous six months in the Pathé history. Mr. Berst has entirely done away with the old bit-and-miss methods that were once so characteristic of every film manufacturer and producer.

The system under which the Pathé Exchange is now operated equals in efficiency that of any other large concern in any line of business. This efficiency is not only applied in the methods of the home offices but also in the exchanges. The Pathé organization is today closely welded together, able, enthusiastic and loyal, and with the tremendous "hitting power" that such a powerful and wealthy organization, directed with such intelligence, must have.

Prominent New York banking houses, familiar with the film business and with accurate knowledge of the financial resources of the various motion picture companies, say that the Pathé Exchange is the strongest financially of any company in the business, and that few concerns in any line of business could so readily produce great sums of money on short notice.
Lillian Walker Enthusiastic Over Work in West

Says That She Likes the West and That Her Recent Picture, "The Lust of the Ages," Produced by Ogden Pictures Corp., Offered Her Excellent Opportunities

LILLIAN WALKER, who is featured in "The Lust of the Ages," an eight-reel superfeature, the production of which was recently completed at the Ogden Studio, Ogden, Utah, by the Ogden Film Corporation under the direction of Harry Revier, was in New York the past week spending part of her vacation before returning West to commence work in a new feature. On her return she will stop off at Chicago and attend the Convention. Sunday and Monday will be known as "Lillian Walker" days at the Convention, she said.

"The Lust of the Ages," which will be released soon, presents Miss Walker in one of her few serious dramas. It is a propaganda play and afforded her, she said, opportunity to apply her talents to a scene—a more serious vein of the drama. "There are bits of comedy contained," said Miss Walker, "but only to relieve the more serious element of an essentially strong drama."

"I like the West," she said, modestly avoiding a discussion of the merits of her picture, "and will be glad to get back in the studio at Ogden."

Miss Walker said that she had purchased, recently, a farm near Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and expects to be there much of the time which is not taken up by her work before the camera.

Lester Park, vice-president and general manager of the Ogden Pictures Corporation, who came with Miss Walker on her visit East, said that his company planned to produce eight pictures a year. Miss Walker, he said, would be featured in all.

"It is the plan of the Ogden Company," said Mr. Park, "to adapt to the screen and produce only stories of merit, offering the good light comedy drama and perhaps one or two offering the more serious drama. Miss Walker appears to a fine advantage in roles the interpretation of which calls for strong dramatic action, as she has so well demonstrated by her work in 'The Lust of the Ages.' Miss Walker is also a comedienne of recognized ability. She has proven this by past performances. In future productions by the Ogden Company, stories will be selected offering situations which will give Miss Walker every opportunity to apply her talents as a comedienne, as it is in such pictures that she is most at home. I am more than satisfied with the excellent picture 'The Lust of the Ages' presents and I feel sure that it and Miss Walker will be well received by the public."

Drum Brings 10-Part "The Planter" East for First Showing

FOLLOWING an unusual demonstration at a trial public showing in the West, the ten-reel production of Tyroane Power in "The Planter," has been brought to New York by the producer, Harry C. Drum, and a private showing will be given buyers and the press within a few days. Mr. Drum arrived in New York with the film last Monday and has taken temporary office space in room 805 of the Mecca Building, at 1600 Broadway. He will shortly be joined by F. M. Mannon, a wealthy Western mining man, who financed the production.

Those who have so far seen the production, including both the public and the trade, herald it as one of the best of the big productions so far released. The story is from the novel by Herman Whitaker, and was one of the best sellers Harper has ever issued.

In the production of the feature particular attention was given the scenario, and more than six months was spent on the construction and development of the script alone, and it is claimed that the time and effort was fully justified in a resultant story which builds logically and forcefully, develops powerful climaxes and suspense without apparent effort and includes in its dramatic and commercial form a human and red-blooded story which is generally pronounced entirely different from anything yet brought to the screen. Mr. Drum, who adapted the story for the screen, as well as handling the production work, had the fortunate advantage of two years' experience in close analysis of commercial demands in connection with dramatic construction through his position with the World Film Corporation.

Kitty Gordon Signs With Brady One More Year

Kitty Gordon has signed a new contract with World-Pictures Brady-Made covering a full year from the current month. The present arrangement was made under an option held by the World Corporation when Miss Gordon was "signed up" six months ago for three pictures to be completed within that space.

The three picture plays already completed with Miss Gordon as star are "Forget-Me-Not," "The Beloved Adventuress" and "The Divine Sacrifice," the one last mentioned not having been published as yet.

Director-General William A. Brady, in referring to the renewal of business association with Miss Gordon, said to a reporter: "The actress had not proceeded very far upon 'Forget-Me-Not' when it became apparent to the practiced eye that she possessed the vital spark in far greater intensity than anyone had given her credit for, and when it came to the 'big' scene, I applied the bellows, with the effect that the spark blazed up. By applying the bellows I mean that I raved and roared at Miss Gordon until she was on the verge of genuine hysterics, and the manner in which she pitched into the scene was in the nature of a revelation."
Paralta's Speed in Mobilization Astounds Picture World

In Fourteen Weeks Wonders in Organization Are Accomplished—One Secret in Rapid Work Is Adoption of Definite Policy on Scripts, as Outlined in Detail by Robert T. Kane

This plan has not yet been made known to the trade in detail but in a very short time a complete explanation of its principles and workings will be published in the form of a little book called "The Paralta Plan."

The announcement that Paralta had arranged with Triangle to distribute the Kerrigan and Barriscale productions on the Paralta Plan was a marked surprise to the trade as it was believed that it was the intention of the Paralta Company to establish an entirely independent system of distribution.

While this proposition had been considered, such a plan had never been definitely decided upon.

The Paralta Plan will be followed by Triangle in the distribution or sale of Paralta Plays. This plan gives to an exhibitor exclusive control of a specific exhibiting district and other advantages which will have a very material influence in the increase of his profits. This indorsement by Triangle of the Paralta system of distribution in relation to Paralta plays will undoubtedly attract especial attention to the Paralta proposition.

Two Directors at Work on O. Henry Films

Two directors are now at work for General Film on the last four subjects of the two-reel series of O. Henry photoplays. The subjects are "The Coming Out of Maggie," "The Venturers," "The Best Seller," and "Little Specks in Gnarled Fruit."

Thos. R. Mills, who has directed most of the O. Henry releases, is being relieved by Martin Justice, whose work is just now being seen in "A Departmental Case" and "Little Specks in Gnarled Fruit."

Mr. Mills, it is expected, will hasten to the Coast to do some of the O. Henry stories that are laid in Western surroundings.

The four releases are for distribution in August and complete the first stage of the series.
Metro Signs Nazimova to Long Term Contract

Russian Actress, Who Last Appeared on the Screen in “War Brides,” Will Be Featured in Series of Productions, Under Direction of Maxwell Karger

PRESIDENT RICHARD A. ROWLAND, of Metro, announces that he has signed a contract for the services of Mme. Alla Nazimova, the Russian actress, for a “considerable period of time.” Negotiations were completed Friday. The contract calls for a series of feature productions, three of which, it is announced, have already been selected by Maxwell Karger, who will have general supervision of all productions in which Mme. Nazimova appears.

President Rowland, in commenting upon the action taken, said: “Metro is proud to announce the association with it of so great an artist as Nazimova. Under a contract which extends over a considerable period of time, Nazimova productions will be offered exhibitors at a price the exhibitor can afford to pay. Prices will be regulated in each territory according to the drawing power of the star. The signing of the contract is in line with Metro’s new policy of acquiring only stars of box office attraction and I can assure the public that Nazimova pictures will be of the highest type.”

Mme. Nazimova expressed satisfaction in associating herself with Metro and said: “I have already passed upon three of the dramas in which I am to appear and I am pleased with the results. I have been offered, Mme. Nazimova’s last appearance on the screen was in “War Brides” in which she had instant success. She will commence work at the Metro studio soon. She will be under the personal direction of Maxwell Karger.

To Screen Charles Frohman’s Best Five Plays

John R. Freuler Announces “The Imposter,” “The Outcast,” “The Runaway,” “The Beautiful Adventure” and “Her Sister” for Early Presentation

FIRST announcement of the Frohman-Empire plays and stars is made by John R. Freuler, president. Mr. Freuler heads both the Empire-All-Star Corporation, producing the plays, and the Mutual Film Corporation, distributing the productions.

Ann Murdock, who made her big hit on the stage in “A Pair of Sixes,” will star in three plays, “The Beautiful Adventure,” “The Imposter” and “The Outcast.” Julia Sanderson, Broadway favorite in recent years, will have a leading role in “The Runaway.” Olive Tell, who scored a success in the screen play “The Silent Master,” will have a premier position in the cast of “Her Sister.”

Mr. Freuler in his statement says: “These stars and plays, chosen from the array of dramatic treasures of Charles Frohman, represent the pick of the Frohman plays in a big list of box-office winners which are to be put into Empire-Mutual pictures.

“These are all plays which have proved themselves in the stage test. They contain the stories that go across. We know, because they have gone across. The stars are the stars of the original productions, and the casts are largely the original casts throughout.

“The standards which made the name of Charles Frohman dominant in the field of dramatic production are the standards of the Empire studios making Charles Frohman successes in motion pictures.

“Charles Frohman stars bring to the pictures a wealth of that cashable personality which counts at the exhibitor’s box-office. Charles Frohman brought to public appreciation and made famous such stars as Maude Adams, Ann Murdock, Billie Burke, Olive Tell, William Gillette, Julia Sanderson, and countless others.

“According to present plans, the first of the Frohman pictures will be presented early in September. While the Mutual is accepting reservation for that pe-
FLORENCE REED and Robert Warwick are two new Pathé stars as the result of the purchase by Pathé of "To-day," starring Florence Reed, and "The Mad Lover," starring Robert Warwick, the two pictures which many critics have pronounced among the best productions of the year.

J. A. Berst, vice-president and general manager of Pathé, secured these pictures from Harry Rapf, the producer, after weeks of spirited bidding, in which practically all the big distributing agents and firms of the country participated. The checks that changed hands for these pictures are reputed to have amounted to two hundred thousand dollars.

"To-day" and "The Mad Lover" will have a Broadway showing immediately, both these pictures having been booked by the Strand theatre management. "The Mad Lover" will be shown at the Strand the week of July 22 and "To-day" at a later date.

Mr. Berst announces that the purchase of these superfeatures is one of a series of moves he is making to begin releasing this Fall the highest grade feature program. He states that in accordance with the Pathé policy announced last Spring, he will have at least a dozen superfeatures of unsurpassed excellence ready for release on the Pathé all-star superfeature program by September 1.

Harry Rapf, the producer, when interviewed regarding the sale, stated that it was true he had sold the pictures to Pathé for two hundred thousand dollars, and that the checks had already been deposited.

"Never in all my years in the show business have I produced anything that has received the favorable attention accorded 'To-day' and 'The Mad Lover,'" continued Mr. Rapf.

"Every critic gave them unstinted praise, complimenting me on story, production and cast.

"Practically every distributing company and every live state rights buyer negotiated for these pictures. Among those who backed their opinions by their offers were: Samuel Goldfish, of Goldwyn; a syndicate headed by Stanley Mathaum; Frederick Collins, president of McClure; Henry Brock, Harry Sherman, W. H. Hoffman, Hiller and Wilkes, the state rights men, and others.

"Among those who told me these pictures ranked with the best features ever produced for the screen were R. A. Rowland, president of Metro; Louis Mayer, of Boston; Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn; B. M. Moss, Marcus Loew, John D. Williams, Margaret Mayo, Edgar Selwyn, Harold Edel and Wid Gunning.

"To add to the praise of the critics and the opinions of the buyers, substantiated by their offers, both Miss Reed and Mr. Warwick state "To-day" and "The Mad Lover" are the best pictures in which they have been starred."

Mr. Rapf produced criticisms from the various newspapers and trade papers which were printed after the exhibitors' showing of "To-day." Some of them follow:

The New York Tribune: "Florence Reed in 'To-day' gives on of the best screen portrayals ever seen. None of the elements which were contributory to making 'To-day' a stage success are lacking in the silent drama. Florence Reed has more vitality, more magnetism, more subtlety, more art than usually falls to the lot of one woman. 'To-day' is one of the biggest things that has been done on the screen."

The New York Morning Telegraph: "Florence Reed's portrayal of the wife will go on record as one of the screen's finest performances. 'To-day' makes an exceedingly dramatic picture. One of the strongest of the year."

The Motion Picture News: "The story is told by an artist, visualized on the screen by an artist, presented by artists and photographed by artists. Never has a cast been assembled whose individual members have worked to better advantage. Florence Reed has never been seen either behind the footlights or before the camera in a more entrancing role."

Photography ranks the Broadhurst-Schober play "as sensationally effective on the screen, as it was on the stage."

C. R. Seelye, business manager of Pathé, is enthusiastic over the acquisition of these two pictures. He says: "They are attractions that will keep the box-office men busy taking in the money and will make every exhibitor who is lucky enough to get them wear a deep smile of contentment."

"The Mad Lover" is by far the best picture in which Mr. Warwick has appeared," states Mr. Seelye. "I consider it even better than 'The Argyle Case.' Mr. Warwick is of the same opinion, and says that he believes he has done his best work in this picture. I am positive that when it is publicly screened it will be given the same favorable criticisms that 'To-day' received."

"Florence Reed must be accounted one of the biggest stars on the stage and screen at the present time. She leaped into stage stardom in 'The Yellow Ticket,' and became a screen star in the two splendid pictures, 'At Bay' and 'New York.'"
Bright Comedies Bulk of Universal's Program

IN addition to "The Double Standard," a Butterfly picture released July 23, Universal will issue eighteen reels of combined drama, comedy and current events, including the latest episode of "The Gray Ghost," a new mystery serial.

Tuesday, July 24, "A Soldier of the Legion," a Gold Seal thriller, with an interesting comedy setting, will be released. The story was written by Maude Springer Nelson and E. J. Clawson and directed by Ruth Ann Baldwin.

On the same date "Seeing Things," a Nestor comedy, written by Fred Palmer and directed by Roy Clements, will be released, featuring Lee Moran and Edith Roberts. Taking a presumably haunted house as a setting a tale has been worked out to the accompaniment of many laughs.

"The Sign of the Cucumber," a L-Ko Comedy in two reels, is the offering for Wednesday, July 25. Directed by Dick Smith and supervised by J. G. Blystone, this jumble of mistaken identities features the misadventures of a desperate safecracker who descends upon a peaceful hamlet to acquire the local bank funds. Tom Delmar, Bob McKenzie and Eva Novak are in the leading roles.

The eighty-second issue of the Animated Weekly will be released on the same date, showing the latest current events in pictorial form.

Mary Fuller will be starred in "The Beautiful Impostor," released Thursday, July 26. Written by Catherine Carr and directed by Lucius Henderson, this tabloid drama is said to have much of the human quality about it that would have pleased O. Henry.

Miss Fuller takes the part of Isabel Whitlock, a young woman of brains and beauty, who, after various disheartening experiences, obtains work as a mannequin in a fashionable dressmaking establishment. Universal says Mary Fuller has never appeared to better advantage than in this production. She is supported by Clara Beyers, Nellie Slattery and John Walker.

A Joker Comedy, entitled "Cannibal King," and featuring William Franey, will be shown on the same date with the Mary Fuller feature. Charles J. Wilson, Jr., and C. B. Hoadley wrote the script, while W. W. Beaudine is credited with the direction. Lillian Peacock, Za Su Pitts and Milburn Moranti assist William Franey.

Herbert Rawlinson and Neva Gerber are the featured players in "Caught in the Act," a Victor comedy-drama, scheduled for release, Friday, July 27.

A unique issue of the Universal Screen Magazine will be released on the same date with "Caught in the Act." It includes pictures of the only tea farm in the United States.

On Saturday, July 28, the eleventh number of Universal Current Events, will be released, together with a Powers Educational and a Powers Comedy Cartoon, "The Soubrette," a Joker Comedy, featuring Gale Henry and Milton Sims, completes the week's offerings.

Outside of Greater New York the fifth episode of "The Gray Ghost" will be shown during the week. This episode is entitled "Plunder," and features Eddie Polo, Harry Carter, Priscilla Dean and Emory Johnson.

Hollywood Gives Loving Cup to Cecil B. DeMille

Cecil B. De Mille, of the Lasky Studio at Hollywood, Calif., recently was presented with a loving cup by the citizens. The gift was in appreciation of his work for a new armory for the Hollywood Company, Coast Artillery, Federal Reserve.

Mr. De Mille made the first contribution and secured other gifts. As commanding officer of the Home Guard he marched his company to the ceremony attending the turning of the ground for the armory. It was on that occasion he was called to the platform and given the cup.

He had endeared himself to the citizens, too, by raising $2,000 in the studio for the Red Cross, and sending the stars to a fair where $4,000 morc was taken in.

Authors to Attend Showing of "Persuasive Peggy"

M. A. Schlesinger plans within the next week or so to announce the date and place of the trade showing of his first Mayfair production, "Persuasive Peggy." Notice will be given through the trade papers.

Mr. Schlesinger says the waiting experienced by the state rights buyers and exhibitors will be well repaid for every detail has received the greatest attention and nothing has suffered through the haste usually prevalent in the studio.

Maravene Thompson, author and co-scenario writer of the story, which ran serially in magazine form before being published as a book, has invited many fellow authors to be present. Although the names of these men have not yet been stated, the gathering promises to be a stellar one.
Revolutionary Year Has Reacted to Industry’s Benefit

World Upheaval Parallels Kaleidoscopic Changes in Production, Distribution and Exhibition of Pictures, Says Selznick—Decay of Program System Is a Big Factor

By LEWIS J. SELZNICK

THIS has been a year of revolutions. When the Exhibitors’ League Convention met last year, Nicholas was Czar of Russia, Constantine King of Greece and China a republic. The United States was preparing to elect Franklin D. Roosevelt with the slogan “He kept us out of war.”

To-day Russia is a republic, Constantine an exile and China is in a state of continual revolution, while this country is straining every nerve to support the war program of the President it elected for his peace record.

In other words—new ideas are in the air. Not a single industry, or social or political class has been untouched by the irresistible force of reconstruction.

If the moving picture industry had been immune from this tendency, it would have to be classed as superhuman, perfect and immortal. But it has not been immune. The changes have been swift and frequent, bewildering and almost if not completely ruinous to them who were blind to the trend of affairs. There remain only a few minor groups which stubbornly defy the world to move—which declare that progress is impossible—which occupy in the moving picture industry a corresponding position to that of China in world affairs, rejecting democracy for monarchy.

The producer, distributor and exhibitor now can, and must, decide where they will stand, whether they will be progressive Russians or reactionary Chinamen.

One year ago practically every important moving picture produced was distributed as part of a program. To-day a one-armed man can count the programs on his fingers, even if some are amputated. Yet, when I announced my open booking plan a year ago, a lot of men who didn’ stop to think, declared that I was crazy. Men who were loudest in their scorn have joined me in the padded cell, and we are all crazy together.

Others shrieked that I was a “menace to the industry.” Most of these have imitated me and are menacing the industry along similar lines.

And, strangely enough, we are all out of the asphalt, and the industry never was in such a thriving condition as it is to-day.

Following this emancipation of the exhibitor, the next logical step was the emancipation of the producer. A year ago any one who wanted to make a picture, no matter how big his ideas or how much capital he had back of him, was virtually compelled first to make terms with one of the very few organizations which possessed distributing facilities. This was a natural outcome of the program domination. The men behind the programs did not want to face this kind of competition. And moreover, the states rights field was very much uncertain and chaotic. When the grip of the program was loosened, it enabled the enterprising buyer of states rights to offer tempting inducements to independent producers to turn out high-class pictures and spend upon them more money than the program manufacturers could afford to spend on single productions.

This was the origin of the open-door policy which I have put into effect in my system of exchanges. With distributing centers in every section of the country I was able to accept for any or all states such productions as came up to my requirements. No man with ideas and capital need now fear to embark in the business of producing, for ample means have been provided to reach the market.

One of the most significant and progressive events resulting from these radical changes in the general system of releasing pictures is the formation of the First National Exhibitors’ Circuit. I believe the most important word in the name of this organization is “First.” My hat is off to S. L. Rothafel, T. L. Tally and the other exhibitors who have had the energy and foresight to embark upon this enterprise, the vast possibilities of which are shown by the ease with which it closed the million dollar contract with Charlie Chaplin. I regard the fact that the circuit turned over the rights for its first picture, “On Trial,” to my New York and Chicago exchanges for distribution in their territory, as one of the highest compliments that could possibly be paid to my organization.

A quieter revolution, because it has taken place in the executive offices of the leading producers, is the change of attitude toward the star system. The system is all right, and the reason why, a year ago, producers were bewailing the appearances demanded by and obtained by stars, was that the producers did not know how to get the value out of their headliners. The wall died out when the employers of these stars abandoned their program distribution, and began selling pictures for what they were worth, and not at a fixed price per dozen.

The value of a star can be estimated exactly by the result upon the box-office when the exhibitor places a banner in front of his house bearing the name of the star.

As for the future, I believe the changes and readjustments which must constantly take place in any business, which is not infected with dry rot, will be influenced largely by the exhibitors, who are just beginning to learn that they can get just the kind of attractions they want at mutually fair prices. The days of “the exhibitor be damned,” like those of “the public be damned,” have passed forever.

Finally, the general effect of all these revolutions is bound to be a constant improvement in the quality of the pictures themselves.

I am confident that the days of violent revolution are pretty well ended, and we now are about to embark upon a period of protracted peace and increased prosperity for the three branches of the industry—production, distribution, exhibition.

Jean Sothern to Appear at Three Marcus Loew Houses

Jean Sothern has just arranged to make three personal appearances at Marcus Loew theatres about New York. These will be in connection with the showing of her latest Van Dyke-Art Drama, “Miss Deception.”

The young star will be seen at the Royal in Brooklyn July 17. She will appear at the New York in Times square and at the Forty-second Street theatre July 20.

Miss Sothern’s experience in vaudeville and on Broadway before going into pictures gave her skill in entertaining in an impromptu manner. When she gets out on the stage she claims that she has not the least idea what she will do. Without preparation she steps out and does whatever the impulse commands.

Bushman and Bayne in Metro’s Red Gulch, Arizona, Play

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN and Beverly Bayne have begun work on a new seven-reel Metro play de luxe under the direction of Emlyn Carewe, assisted by Harry Franklin. The play will be made under the general supervision of Maxwell Karger. It is Albert Shelby LeVine’s adaptation of Charles A. Logue’s original story, “The Compact.”

Francis X. Bushman has the part of James VanDyke Moore, with a page in the blue book of New York, but of a type totally unlike the popular conception of a New York society man. Moore can fight, shoot, and is every inch a type of man that has made the West what it is to-day. The scene of the story is laid in Red Gulch, Arizona, where the silver mines are located.

Beverly Bayne, co-star with Bushman, finds in the role of Beverly Anderson an opportunity that, it is said, she has never had in previous screen appearances.

Harry S. Northrup will play the part of “Ace High” Horton.

The majority of the scenes are taken in the open, for “The Compact” is a big outdoor story. Metro states the popular co-stars will be seen in roles that will not only hold their old admirers but will win for them many new ones.

Art Drama Program Celebrates Half Year of Life

In Brief Period, Through Enforcement of Advanced Ideas, Officers Feel Problem of High Class Production at Low Cost Has Been Solved

WITH the beginning of July Art Dramas, Incorporated, sets out on the last half of its first year of existence. The program came into being at the beginning of 1917, and in the six months just ended there is basis for claim it has achieved as much as the average organization accomplishes in a like period.

Fairness to the exhibitor and an elimination of waste and extravagance in favor of principles of concentration and efficiency were the fundamental ideas on which the organization was founded. Skeptics and, it is said, there were many, believed that the pictures thus made would either be so poor as to get no booking, or, if good, that they would be so expensive as to make low rentals impossible. Art Dramas officials point however to the fact that to-day the pictures of the company are playing in many of the largest cities of the country.

In February Harry Raver, a film man of wide experience, who has been active in the picture industry since its inception, was elected to the presidency. Under the guidance of Mr. Raver, George H. Wiley, H. M. Goetz and Herbert Blache the organization expanded and the quality of pictures improved. The markets were searched for excellent stories. Exhibitors all over the country awakened to a realization of what Art Dramas was doing.

Then the big theatres followed and booked the pictures. Marcus Loew took the Art Drama Program for every one of his houses. The Proctor theatres followed in a week. The Modern theatre, Boston, began playing Art Dramas for lengthy runs.

Always concentrating on the story and not the star and always seeking the best vehicles for its actors, the company's artistic success, it is held, has equalled its commercial achievement. Novels by Upton Sinclair, Frederic Arnold Kammer, Emile Zola and others of wide fame were produced. Scripts by successful screen authors, such as Charles T. Dazey, Joseph Franklin Poland, Edward Ellis and Louis Reeves Harrison, were given to the exhibitor for a price which made them available to every and the tiniest theatre in the smallest town.

Although the story was the point of greatest emphasis, the prominent player was not neglected, and exhibitors, who hitherto had paid high prices for "star" pictures, which usually relied on a well-known name for success, had an opportunity to present such players as Jean Sothern, Alma Hanlon, Viola Dana, Anna Q. Nilsson, Naomi Childers, Edith Hallor, Marie Wayne, Gertrude McCoy, Marian Swayne, Dorothy Bernard, Catherine Calvert, Robert Connors, Leslie Austin, Chester Barnett, Frank Mills, John Sainpolis, Charles Hutchinson, Joe Welch, Harry Benham and, most recently, Crane Wilbur. It was felt by officials that the seal of success and the stamp of permanence was put on Art Drama Program finally only recently, when David Horsley, after looking over the field and studying conditions in all releasing organizations, picked the program as the best distributing medium for his special Crane Wilbur features.

Art Dramas believes that in its six months of life it has solved a problem which has obsessed the industry throughout its history. The problem was: How can pictures be made which are good enough to please audiences and yet inexpensive enough to allow the producers and exhibitors to make money?

Ruth MacTammany Is to Star in Six Newfields Features

RUTH MACTAMMANY, a pretty girl who had a clever part in the screen play "The Girl from Rector's," and who as previously announced will star in the six features planned by the Newfields Producing Corporation, has completed her first film in the name-role of "Alma, Where Do You Live?"

The young star will be under the personal direction of Hal Clarendon in the six plays. She has worked with him since her first essay in screening. Mr. Clarendon says:

"Miss MacTammany's beauty is only one of her assets in successful motion picture work. She has had training in other lines and success in all of them. She has the self-assurance to make her doubly valuable before the camera. I predict she will prove a profitable investment for the Newfields producing organization."

After her school days in Ohio the girl got a ticket to Europe and took the trip, with the stage in mind. She went into opera instead and her voice developed to a degree where it warranted good parts.

Returning to America after two years in opera, she hunted here for an operative engagement. Fate sent her to a movie director instead—to Hal Clarendon.

It was Clarendon who put Miss MacTammany into "The Girl from Rector's" and then gave her her present opportunity in "Alma, Where Do You Live?"

The photoplay is adapted from the drama of the same name by Adolf Phillip, author of "Adele," "The Midnight Girl," and "The Girl Who Smiles." "Alma" is described as a delightful romance, full of thrills and clever situations as was the play. In her role Miss MacTammany has a chance to ride, to drive a car and even to dance—the dance she learned in Egypt, while singing there.

In Search of Improvements

Herbert Brenon, looking for possible improvement in "The Lone Wolf," has attended each evening performance of the photoplay at the Broadway since the first night, July 1. It is said that Brenon does not disregard even the remarks he may chance to hear the ushers voice. He has made a number of minor changes already.

Caralli, Here in Pictures is Given Gold Cross

Vera Caralli, prima ballerina of the Ballet Russe, has received the gold St. George's cross for her heroic work in behalf of the Russian Red Cross, being the only artist in Russia so honored. She danced before the screen in the Ermoloff Studios, Moscow, making pictures to be shown here by N. S. Kaplan, for Russian Art Films.

Another of the stars in these pictures is Vera Colodnaya, dramatic actress, known throughout Russia as "The Little Rebel." She has a radical democratic manner, and excels in such plays as Tolstoy's "A Fire in the Sky," "The Song of Triumphant Love," and "Life for Life." She will be seen in them when the Russian Art Film Corporation begins showing them here shortly.

Despite her seemingly rebellious tendencies, which earned for her the present souvriquet, Mme. Colodnaya was not molested by the monarchy, which she fought valiantly and unceasingly for the freedom of her exiled mother. Mme. Colodnaya's efforts were not in vain for after 12 years in Siberia, mother and daughter were united the very day Russia became a Republic.

Hayden Talbot, Playwright, Story-Writing at Paralta

Hayden Talbot, playwright, has capitulated to the call of the moving pictures. He was engaged, this week, to write original stories for the Bessie Barriscale Feature Corporation and the J. Warren Kerrigan Feature Corporation, and will hereafter devote his time exclusively to these two organizations.

Talbot has had a long and diversified experience in the literary field. He wrote "The Little Joker" and "The Truth Wagon" for Morosco, and each of these was produced at the Burbank theatre. Morosco delegated Talbot to write a play for Nat Goodwin.
Artcraft to Widen Scope of Activity in Coming Year

President of Big Organization Reviews Work of Organization Since Inception—Believes Company Offers Both Big and Small Exhibitors Best Possible Pictures

By WALTER E. GREENE

ARTCRAFT is one year old. Never in any industry has an organization become such a potent factor in a year as has the Artcraft Pictures Corporation. Thirteen months ago Artcraft meant nothing to the screen; it was a force of the future. Today its meaning is readily appreciated as representing the greatest coalition of notables, who have proved themselves the most important factors in the advancement of the motion picture as an art. It includes the greatest brains not only in the film producing field, but also in the business end of the industry. Through its affiliation with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation it adds to its own great force the power of the acknowledged film giants of the world.

When Artcraft entered the field its scope was clearly defined. The advent of any new force in the motion picture industry is usually looked upon with fear by exhibitors, particularly when it calls for a longer run of the attraction, a higher charge of admission and an increase in the cost of rentals. Thus when the policies, ideals and plans of Artcraft were first announced, many managers did not realize that this was probably the most important step ever taken in the history of the film world. It did not take them long to appreciate this, however, and proof of this is the fact that today Artcraft is the Tiffany of the cinema industry.

Artcraft has made it possible for the exhibitor to show the very best in motion pictures. This chance was not afforded exhibitors prior to Artcraft’s existence, when the regular ‘legitimate’ theatres usually received the first opportunity to show the super-attractions and the most famous stars. This achievement in itself is sufficient to warrant the wonderful success of Artcraft at the hands of the exhibitor.

Since its inception Artcraft has faithfully carried out its promise for the ‘biggest and best’ in motion pictures commencing with its presentation of Mary Pickford subjects. The affiliation with the screen’s greatest talents and brains was the only way in which Artcraft could make good its promise and this is exactly what has been done. D. W. Griffith, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Thomas Ince, Elsie Ferguson, Geraldine Farrar, Cecil B. De Mille and George M. Cohan are the acknowledged representatives of their particular arts and that this is the greatest coalition ever assembled in the cause of the screen is immediately apparent.

The many palatial motion picture houses throughout the country are operating under as large an expense as the finest playhouses. These theatres must have extraordinary productions, and it is the policy of Artcraft to supply them with the biggest subjects in points of stars, art and general merit. In place of running the mediocre film three days and a week, Artcraft not only places the unusual attraction within the reach of the regular exhibitor whose palatial theatre is the logical place to show the production, but gives him the opportunity of placing his house on a still higher plane by increasing the run of the subject and justifiably asking more for admission.

As to the smaller exhibitor, Artcraft offers to him the very thing for which every live-wire showman is ever on the lookout—namely, a “special attraction” or stimulus for his business. To the small exhibitor who is showing the usual film Artcraft is as important as it is to the owner of the immense motion picture palace.

To the producer and star Artcraft offers a distribution such as has never been evidenced before. It not only saves him the laborious and expensive proceedings in connection with the simultaneous presentation of a big production throughout the country, but places at his disposal the very best theatres in the land.

As to the future plans of Artcraft, it will continue along the lines it has traveled from the very start. The twin series selective booking policy inaugurated at its inception and which has met with popular approval all over the country will be continued as in the past. In accord with the new Paramount-Artcraft co-ordinate booking policy recently announced, it will continue to present the very best in motion pictures. By its new arrangement with Paramount it will in no way interfere with the releases of that organization as was experienced in the past.

Mary Pickford, as the first Artcraft star at the head of her own company, established a high-water mark in film excellence which has been faithfully lived up to by other Artcraft offerings.

The Douglas Fairbanks organization will offer to exhibitors pictures that will duplicate the record-breaking business displayed at the Rialto theatre, New York, and all over the country with "In Again—Out Again" and "Wild and Woolly," his first two Artcraft pictures.

The acquisition of the screen services of popular Elsie Ferguson, who has hitherto been unsuccessfully approached for motion picture work with great persistency, disclosed another supreme accomplishment on the part of Artcraft.

The announcement of D. W. Griffith’s affiliation with Artcraft created an epoch in the annals of motion pictures. Recognized the world over as the greatest genius of the cinema, his agreement with Artcraft speaks volumes.

Geraldine Farrar, whose "Joan, the Woman," staged under that master of screen-craft, Cecil B. De Mille, marked another distinct advance in the photoplay art, is again appearing before the camera under the direction of the noted Lasky producer for Artcraft. Universally known as America’s most popular star of the opera, Miss Farrar has duplicated her wonderful success of the stage on the screen. In addition to the Farrar-De Mille productions, the latter will produce several other Artcraft pictures disclosing his every talent in cinema technique.

George M. Cohan, whose photoplay debut for Artcraft in "Broadway Jones" immediately established him among the favorites of the screen, has just completed his second picture, an adaption from his sensational stage hit, "Seven Keys to Baldpate."
Brenon Chosen to Reveal Russian Turbulence, Says Mad Monk

"H"erbert Brenon was chosen of God to be the man through whom these revelations ofstricken Russia are to be given to the world."

So said Iliodor, so-called "Mad Monk of Russia," at the Herbert Brenon studio. He spoke most reverently. He went on:

"It takes unspeakable energy and infinite pains to stage this big subject. Mr. Brenon's is no easy task, but he spared nothing, neither time, labor, money nor pains. I am convinced that Mr. Brenon has done and is doing all that lies in human power to reproduce these incidents. Nothing does he neglect to make his scenes, his characters and his story correct."

"The Russian spirit is observed in every detail. The picture will be a boon to Russians. For the first time they will learn the truth, and they will see for themselves the intrigues of the Russian Court that were the direct cause of so much of the people's suffering and unhappiness."

Dustin Farnum Back on Screen in Four New Fox Pictures

Exhibitors have been interested in the announcement of William Fox that Dustin Farnum will star in four photoplays—"The Scarlet Pimpernel," by Baroess D'Orey; "Durand of the Bad Lands," by Maibelle Helies Justice; "North of Fifty-three," by Bertrand Sinclair, and "The Spy," by George Bronson Howard.

Mr. Farnum has been absent from the screen, as well as the speaking stage, for the last ten months. Winifred Kingston will play with Mr. Farnum.

Mr. Fox says he has assembled casts worthy the splendid stories. Three of the photoplays have been completed at Hollywood and in various California mountains and valleys. "The Spy" is now in preparation on the West Coast. Farnum is said to make an equally strong figure in the eighteenth century costume, in chaps and in a modern dress suit.

Baroness D'Orey's "Scarlet Pimpernel" became internationally famous several years ago and had a remarkable vogue. The title is derived from the name given to a wild flower called the pimpernel. The latter is, in the D'Orey novel, the symbol of the land of English aristocrats seeking to restore the French king to his throne after the Revolution.

The action in the photoply is unusually brisk, and the settings are highly elaborate and entirely faithful to the period.

Maibelle Helies Justice will be remembered as the author of "Fires of Conscience," one of William Farnum's successes, while Bertrand Sinclair's "North of Fifty-three" was recently voted one of the best of the popular books.

Bluebird Nails Up on Masthead "The Play's the Thing"

Facing a Year of Whirlwind Production it Declares a Definite Policy for Better Pictures Than Ever Before Presented — Shifting Directors, Strengthening Companies to Reach Its Aim

BLUEBIRD, facing a year of whirlwind production of better pictures, has nailed to the masthead its ensign, "The Play's the Thing." A statement of vigorous policy has been issued, saying in part: "Bluebird goes into the last half of its second year with promise of better pictures than we have ever presented. We have built our reputation on 'the play's the thing;' and we mean to continue our policy of an even combination of play, star and production throughout the coming season. "Exhibitors of Bluebirds have our assurance that the improvement our program has shown, during the past several months, will be maintained in future, for we realize that there can be no series of photoplays, no matter how good they are, that cannot be improved upon."

Directors who will create Bluebirds during the coming season include Rupert Julian, who will be co-starred with Ruth Clifford in his productions; Harry Solter, a new director for Ella Hall; Elmer Clifton, a new director for Franklyn Farnum and Brownie Vernon, and Joseph De Grasse and Ida May Parke, who will continue to alternate in producing features in which Dorothy Phillips will be the star.

Violet Merserene will have features she will star in among Bluebirds. Allen Holubar is due to direct and co-star with Louise Lovely, and there is every likelihood that other stars and directors, who realize the requirements of Bluebird standards will be added to the series from time to time.

The program is definitely set until August 20, when "Mother of Mine" will inaugurate a practically new series of features. This feature will be termed a "Bluebird Extraordinary," for the very sufficient reason that it is just that—in photography, production and dramatic achievement.

Rupert Julian created "Mother of Mine" from E. J. Clawson's story and scenario, and will co-star with Ruth Clifford. The artistic and sympathetic interpretation of the mother role, by Ruby La Fayette, an actress, who is gaining her first camera experience at the age of seventy-two, will be a distinctive factor in making "Mother of Mine."

Julian and Miss Clifford will later appear as stars in Mr. Clawson's successor to "Mother of Mine," tentatively titled "The Face of Prentice Tiller." Further along the Julian-Clifford combination will come to the screen as regular arrivals in the Bluebird series throughout the season. Ella Hall, who was created a star by Bluebird, has passed under the direction of Harry Solter, who is now filming "Bitter Sweet," contributed by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. Before this issue reaches the screen, Miss Hall will star in "Little Miss Fix-It," the last of several features Jack Conway prepared since she has been a Bluebird.

Elmer Clifton, new director of Franklyn Farnum, and Brownie Vernon, has finished "The Fourth Glove," a comedy-drama, said to have a mysterious momentum and surprise finish. He is now busy with another comedy affair devised by Bluebird's staff writers.

There remains unscheduled one more Lynn F. Reynolds picture, "Mr. Opp," created from Alice Hegan Rice's story of the same title, in which Neva Gerber will be featured along with George Hernandez. Also awaiting schedule is "Sirens of the Sea," produced by Allen Holubar, on Santa Cruz Island, with Louise Lovely, the star nymph.

Dorothy Phillips, consistently and regularly Bluebird's star, will continue to keep both Joseph De Grasse and Ida May Parke hustling to meet her eagerness for work. Since she became a Bluebird last December, Miss Phillips has appeared on an average of once a month. Plans now provide for continued frequency of her appearances.

"Triumph," a drama, by Fred Myton, has just been finished by Mr. De Grasse and Miss Parke is now engaged in directing Miss Phillips in "Bondage," a feature suggested by Edna Kenton's story. In all of Miss Phillips presentations Lon Chaney and William Stowell have led her support and they will continue, under long contract, as her leading man and "heavy."

Negotiations are progressing for a director to handle Violet Merserene in a definite number of productions to be made at Bluebird's Leonia (N. J.) Studio.

William Fox Company Gets Fine Wreck Scenes

The company at work on the Foxfilm feature, "When a Man Sees Red," went to an island off the California coast and waited two weeks for a hurricane, and, oddly enough, got it. The wind kicked up a surf that roared and plunged, uprooted trees and overturned shacks.

In the height of the storm the company cast loose an old yacht that had been bought for the purpose and set it adrift. From a perch on the windswept rocks the cameraman caught the death agonies of the doomed craft, the film showing the boat smashed against the rocks by the gigantic waves, overturned and sunk.

Back in the studios at Hollywood, Cal., scenes were added which disclosed a life-like representation of the interior of the yacht, with its passengers being tossed about amid the wreckage of the furniture and the water pouring down the companionway.

By weaving the exterior scenes of the storm and the studio scenes together the director produced what he claims to be one of the most realistic sea episodes.

Stingaree, Kalem Character, Had Australian Counterpart

Frank Boyd, a motion picture "fan" from Melbourne, Australia, says he thinks the original of the character Stingaree, in the Kalem company's serial, was one of the Kelly brothers, leaders of the Kelly gang. After a private screening of Stingaree episodes at the Kalem office, Mr. Boyd said:

"The leaders were Dan and Ned Kelly, brothers, ably assisted by John Byrne and Steve Hart. Their operations took place in Victoria, largely in the Strathbogie ranges, and today there is a section over there known as the 'Kelly country.'

"The trouble started when a constable, Fitzpatrick, was sent out to arrest Dan Kelly for 'cattle duffing'--the Australian for misbranding. Ned Kelly appeared on the scene, lost his head for a minute and shot Fitzpatrick in the wrist. This headstrong act started a feud between the mounted police and the Kelly gang. As a result the Kelly men became fugitives, with a price on their heads--just as you have pictured Stingaree and his partner, Howie."

True Boardman as Stingaree (Kalem)
Maryland Reformers Try to Oppose Censor Head

Governor Harrington of Maryland has decided to have a talk with the Maryland Board of Motion Picture Censors relative to charges that immoral pictures have been passed.

The charges were originated, it is understood, by Miss Grace H. Turnbull. They were somewhat impliedly backed by a number of prominent men. These men sent the Governor a petition asking him, in filling the vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of President Charles E. Harper of the Censor Board, to name a person who already manifested interest in the moral welfare of the community. They also wanted one who will devote the whole of his time to the work.

The Governor plans, it is said, to reappoint Mr. Harper, although he has held the matter up for a day or two.

Canadian Soldiers Form Pathway for Screen Wedding

The Mayor of Quebec, Canada, and his military staff, with a full infantry regiment as guard, turned out for the screening of scenes in "For Liberty." The soldiers formed a long arched pathway with crossed bayonets, and through this lane walked the bride and groom of the picture.

The feature film is being completed in Philadelphia at the studios of the S-M Film Corporation. It contains battle scenes filmed at Canadian training camps.

Edward Bower Hesser, who wrote the story about the "American Legion," is author of the play. He enlisted in the Allied cause at the outset of the war and became a captain.

Arkansas Judge Upholds Sunday Picture Shows

He Decides That "Movies" Where Army Post Is Established Are Sabbath Necessary, Essential to the Moral Well-Being of Any Such Community

SUNDAY "movies," under the changed conditions brought about through the establishment of the army post, are a necessity for the moral well-being of a community.

Judge James Gerlach of the Argenta (Ark.) Municipal Court so held in dismissing charges of Sabbath breaking, upon which Louis Rosenbaum, manager of the Princess theatre, was arrested Sunday by Constable C. O. Beene.

Mr. Rosenbaum had been charged with violation of an old state law forbidding labor on Sunday except in works of "necessity, comfort or charity." Argenta has no ordinance prohibiting the operation of picture shows on Sunday.

Judge Gerlach's ruling sustained the position of Hal L. Norwood, former attorney-general of Arkansas, counsel for the defense, that the provision of wholesome recreation for the soldiers on their one day of leisure is a factor contributing to the moral welfare of the city, and as such should be permitted under a liberal interpretation of the word "necessity" in the old statute.

The defense made no denial of the charges preferred by Harry C. Hale as deputy prosecuting attorney that the picture house had operated on Sunday and that money had been accepted from patrons. It introduced, however, the testimony of Myron A. Kesner, government representative in charge of training camp activities, who gave his expert observations of other army encampments, and the reasons for his opinion that the soldier should be surrounded by abundant opportunity for clean and uplifting amusement on his weekly holiday.

Mr. Kesner's testimony as an expert on training camp life was supported by the testimony of Ashby Lovelace, editor of the Arkansas Democrat, and by Mayor D. M. Pixley of Argenta, who has vigorously advocated Sunday recreation for the soldiers and the laboring people.

Mid-West Exhibitors Keeping Hobbies Open This Summer

NOT as many theatres in Iowa, Nebraska and the Dakota small towns are closing during the hot months this year as in years past. Records show that where fifty per cent. of the smaller town theatres closed last season, less than fifteen per cent are closing this Summer.

With an exceptionally good season as regards weather, is the statement that the exhibitors are doing their share toward maintaining business prosperity as requested by President Wilson. Some of them are hardly making a worth-while profit, but continue in business rather than have a dark house lend its air to any talk of business depression.

The season is marked by a decrease in the booking of regular service, the exhibitors apparently depending upon star and feature productions to aid them in getting warm weather business.

A number of exhibitors are regretting that they followed the usual custom for small houses and closed on the Fourth of July. Manager H. M. Thomas of the Strand, big downtown house in Omaha, announces that in showing Mary Pickford in "The Little American" he showed it just twice as many people as on Fourth of July, 1916.

The exchanges are doing their share to discourage the exhibitory idea that it is necessary to close during the Summer. Special shows of other programs have been prepared and sent out, with letters urging that they be given a trial. "Stay open this Summer, and see what a doubly prosperous Fall business you will have," is another plea. Stories of successful exceptions to this should be permitted under a liberal interpretation of the word "necessity" in the old statute.

The defense made no denial of the charges preferred by Harry C. Hale as deputy prosecuting attorney that the picture house had operated on Sunday and that money had been accepted from patrons. It introduced, however, the testimony of Myron A. Kesner, government representative in charge of training camp activities, who gave his expert observations of other army encampments, and the reasons for his opinion that the soldier should be surrounded by abundant opportunity for clean and uplifting amusement on his weekly holiday.

Mr. Kesner's testimony as an expert on training camp life was supported by the testimony of Ashby Lovelace, editor of the Arkansas Democrat, and by Mayor D. M. Pixley of Argenta, who has vigorously advocated Sunday recreation for the soldiers and the laboring people.

Theatres Open This Summer

Hobbies are being circulated by the exchanges. The Nebraska branch of the M. P. E. L. A. has been talking of some step in this direction, but none has been found necessary as yet.

Canadian Theatres Profit by Strict Border Rules

Dominion regulations, making it difficult for Canadians to cross the border and get back again, are booming motion picture houses on the Canadian side. A. A. Huttemayer, Niagara Falls, said to a Toronto correspondent:

"I have noted a marked increase in moving picture business in Niagara Falls, Ont. It can be traced directly to Canadians staying at home and patronizing local theatres in the evening instead of going to the American side and leaving their money over there."

Kansas Court Grants Injunction Against "Birth of a Nation"

The District Court of Shawnee county, Kansas, has granted an injunction against showing of "Birth of a Nation" in Kansas.

The injunction was in fact not necessary, as representatives of Sherman and Elliott, distributors of the picture, had agreed not to exhibit the picture until the Supreme Court case was decided.

The injunction suit had been brought while the picture was being shown in Topeka as a test of the law, and to bring the matter to an issue it was given three performances, to large crowds.
Among the Exchanges

Summer Business Lively in Utah Exchange

According to office reports, the Fox people have outgrown their present quarters in the McIntyre Building in Salt Lake and will remove to more commodious quarters in Exchange place, where several other motion picture exchanges are located.

K-E-S-E Says Its Storage Shelves Are Nearly Empty

George Kleine's K-E-S-E, publicity department announces the vaults of the New York exchange, with a capacity of 1,680 reels, had last Sunday night less than 100 reels on the shelves—all the rest were working. This may apply to all of Mr. Kleine's branch offices. The statement says:

"Keys Service appears to have grown steadily in favor with exhibitors, and the best evidence of it is near-empty film vaults in all K-E-S-E, exchanges nearly all the time."

L. S. Tobias, former manager of Mutual's Exchange in New Haven, Conn., will return to that city, this time as owner and manager of his own exchange.

Jack Droy has been made assistant manager of Vitagraph's Toronto branch.

Les MacIntosh is now attached to the Toronto office of General Film.

St. Louis Briefs

In the St. Louis exchanges there are several changes. Roger D. Thompson, traveling for Bluebird, has been ordered to take his place as quartermaster sergeant of the South Carolina National Guard, at Columbia, S. C., July 25.

Ben Abrams, making Kansas and Missouri for Universal, has left for New York to try state rights.

Barney Rosenthal, manager of the Universal branch at St. Louis, is conferring with officials at New York headquarters. As yet it is unknown whether changes will be made in this office or not.

Announce Changes in Mutual Branch Offices

Announcement has been made within the last week by the Mutual Film Corporation of changes in several of the branch offices.

Fred G. Silter, formerly salesman at the Albany branch, has been appointed manager of that office to succeed W. F. Holderman, who resigned, effective July 7. G. W. Whitney, salesman at the Denver branch, has been appointed to succeed Manager Coughlin at the Butte sub branch. Willbur G. Seib, booker at the Salt Lake branch, has been appointed a traveling salesman out of that office.

The Forty-sixth street New York office of the Mutual has been moved temporarily to the Twenty-third street office. The quarters occupied by the Forty-sixth street branch are undergoing alterations, upon the completion of which they will be occupied by a consolidation of the Twenty-third and Forty-sixth street branches.

Shifts in Exchange Offices at Des Moines, Iowa

Two changes are reported at Des Moines, Iowa. The Midwest Photo Play Office will hereafter be booking and shipping headquarters for Selznick pictures and the National Exhibitors' Circuit pictures. The office of Art Dramas has been abandoned, the territory being divided between Kansas City, Omaha and Minneapolis.

J. L. Shipley, in charge of the Midwest office, will be in the Garden Theatre building with A. H. Blank. Mr. Williams, with Art Dramas, will handle Billy West pictures in Kansas City territory.

Mongomery, of K-E-S-E, Made Buffalo Manager

George H. Montgomery, formerly of George Kleine's general offices, Chicago, has been placed in charge of Mr. Kleine's K-E-S-E, branch office at Buffalo.

K-E-S-E business in Buffalo and surrounding territory has grown so rapidly that it was decided to make Buffalo a regular branch instead of a sub-New York City branch. Large quarters have been engaged in the Palace Theatre Building.

The Buffalo branch will carry a full supply of film, advertising matter and everything that has to do with an exchange office.

W. H. Dunbar to Handle Goldwyn Films at Winnipeg

W. H. Dunbar, who joined the Independent Film and Theatre Supply Co. as sales manager at Montreal for their Art Dramas program early in May, closed his connection with that concern to join the staff of the Royal Films, Limited. He is special representative of the Goldwyn interest, with headquarters at Winnipeg, Man., commencing his new duties on July 1.
GOLDWYN PICTURES CORPORATION has given sets of still photographs of still photographs of Maxine Elliott and Madge Kennedy productions to the Photoplay Writing Class at Columbia University. The gift is to be hung in the Photoplay Museum.

The Columbia University photoplay class again to become as nationally famous as Prof. Baker's "English 47" at Harvard, whose members have contributed some of the best known plays to the American drama.

WALLACE MACDONALD, who will be seen opposite Mildred Manning in a forthcoming Greater Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature, was approached last week by a motor car salesman.

MacDonald cashed a check for $900, looked the car over and decided not to buy.

Then, $900 strong, he took the subway for home and on the way his pocket was picked to the last bill.

VICTOR SMITH, former studio manager of Greater Vitagraph and brother of Albert E. Smith, president of the Blue Ribbon Company, has recently had a corporal's commission conferred upon him at the Plattsburg training camp.

Mr. Smith's former associates at the Vitagraph Studio delegated Mrs. Victor Smith to bear a testimonial to Plattsburg. The committee selected as an appropriate offering a pair of field glasses and a handwrought cabinet, in the latter a layer of $20 gold pieces, a total amount of $400.

"Corporal Vic" intends to contribute the $400 to a French charitable organization which cares for the people in the stricken districts of France.

JOHN L. FLATOW, who worked with Larry Semon in the Big V comedies, has just returned to the Brooklyn studios after eight months in a hospital.

Flatow's enthusiasm for his work cost him a broken nose, two broken arms, a few crushed ribs and other injuries not worth mentioning.

His principal worry was to get out of the hospital and he showed his nerve by insisting on resuming work as soon as he reached the Vitagraph Studios in Brooklyn.

MRS. B. A. SADLER, of Dallas, Tex., State Chairman of Moving Pictures for the Texas Congress of Mothers, has written Mac Marsh, heroine of "The Birth of a Nation," and now with Goldwyn Pictures, as follows:

"As organized mothers we are striving to secure better films for our children—films which are educational, entertaining, inspiring and free from suggestive vulgarity and the low things of life."

Mac Marsh replied:

"I may assure you, my dear Mrs. Sadler, that so far as the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and myself are concerned, we have not yet nor will we produce any picture that is not elementally wholesome."

ANNOUNCEMENT comes from the Erbograph Company that a third picture starring Marion Swayne is in preparation for Art Dramas Program.

Like her two preceding photoplays, this will be a comedy-drama, in which the young star will have an opportunity to play a sympathetic role. The title of the coming picture has not yet been decided.

And when you laugh you laugh wholeheartedly and do not give a hang about the fellow across the aisle. And if your tear ducts are tapped by a bit of pathos you don't have to hide your face behind a program and furtively wipe your eyes, for there is nobody to see whether you are crying or not. The chances are the lady in the adjoining seat is weeping to her heart's content, but you can't see and you don't care.

"After all, it is merely another triumph for the democracy of the screen over the autocracy of the stage."

EDWARD JOSE, a director, has almost completed a new residence on Weehawken Heights, overlooking the Palisades and the Hudson, that bids fair to be the most novel structure of its kind in the country.

It contains a complete miniature studio, to be equipped with every modern appliance for the making of pictures, all in dwarfed form. There will be working models of scenes and lighting effects, so that after Jose has planned a production he can build it in miniature and work out its many details before finally putting it into actual practice.

Jose's latest production for Norma Talmadge, "The Moth," will soon be ready for release.

MARGUERITE CLARK, they now say, is taking lessons in prize-fighting from Jack Denning, this in preparation for her part in "The Amazons." In the script of Pinero's play a fistic bout between two of the girls in the story occurs. Joseph Kaufman is insisting that the boxing scene be made just as realistic as possible.

Imagine Miss Clark landing hooks and jabs and stopping upper-cuts with the adorable Clark nose!

IT is related that the Strand theatre floor shook the other day when "Fatty" Arbuckle walked down an aisle and took his seat in the orchestra. Manager Edel heard it and sent the chief of the ushers down the aisle calling the name of Arbuckle.

"Fatty" was led up the aisle to the accompaniment of "Oh you Fatty" and Isn't he enormous?"

The comedian explained he was not there to witness his film glory, but to let a friend see the show.

Pearl White, appearing in Pathe's serial, "The Fatal Ring," has offered her services as, an instructor for girls who wish to become marksmen and horsewomen. Miss White is a crack shot with a revolver, as well as an experienced horsewoman.

Arrangements are being made to use one of the armories certain nights during the week, and Miss White will teach her troop how to use the revolver and rifle, and how to ride a horse.
TWO special trains and a dozen automobiles were used by the William Fox Company this week to transport cast, extra players and animals needed for desert scenes in the Theda Bara “Cleopatra” spectacle made on the desert out of Oxnard, a distance of seventy miles from Los Angeles. Information given out at the studio is to the effect that 2,000 extra players were used in these scenes besides its big cast, and several hundred animals, including camels, burros and Arabian horses.

The picture was almost finished because of a near accident which occurred while the company was en route to Los Angeles late in the evening. A wild driver passing the auto occupied by Alias Bara remained in the center of the road, crowding the Bara car to the edge of the mountain highway, which overlooks a deep canyon with a sheer drop of a thousand feet. A heavy fence built along the edge served to prevent the car from going over the cliff.

The streets of Alexandria, built on Nigger Slough (the Nile of California), will be used during the coming week, when it is stated, more than 5,000 people will take part in scenes made. Members of the Fox organization state this is the most elaborate setting ever built for a Fox production, and one of the most costly ever erected on the west coast. The banks of the almost stagnant body of water are ideal for this setting, inasmuch as they are overflowed at every rain in this section. The buildings erected are from ancient drawings, copies of which were secured from museums.

Preparations are now being made for the staging of naval battles in the vicinity of Balboa Beach, approximately fifty miles down the coast from Los Angeles.

THE William Fox producing organization has a new leading woman in the person of Siena Owen, who was discovered by D. W. Griffith, played in a number of Fine Art releases and took an important part in “Intolerance.” Following her work in that she was off the screen for several months and then returned to the Fine Arts, where she played in two subjects. At the Fox plant Miss Owen will play opposite George Walsh (who, by the way, is friend husband), under the direction of Paul Powell.

This company is just beginning a new production and departed for Portland, Oregon, Friday of this week, where exteriors will be made. The company has several new members besides Miss Owen, including Ed. Burns, well-known cowboy of Wild West circus fame, who appeared in many Fine Arts subjects; Ed. Sedgwick, of 300 pounds, is also with the organization, as is Clyde Hopkins, who played juveniles in a number of Fine Arts subjects. Others in this cast are Pomery Cannon, Ralph Lewis and Bert Wesner.

‘Daddy’ Turner began the filming of another Gladys Brockwell subject, written especially for the leading woman by Randolph Lewis. A big cast of players has been assigned to work in this, the list including Lucille Younge, William Burress, Bertram Grassly, Joseph Swickard, Charles Clary, Gerrard Alexander, Norbert Miles, Frankie Lee, Marie Kernan and others.

‘THE SPY,” starring Dustin Farnum and made by Dick Stanton, has been completed, and Mr. Farnum has left for a three weeks’ vacation, which he will spend in the East. Mr. Stanton is also to go East and direct one or more pictures at the William Fox studio, near New York.

The Fox kiddie company, which is directed by C. M. & S. A. Franklin, has finally started production on “Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp.” A number of unusual settings were required for this fairy tale and consequently production was delayed.

Director R. A. Walsh is making the finishing scenes of a Mexican story which stars Miriam Cooper. This subject, by the way, is photographed by Dal Clawson, and gives promise of a number of new effects.

The three comedy companies are all at work. Hank Mann, with Rena Rogers as leading woman, is making a beach picture. Tom Mix, with Victoria Forde, is working along the coast near Long Beach, and Willard Louis, under the direction of Charles Parrott, is making his first subject. Doris Pawn, who has been seen in several Fox releases, playing opposite George Walsh, makes her debut in Fox comedies, playing opposite Louis.

The William Fox studio now boasts of a zoo, the personnel of which includes one donkey, a goat trained to use its head, a Shetland pony, two peacocks, a pair of pheasants, and this week was added four camels. The comedy section has promised to add a number of chickens. Quarters have been laid out in the east lot and suitable buildings are being erected.

DAVID HORSLEY last week engaged Juana Hansen as a leading woman to play opposite Crane Wilbur in subjects starring this actor, which are to be made for the Art Drama program. It is the intention of Producer Horsley to make a series of westerns for this release, and one story and working script is now completed and in the hands of the producing organization and others are now in preparation. Lorrimer Johnson will be the director of this series, his engagement having been announced recently.

Miss Hansen is one of the beauties of filmdom, a decided blonde, who photographs extremely well, and an actress of ability. She made her screen debut with the Bosworth Company and later was featured in “The Secret of the Submarine,” has played leads with Fox, and recently left the Keystone after several months of leads in Mack Sennett comedies.

David Horsley, now having his entire producing organization at work on new productions, left last week for a vacation of ten days on a motor trip to Yosemite Valley. He will return by the way of San Francisco, making the trip extend over
NOW it becomes known there is a new organization, at least in name, working at the Horsley studios. It is the Selbourne Comedy Company, which has Gertrude Selby and Neal Burns as featured players, who work under the direction of Horace Davey. At the present time a one-reel story concerning complications made by attendants who wish to see a bride and groom respectably wed is under consideration.

Frederick Vroom, who has played with many coast companies following a long engagement with Thanhouser at New Rochelle, has been engaged as director by David Horsley, and will shortly take up the filming of his first subject. Vroom has been identified with the theatrical world as an actor since 1885. He has traveled extensively throughout the world and was a conspicuous figure in the gold rush days of Alaska. He has been in pictures since 1910.

Indications are that "Baby Pulls the Strings," the coming Baby Mabe Osborne subject for Pathe, will be finished by William Bertram, director, within the next few days.

THE Helen Holmes Company is now at work on the third episode of "The Lost Express," which will be released under the title, "The Week at the Crossing," and, because of the size of settings used, it has been found necessary to purchase a large quantity of additional lighting equipment. One of the big scenes in this is the set known as General Thurston's study, which is built for the use of both interiors and exteriors, the ground floor of the house having a number of rooms so arranged that shots can be made which will show action in all at once. Prior to the actual studio work had what was considered a large lighting equipment, for it had previously served for big street set scenes in "Medicine Bend." The fact that the equipment is insufficient at this time gives an idea of the size of the present set. The smallness of the settings caused other expenses, for it was found necessary to purchase a large quantity of elegant furnishings and furniture. Four of the rooms furnished with mahogany and the upholstering in two are of heavy wine-colored velvet.

On the evening of July 4, J. P. McCowan and the Signal players staged a blank cartridge battle at the studio grounds, and drew all those attending a celebration in a nearby to the film plant, where they discovered their mistake in thinking an Independence Day celebration had started.

CAPTAIN SUNLIGHT," the Vitagraph subject which is co-star Alfred Vosburg and Mary Anderson, will be finished by the end of the coming week, and Director William Wolbert will then leave for a short vacation. During his absence, he will be in charge of this company in the making of one or more light comedies.

The "Hearts of Flame" Vitagraph serial has been completed in every detail and shipped to the Eastern factories for positive making. This fifteen episode story will not be released until early in the fall, thus giving the distributing organization all the time necessary for advertising, booking and distribution. When the contract of a vacation, will call the company together and begin the making of five reel subjects. The last episode has many melodramatic scenes, which caused difficulties for the producing players. In a fire scene the working script was destroyed, and the remainder of the subject had to be filmed from Director-Actor William Duncan's memory. The last scene to be taken was that of a flood, and the technical staff having failed to estimate the strength of the current, considerable damage was wrought by the destruction of properties which were stored at a point thought to have been out of the wake of the flood.

THE last Chaplin release for the Mutual is well under way, and if the comedian does not suffer from a change of mind before the picture is finished he will play many parts in it. At present it is the intention to impersonate himself and next be seen in a beach subject. No name has been selected for this Chaplin production, but at the studio it is estimated it will be finished and the negative shipped within two weeks, by which time Chaplin will complete his contract with the Mutual.

While no lease has been signed or contracts made for it, it is Mr. Chaplin's intention of remaining at work at the studio he is now using, and that all members of his present organization will continue with him in the making of releases for the First National Exhibitors' Association's eight pictures. Sid Chaplin, who acted as representative for his brother in the making of a contract is now on his way to the coast from the East, and will be the general manager of Chaplin's business. John Jasper will remain as business manager and Carl Byrobinson as publicity writer.

WITH the completion this week of the filming of scenes for "The City of Purple Dreams," the Selig organization were granted a short vacation. This story, produced by Colin Campbell, gives Tom Satchi the star role, with Besse Eyon and Fritzi Brunette as the featured actresses. The supporting cast includes Eugenie Besserer, Harry Lonsdale, Frank Clark and other Selig favorites. "The City of Purple Dreams" is spoken of as a socialistic story dealing with the rise of a down-and-out.

The Selig company, having a most popular place for pictures this season, the grounds having been leased for all desirable days until late in September. On July 4 the Caledonian Club, a large organization of Scotch people of Los Angeles, used the thirty-eight acre park for the entertainment of their members and thousands of guests.

The Christie Company has as yet an unnamed comedy which gives James Harrison the role of a Chinese opium smoker because of his love for the national game. Margaret Gibson, Ethel Lynne, Eddie Gribbon and Harry Rattenberry appear in this subject. Director Christie is now working in "As in Days of Old," a dream picture involving the liberal use of armor and other costumes of the Middle Ages. Betty Compton and Harrison are featured in this subject.

FROM the Culver City Triangle studios comes the announcement that plans have been made to increase the capacity and add companies that will make this the largest producing organization of the world. Drawings have been completed for additional stages to be built on the sixteen acres of ground adjoining, which was purchased last week, and work on several of the improvements has already been commenced.

In connection with this announcement also comes the first official statement of the addition of three directors to the producing staff. Jack Conway is at work directing scenes for a story which has Belle Bennett and Roy Stewart as leads. The former has been seen in a number of Universal releases, and Stewart has played in Triangle subjects opposite Lillian Gish and Besse Love, as well as a number of American releases and Lois Weber productions.

Lynn Reynolds, late of Universal, will have the Thomas Meighan production, which was commenced this week. George Chesebro, who has been leading man for the Reynolds Bluebird Company at the Universal, will play the opposite lead. Reynolds was accompanied to the Triangle studio by his entire staff, including George Hernandez and a number of other actors, as well as his cameraman, Clyde Cook, and other aides.

The third new director for Triangle productions is Frank Borrage, who returned to this studio to play leads opposite Besse Love. This week he was assigned to the direction of William Desmond, and has been the busiest man on the lot, part of the time directing and at other times working on retake scenes. The cast for the new Desmond picture includes Laura Sears, Mary MacVor, Thomas Guise, Golda Madden and others.

WALTER EDWARDS has begun the filming of a new Louis Glauw story, and Mr. Lee骸Gaffney, former assistant director, who has appeared in scores of films as leading man, will take the lead opposite Miss Glauw. The story is by Monte Katterjohn, and gives the star another vampire role, which is said to be even better than her "Wolf Woman" part. A number of fantastic settings for this picture now occupy conspicuous places on Triangle stages.

Bessie Love was given a brief vacation from work in her forthcoming Irish story, being made under the direction of Charles Miller, in order that she could this week attend a celebration at Fresno, California, where she was guest of honor, and lead a mile long floral parade. She was selected by popular vote of the residents of the Joaquin Valley. Miss Love was accompanied to the northern city by her father and mother.

Although horse racing has been illegal in California for several years, Triangle studio staff this week selected efficient running horses to stage a big race at a Los Angeles driving park. The scenes were made by R. William Nell, and more than 500 took part. Enid Bennett is the star of this coming production, and Roland Lee, who recently appeared in "The Flame of the Yukon," plays opposite. Those who have been fortunate in seeing the laboratory runs of film exposed for this picture claim it worthy of Bennett's best subject since "Happiness."

RAYMOND B. WEST is the only director of this triangle force who was active on July 4. In addition, his entire company worked on Independence Day and urgent need for the completion of a big set for Mr. West's forthcoming subject kept the entire technical staff at work. Dorothy Diller, in star of the production, which is laid in the Adirondacks and New York City. One setting for this is of unusual size, it occupying an entire stage, and shows the interior of a Fifth avenue mansion, one portion of which has a ceiling twice as high as the adjoining rooms. This was necessary, as many scenes called for "business on the stairs."

But two new five-reel subjects were put in production at Universal City this week. One will be an adaptation from the William bradstreet novel, "The Old West Over Contract," which will have Leo Pearson, Joseph Girard, Gene Hersholt and Dona Drew as principals. The direction will be in charge of Ruth Ann Baldwin. The second has Ruth Stonehouse as the feature player, and will be produced by Director Louis W. Chaudes. The supporting cast includes Lloyd Whitlock as leading man; Jack Dill, heavy; Betty Schade and others. The scenario for this was prepared by Harvey Gates. The companies have been absent from the studio this week. One is headed by Monroe Salisbury and Ruth Clifford, which is filming "The Desire of the Moth," a five-reel Western subject. Dorothy Holubar and a company producing "Sirens of the Sea, with Louise Lovely, Jack Mulhall and Carmel Meyers, are still at Santa Cruz Island. Little Lena Baskette is being featured in a new three-reel drama, "The Lonely Little Cat," in which Mr. Holubar has produced. This is the only rival to the rival American west, and London and Paris as well, has volunteered to serve as contributing editor, and for the first time in his life will sign his articles with his real name.

"The On-the-Square Girl"
(Astra-Pathe—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

A CERTAIN class of society in every big city is called "fast," and this picture has to do with that highly interesting class. Everything from the cocktails to the immorality disguised under the veneer of fine thinking is introduced, and everything is done in the lavish style, which the French picture would fail in realism. In this particular set there is a man dissatisfied and his meeting with a girl on the outer edge and the tragedy of the girl's life form the substance of "The On-the-Square Girl."

The entertaining power possessed by the feature is unusual. To begin with, the essential requisite, action, has never been slighted for an instant throughout the five reels. Again the life depicted in the film is at once interesting, and it must be confessed, entertainingly shocking. The moral effect is good and above all there is the expert cast and the director to consider. Of the first, Mollie King is the star, and never before has she appeared to such good advantage, both histrionic and practically so, as she does in the role of Anne Blair, model, in a fashionable modiste's shop. Aime Dalmores does excellently as Inez Brockton, the social butterfly of few conventions and less morals, while the comedy portion of the action is most ably taken care of by Ernest Lawford and Richard Tucker. L. Rogers Lytton as heavy, and Donald Hall as hero, give creditable performances. The support embraces the prettiest collection of girls ever seen in a single five reel feature and many of them know a good lot about acting.

Ouida Bergere did the scenario and George Fitzmaurice directed, which statement needels little elaboration. Well photographed and with backgrounds that are ever appropriate, "The On-the-Square Girl" seems practically perfect considered from the production standpoint. There is plenty of heart interest, plenty of action and plenty of beauty, under which heading, in addition to the star and the many feminine members of the supporting cast can be included the array of gowns supplied by a well known New York house.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Anne Blair (Mollie King), modiste's model, accepts favors from Brockton (L. Rogers Lytton), in order to care for her sick mother. Taking advantage of her position Brockton attacks her. She stabs him and returns home to find a telegram from the sanitarium in the mountains saying her mother is dead. She journeys to the place to find certain letters concerning her birth that temporarily influence her mind. She wanders out into the snow.

Richard Steele (Donald Hall), engaged to Inez Brockton (Aime Dalmores), becomes disgusted with the licentiousness of her house-party and goes out for a walk. He comes upon Anne and taking her to a deserted cabin, cares for her for the night. Inez finds them in the morning and with a great show of false modesty denounces her fiance. In the city Anne tells Richard her troubles and the sudden appearance of Brockton brings things to a head. Richard declares himself through with the Brocktons after he has discovered that the supposedly respectable member of society is the father of Anne.

"The Greater Law"
(Maurice—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

LYNN F. REYNOLDS, with a most human story as a working model, has fashioned for Bluebird an exhibit of screen art which he, as a director, may point to with pride, and rest assured that he will not be embarrassed by arguments in opposition. At some time or other, Mr. Reynolds must have lived the life he so characteristically presents on the screen. His audiences are not brought to the border line of the Klondyke country and left to scan the bleak horizon, but they, muffled in warm folds of long-haired furs, are carried beyond this time, past the cold sentinels of the frozen North, and even the recorded of Chikoot's hospitable dance hall, made a component part of the night revelry, placed side by side with real men, brutish men, misguided women, noble women—all with the "at home" feeling surging through the senses, leaving space for no regrets but with a satisfaction only experienced through the medium of real sustaining interest.

"The Greater Law" is an adaptation from Charles J. Wilson, Jr.'s story, "The Code of the Klondyke," and if it were not for the fact that the program announces this fact one would immediately conclude that it was the product of the mind of a Beach or a London. It is literally alive with human touches, tense moments and human interest. If you have never been to the land of Klondyke you will feel after seeing this screen presentation, that you have lived there all your life. There is no attempt at the spectacular; there is no pretense. The human tendency to have a law unto yourself and to turn back the pages of history and be guided by the rules of the cave men, is followed and a more natural trend could not be conceived in human nature.

Scenes of the snow-covered North are shown in all their immaculate beauty. One scene follows another with unbroken continuity. The plot is carried along without a break. The characters are chosen and placed with that "true-to-life" mark indelibly stamped on their every action. When "Seattle" Lou comes triumphantly back to Chikoot with Jimmy Henderson, a "come back," and we learn for the first time that Providence has spared him a disgraceful death, it is only then that our nerves relax and we say "well done.

Myrtle Gonzalez is at all times an impressive, convincing character. She gives one of the best characterizations of her screen career. G. M. Rickert handles his role with marked consideration for its true meaning. George Hernandez has been seen in better roles than that of Tully Winkle. Jack Curtis, as Laberge, typifies the uncultured brute that men of the North have run down. Brockton, whole-hearted Cort Dorian, meets every expectation. Gretchen Lederer is fine as "Seattle" Lou. Maud Emery typifies the dance hall girl.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Barbara Henderson (Myrtle Gonzalez) and her brother Jimmy (G. M. Rickert) are the only remaining members of the Henderson family. Jimmy is wild and lazy. He decides to try his luck in the Klondyke region. Once in the frozen North, he permits his wild nature to get the better of him and he falls a victim to the life in the dance hall. His sister writes but receives no answer to her letters. She goes to Klondyke and is informed that Jimmy had been murdered in Chikoot. She plans revenge.

Tully Winkle (George Hernandez) and Cort Dorian (Lawrence Peyton) offer her the use of their cabin knowing that the hotel is not a fit place for her. She accepts. Cort falls in love with Barbara and proposes. Barbara tells him to wait for her has a mission to perform. Barbara learns much of the situation, learning her brother's disappearance from Anne Malone (Maud Emery), an inhabitant of the dance hall. "Seattle" Lou (Gretchen Lederer) had been fond of Jimmy and a close acquaintance was the result. Labarge (Jack Curtis) was Lou's "friend." He surprises Lou and Jimmy together and in a fight which followed Jimmy is shot. Barbara believes Labarge to be the person responsible for Jimmy's disappearance. She strikes an acquaintance with him. She learns from him that Cort is the man. Cort has left Chikoot settlement. She sets out after him. Finding him she tells him she is going to shoot him and does after she gives him an opportunity to get his gun. Tully suddenly appears and informs Barbara that her brother has returned. She then learns the truth and she and Cort, only slightly wounded, are united in love.

"The Cook of Canyon Camp"
(Morroco—Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

The star has been given precedence far and above the story in "The Cook of Canyon Camp," which features George Beban. The picture is a part of the same trunk and Mr. Beban is given the major of it to execute. This is not exactly his forte, and although his antics and the subtitles get a fair portion of laughs, one wishes that an opportunity had been provided him to render a dramatic performance such as those furnished in "An Alien" and "The Sign of the Rose." However, when Mr. Beban turns handsprings through the snow and flips flapjacks in the dexterity of the man in a white front establishment, he cuts a very comical figure.

Donald Crisp, together the author and director, evolved a rather slight story for his. It moves slowly, and when the counter-plot is brought in, the remainder of the picture is quite obvious. Mr. Crisp might have given Mr. Beban a few more closeups or played his scenes nearer the camera. As it is, Mr. Beban's antics and his gestures are left to convey the significance of expressions. The locations, including a number of snow scenes, are all very beautiful and the photography is fine, although the night scenes have been tinted a shade too dark to enable the observer to see the faces of the players.

Helen Eddy and Monroe Salisbury head the supporting cast with a brace of good performances.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jean (George Beban), a French Canadian, is cook of a lumber camp. "Silent Jack" (Monroe Salisbury), one of the men, mystifies Jean and his fellow workers by his continued moroseness. Jean finally draws from him the story of an unfaithful wife. Jean pleads with Jean in his life and gets Jack to write a letter begging forgiveness, supposedly to be sent to his (Jean's) wife. The father (John Burton) of Marie (Helen Eddy), Jean's sweetheart, hears this and believes his daughter's suitor dishonorable. Jean takes the letter to Jack's wife (Florence Vidor), to discover that the "other man" is her brother. A reconciliation follows and Jean is handsomely rewarded and speedily sets matters aright between himself and Marie.

"The Poisoned Cup"
(Late Episode of Kalem's "Stingaree" Series—Two Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

TRUE BOARDMAN, the gentleman bushranger of the "Stingaree" series, has been given in past episodes of Kalem's series, better opportunities to display his talents before the camera than were given him in this, the latest episode. The story is given a rather loose, free plot and the action although fast in some scenes, leaves the impression that the scenarioist was obliged to resort to the improbable in order to keep things moving. Through it all runs the improbable. Stingaree is placed in most precarious situations and no effort has been made on the part of the author to protect him, unless the impression is meant to be conveyed that he is so feared and the constable that his very presence insures his safety. He turns his back on three or four strong, able-bodied men who are his enemies and even the husband of the woman who has been obliged to prepare his dinner, makes no effort to average the intrusion.

The exterior scenes in this episode are deserving of praise for their natural, scenic beauty, and to Paul C. Hurst, who directed, is due marked credit for the selection of "location." Some "long shots" are recorded which are to be praised.

The story tells of Stingaree inviting himself "out to dinner" and his daring in holding off the mounted police who surround the house.

"The Love That Lives"
(Famous Players-Paramount—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

SCUDDER MIDDLETON, to whom Pauline Frederick is indebted for her latest screen drama, "The Love That Lives," has a truly noble conception of a mother's love for her children, for he has created an atmosphere about Miss Frederick which literally emanates an unselfish love which fears neither the derision of a fellow being or the hand of death. For this Mr. Middleton is credited with an honor mark. But because he has had recourse to plot material which has been worn threadbare by writers of the melodramatic and has boldly rid his story of characters with apparently no reason other than that he wished to "make room" for the main support of his plot and in so doing took the "shortest cut" home, he is to be criticized adversely for permitting these hashed and rehashed situations to enter the plot of an otherwise excellent story. Mr. Middleton in doing so, lost a golden opportunity to have to his credit the authorship of a jewel among screen dramas.

The husband of Molly McGill being placed in the time-worn situation of the drunken father who is shot in a bar-room fight and his little daughter meeting with death while crossing the street in front of an automobile—these are situations which it seems are indispensable to the screen melodrama. As these two tragedies take place in the first part of the run, everything to follow is outlandish for imagination and the quality of suspense is barely noticeable.

Miss Frederick could have been just as impressive and would have penetrated deeper the hearts of her audiences if she had been given a title the dignity of which was a scale or two above that of a scrub woman. It is possible, but not the usual thing for a business man to become infatuated with the woman he kills. The action moves fast without a per centible break in its continuity. With Miss Frederick conveying the same thought in a role other than a scrub woman and the elimination of the time-worn methods of ridicing the plot of the two characters mentioned above, "The Love That Lives" would have been a first-rate feature and Mr. Middleton would have been hailed a first-rate scenarioist. As it stands, it can not be said that it is all that it might have been. As Harvey Brooks, John Sainpolis gives a fine characterization. Pat O'Mally, as Jimmy, grown up, does well. Joseph Carroll, Violet Palmer, Frank Evans and Eldene Stewart are other members of the supporting cast. Robert G. Vignola directed.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Molly McGill (Pauline Frederick) is left with her two children to fight the battle of life. She engages herself as a scrub woman. She is devoted to her children and makes great sacrifices that her son may receive an education. The little girl was killed. The boy is sent to a technical school. To meet the expense, Molly accepts the offer of a rich broker. For a time she leads the life of a queen. Realizing that the life she is leading should end, she leaves the broker and again becomes the scrub woman. Her son, now graduated, becomes a fireman. He is in love with a stenographer (Violet Palmer) and Molly meets her in the course of her work as a scrub woman. Dora tells Molly that she is in love and Molly learns that it is her boy whom Dora loves. There is a fire and Jimmy (Pat O'Mally), as a fireman, saves Violet from the burning building. Molly perishes in the fire but with the thought that her boy is all that she desired in a son and his intended wife she has saved from the hands of the man who had destroyed her (Molly's) life.

"The Stolen Treaty"
(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon Feature—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

VITAGRAPH'S late production, "The Stolen Treaty," features Charlie Williams and Corinne Griffith, presents an interesting bit of mystery, even though its plot does go "skylarking." When Wynne, the detective, has taken the Prince into custody and drawn from him the confession that he had stolen the State papers, and he had recovered the papers, there isn't a logical reason known to the art of the drama why the plot should go on unless it is to show the love element which runs through it to a climax. But the Prince, after stealing valuable State papers, is allowed his freedom, supposedly that he may continue his scheme against the Government, thereby making possible five reels of picture.

Thomas Edgelow, who wrote the script, had a comparatively easy task for it made no perceptible difference with him whether his villain—or was captured or not—he could set him loose at any time and create more trouble and more mystery. And when the Prince plans to defraud the Government of millions, he chooses as a meeting place for his lieutenant and the party from whom he expects the millions the busiest corner in the world—the corner of Wall and Nassau streets, the heart of New York's financial district, of a man's leading woman, but convince all who see her that her promotion to "leads" with the Vitagraph forces is fully merited. Denton Vane as Prince Zarl is convincing in the "heavy" part. Robert Gaillard convinces as the Secretary of State, Bernard Seigel and Billie Billings are seen to good advantage in minor roles.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

At a brilliant reception in the home of a Fifth avenue resident, Prince Zarl of Zorinia (Denton Vane) is the honored guest. Geoffrey Wynne (Earle Williams), posing as a society man, but in reality a secret service detective, is also present. At the height of the festivities, Wynne is called to Washington. His chief informs him that valuable State papers, a treaty, have been stolen. The treaty was negotiated by Prince Zarl and the Secretary of State. The thieves have demanded millions of dollars as "hush" money. Wynne is set upon their trail. He answers the blackmailers' invitation to meet them at a designated place. Wynne meets them and is blindfolded and taken to the house occupied by the blackmailers, with time to consider the matter.

Wynne takes Irene Mitchell (Cecilia Knight) into his scheme and she goes to the house occupied by Prince Zarl. Pretending that her machine had broken, she stops in front of the house and the Prince offers his services. He consents to escort her back. On the way, Wynne meets them and he takes Zarl a prisoner. At Wynne's house Zarl is confined and made to disclose his part in the plot. Wynne recovers the papers after many adventures and he and Irene prepare for the wedding.

"The Fatal Ring"

REVIEWED BY PETER MILEN

THE SERIAL
continues its break-neck pace in this episode entitled "The Warning on the Ring." For action "The Fatal Ring" seems to leave even its predecessors with the same star quite calm and unruffled in comparison. A further element of mystery is introduced in this number which serves to heighten the suspense materialized by

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Pearl (Pearl White) and Knox (Earle Fox) are cast out by the Priestess (Ruby Hoffman) after submitting the false stone supplied by Sarslake (Warner Oland). They journey to China-town to have the setting of the ring examined. After reading the inscription on it, the priestess is shot and Sarslake follows them to the place and Pearl, to prevent him from securing the setting, fastens it on her dog's collar and sends him home. Finding himself defeated, Sarslake forces Pearl to get the setting, threatening her with Knox's death unless she complies. She brings the Priestess to the place and at her appearance all the Chinamen fall on their knees. Sarslake makes his escape to an underground passage by using Pearl as a shield. Believing himself alone with her he threatens her life unless she give him a written order for the setting. Carlton (Henry Gaell) comes to the rescue of Pearl. The men fight. Pearl in her haste to escape falls into a pit.

of this number is the fact that Kennedy meets the Veiled Woman. She attempts to stab him, but grappling with her, he saves his life, but is unable to prevent her from escaping.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Norwood (Philo McCullough) is saved from the burning building by Margaret (Ruth Roland). When he discovers that she was helping Kennedy (Roland Bottomley) he denounces Margaret. Later, as Kennedy (Corene Grant) visits Margaret and succeeds in making her leave Kennedy's life for the time being. In his office, Kennedy is attacked by the Veiled Woman, but she escapes.

"The Range Boss"
(K-E-S-E-Essany—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

"THE RANGE BOSS," written by Charles Alden Seltzer, and produced under the direction of W. S. Van Dyke, is a typical Western drama, with plenty of the Western atmosphere. Scarcely an interior setting is used, the action taking place in the wide, open country. Some "long shots" are shown which for the natural scenic effect obtained, could hardly be excelled in beauty. The plot weakens at times but Jack Gardner in the role of Rex Randerson, a cow puncher, keeps plenty of action into the scenes and makes up by clever exhibitions of horsemanship for what the plot lacks in dramatic moments, Ruth King, who has the principal feminine role, could not much improve on the opportunities afforded her. She is a good horsewoman and looks the part of a typical modern-day, Western girl. W. S. Van Dyke has given "The Range Boss" a good production, but he was handicapped at times by weaknesses in the plot. There is little of the suspense element contained, but most any audience will excuse the omission for they will be pleasantly entertained by attractive scenes of Western life, convincing action and the work of Jack Gardner and Ruth King. Carl Stockdale was never meant to present a role for the timidities of a Willard Masten. He makes a good attempt.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Ruth Harkness (Ruth King) has inherited the Flying W Ranch. With her aunt and uncle she leaves the galeties of the Eastern city and prepares to take possession of the ranch. Her fiance, Willard Masten (Carl Stockdale), accompanies the party. To two cowboys plan to get possession of her ranch. Rex Randerson (Jack Gardner) has been recommended as a good foreman of her ranch. She engages him and the two cowboys, who are also employed on the ranch, resent his authority over them. Jack and his cowboy friends fall in love with a girl on a neighboring ranch and is obliged to marry her. Ruth, freed from her engagement to him, consents to marry her ranch foreman.

"The Sawdust Ring"
(Triangle-Ince—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILEN

"THE SAWDUST RING," a picture of the circus has little more plot than a circus. It is a series of human adventures that befall two kids, a girl and a boy, while the girl is looking after the very last fall in a ring. It is free from artificialities has led Manager Rothapfel of the Rialto to book it. Mr. Rothapfel's opinion bears weight, of course, but when "The Sawdust Ring" is considered on its own merits alone it falls somewhat short of being all that is required of an enjoyable five-reel feature.

The story, written by L. V. Jefferson, does not contain enough conflict to earn the name of drama, and as a result there is never sufficient suspense to always hold the attention. There is, to be sure, a good deal of humor of the higher sort and a fair smattering of pathos in the plight of the two kids who set out to be circus performers. If only Mr. Jefferson had seen fit to introduce one element of suspense, the picture would attain a very high mark. As it is, in some places, it drags noticeably.

Bessie Love, as Janet, the little girl, gives a most realistic performance, and Harold Goodwin, as the boy, is so true to life that he is often exceedingly comical. The synopsis bears Charles Miller's name as director, but must be confessed that the production has few of the earmarks of pictorial excellence that are always associated with subjects from the Ince Studio.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Janet Magie (Bessie Love), after her mother (Josephine Headley) has been taken to the hospital, runs away with Peter Weldon (Harold Goodwin), a boy of the village. Their ambition is to join a circus and after many peculiar experiences they do, and the owner of show, Col. Simmons (Jack Richardson) proves to be Janet's father, separated from his wife years before over a misunderstanding. A happy reconciliation follows.

"Sudden Jim"
(Triangle—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILEN

A DAPTED from Clarence Budington Kelland's serial story which ran in the "Saturday Evening Post," "Sudden Jim" ought to prove one of the biggest five-reel moneymakers of the year. The story was widely read and only recently published in book form, becoming at the start a pronounced "best seller." The picture seems to be a good deal better than the original work for the simple reason that it has been condensed. Action is truly its key-note—there is never a faulty let down.

The story blends business and romance in just the right proportion. Jim's long and hard fight against crooked opposition is full of suspense and thrills, both physical and mental. The mold of the leading character stamps him a favorite right at the start. He is sudden in proposing and sudden in taking action against his enemies. The struggle he wages in the rough timber country culminates in a free-for-all fight between lumberjacks and a perilous ride in a train across a burning trestle.
Charles Ray does wonderful work in the title part. Joseph J. Dowling, as Judge Zanaan Frame, contributes a remarkable character study, while the rest of the cast gives admirable support. Victor L. Schertzinger claims further honors as a director by his masterly work in handling all details of the production.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jim Ashe (Charles Ray) taking charge of his father's clothes pin mill, encounters severe opposition in the form of the small trust controlling the hardware and clothes pin business of the district. Michael Moran (Frank Whitson), its head, does his worst to defeat the activities of Jim, but the latter by hard work triumphs. He also unearths evidence that defeats Moran's candidate for Judge, who was to assume the place of Zanaan Frame (Joseph J. Dowling). His romance with Marie Ducharme (Sylvia Bremer) is concluded happily.

Lydia Knott, William Bellingford and Georgie Stone are others in the cast.

"The Peddler"
(U. S. Amusement-Art Dramas—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

This adaptation of Hal Reid's old play of the same name, with Joe Welch, noted as a portrayer of Jewish types, in the leading role, will without doubt appeal to the same audiences in the same sympathetic way as did its spoken forerunner. Mr. Welch as Abraham Jacobs, the misfit clothing dealer of the East Side, proceeds to crack a number of bewhiskered jokes, accompanied by equally ancient action, such as taking a reek in the back of a customer's coat and turning it a perfect fit, and volunteering the information that the more goods for the money the better the bargain. Of such is the majority of the substance of "The Peddler."

The plot runs in a parallel channel. The peddler's son, after receiving a college education from his hard-working father, snubs him on the street when in company of a society woman, and of course there is the "bitter truth," that the son is a scoundrel, after all. Mr. Welch's screen presence is not what one would term overwhelming, although he succeeds in making the title character appealing in the heavier scenes.

Frederic Chapin adapted the play for screen purposes and Herbert Blache produced. The East Side atmosphere of the first part of the picture could have been brought out to better advantage, but otherwise the production will pass as about average. Some of the expository subtitles contain typographical errors that should be corrected before the release of the picture.

Kittens Reichert is prominent in the supporting cast, which includes Catherine Calvert and Sidney Mason in other principal parts.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Jacobs (Joe Welch) earns enough money peddling to open a small store on the East Side. He sends his son, Sammy (Sidney Mason), to college, his education makes a snob and a rounder of him. Even the love of Sarah (Catherine Calvert), Jacobs' niece, is not sufficient to make a man of him. He becomes tangled up with a married woman (Sally Crute), whose husband leaves her. Later he learns that his wife is still good, and welcomes her back to his home. Sammy is cast out in the world, but finally is reunited with his father, who has come into a fortune in the meantime.

"High Speed"
(Butterfly-Universal—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"HIGH SPEED," from a story by Helen Starr, is another Jack Mulhall vehicle of the lighter sort, which, however, seldom attains the limits prescribed by its title. Its comedy may appeal to those who have never seen the story of the socially ambitious mother who desires marrying her daughter to the Count and the breezy young American who turns the tables to his own advantage, providing there are such persons. But "High Speed" has little originality except in the way of a very unreal heroine, whose finishing school almost finished her for good.

There is the usual quota of jokety subtitles, some of which may register, but there are few humorous situations in the plot. This lack is probably the reason why the picture lacks the proper snap and vigor necessary to good comedy. The players have been left to their own resources, which naturally are rather inadequate when it comes to supplying comedy twists. The picture has been produced well, and if photography counted beyond all else, then "High Speed" would have no superiors. The locations are pretty also.

Mr. Mulhall receives average support from Fritzit Ridgeway as the girl, and Harry Rattenberry and Lydia Yeamans Titus as her parents.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Susan (Fritzi Ridgeway), just out of finishing school, leads an exceedingly bored existence until Speed (Jack Mulhall), a young broker, appears on the horizon. Her father (Harry Rattenberry) sponsors Speed, while her mother (Lydia Yeamans Titus) is all for the Count (Albert Macquarrie). An elopement, engineered by Speed and father, is frustrated by mother, and later Susan consents to marry the Count, but it is only a ruse. After a number of plans have come to grief, Susan and Speed get married.

"Miss Deception"
(Art Dramas—Van Dyke—Five Reels)
REVIEWED BY JOSEPH L. KELLEY

Jean Sothern finds in "Miss Deception," Art Dramas' latest release from the Van Dyke studio, a light drama through which she can slip with convention thrown to the winds. It is a lively performance to her pleasing, girlish characteristics with all the naturalness of a vivacious, carefree girl with inclinations toward "tom-boy" traits. She is, in every sense of the term, "at home" in the role of Joyce Kingston in "Miss Deception."

The story, by Joseph Franklin Poland, contains little of the original in plot, is light in structure, and as adapted to the screen gives evidence of lack of enough material to set the action at the proper dramatic speed. Much of what happens is foreseen. The suspense quality is lacking. The characters are well placed and make their appearances in well defined order. Mr. Poland would have produced a better and stronger photoplay if he had made more of some of his characters and a little bit less of his principal. Too much depends upon Miss Sothern's ability to please to insure uniform, progressive action throughout. Eugene Novland, who directed, could have made the reception scene more like the lively reception which is usually accorded a debutante if he had used more "extras" and a more pretentious setting.

THE STORY AND PLAYERS

Joyce Kingston (Jean Sothern) has lived with her Uncle Edward Singleton (Robert Kegereis) since her babyhood. She has never seen her father or mother. Her father (Jack Newton) is a millionaire. He had left her mother when Joyce was a baby. HePictrues Theatrical Corp. Englewood, N. J. Home of the Motion Picture Industry
